- GMA urges Zamboanga Peninsula residents to reach out and support gov't search for peace in the region
- GMA extols tricycle drivers and operators for their contribution to country's economy
- GMA condoles with parents of Dexter Balala

DOE energizes 53 villages in Zamboanga

The Department of Energy (DOE) has energized some 53 villages in the Zamboanga peninsula since President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was sworn in as Chief Executive on Jan. 20, 2001.

In a report to Malacanang, the DOE said that as of end-April this year, it has provided electricity to 30 barangays in Zamboanga del Norte, 20 in Zamboanga del Sur, and three in Zamboanga Sibugay.

Citing the agency's accomplishment vis-à-vis the President's pledges in her July 2001 State of the Nation Address, the DOE named the "energized" barangays as follows:

Zamboanga del Norte – Diwaan and Carang in Dapitan City; Diwan, Dipolog City; Buenavista, Gutalac; D. Maring and San Jose, Kalawit; Sto. Niño, Katipunan; San Jose and La Victoria, La Libertad; Mabuhay, San Roque and La Libertad, Liloy; Upper Minang, Villahermosa, Tanayan and Pinamar, M. Roxas;

Sto. Tomas, Mutia; Sikitan and Lower Gumay, Pinan; Linabo, Polanco; Nilabo and Mabuhay, Rizal; Bagong Baguio, Buenavista and Tinindungan, Sergio Osmeña; Litolet, Siayan; and Dumalogdog, Imelda, Sto. Rosario and J. Macias, in Sindangan.

Zamboanga del Sur – Bulawan in Pagadian City; Baluno, Lumayang, Sibulao, Busay, Pasmanta and Panubigan in Zamboanga City; Acad, Aurora; Guintolo-an, Buug; Dalapan, Guipos; Sapang Pinales, Lakewood; Tuburan, Mahayag; Tubong, Midsalip; Colojo, Pitogo; Calube, San Miguel; Culasian, Miasin and Tanlapan, San Pablo; San Miguel, Sominot; and Libato in Tambulig.

Zamboanga Sibugay – Doña Josefa in Ipil; Kigay in Malangas; and San Jose in RT Lim.

POEA implements new recruitment rules for land-based OFWs

The Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) has started implementing its revised recruitment rules and regulations that would favor actual and would-be land-based overseas Filipino workers (OFW).

POEA Administrator Rosalinda Baldoz said the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) Order No. 10 is facing "no more legal impediments" after the Supreme Court sped the effectivity of injunctions directed at the implementing rules issued by the POEA.

A DOLE report reaching Malacañang said the recruitment rules would highly favor overseas performing artists whose training, assessment and certification could proceed under the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

The DOLE said the POEA rules would bring about “a higher standard of protection” for land-based OFWs who have been getting speedier, higher-quality and friendlier services.

The high court, through Associate Justice Vicente Mendoza, issued last May 23 its decision on the POEA rules and DOLE order and rendered inoperative the March 12 and March 20 decisions of two lower courts that prevented the rules from being carried out.

On March 12 this year, Judge Jose Paneda of the Quezon City Regional Trial Court (RTC) Branch 220 restrained the implementation of the rules in response to a civil case filed by the Asian Recruitment Council Philippine Chapter, Inc.

Eight days later, Judge Lucas Bersamin of the Quezon City RTC Branch 96 issued a similar order in a civil case filed by Rey Salac et. al.

Later, the Office of the Solicitor General filed – on behalf of the DOLE, POEA and TESDA — with the high court a petition for certiorari assailing the lower courts’ orders.

SONA targets and accomplishments tackled in joint RDC-RPOC meeting in Dipolog City

DIPOLOG CITY—The targets set by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) and the accomplishments of concerned government agencies were tackled Friday during the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) held at the Zamboanga del Norte Convention and Exhibition Center here.

Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo, who reported about the status of SONA targets, said that a total of 157,400 urban poor households have already been provided with shelter security.

Saludo also reported that the number of signatories for housing permits has significantly been reduced after the implementation of Executive Order No. 45 prescribing time-period for issuance of housing related permits and clearances.

Under E.O No. 45, the number of days within which the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) should issue housing-related permits is reduced from 90 to 45 days; Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC), from 45 to 30 days; Department of Interior and Local Government, from 2-3 months to 30 days; Department of Agriculture, from 2-6 months to 30 days; and Department of Agrarian Reform, from 110 days to 70 days.

Saludo also reported that a total of 1,531,446 beneficiaries, or 306 percent of the SONA target of 500,000, have been enrolled in the government’s national health insurance program (NHIP). A total of 1,722,364 rural poor beneficiaries from 374,427 families have also been enrolled in the NHIP, Saludo said.

At the RDC-RPOC meeting, Saludo also reported that all 73 Department of Health-retained hospitals are now stocked with selected low-cost quality drugs. Another 61 hospitals operated by local government units are now selling some of the low-cost medicines, he added.

Saludo further said that P6.22 million worth of medicines have been sold nationwide while P15.31 million worth are now available in the DOH-retained hospitals.

On the SONA target of distributing of 200,000 hectares to the landless, Saludo said that a total of 104,261 hectares have been distributed by the Department of Agrarian Reform in 2001 and an additional 14,219 hectares have been distributed from January to April, 2002.

According to Saludo, from July 2001 to April 2002, the DENR has signed land patents covering 12,000 hectares while certificates of allocation covering 99,312 hectares were also issued.

GMA turns over checks, other gov't assistance to qualified beneficiaries in Zambo del Norte

DIPOLOG CITY (via PLDT)—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today distributed checks, certificates of land ownership awards (CLOAs), health cards, lot awards, agricultural products and farm implements to qualified beneficiaries of Zamboanga del Norte and its nearby towns and cities.

The Chief Executive, who arrived here Friday as part of her continuing consultation with the people, especially those in the countryside, personally presented the government assistance to the beneficiaries in ceremonies held this morning at the Zamboanga del Norte Convention and Exhibition Center here.

Assisted by representatives of concerned agencies, the President turned over checks from Quedancor totaling P406,000 for various urban and rural poor livelihood projects in the province of Zamboanga del Norte.

Governor Isagani Amatong, and two individuals, Adelina Ogor and Cesar Gerona, representing the beneficiaries, received the checks from the President.

From the President's Social Fund, the Chief Executive turned over a fund check worth P600,000 as scholarship assistance for Abu Sayyaf victims for fiscal year 2002-2003. The check was received by Assistant Regional Director Dr. Portia Gesilva of the Department of Education.

The President also turned over from the Department of Agriculture the Certificate of Completion for the rehabilitation of the Kalawit Marcelo Road Expansion Project worth P2,498,490.87. The certificate was received by Governor Amatong.

She also distributed through Governor Amatong Certificate of Awards for 10 units of portable global positioning system or GPS for the implementation of the nationwide Bantay Dagat program from the Bureau of Fisheries and Agricultural Resources (BFAR).

Two units of marine sea cages worth P3,223,800 were also turned over by the President to the municipalities of Leon Postigo and Sindangan, and another two units of stilt dryers worth P390,416 for Sindangan.

Another three units of marine sea cages worth P214,625.91 and one unit of stilt dryer worth P369,120.00 for Dapitan City were turned over by the President.

From the National Irrigation Administration, President Macapagal-Arroyo presented the Certificate of Completion for the Dipolog City Communal Irrigation System worth P2,376,880.00. The certificate was received by Ildefonso Jimenez, president of the Irrigators Association of Zamboanga del Norte.

Other government assistance distributed by the President were the following:

- Checks worth P346,632 for various projects in the municipality of Leon Postigo;
- Checks amounting to P160,000 for projects in Bethlehem, particularly the Polanco Water System;
- Checks amounting to P350,000 for various projects in the municipality of Pinan;
- Checks worth P200,000 for various projects in Katipunan
- Checks amounting to P232,000 for projects in Roxas;
- Checks amounting to P220,000 for projects in La Libertad;
- A check amounting to P120,000 for the Multi-Purpose Hall of Bitugan, Sirawai;
- Checks worth P487,030 for various projects in Manukan;
- Checks amounting to P195,549 for various projects in Jose Dalman;

- Checks amounting to P67,000 for various projects in Rizal;
- A check amounting to P44,618 for the Day Care Center in Godod;
- A check worth P140,000 for the Self Employment Assistance-Kaunlaran (SEA-K) Livelihood Project in Baliguian;
- A check amounting to P160,000 for the Mutia Spring Development Project; and
- A check amounting to P120,000 for the Day Care Center in Barangay Cogon, Dipolog City.

From Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA), the President presented a notice of scholarship awards to 80 deserving students from the province of Zamboanga del Norte.

The President also led the distribution of Certificates of Land Ownership Awards (CLOAs) to 137 beneficiaries from the Department of Agrarian Reform.

She turned over a check worth P534,295.31 for the Rizal Mangrove Sub-Project of the Rizal Federation for Coastal Resources Management Inc. and distributed land patents to some 101 beneficiaries from the province of Zamboanga del Norte, all from the Department of Environment and Natural Resources.

From the Department of Labor and Employment, President Macapagal-Arroyo awarded the following:

- Checks amounting to P675,000 for the Rural Workers Association of Sindangan, Dipolog City and Dapitan City for the promotion of rural employment through the Self-Employment and Entrepreneurship Development (PRESSED); and
- Checks amounting to P400,234 for the 437 grantees of the Special Program for Employment of Students (SPES).

The President also turned over Certificates of Lot Awards from the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) to 279 beneficiaries of the Dipolog Resettlement Project-Phase II.

From PAG-Ibig, she gave out Certificates of Lot Awards to 76 beneficiaries in the Holy Rosary Subdivision.

A total of 500 PhilHealth cards were likewise distributed by the President to indigent beneficiaries in Dapitan City.

From Philrice, the President turned-over 200 bags of hybrid rice seeds for the province of Zamboanga del Norte.

From the Department of Agriculture, the President turned over two units of farm tractor worth P2,574,000 and P1,474,540 respectively, to Governor Amatong on behalf of the farmer beneficiaries in the province.

GMA urges Zamboanga Peninsula residents to reach out and support gov't search for peace in the region

DIPOLOG CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the people of Zamboanga Peninsula to continue to reach out and support her administration's quest for an honorable and just peace in Mindanao based on tolerance, understanding and a common sense of nationhood.

Speaking in fluent Cebuano in a program commemorating the 50th founding anniversary of the province of Zamboanga del Norte held at the Dipolog City Gymnasium and Sports Center here, the President emphasized that only through peace can the region expect to achieve development and progress.

"Peace will bring us security and a brighter future for our children," the President pointed out.

Relative to this, the President asked the help of the people, especially the local government officials down to the barangay level, to support the soldiers in the ongoing operation against terrorists and other lawless elements in what she called the SSSB area of Zamboanga del Norte.

SSSB is composed of the municipalities of Sibuco, Sirawai, Siocon and Baliguian, all in the western part of Zamboanga del Norte.

“Let’s all help in flushing out the bandits and terrorists from their lairs in the barangays or in the cities,” the President said.

The President urged the people to support the military in the war against terrorism so that peace can be achieved and development can be speeded up.

For the many coconut farmers in the Zamboanga Peninsula region, which is composed of Zamboanga del Norte, Zamboanga del Sur and Zamboanga Sibugay, the President said that on Independence Day on June 12 she will announce the priority projects that will be funded from the Coconut Levy Fund.

The President indicated that one of the projects to be funded will be the Integrated Coconut Processing Plant in the province of Zamboanga del Norte.

“I gave instructions to the Philippine Coconut Authority through Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor that you will given support in the construction of the processing plant from the coconut levy fund which may come out on June 12,” the President said to the big applause of the listeners, mostly Cebuano-speaking.

With the President during the program were Secretary Montemayor, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Presidential Adviser on Jobs Creation Luis Lorenzo and Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita.

Zamboanga del Norte Governor Isagani Amatong, Dipolog City Mayor Roberto Uy and Zamboanga del Norte Congressman Angel Carloto led local officials in welcoming the President.

Carloto joined the President in singing two favorite Cebuano ditties, “Matud Nila” and “Usahay,” to the delight of the crowd.

GMA extols tricycle drivers and operators for their contribution to country’s economy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today extolled the country’s tricycle operators and drivers for what she described as their “immense contribution” to the economy.

In her brief remarks at the first-ever summit of the Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association (TODA) held this afternoon at the Amoranto Multi-Purpose Hall in Quezon City, the President said the lowly tricycle is a fitting example of the saying “small is beautiful.”

“Kasi di ba maliit ang traysikel, kasing liit ko ngunit malaki naman ang naiaambag sa ekonomiya pati na rin sa ikabubuti ng mamamayan (Isn’t it that tricycles are small, just like me? But they contribute immensely to the economy and to the welfare of the people),” the President said.

The President arrived at the summit venue just a few minutes after her arrival from Dipolog City where she was the guest of honor in the 50th founding anniversary of the province of Zamboanga del Norte.

She was welcomed at the summit by Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte and Metro Manila Development Authority Chairman Benjamin Abalos.

The President said tricycles have become part of the people’s daily lives, from going to schools and offices, distributing wares to and from the market places, and especially during emergencies.

“Dito natin makikita kung gaano kahalaga ang inyong binibigay na serbisyo sa publiko (It is here where we can appreciate the things that you do for the public),” she added.

Later, the President tried her hand behind the wheel of a tricycle and reeved up its engine to the delight of the crowd.

The theme of the summit is “Tinig ng Toda, Laban sa Kahirapan.” Approximately 5,000 tricycle operators and drivers attended the summit.

To assist TODA dependents, the President distributed scholarship programs to some 500 beneficiaries.

Among those who attended the summit were Quezon City 4th district Representative Nanette Daza, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, National Anti-Poverty Commission Lead Convenor Teresita Quintos-Deles, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina Jr., Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Transportation and Communications Secretary Pantaleon Alvarez and National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez.

Officials from TODA who attended the summit included Adolfo Quiming, overall chairman of the NCR-TODA Council; Art Cagadas, TODAPHIL (Tinig ng Organisadong Drayber at Operator sa Pilipinas) South Sector representative; Severino del Rosario, TODAPHIL North Sector representative; Luther Estrada, TODAPHIL East Sector Representative; Ace Sevilla, TODAPHIL West Sector Representative; and June dela Cruz, TODAPHIL Quezon City Representative.

Together with five council leaders of the TODAPHIL, Quiming presented to the President the output of the TODA workshops on the following sector: health and safety, organizational development, policy advocacy, national cooperation and community service and economic and livelihood.

Considered the poor man’s transportation, tricycles abound in the country with more than 800,000 registered units plying numerous routes.

GMA condoles with parents of Dexter Balala

SAN FERNANDO CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today condoled with the parents of four-year-old Dexter Balala who died yesterday after a hostage-taking incident at the Philtranco Bus Terminal in Pasay City.

The President cancelled her scheduled visit to a housing project of the Couples for Christ in Payatas, Quezon City and motored straight to this city after keynoting the summit of the Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association (TODA) held at the Amoranto Multi-Purpose Hall in Quezon City.

The President was not able to hold back her tears upon seeing the boy’s mother, Salvacion, who was weeping all throughout during her visit.

Aside from extending her condolences, the President also gave financial assistance to the bereaved family.

The boy’s father, Darius, was beside his wife during the visit of the President at the family’s residence in San Vicente Street, Barangay Quebiawan in this city.

Dexter and his mother were waiting for a bus at the terminal for their journey back to this city when he was grabbed by drug-crazed Diomedes Talbo and held at knifepoint for two hours.

A police attempt to rescue Dexter failed. Talbo was later killed by Pasay policemen.

San Fernando City Mayor Reynaldo Aquino, who accompanied the President during the visit, said that the city government would provide a burial lot for the boy.

Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman also accompanied the President during her visit here.

The President, along with Soliman and other government officials, has just flown in from Dipolog City where she distributed checks for livelihood assistance, land patents and farm implements to beneficiaries in Zamboanga del Norte during the 50th founding anniversary of the province.

02 JUNE 2002

- GMA to open Palaro in Naga City Monday
- Poor thank GMA for cheaper medicines, health insurance program, rolling stores

GMA to open Palaro in Naga City Monday

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will keynote the opening rites of the Palarong Pambansa (National Games) 2002 at the Metro Naga Sports Complex (MNSC) in Barangay Pacol, Naga City on Monday (June 3) morning.

The President's attendance at the Palaro speaks well of her administration's commitment to help develop the youth physically and, at the same time, mentally and spiritually.

The President is expected to extol the gains the country's youth expect to get from the annual sports event and from succeeding sports tournaments the government has lined up nationwide.

"The games should go on," the President earlier declared when she approved the holding of the Palaro last month.

The Palaro underwent some funding problems but these were immediately resolved.

After gracing the opening ceremonies, the President will attend the joint meeting of the Bicol Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order Council.

Meanwhile, Philippine Sports Commission Chairman Eric Buhain and host Naga City Mayor Jesse Robredo said everything was in place for the National Games to be played at the refurbished MNSC.

Some 8,000 athletes and officials, to be billeted in 18 city schools including the Camarines Sur National High School and the Naga Central School, are expected to participate in the Palaro.

Of the number, some 6,000 are athletes who will participate in 17 events, namely archery, athletics, badminton, baseball, basketball, little league baseball, boxing, chess, football, gymnastics, sepak takraw, sipa, softball, swimming, table tennis, taekwando and volleyball.

The athletes and officials represent the country's 16 regions.

Poor thank GMA for cheaper medicines, health insurance program, rolling stores

"The medicine I have to buy regularly for my sick husband is readily available at the government-run hospital. It's less expensive. I can buy seven (capsules) for the price of one sold at the drug store."

"Thanks to the Philhealth Plan of President GMA, my family not only saved money. We saved the life of my baby boy."

"Thanks to the Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera Rolling Stores, my family now eats better quality rice – and at a cheaper price, too."

These are only a few of the testimonials made by ordinary people who have benefited from the programs pursued by the administration as part of the commitments made by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during her State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July last year.

Milagros Caramansion, 53, of 1083 Pilar Corregidor St., Tondo, Manila, now goes regularly to the nearby Department of Health-run hospital to buy Adalat (nifedipine), an antianginal drug, for her husband.

“Malaki ang diperensiya ng presyo sa labas, Mga P35 yata pero dito, P5.75 lang. Malaking katipiran sa aming mahihirap (The price difference is very big. It costs about P35 elsewhere. Here (at government hospital), it’s only P5.75. A big savings, especially for us poor,” said the housewife.

Mrs. Caramansion said she hopes more medicines, particularly those needed by the poor like her, will be included soon in the list of low-priced drugs under the Presyong Tama, Gamot Pampamilya (Right Price, Family’s Medicine) of the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of Health.

Hereculani P. Lepasana, pharmacist at the Jose R. Reyes Memorial Medical Center, said: “Nasisiyahan ang mga pasyente dahil sa laki ng baba ng presyo dito kumpara sa mga botika sa labas ng ospital (The patients are happy about the low cost of medicines here compared to the prices in the drug stores outside the hospital).”

Maryjane O. Boac, 23, of Purok K4, Barangay Menzi, Santiago City, Isabela, has more to be thankful for.

“Ang laki ng tuwa at pasasalamat ko sa Philhealth Plan dahil wala akong binayaran noong nagkasakit ang anak kong si Wilmer (I’m so happy and thankful for the Philhealth Plan because I didn’t have to spend a single centavo when my son Wilmer got sick),” she said.

“Hindi ko akalain na dahil sa ID na ito,” she said, showing her Philhealth insurance plan identification card, “nailigtas ang aking anak na wala ni isang kusing na ginastos. Salamat sa gobyerno at sa Medicare (I never realized this ID would help save the life of my son without me having to spend a centavo. Thanks to the government and Medicare),” she added.

Nick Martinez of Zone 79, Barangay 3 in Muñoz, Vito Cruz, Manila, for his part, brought up another matter that was “mas malapit sa sikmura.”

“Dahil sa Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera Rolling Stores, nabibiyayaan ang pamilya ko ng bigas na hindi lamang mura ang halaga. Maganda pa ang kalidad at madaling mapuntahan. (Because of the TGL Rolling Stores, my family can now afford to buy rice that is not only less expensive but of good quality and is available anytime),” Martinez said.

The “Presyong Tama, Gamit Pampamilya,” Philhealth medical insurance and rolling stores are part of the SONA pledges made by the President to win the war against poverty within the decade, improve the quality of life of the people, particularly the poor, and stimulate the economy.

According to the President, almost all of the targets she set out to accomplish are on schedule or even ahead of schedule.

In her weekly radio program last Monday, the President informed the nation that there will be no letup in pursuit and accomplishment of these targets.

More hospitals are now dispensing medicines at cheaper prices and more brands and types of medicines are now available in these hospitals, according to the monitoring report of the Presidential Management Staff, which is headed in a concurrent capacity by Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr.

According to the President, more than three million people, most of them poor residents in the urban areas and countryside, have been enrolled in the National Health Insurance Program.

She also said more than 1,400 rolling stores have been mobilized nationwide to give the poor the opportunity to buy food and medicines, which eat up the biggest portion of the household budget, at much lower prices.

GMA vows swift justice for slain Pasay hostage

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reassured the mother of slain hostage victim Dexter Balala, 4, of swift justice, as she ordered the police to file administrative and criminal cases, if warranted, against responding policemen who might have killed the boy in last week's failed rescue try at the Philtranco terminal in Pasay City.

During her regular weekly radio interview aired nationwide, the President noted the relief of Pasay City Chief of Police Superintendent Eduardo de la Cerna following the botched rescue and killing of Balala, who was held hostage by Diomedes Talvo, 35.

The President also urged the retraining — on hostage management, negotiation and rescue — of the police group who figured in the incident that also led to the killing of Talvo, who stabbed Balala several times before sustaining at least 56 gunshot wounds following a hail of police gunfire.

She cited the move of the police command to subject to ballistics test the policemen involved in the hostage drama "para malaman kung sino talaga iyong nagbaril lalo na iyong bala na kung iyon nga ang nagpatay doon sa bata (so we will know who fired their guns and if a bullet from those guns really killed the boy)," she said.

There have been at least 50 hostage-taking situations in recent years, but this was the only time that the hostage was killed, she said.

"Kaya malaking kapalpakan noong Pasay City team (the Pasay City police team bungled)," she added.

In the same radio interview, the President again condoled with the family of Balala, particularly the boy's mother Sally and his grandmother.

"Gusto kong siguraduhin sa iyo na bibigyan natin ng katarungan ang iyong anak at mapaparusahan iyong pinanggalingan ng kanyang pagkamatay (I want to assure you that your son will get justice; those responsible for his death will be punished)," she told Sally and Dexter's grandmother over radio.

She recalled that after being informed on the incident, she immediately went to condole with the Balala family.

She asked Sally, who is pregnant, to take good care of herself and of her upcoming baby.

Development first before final accord with MILF, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that before the government and the mainstream Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) sign a final peace agreement, development programs in the former conflict areas in Mindanao should already be in place.

In her weekly radio interview aired nationwide every Monday, the President also reiterated that there is no hidden agenda in the agreement signed by representatives of the government and the MILF in Kuala Lumpur early last month.

“I have always been saying that I want development to take place in the conflict areas before we sign a final agreement,” the President said.

According to the President, if the former conflict areas would be developed, then the signing of the final peace accord would be a fait accompli or done deal.

Actually, the President said, the Department of Public Works and Highways and the Department of Agriculture have already implemented a lot of projects in Camp Abubakar, the former main camp of the MILF.

She said that thousands of evacuees have now returned to the different barangays that comprise Camp Abubakar and the other former MILF camps.

Earlier, the President assured the nation, especially those who tried to twist the facts for political reasons, that the Kuala Lumpur accord never mentioned about the return of their former armed camps to the MILF.

She also said that all the development efforts in the former conflict areas would have to be coursed through the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) and the Southern Philippines Development Authority (SPDA).

GMA stresses need to push ‘new politics’

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said it was imperative for the country’s foremost political party to indulge in “new politics.”

The President said “the new politics must be the politics of party platforms and institutional consultation with the people.”

“A political party should exist between elections,” not only for elections, the President said during her regular weekly radio interview aired nationwide.

She stressed that the “old politics (or) the politics of patronage and personality” should be done away with.

The President was formally named as the chairperson of the Lakas-National Union of Christian Democrats (NUCD)-United Muslim Democrats of the Philippines (UMDP) ruling party in its national directorate meeting last Saturday.

The President said the presence of Press Secretary on-leave Rigoberto Tiglao in Japan was very timely.

“Ang kanyang research fellowship ay iyong Christian democratic ideology sa ating administrasyon (His research fellowship is on the Christian democratic ideology in my administration),” she said.

This is the very basic philosophy of the Lakas-NUCD-UMDP party that should be translated into the ground ideology of this government, she added.

She stressed that she wanted to make Lakas “a genuine political party.”

She also suggested that the party be renamed as Lakas ng Christian Democracy and Moslem Democracy from Lakas-NUCD-UMDP.

GMA to newlyweds: be responsible parents

“Be responsible parents,” this is the motherly advice of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to couples who are going to tie the knot this month.

In her weekly radio interview aired nationwide every Monday, the President said that under our Constitution, the family is the basic unit of Philippine society.

“So, dapat ay patatagin natin ang pamilya (So, we should strengthen the family),” the President said, adding that responsible parenthood is also one of the principles enshrined in our Constitution.

“Kaya dapat iyong magpakasal siguruhin nila na magiging matatag ang pamilya nila at dapat ay makamtan nila ang katangian ng responsible parents (So, those who are going to get married should make sure to strengthen their family and that they should possess the qualities of good parents),” the President said.

The President also said that she does not personally attend to the nitty-gritty of the preparations for the upcoming wedding of her son, Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel “Mikey” Arroyo, and Angela Montenegro.

“Ako, bilang Pangulo, bilang ina ng bayan, iyon ang mas malaking focus ko (As president, and mother of the nation, that is my main focus,” the President said when asked what she felt about the wedding of Vice Governor Arroyo this month.

The President said she has entrusted the details of the preparations for the wedding to her social secretary, Ms. Betina Aboitiz, although from time to time, when she had the chance to see Ms. Aboitiz, she would inquire about the arrangements made for the wedding.

When asked if she is looking forward to having grandchildren, the President replied: “Of course, kasi ang aking mga kaibigan, mga classmates ko, mga pinsan kong contemporary, halos lahat sila ay mga lolo at lola na (Of course, because my friends, my classmates and my cousins who are my contemporaries are now lolos and lolas).

GMA lauds public school teacher’s honesty

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the people to emulate the honesty, selflessness and dedication to duty demonstrated by teacher Marilyn Bien-Bongiadi, of Calabanga, Camarines Sur, who returned some P6 million erroneously credited to her bank account.

The President cited Bien-Bongiadi’s honest deed as she called to mind the opening of classes next week and the deep commitment of public school mentors to hone their students and pupils academically and morally.

“Bigyang-pansin natin ang magandang halimbawang pinamana ni Marilyn (Let us cite Marilyn’s good example),” she said during her weekly radio program.

“Ang ganitong pangyayari ay parang sariwang hangin na nagbibigay ng panibagong sigla sa bawat isa sa atin (This deed comes like a fresh gust of wind that reinvigorates everyone),” particularly those in public service.

“Ito ay patunay lamang na hindi basta nasihilaw sa salapi ang mga lingkod-bayan. Ang nakararami sa kanila ay nananatiling tapat sa tungkulin at matibay ang paniningdigan at sumusunod sa code of ethics (This proves that public servants are not easily tempted by the glitter of money. Many of them remain true to their duties, firm in their convictions, and faithful to the code of ethics),” she said.

She hoped that Marilyn’s act would inspire government officials and workers to help clean the bureaucracy of graft and corruption that had stalled the country’s economic growth.

Replicating the teacher’s honesty in the public service would mean the eventual return of the people’s faith in good government, leading to faster social development and economic progress and the attainment of the collective national goal.

Good and clean governance has been the President’s commitment since she was installed as President on January 30, 2001 following EDSA People Power II that ousted former President Joseph Estrada.

She urged public school teachers — having been one of them at one time — to instill in the minds and hearts of their students and pupils the value of honesty.

The President, who opened later this morning the Palarong Pambansa (National Games) in Naga City, reiterated her praises for Marilyn and other public servants who showed the same brand of honesty.

“Nawa’y magsilbing inspirasyon sa ating lahat ang ipinamalas na katapatan ni Marilyn at marami pang katulad niya (May we be inspired by what Marilyn and others like her did),” she told more than 8,000 officials and athletes gathered in the Naga City sports complex.

Honesty and other good values should unite the people in their campaign to overcome the various challenges being faced by the Filipino nation, she added “Sana’y magsilbi ring paraan ang Palarong Pambansa na ipasanay ang ating mga kabataan sa katapatan habang magkukumpetensiya (We should turn the Palaro into a venue for the youth to learn the best Filipino values while competing.

GMA pushes micro-financing for poor

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today underscored the importance of micro-finance in providing livelihood opportunities for the poorest of the poor.

In her weekly interview program over the radio, the President also outlined the achievements of her administration in connection with the poverty alleviation targets she spelled out during her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July last year.

According to her, the center of her administration’s livelihood program lies in the People’s Credit and Finance Corporation (PCFC) together with its conduit banks, financing agencies, the various non-governmental organizations (NGOs), cooperative rural banks, as well as micro-finance replicators.

The micro-finance scheme involves loans of up to P5,000 as capital funding to enable the poor to put up a source of livelihood.

“It (micro-finance) is a very effective system called Grameen bank which started in Bangladesh. It became well-known in the world as an effective tool of livelihood for the poorest of the poor,” the President said.

With regards to her SONA target, the President noted that her administration was able to achieve its goal of providing some 150,000 urban poor families the right to buy their own land.

She added that the government had been able to drastically reduce the signatories in housing permits from the previous 108 to 41.

The President likewise announced that some 1.5-million urban poor and 1.7-million rural poor folk have already benefited from the government's health insurance program.

As spelled out in her SONA, the President said half-price medicines are now available in 73 hospitals under the Department of Health (DOH).

In the agriculture sector, she said the government has already generated 852,000 jobs from its original target of 1 million in three and a half years.

On top of that is the completion of the Mal-Mar dam project in Cotabato, providing irrigation to some 5,000 hectares of farmlands in the area.

As promised, the President said her administration has succeeded in controlling the budget deficit and sustained a 3.8 percent gross national product (GNP) after more than a year in office.

Also in the interview, the President called on the various sectors in the society to help the government in achieving its goal of providing 100,000 housing units for the working class as well as the construction of school buildings in every barangay throughout the archipelago.

In the case of the housing for the working class, she said what is needed at the moment is the support of conduit banks and the private sector.

GMA orders repatriation of non-essential Philippine Embassy personnel in Pakistan

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the repatriation of non-essential personnel in the Philippine Embassy in Pakistan and their families.

In her weekly nationwide radio interview this morning, the President also said Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs) stationed in Pakistan were also enjoined to coordinate with Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas to ensure their safety and return to the country.

The President asked National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, who briefed her on the India-Pakistan situation, to inform Vice President and Foreign Affairs Secretary Teofisto Guingona, Jr. about her decision to return home the non-essential staff in the Philippine Embassy.

The President said the United Nations took a similar action and ordered the evacuation of their non-essential staff with their families in Pakistan.

Around 300 families of UN staff are expected to begin evacuating Pakistan as fear of war mounted between the nuclear foes, according to UN Information Center Director Eric Falt.

The President also noted that OFWs in Pakistan have already been asked earlier by the government to evacuate because of the escalating feud between India and Pakistan.

GMA issues checks worth P4.3-M for projects in Camarines Sur

NAGA CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded some P4.3 million worth of checks for various social programs and infrastructure projects in the province of Camarines Sur.

After her speech during the opening of the Palarong Pambansa (National Games) at the Metro Naga Sports Complex here, the President issued checks totaling P1.9 million for 1,065 student-beneficiaries of the Special Program for Employment of Students implemented by the Department of Labor and Employment this summer.

The President also awarded P1.95 million in checks to the towns of Magarao, Lupi and Bombon for the concreting of farm-to-market roads. Magarao Mayor Lourdes Sanar, Lupi Mayor Roberto Matamrosa and Bombon Mayor Vicente Asido received the checks.

A separate check for P154,000 was issued to 40 family-beneficiaries in San Rafael, Pamplona for the installation of septic tanks in their respective houses. The President gave the check to Allan Llamado, chairman of San Rafael's committee on health and sanitation, and Barangay Captain Maria Rebutiaco.

She awarded a P200,000 check also to finance the construction of a day-care center in Barangay Palangon, Libmanan and P140,000 for the improvement of a water system in Barangay Magais, Del Gallego.

Besides this, the President awarded seven carabao to the Regional Gawad Saka Outstanding Achievers of 2002, namely, Carlos Anmado of Taysan, Legazpi City; Tito Urbano of San Vicente, Camarines Norte; Avelina Miranda of Camarines Norte; Ric Antipolo of Minalaba, Camarines Sur, Leonardo Libreja of Ocampo, Camarines Sur, Bangkilingan 4 H Club Young Farmer Organization from Bangkilingan, Tobacco City and Liberato Navarro Sr. of maguisoc, Mercedes, Camarines Norte.

She likewise distributed 10 sacks of hybrid rice to Manuel Morano, Leonido Oberos, Neslie Jemeria, Delia Esperida, Salud Boragay, Luzviminda Quizon, Noe Mira, Pelagio Constantino, Romegio Guevalondo and Ernesto Betabara, all small farmers of Naga City.

She also led the distribution of 594 Certificates of Land Ownership Awards covering 1,293 hectares to 894 farmer-beneficiaries from Albay, Camarines Norte, Camarines Sur, Masbate and Sorsogon.

Meanwhile, the Land Registration Authority and Department of Environment and Natural Resources, under the "Pamamahagi ng Titulo Program," distributed 533 land titles to beneficiaries from the towns of Canaman, Camaligan, Gamza, Magarao, Bombon, Minalabac, San Fernando, and Calabanga, all in Camarines Sur.

The Philippine Health Insurance also issued 1,000 health cards under the 'Medicare Para sa Masa Program' to indigent families in San Jose and Lupi, Camarines Sur.

GMA thanks Congress for quick action Power Franchise Bill

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked members of the House of Representatives for their speedy action on the 50-year franchise application of the National Transmission Corp. (Transco), the entity that will handle the transmission lines of the National Power Corporation (Napocor).

In her weekly radio interview aired nationwide every Monday, the President said no private firm would buy the Transco if the franchise bill would not be approved.

Over the weekend, the House committee on legislative franchises chaired by Bukidnon Congressman Miguel Zubiri approved the bill containing the Transco franchise.

The bill is expected to be approved by the entire House before it adjourns its regular session this coming Thursday. It will, however, still have to go through the Senate.

The President said that with the passage of the franchise bill, the government could now bid out Transco, adding that this would translate into some $1.5-billion to $2-billion new capital infusion that could be used to pay for the debts of Napocor.

She said that selling the transmission facilities of Napocor is in line with the government's privatization policy as she stressed that frequent power failure is caused by tripping in the transmission lines.

So, it is necessary to allow the private sector to run these transmission lines because it has been proven that the government is not good in managing businesses, the President said.

According to the President, depending on the amount that the government could get out of the sale of Transco, the transaction may even result in the lowering of the controversial purchased power adjustment (PPA).

The President said that not only is there a need for continuous power supply but the cost of electricity in the country should also be competitive enough so that existing industries could be able to sustain their growth.

RP asks for more security assistance in GMA-Wolfowitz meeting

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night sought additional United States security assistance for the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) aimed at paving the way for the AFP to be self reliant through the development of more defense industries in the future.

Briefing the media on President's meeting Sunday night with US Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz and California Rep. Dana Rohrabacker in Malacanang, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said that one of the topics discussed was the strategic alliance of the Philippines and the United States in the fight against terrorism.

On the status of the joint US-RP military training exercises in Basilan, Afable said that both sides expressed satisfaction that the Balikatan exercises have been successful in terms of the training benefits for both the Filipino and American soldiers.

"There was consensus of cooperation in intelligence activities," Afable said, pointing out that the US delegation was satisfied on the manner the Philippine government is organizing the anti-terrorism efforts in Mindanao.

According to Afable, President Macapagal-Arroyo briefed the US officials on the constitution of the joint unified task forces under which all the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) units in Mindanao will be placed under the operational control and supervision of the Secretaries of National Defense and Interior and Local Governments.

The US delegation was likewise briefed on the status of the government's peace negotiations with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) and the Communist Party of the Philippines (CCP-NDF).

Afable also said that changes in the Balikatan's Term of Reference were not discussed during the meeting. "The Balikatan exercises will take its course until its termination in July," he said.

According to Afable, there was a consensus that the training exercises would be intensified and pushed forward to the company level, instead of the battalion level.

“Any US involvement in offensive operation was not discussed,” Afable stressed.

Most S.O.N.A. projects in Bicol accomplished, GMA told

NAGA CITY – Most of the programs and projects in Region 5 (Bicol) covered by the State of the Nation Address (SONA) of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo have been accomplished.

This is based on the report submitted to the President by Presidential Management Staff Undersecretary Ricardo L. Saludo during the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council (RDC) and Regional Peace and Order Council (RPOC) yesterday held at the Magic Splash Resort in Barangay Carolina here.

In his report, Saludo revealed that as of May 31, 2002, some 2,062 households in Region 5 have been provided housing assistance through slum upgrading, resettlement, sites and services, cooperative housing, Community Land Acquisition Program and other socialized housing programs from January 2001 to February 2002.

As of February 28 this year, a total of 4,700 households have also been provided security of land tenure in Legaspi City, Albay.

Since May 15, 2002, a total of 93 rolling stores have been deployed to 115 cities and municipalities and 3,537 barangays in the six provinces of the region and were patronized by 3,939,603 consumers, the PMS report said.

Saludo also reported that some 8,007 women borrowers in Region 5 have been provided micro-finance and livelihood assistance from July 2001 to March 2002.

Also, a total of 104,029 beneficiaries from 22,615 rural poor households in the region were provided health insurance and some 65,683 beneficiaries from 14,279 urban poor families have been enrolled under the National Health Insurance Program.

At least 60,000 jobs were created in the agriculture sector in the region last year, including 13,473 jobs generated in credit and 626 jobs in irrigation.

He added that under the implementation of Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Act (AFMA), a total of P96.95 million was allocated for Bicol region. Of this amount, P90.34 million has been utilized for the GMA rice and corn, high value crops and livestock programs.

He also said that from January to March this year, the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) distributed 1,319 hectares of land. Last year, a total of 9,874 hectares were also distributed by the DAR.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources, meanwhile, issued Certificates of Allocation covering 8,106 hectares from July 2001 to May 2002 to farmers beneficiaries from Albay, Camarines Norte, Camarines Sur, Catanduanes, Masbate and Sorsogon.

As of May 14, 2002, exactly 1,614,383 textbooks were delivered to the region.

The Department of Public Works and Highways and Department of Education are also constructing school building in 15 barangays in the six provinces in the region.

As of the end of April this year, almost 91 remote barangays in the region have been provided electricity by the Department of Energy.

GMA creates Anti-Professional Squatting Task Force

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the creation of an Anti-Professional Squatting Task Force which would identify the genuine landless individuals from the professional squatters who make use of squatting for business purposes.

The Chief Executive made the announcement in her speech before some 1,000 urban poor leaders during the celebration of the Third Social Housing Week initiated by the Social Housing Movement, Inc. (SHMI) at the Amoranto Stadium on Roces Avenue, Quezon City.

The President appointed Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor as chairman of the task force.

She said that some non-governmental organizations (NGOs) have been reporting about noted professional squatters. "We have already apprehended and filed charges against some of them," the President said.

According to the President, professional squatters are making it difficult for the administration to give the genuine landless individuals shelter security for their families.

The President said that she formed the Anti-Professional Squatting Task Force in response to the proposal of the SHMI, an NGO, which has been an active advocate of the social housing program. The SHMI has also been the proponent of more than 120 housing and livelihood projects in the urban poor communities.

She said that her decision to create the task force is part of the government's institutionalized consultations with the Filipino citizenry.

"Ito ay ginagawa ko dahil kayo at iba pang mga NGO ay nagpapanukala na dapat ihwalay iyong genuine na naghahanap ng lupa sa mga professional squatters (I decide to create the task force because the SHMI and other NGOs made the proposal that would separate the genuine landless individuals to the professional squatters)," the President said.

The President asked the SHMI to be part of the task force and work with Defensor in arresting and filing charges against the members of the professional squatting syndicates.

When she was not yet president, the Chief Executive said, whenever she moved around, the urban poor used to tell her about their primary concern, which is to have shelter security.

It is for this reason, the President added, that she wants 150,000 families to have shelter security every year.

"Natupad natin ito noong nakaraang taon (We achieved this last year)," the President stressed, as she asked the NGOs to support her administration in giving shelter security to another 150,000 families this year.

GMA pledges full budgetary support for projects in Bicol Region

NAGA CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday said that her administration would extend full budgetary support to projects and programs in the Bicol Region, especially on energy generation and agriculture.

The President, who made the announcement during the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council (RDC) and the Regional Peace and Order Council (RPOC) held Monday at the Magic Splash Resort here, noted that Bicol is one of the poorest regions in the country.

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary and National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Secretary-General Dante Canlas, in his briefing to the President and the joint meeting, said that poverty incidence in the region was 55.4 percent in the year 2000, making Bicol the second poorest region in the country.

In terms of magnitude, the region has the most number of poor families with 608,000, more than 60 percent of whom live in the rural areas. Canlas said these areas where poverty is most prevalent are also the most vulnerable to the influence of communist insurgents.

Unemployment in the region was 10.2 percent in 2000 and 9.2 percent in 2001, lower than the country's unemployment rate of 11.2 and 11.3 percent in the two respective years.

However, Bicol has the highest unemployment rate in the country with 38.9 percent in 2000. Labor productivity in the same year was 53,340, second to the lowest (Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao) in the country and far below the national average of P116,752.

Gross regional domestic product (GDP) in the region in 2000 was about P89.7 billion, or 2.7 percent of the national GDP. The regional economy contracted by 0.1 percent during the year, primarily due to the slump in agriculture.

To confront these, Canlas said the Bicol region should focus on improving labor productivity, employment generation, local governance and its peace and order condition.

The government, he said, will address poverty through the provision of basic services. "Areas with high poverty incidence and peace and order problems shall be given priority in the delivery of these services," Canlas added.

The region's endowments in the agriculture, mining and tourism sectors shall be harnessed to enhance the region's growth, he said.

In agriculture, the NEDA secretary general said key agribusiness commodity systems shall be developed for strategic commodities such as pili, abaca, coconut, rice, queen pineapple, tiger grass, mango, livestock and fisheries.

Canlas said these will be provided with technical support, microfinancing assistance and infrastructure.

The government will also further develop the region's mineral industry, especially its major resources such as gold, marble, clay, perlite, limestone, bentonite and diatomite.

In tourism, historical sites and cultural activities shall be aggressively promoted, and areas of outstanding natural beauty such as the Mayon View Park, Catanduanes Canopy Walk, Malabsay Falls, Bulusan and Mt. Isarog will be developed for eco-tourism.

The President checked the status of government and official development aid projects in the region, including those that involved other regions as well.

At present, there are 42 projects in the region that mostly involved infrastructure, agriculture and energy generation, including technical and livelihood projects.

The President was also briefed on the major projects with a total cost of P3.047 billion that the national government is implementing.

These are the Catanduanes Agricultural Resource Development Program, Tiwi Geothermal Plant Complex Rehabilitation Project, River Basin Management Program and the Partido Water Supply Sanitation Project.

Palace won't intervene in Senate developments

Malacañang today said that the realignment of forces in the Senate that resulted in the so-called reorganization last Monday is an internal affair of that legislative body and the Executive Department would not interfere.

“This is really, and we do emphasize this, this is an internal matter affecting the organization and membership of the Senate, which in due time, we hope and we know, they will be able to resolve among themselves,” Chief Presidential Legislative Liaison Officer Gabriel Claudio said in a press conference in Malacañang.

Claudio also said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, who was in Naga City Monday where she opened the Palarong Pambansa, took the developments in the Senate “very calmly and matter-of-factly.”

“There was no sign whatsoever of any agitation of any anxiety on her part,” Claudio said.

Aside from opening the Palarong Pambansa, the President also presided over the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) for the Bicol Region.

Claudio said that Malacañang will continue to monitor the developments in the Senate “as closely as we can” although he stressed that the position of Senate President Franklin Drilon remains intact and which the opposition is not even contesting.

“For all intents and purposes, as far as we are concerned, as far as the nation is concerned, Senate President Drilon continues to be the Senate president, the leader of the Senate,” Claudio said.

He said that Malacañang and the nation will have to be guided by the pronouncements by the Senate President Drilon on the matter of interpreting the meaning of what happened last Monday and the efforts to reorganize the Senate.

Claudio also described as “not such a bad day” the first regular session of the 12th Congress, saying that at least five important measures have been approved by the first regular session.

These are the 2002 Appropriations Act, the Anti-Money Laundering Act, the Rent Control Law, the National Service Training Program or the ROTC alternative law, and the synchronized barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan elections next month.

Claudio also said that among the major bills that have been passed by the first regular session and are ready for signature by the President are the Dangerous Drugs Act, the AFP Salary Base Pay, the Plant Variety Act, and the bill creating the Council of the Philippines.

“So it has not been such a bad day for Congress, whether in the Senate or the House of Representatives,” Claudio said.

Claudio admitted, however, said that there will be a “slight delay” on several measures that the administration would have wanted the two houses of Congress to approve, notably the franchise bill for the National Transmission Corp. (Transco) and the Special Purpose Assets Vehicle.

He said that Malacañang will just have to wait until the resumption of the Congress for its second regular session on July 22 for the passage of such bills.

GMA cites importance of shelter security to country's economic development

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the importance of shelter security not only as a component of her administration's massive housing program but also to the country's economic development in general.

Speaking before some 1,000 urban poor leaders during the celebration of the Third Social Housing Week organized by the Social Housing Movement, Inc. (SHMI) at the Amoranto Stadium in Quezon City, the Chief Executive said the acquisition of shelter security by an individual could be used as collateral for loans for livelihood projects.

The President said that this practice has been proven a success in many countries all over the world based from studies made by Hernando de Soto, a noted proponent of empowerment of the ordinary people so that they can improve their living conditions.

De Soto, a Peruvian economist and author of the best-selling book, "The Other Path," holds that the problem of underdeveloped countries is not that their poor, who make up most of the population, have no estates. "The poor," de Soto said, "have their little business and living spaces somewhere in our blighted land."

"Gusto nating lumawak itong sistema para iyong mga maralita na taga-lungsod ay magamit ang lupang tinitirikan hindi lamang para makatira doon kung hindi para maging kolateral para magkaroon ng puhunang pangkabuhayan (We want to promote this system so that the urban poor will not only be able to use the house and lot but also to use it as collateral for loans to be used as seed capital for livelihood projects)," the President stressed.

According to the President, this system will also help improve the country's unemployment rate. "This is one of the reasons why our government is giving importance to the need for our urban poor to have shelter security," she stressed.

The President also expressed confidence that if the government can provide shelter security to 150,000 families every year as she pledged in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA), then it will serve as a testimony to the entire Filipino citizenry about her administration's sincerity in implementing a really socialized housing program.

As part of the government's move to provide socialized housing affordable by the poor, the President also directed the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) through its chairman Michael Defensor to collaborate with the SHMI in disposing of the thousands of vacant housing units inherited from the previous administration.

The President particularly asked SHMI president Rozel Alex Santos to make an inventory of these vacant houses in order for the housing agency to look for beneficiaries who can afford to buy them on lease-to- own or long term lease or on easy installment basis.

05 JUNE 2002

- More people patronizing TGL rolling stores
- Malacañang to keep its 'institutional distance' from Senate
- Reported abolition of O.W.W.A. still not tackled at policy level, says Palace
- Palace says no Balikatan option presented yet
- GMA completes Pinatubo trek

More people patronizing TGL rolling stores

The number of Filipinos availing themselves of cheaper rice and other food products, basic goods and medicine sold in Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera (TGL) rolling stores deployed nationwide is increasing.

This was noted in a series of weekly reports covering the period April 16 to May 15 which Secretary Angelito Sarmiento, Presidential Adviser on Agricultural Modernization, submitted to Malacañang.

Sarmiento said TGL customers have grown to some 874,000 from May 8 to 15, an increase of about 121,000 customers from 753,000 customers per week in the preceding three weeks reported.

In Luzon, the number of customers reached 2.613 million during the four weeks in review. There were 161,648 and 359,284 TGL rolling stores patrons in the Visayas and Mindanao, respectively.

This showed that more consumers have come to realize the benefits of getting more and better value for their hard-earned money from TGL rolling stores, a program the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has carried out for the country's poor.

Citing statistics from lead agency National Food Authority (NFA), Sarmiento added that TGL sales totaled some P530.119 million during the four-week period, or an average of about P132.53 million per week.

Sales totaling P428.9 million were posted in Luzon while sales amounting to P46.6 million and P54.6 million were registered in the Visayas and Mindanao during the same period in review.

The increasing number of customers and the growing sales have prompted the NFA to deploy more rolling stores, particularly in the countryside and in poor communities in urban centers.

As of May 15, a total of 693 TGL rolling stores have been operating in Luzon. About 350 of these were in the National Capital Region (NCR) serving areas designated by President Macapagal-Arroyo.

The areas included Del Pan in Tondo, Parola, Moriones, Commonwealth, the PUP in Sta. Mesa, Road 10, the National Government Center, North Triangle, Pleasant Hills, 9 de Pebrero, C-5 in Taguig, Maricaban, Malibay, Dagat-Dagatan and Manggahan.

There were also 58 rolling stores deployed to 97 barangays named as depressed areas and hotspots in the NCR.

In the Visayas and Mindanao, the NFA has deployed 220 and 358 TGL rolling stores, respectively.

"Thanks to the Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera Rolling Stores, my family now eats better quality rice – and at a cheaper price, too."

This was the testimonial of Nick Martinez of Zone 79, Barangay 3 in Muñoz, Vito Cruz, Manila, who said the TGL rolling stores brought up a matter that was “mas malapit sa sikhura.” “Dahil sa TGL rolling stores, nabibiyayaan ang pamilya ko ng bigas na hindi lamang mura ang halaga. Maganda pa ang kalidad at madaling mapuntahan. (Because of the TGL rolling stores, my family can now afford to buy rice that is not only less expensive but of good quality and is available anytime),” Martinez said.

The deployment of TGL rolling stores was part of the commitments made by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during her State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July last year.

The President earlier said that almost all of the targets she set out to accomplish were carried out on schedule or even ahead of schedule.

In her weekly radio program last Monday, the President informed the nation that there would be no letup in pursuing and accomplishing these targets.

She said more than 1,400 rolling stores have been mobilized nationwide to give the poor the opportunity to buy food and medicines, which eat up the biggest portion of the household budget, at much lower prices.

Malacañang to keep its ‘institutional distance’ from Senate

Malacañang today said that because of the separation of powers of the legislature and the executive, it would continue to keep its “institutional distance” from the ongoing developments in the Senate.

In his press briefing this afternoon, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said an “institutional interference” by the presidency on the Senate would not be good for the country’s democratic system.

“The Senate is a very powerful institution composed of nationally-elected officials and it has its own rules by which it can repair these controversies,” Afable said.

According to Afable, there have been suggestions for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to intervene but she has not done this because “this would create the impression of a weakened Senate.”

The President, Afable said, is really preoccupied with a lot of work that has to do with the basic government reforms and in pushing her anti-poverty program, both in the urban and rural areas.

Afable said that the President does not have to engage in partisan activities since she has trust in the members of the coalition in the Senate to carry out the programs and reforms that she has introduced.

“The President is not the kind of leader who will spend her time or most of her time in partisan activity. When she wakes up in the morning, she takes off, she’s out in her work,” Afable said.

Early today, the President traveled to Barangay Santa Juliana, in Capas, Tarlac, where she led government officials in a three-hour trek to the Mount Pinatubo crater as part of promoting the country’s tourist spots.

On Monday when the Senate leadership problem occurred, the President was in Naga City where she opened the 2002 Palarong Pambansa and presided over the joint Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) of the Bicol Region. Like in most of her provincial visits, she stayed overnight in Naga City.

Reported abolition of O.W.W.A. still not tackled at policy level, says Palace

Malacañang today said the reported abolition of the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) has not yet been officially discussed in the highest decision-making body of the government.

In a press briefing at Malacanang this afternoon, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said there is “no basis for that worry because I have not seen this up at policy level yet.”

Afable was reacting to reports that OWWA employees have expressed their apprehension over the reported merger of their office to the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA).

He said that he has not seen the planned abolition of OWWA calendared in the agenda of the Cabinet.

“I’m sure that such a move would require a wide range of consultation within the Cabinet and with other agencies involved,” he stressed, adding that there is no movement yet as far the Cabinet is concerned on the matter.

Palace says no Balikatan option presented yet

Even as more Mindanao residents have urged government to prolong the stay of American troops in southern Philippines, Malacañang has stressed that no option (on the joint RP-US Balikatan 02-1 military exercises) has yet been presented.

Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said in today’s media briefing, that several options were being mulled over the Balikatan.

Afable said that “under present arrangements, you can seek an extension (of the military exercises) in Basilan; you can seek an extension of training exercises elsewhere in the Philippines; and you can seek, not necessarily an extension, but the opening of another bilateral exercise.”

He said that if the US government had either contemplated or discussed any of these moves, “there is a procedure by which these options can be considered.”

“It will be suggested at the operational level and then decided all the way up to the political level,” he added.

He said none of the options on the Balikatan was discussed during the recent visit of US Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz to the Philippines, particularly Basilan where the military exercises are being conducted.

“What was discussed during the meeting (between Wolfowitz and US and Philippine commanders on the ground) were more on strategic issues,” he added.

Afable also said officials considered the Mutual Logistics Support Agreement (MLSA) as “important to our strategic relationship with the United States (in fighting terrorism in the Asian region) and important to our national security.”

But certain controversies on the implementation of the MLSA have to be resolved at the proper military command and diplomatic levels of both countries.

If the Americans considered the MLSA urgent, then it would immediately be processed within the system.

“This urgency can always be expressed to the government through the proper channels and the process can be undertaken to resolve the issue,” he said.

Afable likewise cited the gains Philippine soldiers have been getting from the ongoing Balikatan exercises.

“The continuous training of our troops by the American armed forces has benefited our troops. And I think these training exercises will really improve our long term capacity to fight terrorism,” he said.

He noted the sentiments of the people of Basilan and said these “are an important political concern.”

Lately, Basilan residents have appealed to Malacañang to have the Balikatan extended in the province, where the notorious kidnap-for-ransom and terrorist group Abu Sayyaf had sown fear and terror.

“(The people of Basilan) are important for the success of any (Philippine) military operation in the area,” he said.

GMA completes Pinatubo trek

STA. JULIANA, CAPAS, Tarlac — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today showed her sincerity to promote eco-tourism in the country by completing a rigorous two-and-a-half hour trek to the crater of Mt. Pinatubo.

The President arrived here at around 6:30 a.m. and was immediately ushered to the Department of Tourism (DOT) information center for a briefing on the rules and regulations about the trekking.

She came with First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, son Dato, Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon and other officials in the government and private sectors.

Shortly thereafter, the President and her party — composed of some 150 trekkers — boarded their separate 4×4 vehicles for an hour off-road drive on wide barren land that was devastated by the Mt. Pinatubo eruption in June 1991.

From Sitio Dapili, the President and her party started the trek to the volcano’s crater.

She reached the crater to the applause of her party. Afterwards, a Mass for world peace officiated by Fr. Cris Cadiang was held at the crater area.

The President also administered the oath-taking rites of the Presidential Photojournalists Association led by Edwin Bacasmas of the Philippine Daily Inquirer.

Later, the President was feted with a salo-salo of rice wrapped in banana leaves with chicken adobo, salted eggs and tomato toppings.

She received a certificate of conquest from Secretary Gordon for completing the road trek to Mt. Pinatubo.

She also thanked a communications firm that donated two satellite phones for the use of the local tourism office to promote trekking on the volcano.

The President returned to Sitio Dapili at around 4:30 p.m.

The President's Day: June 6, 2002

06 JUNE 2002

- GMA's Pinatubo trek to spur tourism activities in Tarlac, adjoining provinces
- Jobs, stable prices of goods remain GMA's priorities
- MA inspects waste composting facility in Pasig City
- Take advantage of rolling stores, jobs fairs, GMA tells QC, Pasig residents

GMA's Pinatubo trek to spur tourism activities in Tarlac, adjoining provinces

President Gloria Mapacagal-Arroyo's trek to the crater of Mt. Pinatubo will spur tourism activities and bring livelihood opportunities to the people of Barangay Sta. Juliana in Capas, Tarlac and other areas that were greatly affected by the eruption of the volcano more than a decade ago.

This was the assessment made by Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon of the Department of Tourism (DOT) even as he assured that the trek to Mt. Pinatubo is safe, adding that the DOT will promote mountain trekking as part of its eco-tourism campaign.

Gordon thanked the residents of Barangay Sta. Juliana for their efforts in bringing out the possibility of making Mt. Pinatubo as one of the major points of interest for eco-tourism.

He added that the Mt. Pinatubo trekking has already won a gold award for eco-tourism from the prestigious Pacific Air Travel Association (PATA) during a ceremony held in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia last year.

"We should give credit to the poor folks from Sta. Juliana who have suffered from Pinatubo because they themselves created the opportunity for themselves. And now the government is recognizing their efforts apart from the international tourism organizations," Gordon told reporters.

Barangay Sta. Juliana, in the western side of Tarlac, is some 20 kilometers from the main highway of Capas.

The village figured prominently during the eruption of Mt. Pinatubo in June 1991 when the precarious O' Donnel River channel endangered the lives of the local populace.

It was in April 2000 when the barangay council of Sta. Juliana observed a growing influx of foreign and local tourists to the village who were using the area as a jump-off point for the three-hour trek to the crater of Mt. Pinatubo.

Realizing the potential influx of tourists, the village council transformed itself into a tourism council, which they now called the Sta. Juliana Tourism Council, Inc.

It was formed to handle the management and operation of the eco-tourism project.

Last Wednesday, no less than the President led some 150 trekkers in conquering the crater of the world-famous volcano.

She was accompanied by First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, son Dato, Secretary Gordon, and other officials from the government and private sector.

From Barangay St. Juliana, the President took a 4x4 vehicle off-road travel a rough and rocky path for more than an hour.

The President and her party successfully completed the two and a half conquest of Mt. Pinatubo after finishing a 10-kilometer walk along and fast streams of the O'Donnell riverbed to the crater under the sweltering heat of the sun and sporadic downpour.

At the crater site, the President received a certificate of conquest from Secretary Gordon for being the 6,659th climber of the Mount Pinatubo.

Jobs, stable prices of goods remain GMA's priorities

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she would stay focused on creating jobs and keeping the prices of basic goods stable.

Speaking before a crowd at the launch of GMA-CARES Para sa Kababaihan (for Women) in Barangay Holy Spirit, Quezon City, the President shrugged off negative media reports and said giving work to millions of Filipinos and making food, basic goods and medicine accessible at low prices remained priorities in her mind.

GMA-CARES means Ginintuang Makamasang Ani (Poor's Golden Harvest) — Countrywide Assistance for Rural Employment and Services.

“Kung maiitindihan ng taong bayan na iyon talaga ang aking parating iniisip, mas magkakaintindihan tayo (Things would be easier to comprehend if people would know and understand that they have a caring President who always thinks of their needs),” she said.

Despite unfavorable developments the media have been reporting lately, she hinted she remained committed to uplifting the lives of the people, particularly the poor, the women and the youth.

During the launching of GMA Cares (for Women), she awarded some P20 million as working capital for the operation and expansion of agri-fishery projects for women in the National Capital Region (NCR).

She said the livelihood loan would provide productive employment to some 50,000 women in the NCR, adding that the success of their projects would redound to more jobs and in deterring upticks in the prices of vital food commodities.

An initial 2,000 women-beneficiaries received their checks, each worth P10,000.

Quedancor, the government's credit and guarantee firm, and the AHON Movement conceived the GMA-CARES (for Women).

The program aims to generate more employment opportunities for Filipino women, enhance the entrepreneurial skills of women and provide funds for start-up and expansion of agri-fishery related businesses for women.

Eligible borrower-clients are women farmers, fisherfolk, rural workers, housewives, processors, traders and their cooperatives, associations and small businesses engaged or will engage in agri-fishery related projects or any project eligible under the program.

Meanwhile, the President also inspected four rolling stores and jobs fair booths at the National Government Center, West Side in Sto. Domingo St., Doa Juana Homes, Holy Spirit, Quezon City.

Presidential Adviser on Job Creation Luis Lorenzo, National Food Administrator Anthony Abad, Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte and Metro Manila Development Authority Chairman Benjamin Abalos joined the President in the inspection tour.

The President said she visited the rolling stores to check on the prices of commodities and to monitor the progress of the government-sponsored job fairs.

Jobs and stable prices remained the two lifelines most needed by the people, especially in Metro Manila, where the unemployment rate is the highest in the whole country, she stressed.

The President said more than a thousand rolling stores were deployed nationwide to sell cheaper rice, other basic goods, medicine and school supplies.

She also later inspected the National Food Authority (NFA)-run rolling stores and jobs fairs in Litex Road, Barangay Commonwealth, Quezon City and in Barangay Manggahan, Pasig City.

A report from Secretary Angelito Sarmiento, Presidential Adviser on Agricultural Modernization, submitted to Malacañang showed that the number of Filipinos availing of goods sold in Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera (TGL) rolling stores is increasing.

In a series of weekly reports covering the period April 16 to May 15, Sarmiento said TGL customers have grown to some 874,000 from May 8 to 15, an increase of about 121,000 customers from 753,000 customers per week in the preceding three weeks reported.

This showed that more consumers have come to realize the benefits of getting more and better value for their hard-earned money from TGL-rolling stores, a program the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has carried out for the country's poor.

GMA inspects waste composting facility in Pasig City

Bent on working out an immediate solution to Metro Manila's garbage problem, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today inspected the Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) Materials, Recovery and Composting facility in Manggahan, Pasig City.

The President motored to the facility after gracing the jobs fair and inspecting the government's rolling stores deployed in the area.

The MMDA project, spearheaded and conceptualized by MMDA Chairman Benjamin Abalos, was put up in line with the President's call to implement the newly approved National Solid Waste Management Act or Republic Act 9003.

The facility is designed to handle 200 tons of solid waste daily in Pasig City, and eventually its environs. The facility has also provided jobs.

Abalos said the process "utilizes local low-cost and low-level but effective Filipino technology that will segregate and reclassify recyclable materials and do rapid composting of bio-degradable waste under a static pile method using open top recycled 40-foot container vans."

He said the successful operation of the facility would be replicated not only in Metro Manila but also in other parts of the country.

Take advantage of rolling stores, jobs fairs, GMA tells QC, Pasig residents

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the residents of Quezon City and Pasig City, particularly the poor, to take advantage of the low prices being offered by the administration's Rolling Stores for their basic needs.

She also asked them to find jobs that would match them from among the vacant positions being offered by participating private companies and offices at the jobs fair also being conducted in the area.

The President made this call during visits this afternoon to Litex Road in Barangay Commonwealth in Quezon City and Manggahan in Pasig City where Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera Rolling Stores were deployed and jobs fairs were being held.

“Alam niyo ba kung bakit ako naririto? Dahil ang dalawang inaasikaso natin pareho ay trabaho at saka presyo (Do you know why I am here with you today? It’s because we are attending to the tasks of providing jobs to the people and keeping prices down),” the President said in brief remarks upon arrival at Litex Road in Barangay Commonwealth, Quezon City.

Shortly after her arrival at 12:20 p.m., the President, accompanied by Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte, Jr. and Presidential Adviser on Job Creation Luis Lorenzo, inspected the Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera Rolling Stores deployed by the National Food Authority (NFA) in the area.

According to NFA Director Edgar Bintulan, there are three rolling stores that operate in Barangay Commonwealth which serve 11,135 people daily.

He said these rolling stores sell rice, coffee, sugar, noodles, milk, cooking oil and canned sardines at very low prices compared to those in the groceries and other retail outlets.

Bintulan stressed that a kilo of rice is sold at P14 while sugar is retailed at P26 per kilogram.

The President also announced to the Quezon City residents that more than 400 vacant positions were being offered at the jobs fair in their locality.

“Kung kayo’y walang hanapbuhay, pumunta na kayo doon at tingnan ninyo (If you are looking for a job, go to the jobs fair and find out where you can apply),” she said.

For those who want to start a small business, the President said the Technology and Livelihood Resource Center (TLRC) is “ready to train” them on how to start their own small business.

During her visit to Manggahan in Pasig City, the President was presented the five successful students who qualified for the scholarship program of TESDA. They are Jan Michael Rivera, Rea Locsin, Ryan Taller, Grace Diolata and Ma. Wilsannie Bacang.

While there, the President inspected the activities of the Rolling Stores deployed in the area as well as the jobs fair which was participated in by seven private companies, including Triple V, SM Supermart, Tiger Inc and Burger Machine.

The President told the people of Pasig about the 685 vacant positions waiting to be filled up by qualified applicants in the jobs fair this morning.

She said that out of the 685 vacant positions, 32 individuals who applied this morning at the jobs fair were hired on the spot. She added that 46 applicants were waiting for further interview.

GMA signs RA 9165, strengthens gov't drive against dangerous drugs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today signed an act that would give more teeth to the government's drive against illegal drug trade and addiction.

In approving the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002 or Republic Act (RA) 9165, the President repealed the Dangerous Drugs Act of 1972 or RA 6425.

The new law, as contained in Senate Bill 1858 and House Bill 4433, provides stiffer penalties for illegal drug possession and pushing but, at the same time, seeks protection of the country's youth from the dangers of drugs.

RA 9165 imposes capital punishment on those convicted for selling, trading, trafficking, importing and cultivating dangerous drugs and their controlled precursors.

The same penalty is also imposed on those who possessed 50 grams or more of shabu, 500 grams of marijuana, 10 grams of opium, morphine, heroin, cocaine, ecstasy and other dangerous drugs as listed in the annex of the law.

It also provides life imprisonment for the possession of lesser quantities of the same drugs listed above.

But persons found guilty of possessing less than five grams of the drugs listed in the annex would be meted a 12-year prison term.

Stiff penalties are also been imposed on convicted dangerous drug financiers, protectors, coddlers and traders who use cellular phones and the Internet in making illegal deals.

The new law seeks the speedy destruction of seized dangerous drugs as it provides punishment for policemen and prosecutors who delay or bungle drug cases.

To protect the people from the bad effects of dangerous drugs, the new law provides mandatory drug tests for drivers and firearms holders, random drug tests for students and workers in the government and private sectors, and compulsory education on dangerous drugs in all school levels.

RA 9165 also gives Congress oversight functions over drug cases, while providing funds to fully implement the law.

GMA signs RA 9166 raising soldiers' pay, benefits

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today effectively raised the rate of base pay of officers and enlisted men in the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

In simple rites at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall, the President signed into law Republic Act (RA) 9166 that also provides other benefits for the country's soldiers.

RA 9166 was one of four bills that the President signed. The others were RA 9167 creating the Film Development Council of the Philippines, RA 9168 or the Philippine Plant Variety Protection Act of 2002, and RA 9165 or the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002.

RA 9166 is aimed at rectifying the disparity in the salary of soldiers by making their pay scale at par with their counterparts in the Philippine National Police (PNP).

The new law was initiated by Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes when he was still the AFP Chief of Staff.

The new law provides a salary grade of 30 to the chief of staff while a private is given a salary grade of 10, comparable to that of an Officer 1 in the second level in the Civil Service.

The new pay scale for soldiers would be carried out on a staggered basis, but not to exceed two years.

The Department of the Budget and Management (DBM) would review the AFP pay scale every five years.

RA 9166 also provides a merit system that would govern the selection, hiring, appointment, transfer, promotion or dismissal of AFP officers and personnel.

The merit system covers incentives to deserving soldiers in the form of scholarship grants for their deserving children, hospital care, social services and other non-cash benefits that would strengthen professionalism and excellence in the military.

Besides the above, the new law also mandates the formulation of continuing education programs for all officers and enlisted personnel.

It also calls for the establishment of a special housing assistance program to enable and ensure that every soldier would have an affordable home in a wholesome community.

Senate can resolve its own internal problem — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said Thursday night that the ongoing problem in the Senate is purely an internal matter and that the members of the chamber can resolve it among themselves.

In her keynote speech at the 50th anniversary of the Rural Bankers Association of the Philippines at Manila Hotel, the President reiterated that her concentration is on the economy.

“On my part, without neglecting my political obligations as head of the administration, head of my party and head of my coalition, I treat the Senate struggle as largely a matter internal to itself, internal to the Senate,” the President said.

“My focus is on the economy — how to create more jobs, how to keep prices stable,” she added.

The President noted that she is happy to see that the rural banking industry today is very vibrant and alive and has kept many farmers and industries alive as well.

She said she is confident that there will be another productive half a century ahead. “In the overall environment today, we have a list of positives and some negatives. But I think that this is better than the stagnation of the situation a year and half ago, when everything seems to be negative,” she added.

Citing the latest exports figures, which show a 22 percent growth rate, the President said overall confidence in the economy has increased.

She noted that during her trek to Mount Pinatubo the other day, she was briefed by Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon that tourist resorts are now bursting at the seams “because domestic tourism is very active.”

The President said the key factors behind this confidence are first of all, the containment of the 1991 fiscal deficit, second, the United States presence and the peaceful commemoration of January 20th and May 1st.

The President said the containment of the 1991 fiscal deficit is the macroeconomic litmus test for capital market and we passed the test.

GMA presents awards to outstanding OFIs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded this year’s outstanding overseas Filipino investors (OFIs) for their successful livelihood endeavors and for their contributions to the country’s economy.

The Chief Executive, assisted by Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Administrator Wilhelm Soriano of the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration, Administrator Rosalinda Baldoz of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration and Presidential Adviser for Job Creation Luis Lorenzo, presented plaques to four OFIs in ceremonies held this morning at Malacanang’s Ceremonial Hall as part of celebration of the Migrant Workers’ Day.

The awardees are the following:

- Joel Abao, is a veterinarian by profession and a philanthropist by vocation and a former overseas Filipino worker employed as a farm supervisor in Libya. He was cited for making full use of his intelligence and wisdom to make a difference in the lives of his kinfolk in his hometown in Bukidnon. He graciously shared his skills and acquired knowledge to improve the condition of his townmates by providing them with a reliable source of livelihood and increasing the productivity of the entire region. In 1992, he availed of some P50,000 from OWWA as an additional capital to his agri-business. Two years later, as the business progresses, he borrowed from the agency an additional P50,000. To date, the total asset of his enterprise is worth P3 million.
- Automotive Workers Cooperative (AWC) was cited for its combined talents and expertise in automotive industry that created a remarkable space in the establishment of a cooperative among the very talented overseas Filipino workers in the city of Doha, State of Qatar in the Middle East. The cooperative became the communities’ by-word for good quality and service par excellence. The group made full use of their 18 years of actual experience and learning in the industry of automotive servicing that specializes on European cars like Porsche, Audi, Volkswagen, Mercedes Benz, BMW, and all types of Japanese and Korean vehicles. After a thorough study of their business plan, an initial monthly contribution from each of the member reached a total of P800,000. At present the cooperative has assets worth P3 million.
- Anabel Dulliyao was cited for her hard work and perseverance – the sure ticket to success. Her being an OFW-dependent gave her the chance to be an OWWA scholar. The privilege paid off and she is now a full-time teacher in her hometown in Cordillera Administrative Region.
- Baguio Beekeepers Group of Overseas Workers and Dependents was cited for its combined resources and world-acclaimed ingenuity to create an impact in the local economy. Their continuous training and skills enhancement under OWWA’s Training Assistance Program for food assistance served as the group’s guiding force in realizing its dreams. From an initial capital of P10,000 in 2000, the project is now worth P40,000. The project proponents have also put up a credit facility for its members with a revolving fund of P22,000.

GMA cites migrant Filipino workers for spurring economy, improving RP image abroad

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to seven million Filipino migrant workers all over the world for taking part in propelling the national economy and for showing off their unparalleled skills and talents that helped improve the country's image abroad.

In a speech during the celebration of Migrant Workers' Day at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall, the President said that June 7 marked the day when the Migrant Workers and Overseas Filipinos Act was approved.

The President said that aside from the good reputation they have gained for the Philippines as home to the great Filipino worker, the OFWs have also helped millions of young Filipinos go to school and complete their education.

She added that thousands of new homes have also been put up and those who acquired these homes have developed better lives as well.

The President stressed that the remittances of migrant workers have further led to the establishment of new businesses by their loved ones.

"Ang matagumpay na negosyo na naipatayo sa ating bansa dahil sa inyong remittances ay isang malaking haligi ng ating ekonomiya (Successful businesses put up because of your remittances have served as an economic pillar)," she said.

The countryside has become vibrant and a beehive of economic activity because of OFW contributions that have reached some $6 billion, which was bigger than the biggest investment made by foreign investors to the Philippines, the President said.

She branded the OFWs as Overseas Filipino Investors (OFI) because "you are major investors in the country."

"Kayo ang mga OFI na araw-araw ay namumuhunan sa kaunlaran ng ating bansa. Ang puhunan ninyo ay ang productive years alang-alang sa ating bayan. Saludo ako sa inyo, dapat lamang na suklian ng bansa ang inyong tulong (As OFIs, you invest more capital to develop our country. Your productive years serve as your capital. I salute you. It is just right for the government and the nation to return this favor)," she said.

The Chief Executive also cited government gains in line with her commitments as enunciated in her July 2001 State of the Nation Address.

Among others, she said she had certified as an urgent administration measures the Absentee Voting Bill and the Bill on Dual Citizenship.

She added that the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council has been fast-tracking efforts to build some 100,000 housing units yearly for workers.

"So far, we have only built about 60,000 houses. So we have 40,000 houses more to go under our targets," she said, as she advised OFWs to go to the embassies and apply for the housing benefits.

The President directed the Department of Labor and Employment to inform the public on the many benefits that they would obtain from the Further Liberalization of Foreign Investments law she sponsored when she was still a senator.

She also ordered Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas to formulate a program that would strengthen the reintegration program for OFWs.

The President further tasked officials overseeing the Overseas Workers Welfare Fund to separate the contributions of seamen and land-based workers from those of doctors and social workers being sent to various overseas posts.

The President noted that the country's economy would continue to rely heavily on OFW remittances.

“On the basis of this realization, this reality, and on the basis of the nation's humanitarian responsibilities to its people wherever they are, our government is working hard to strengthen OFW protection,” she said.

The government would also strengthen its bilateral relations with countries that host a large number of Filipinos, the President said.

During the program, Isidro Aligado, OFI spokesman, pledged the group's unwavering support to the programs and projects, as well as the leadership, of President Macapagal-Arroyo.

GMA awards commemorative medallions to Filipino Olympians

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded commemorative medallions to a number of Filipino Olympians who have participated in Summer Olympiads from the 14th Summer Olympiads in 1948 in London up to the 27th Summer Olympiad in Sydney in 2000.

The awardees were members of the Philippine Olympians Association (POA), an organization representing all Filipino Olympians. Celso Dayrit, president of the Philippine Olympic Committee (POC), initiated the establishment of the POA in 2002 following the examples in many countries.

There are now more than 100 countries with National Olympians Associations.

One of those presented with a commemorative medallion by the President was Rafael Hechanova, chairman of the POA, who was a member of the Philippine basketball team to the Helsinki Summer Olympiad in 1952.

The President also handed a medallion to her brother, Arturo Macapagal, the president of the POA, who participated in the shooting event in the Munich Summer Olympiad in 1972 and in the 1976 Montreal Summer Olympiad.

The other awardees include Mansueto “Onyok” Velasco, Jr., silver medalist in boxing in the 26th Summer Olympiad in Atlanta in 1996; Beatriz Lucero Lhuiller, bronze medalist in taekwondo in the 25th Summer Olympiad in Barcelona in 1992; Gillian Akiko Thomson, who competed in swimming in Barcelona Summer Olympiad in 1992, Atlanta Summer Olympiad in 1996, and in Seoul in 1988; Fred Elizalde, also in swimming, in the 17th Summer Olympiad in Rome in 1960; and Joseph Eric Buhain, the present Philippines Sports Commission chairman, who competed in swimming in Barcelona in 1992 and in Seoul in 1988.

The POA, aside from being officially recognized by the Philippine Olympic Committee as the organization of Filipino Olympians, is affiliated with the World Olympians Association.

GMA approves law creating NPVPB to protect plant varieties

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved the law that would establish a body that would oversee and implement the protection of plant varieties in the country.

In simple rites at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall, the President formally signed Republic Act 9168, also known as the Philippine Plant Variety Protection Act of 2002.

Under the new law, the National Plant Variety Protection Board (NPVPPB) would manage the implementation of the Plant Variety Protection (PVP) system that would determine ownership over new plant varieties.

The new law also established the Gene Trust Fund that would support the preservation of germplasm by government and private sector groups.

RA 9168 is aimed at protecting and securing the exclusive rights of plant breeders with respect to their new plant variety, particularly when beneficial to people, through an effective intellectual property system.

Under the PVP system, a plant breeder could apply for a PVP certificate over a new plant variety from the board.

A certificate and all attendant ownership rights would be given to the plant breeder if the plant variety has passed the test of distinctness, uniformity, stability, and newness.

Holders of a certificate of plant variety would have the right to authorize the production or reproduction, conditioning for the purpose of propagation, offering to sale, selling or other marketing strategies, exporting, importing and stocking of the plant variety.

A provision on exemption to plant variety protection has acknowledged the traditional right of the farmer to save, use, replant and sell his produce from a protected variety, provided that propagation is not being done for commercial purposes.

GMA signs law creating the Film Development Council of the Philippines

True to her word that she would work for the improvement of the Philippine movie industry, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today signed Republic Act 9167, the law creating the Film Development Council of the Philippines.

The President signed the bill in simple rites at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang attended by leaders of the two legislative chambers and prominent personalities in the movie industry.

According to the law, the primary task of the Film Development Council of the Philippines would be to establish and implement a Cinema Evaluation System, which is an incentive reward system for movie producers.

A Cinema Evaluation Board, on the other hand, shall evaluate and grade films that are submitted to the council.

Movie industry personalities present at the occasion included Dona Nena Vera Perez, Marichu Maceda, Atty. Espiridion Laxa, Jose Romero, Boots Plata, Vic del Rosario, Laurice Guillen, Marilou Diaz-Abaya, Bhen Cervantes, German Moreno, Johnny Delgado, Al Tantay, Joel Torre, Caridad Sanchez, Dina Bonnevie, Bong Revilla, Carmina Villaroel and Joyce Jimenez.

The Board, in grading the films, would not, however, be authorized to delete, shorten or modify the films being graded nor suggest cuts, deletions or any form of modification.

The law also said that the Movie Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB) and the Videogram Regulatory Board (VRB) would give due weight and consideration for the graded film's viewing, reproduction, exportation and other purposes.

The evaluation system would be formulated by the Board based on degree of excellence in direction, screenplay, cinematography, editing, production design, music scoring, sound and acting performances.

Among the senators present at the signing ceremonies were Senate President Franklin Drilon, Senators Loren Legarda-Leviste, Manuel Villar Jr., Ralph Recto, Ramon Magsaysay, Renato Cayetano and Vicente Sotto III, the principal author of the bill.

Among those who attended from the House of Representatives were Speaker Jose de Venecia, Representatives Cynthia Villar, Imee Marcos, Gilbert Remulla, Ted Failon, Robert Ace Barbers, and Gerardo Espina.

For years now, the Filipino film industry and its supporters in Congress have been working hard to have the Film Development Council of the Philippines bill passed into law.

But it was only during the term of President Macapagal-Arroyo that the bill was finally signed into law.

GMA to military : end Abu Sayyaf terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the military to “forge on with greater fervor and tenacity” the all out campaign to finish off the notorious kidnap-for-ransom Abu Sayyaf Group in Mindanao.

In a press conference at the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) headquarters in Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City, the President said “the days of offensive operations (against the Abu Sayyaf) are unrelenting.”

She cited the high spirits of the military as they intensively pursued the remnants of the bandit group along the boundary of Siraway and Sibuco towns in Zamboanga del Norte.

“Intensive military operations are ongoing in the area where the rescue took place yesterday,” she said.

The President had a meeting with key AFP commanders who reported that seven soldiers and a paramilitaryman were wounded in a gallant fight against the bandit-terrorists.

“I pray for their recovery and I wish their families well,” she said.

She gave tribute to the soldiers and all those who are continuing the fight against the Abu Sayyaf and terrorism.

“I would like to convey to the soldiers that I feel that they have done well and that they should carry on,” she said.

During the meeting, the Chief Executive named Undersecretary Melchor Rosales, Administrator of the Office of Civil Defense, as the civilian spokesperson on matters related to the operation against the Abu Sayyaf.

“(Rosales) will give regular briefings to the press,” she added.

The President also reiterated her “deep sadness” over the demise of American missionary Martin Burnham and Filipino nurse Ediborah Yap who were killed in fierce firefight between the military and the Abu Sayyaf Friday afternoon in Zamboanga del Norte.

Martin’s wife, Gracia, was later rescued by the military; but she sustained a gunshot wound in the right leg.

The Abu Sayyaf seized the vacationing Burnham couple on May 27 last year from the Dos Palmas Resort in Puerto Princesa City, Palawan.

Yap was snatched on June 2, 2001 from the Lamitan hospital that was taken over by the bandits in a bid to have their wounded treated.

In the press conference, the President said she would visit Gracia Burnham today “to comfort her and to convey our condolences on the death of her husband.”

The President also disclosed that United States President George W. Bush called her up.

“I expressed my sense of bereavement for the Burnham family and the American people. And President Bush also condoled with us on the death of Ediborah Yap and the many soldiers who have lost their lives during all this period that we have been fighting the Abu Sayyaf and rescuing the hostages,” she said.

“President Bush assured us on the continuing help of the United States in pushing our operations forward,” she added.

The President also made plans to visit the family of Yap in Basilan on Tuesday and to bring to them “the condolences of our people.”

“Ediborah is the symbol of the plight of the poor doubly victimized by terrorism. We shall fight poverty and terrorism not only in Basilan, not only in the Sibuco, Siraway, Siocon and Baliguian complex in Zamboanga del Norte, an area as poor as Basilan where the rescue finally happened,” she said.

“But we will bring this fight against poverty and terrorism in the entire country,” she vowed.

GMA cites Filipino-Chinese groups’ support to gov’t programs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Friday night expressed her appreciation to the Filipino-Chinese community for helping her administration provide better services to and in uplifting the lives of the poor in Metro Manila and elsewhere in the country.

In a speech during the 1st Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day celebration in Binondo, Manila, the President cited the initiatives of various Filipino-Chinese groups that supported government in addressing shortages in school buildings and educational facilities.

“Your plan to donate school buildings in various barangays and your book donation program for the poor in the countryside deserve our appreciation and acknowledgement,” she said.

The President also cited the initiative of the Chinese-Filipino Business Club, Inc. (CFBCI) to gather together officials of over 100 different organizations involved in business brotherhood and firefighting.

“I am confident this will result in the unification and solidarity of the various groups in the Chinese community,” she said.

The celebration of the Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day is in accordance with Presidential Proclamation No. 148, which the President issued last January.

She said the celebration also coincided with the first year anniversary of the signing of Republic Act 9139 or the Administrative Naturalization Act.

The President said she is hoping that the CFBCI would help propagate the law and invite many of the Chinese living in the Philippines for a long time to apply for Filipino citizenship.

The occasion also marked the naming of two bridges in Binondo, Manila as the Filipino-Chinese Friendship Bridge and the Manila-Beijing Friendship Bridge.

“May the two bridges serve as monuments to the enduring friendship and historical ties between the Chinese and Filipinos,” she said.

The CFBCI spent some P1 million to repaint, refurbish and put up lights at the two bridges located north and south of Ongpin Street.

Among those who graced the occasion were Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez and Manila Mayor Joselito Atienza.

GMA lauds Koreans' work on RP mango packaging

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today acknowledged four Korean scientists who worked on a packaging bag that would extend the shelf life of Philippine Super Mangoes by weeks instead of days.

In simple rites at Malacañang's Reception Hall, the President awarded plaques of appreciation to Doctors Suki Kang, Dongman Kim and Hyung Woo Park of the Korea Food Research Institute (KFRI) and Soon Woo Geun of Korea's Ministry of Science and Technology.

The Center for International Trade Expositions and Missions (CITEM) earlier tapped the KFRI to develop technology that would effectively address the need to delay the ripening of Philippine Super Mangoes.

CITEM Executive Director Felicidad Tan-Co said the new zeolite-coated film bag called Modified Atmosphere Packaging (MAP) would enable exporters to transport the mangoes to distant markets like the United States and Europe by sea freight.

Air freight would cost more than the products, Tan-Co said.

She noted that the breakthrough technology was good news for mango exporters, particularly after the United States government allowed the importation of Philippine mangoes into the country.

"Spoilage is a thing of the past. Exporters are worried about the short shelf life of mangoes. With the use of this bag, the mangoes could now be stored for 33 days instead of the usual seven days," she said.

Tan-Co explained that the packaging is specifically designed for the Philippine local carabao mango variety that has relatively thin skin.

"The fruits are simply enclosed in the plastic bag, packed in the standard export box and shipped under refrigerated conditions," she said.

The mangoes are stored at 10 degrees Celsius for 22 days with the MAP film and they ripen after seven to eight days at room temperature without MAP.

Their total shelf life can be extended to 33 days or more if the ripening takes place during cold conditions.

The development of the MAP film was a painstaking and laborious process.

Through CITEM's initiation and coordination, KFRI and the Food Development Center (FDC) conducted joint experiments, funded by Korea's Ministry of Science and Technology, from 1996 to 1998 before the zeolite-coated film was finally declared suitable for Philippine mangoes.

Carlito Soon of United Polyresin, the firm that would produce the packaging bag commercially, said the product could be used not only for mangoes, but also for vegetables, fruits and even cutflowers.

"Cutflower suppliers and florists would have more time to sell their blooms. Reduced overhead expenses would translate to lower prices for consumers," Soon said.

“It is expected to not only boost mango exports, but also help local farmers expand their markets and transport their produce at lower prices with little fear of spoilage,” he added.

The cost of using MAP is minimal. Producing a zeolite-bag costs only 20 percent more than an ordinary plastic bag of the same size.

GMA says gov’t committed to eliminate kidnapping, criminality

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Friday night assured the Filipino-Chinese community of the government’s resolve in meeting the problem of kidnapping with more focus and counterforce.

Speaking before a gathering celebrating the 1st Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day in Binondo, Manila, the President said she has been motivating the incoming leadership of the Philippine National Police (PNP) to eliminate kidnapping cases in Metro Manila.

“We will improve the on-the-ground capability of the PNP. We will have a more disciplined processing of intelligence,” the President said.

In explaining the government’s resolve against criminality, the President cited the agreement forged between the Philippines and the United Kingdom that would provide skills and capacity-building training for Filipino policemen to fight kidnapping and other organized crimes.

She added that a similar arrangement is being worked out with the Hong Kong police.

The President further acknowledged that the government’s poverty alleviation programs would not succeed if crime continued to threaten the well being of citizens.

She expressed her appreciation to officials and members of the Chinese-Filipino Business Club, Inc. (CFBCI) for doing their best to help government in crime prevention and control.

Aside from working closely with the National Anti-Crime Commission in addressing kidnapping, the CFBCI has also donated 30 patrol cars to the PNP in previous years, she noted.

This was on top of the Club’s determined efforts to establish tighter links between the government and the Filipino-Chinese businessmen, she added.

The Chief Executive also lauded the efforts of the Filipino-Chinese to rally Metro Manila against drugs with their recent launching of one of the biggest anti-drug rallies participated in by non-governmental organizations, students and youth groups in various Chinese schools.

The President thanked the CFBCI for supporting the government’s anti-terrorism drive and for donating P1 million for the families of soldiers killed in Mindanao.

“Such commitments and actions are what we need to gain the momentum to move forward,” she said.

GMA makes NFA rice accessible to jeepney drivers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that the government would make available National Food Authority (NFA) rice at jeepney terminals to make the staple easily accessible to jeepney drivers.

The President made the announcement during the launching of the Driver’s License Renewal Mobile Kiosks at Malacañang’s Heroes Hall.

In return, representatives of several jeepney and bus drivers groups said they would give senior citizens a P2 fare discount for the first five kilometers.

The discount is on top of the 20 percent reduction on succeeding kilometers provided by law for senior citizens.

The President expressed delight on the development.

The President, who broke bread with transport leaders, also witnessed the demonstration of a prototype of the license renewal facility.

She was joined by Transportation Secretary Pantaleon Alvarez, Land Transportation Office chief Roberto Lastimoso, Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board chairman Dante Lantin and Office of Transportation Cooperatives chairman Jaime Domdom.

Several transport leaders, including those from operators' and drivers' associations, attended the occasion.

The President was presented a copy of a memorandum of agreement (MOA) of the different transport leaders and the Department of Transportation and Communication.

The MOA called for support to the President's agenda of good governance.

The President also awarded the OKSnayan Citation to members of the transportation industry for their willingness to cooperate with the administration by not increasing their fares during the last rounds of oil price increases.

She also gave away certificates of housing entitlement to 27 beneficiaries in the land transport sector.

GMA satisfied over RP economic rebound, hails support of Filipino-Chinese community

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Friday night expressed satisfaction that the country's economy ably pulled through difficulties in the last one and a half years despite the problem of terrorism in Southern Philippines.

In her speech during the 1st Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day celebration in Binondo, Manila, the President attributed the economic gains to the support of the different private organizations including those of the large Filipino-Chinese community.

"While the economies of many of our neighbors and trading partners suffered declines last year, ours posted a 3.7-percent growth in gross national product (GNP)," she said.

This growth, according to her, was one of the highest output growths in East and Southeast Asia.

During the first quarter of this year, the Philippine GNP grew by 4.9 percent, the President noted.

She called on all sectors of society to set aside political differences and instead concentrate on common aspirations for peace, public order, good governance and national development.

"The Philippines will be bright and secure for us and for our children if we remain united," she stressed.

Canlas swears in 4 new NSO directors

Socio-Economic Development Planning Secretary Dante Canlas has sworn into office four newly appointed regional directors of the National Statistics Office (NSO) in simple rites at the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) office in Pasig City.

Canlas named the four presidential appointees as Olivia Gulla for the Cordillera Administrative Region (Baguio City); Rolando Dimaunahan for Eastern Visayas (Tacloban City); Victor Baugbog for Western Mindanao (Zamboanga City); and Jaime Paller for Central Mindanao (Cotabato City).

In a report to Malacañang, Canlas said the appointees were former Provincial Statistics Officers who rose from the ranks and have served the government service for more than 25 years.

They are among the best in field operations, both in statistics and civil registration, as their respective areas have been consistent leaders in the NSO Field Awards.

NSO officials headed by Administrator Carmelita Ericta witnessed the oath-taking ceremony.

GMA seeks ASEAN help in apprehending Abu Sayyaf

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Saturday night sought the assistance of fellow-members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), particularly Malaysia and Indonesia, in apprehending members of the Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) who would attempt to flee the country.

The President, in a press briefing shortly after she visited American missionary Gracia Burnham at the United States Chancery in Pasay City, said "I am concerned that the Abu Sayyaf leaders may try to flee the country. So I have asked the Acting Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Franklin Ebdalin, to seek the assistance of our ASEAN neighbors, particularly Malaysia and Indonesia who are with us in this trilateral agreement to fight terrorism."

The Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia signed a Trilateral Agreement on Terrorism and Transnational Crimes last month, vowing to cooperate in preventing the utilization of any one of their land-air-sea territories for the purpose of committing or furthering terrorism, money laundering, smuggling, piracy or robbery at sea, hijacking, illegal entry, drug trafficking, marine pollution and illicit trafficking of arms.

Aside from the three signatories to the Trilateral Agreement, the other members of Asean are Thailand, Singapore, Myanmar, Brunei Darussalam, Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. Thailand, through Prime Minister Thaksin Shinwatra, has signified its intention to join the Trilateral Agreement.

The trilateral agreement was proposed by the Philippines during the Seventh ASEAN Summit held in Brunei Darussalam in November 2001.

It was signed by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. for the Philippines, Foreign Minister N. Hassan Wirajuda of Indonesia and Foreign Minister Datuk Seri Syed Hamid Albar of Malaysia in Kuala Lumpur last May 7.

The President's statement, in effect, asked other members of the 10-nation regional group to deny refuge to the members of the kidnapping and terrorist gang and help the Philippine government capture and bring them to justice for their crimes against humanity.

At the same time, the President asked Ebdalin to seek the assistance of the International Police Organization and other international law enforcement agencies and send a similar message to the United States Department of Justice.

She noted that the Philippines joined the global effort against terrorism from Day One after the Sept. 11, 2001 terror attacks in the United States.

"We know from our experience in Southwestern Philippines that terrorism is a scourge that causes great pain and suffering and many casualties. This has happened to us in Southwestern Philippines and it has been happening around the world," she said.

The President likewise reiterated that the Philippine government has stood firm and would continue to stand firm in the fight against terrorism.

"We will not back down. There will be no negotiation, there will be no compromise. Kidnappers are the lowest form of life and taking hostages is a crime against all humanity and must not be allowed to proliferate," she declared.

The Philippine government, she added, regrets the loss of life of innocent victims as well as military personnel who are pursuing the terrorists.

"I realize what the painful price we and all the peace-loving nations have to pay to make the world safer for law-abiding citizens," she said.

According to the President, the eradication of terrorism in the Philippines is another step towards strengthening the rule of law in areas of terrorist presence and refocusing the energy of government on addressing social ills with the overall objective of eliminating poverty that confronts so many of the people.

GMA tells nation of gov't initiatives in radio interview every Monday

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will continue to expound on current national issues and concerns as she communicates with the people in her regular "Lingguhang Interbyu sa Pangulo" weekly radio program aired nationwide.

The President goes on-air from 7:30 to 8:00 a.m. every Monday.

Tomorrow, June 10, the President will be interviewed by radio anchormen Rey Langit, Christy Dailo, Caloy Castro and Ely Aligora over radio station DWIZ.

In the next three Mondays, she will go live over radio stations DZRH (June 17), DZMM (June 24) and DZBB (July 1).

In past interviews, the President had candid interaction with the people over local and national concerns, particularly those that relate to social and economic development.

She also talked about government initiatives for national growth, especially her administration's anti-poverty thrusts.

GMA grateful Gracia Burnham rescued alive by soldiers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Saturday night visited American missionary Gracia Burnham at her hospital bed inside the United States Chancery in Pasay City and expressed her deepest sympathy over the death of Gracia's husband Martin.

"I am grateful to the Lord, I am grateful to the soldiers that Gracia was rescued alive," the President told reporters shortly after the visit.

During the visit, the President told Gracia how deeply saddened she was over the death of Martin, over the death of Filipino nurse Ediborah Yap and over the death of soldiers who stood their ground throughout the whole year of trying to rescue the Burnhams, Yap and other hostages held by the notorious kidnap-for-ransom and terrorist Abu Sayyaf Group.

She relayed Gracia's appreciation to the Filipino soldiers for their effort in rescuing her from the hands of the Abu Sayyaf.

"She told me many, many times that I should be proud of them," the President said.

She added that she has arranged for the arrival of the family of slain Ediborah to Manila today so that Gracia could see them before she leaves for the United States.

"She's been with their mother for one year and Gracia is sure that the children want to know many details about how their mother has been throughout this past year," the President said.

She stressed that what should be done right now is to make sure that what Martin, Ediborah, the soldiers and innocent civilians sacrificed for will not be in vain, as she vowed to work to bring the terrorists to justice.

Now that there are no more hostages in the hands of the Abu Sayyaf, the President stressed that the incident should be considered a milestone in the effort to fight terrorism and criminality in the Philippines.

"And also it is a milestone in our global fight, which is the fight against terrorism and still which is the fight against poverty," she said.

GMA asks Chinese-Filipino businessmen to help gov't build schools in Zambo Norte barangays

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night asked the Chinese- Filipino businessmen to help her administration build school buildings in barangays in the towns of Siraway, Sibuco, Siocon and Baliguian or the SSSB Complex of Zamboanga del Norte.

In her speech during the celebration of the Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day at the Century Seafood Restaurant on Vito Cruz, Manila, the President noted that the SSSB Complex is as poor as Basilan where many barangays have no schools at all.

"No wonder many of the barrio folk, uneducated therefore, earn their living only by harboring terrorists who are on the run," she said.

She said it was in those areas where the Abu Sayyaf fled after their atrocities in Ipil, Zamboanga del Sur in 1995.

It was also in that same area where American hostages Martin and Gracia Burnham and Filipina nurse Ediborah Yap were found.

“We are winning the military battle in the SSSB complex. But you must help me win the battle for their hearts and mind. Help me win their battle against poverty,” the President told the Chinese-Filipino businessmen.

Also in her speech, the President thanked the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Inc. (FFCCCII) for helping the government in narrowing the gap in classroom needs through their “Operation Barrio Schools.”

Since the FFCCCII can build classrooms at half the cost of government-built houses, the President said she challenged the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) to try to match that costing.

In her speech, the President also lauded Senate President Franklin Drilon for turning over to the FFCCCII P100 million of his own development fund for the construction of 571 classrooms.

This, she said, is a clear acceptance by the government of the status of the Federation not just as a leading organization in the Chinese-Filipino community but also as a key partner in socio-economic development.

The President pointed out that what made her happy about the Drilon-FFCCCII initiative is that she was allowed to choose the area where the schools will be built.

“I chose 571 barangays where no school exists,” she said, adding that it is now part of her administration’s school-for-every-barangay program.

She rallied all the members of the FFCCCII to help the government build more school buildings especially for the early grades, so that little children will not end up dropping out of school so early because they have to walk long distances just to go to first grade.

“If we can work like this, like one big family, we can secure a bright future for our country, for ourselves and for our children,” the President said.

GMA meets Ediborah Yap’s children, mother

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today met with the family of slain Filipina nurse Ediborah Yap in Malacanang prior to the family’s meeting with recovering Abu Sayyaf hostage victim Gracia Burnham.

The President, along with First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo, conferred with Ediborah’s mother, Mrs. Fatima Pamaran, brother Dave Pamaran, and children Jonathan, Anthony, Mary Anne, and Lawrence at her office in the Palace.

The President told the family that it was the personal request of Gracia Burnham during their meeting Saturday night that she would like to meet Ediborah’s children before she leaves for the United States.

The President noted that Ediborah died in the line of duty as “even in captivity, she was doing her duty as a nurse.”

“This is why Gracia Burnham asks that before she leaves for the United States, she would like to speak to Ediborah’s children, to know them because understandably, she and Ediborah were together for a year. She wants to tell so many things to the children and I’m sure the children want to ask her many things,” the President said.

Aside from conferring with them, the President extended financial support to the family and assured them of provision for a sustainable livelihood.

The eldest of Ediborah’s children, Jonathan, 24, works in the fishing business of his uncle while Anthony, 20, is set to enlist in the military.

Mary Anne, 16, who declined to be photographed, is a recipient of the President's scholarship program while Lawrence, 7, has just entered elementary school.

Accompanying the family to the Palace was Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano "Dinky" Soliman.

The President made arrangements for the transport of the family to Manila. They would be back in Basilan Monday.

The President, meanwhile, said Gracia Burnham was very gracious when she met her yesterday.

The Chief Executive noted that Gracia kept on telling her how courageous Filipino soldiers were in the fight against the Abu Sayyaf.

"She was very gracious. I was telling her, you know Gracia, what a blessing you are in the work that you do because you can see things through the eyes of God. Because she was very gracious and she kept on repeating that I can be proud of our soldiers," she said.

She also awarded a citation to the Esperanza Multi-Purpose Cooperative Inc. of Aurora Isabela in Region 2 (Cagayan Valley) under the People's Organization partner category. The citation was received by Segundino Antolin on behalf of the cooperative.

Presented the award under the Non-Government Organization Partner category was the Institute of Primary Health Care-Davao Medical School Foundation represented by Executive Director Luz Canave.

The President also presented citations to donor countries and foreign institutions.

Under this category, a special award was presented by President Macapagal-Arroyo to Ambassador Roland Van Remoortele of the Royal Belgian Embassy.

The agency awards went to the following: World Bank (represented by Keith Oblitas, country coordinator for Rural Development and Natural Resources); Embassy of Japan represented by Counselor Tayoshi Hoshiyama, and the delegation of the European Commission in the Philippines represented by Charge d'Affaires Luc Vandemon.

The individual awards went to the following: Ambassador Theo Arnold of the Royal Netherlands Embassy represented by Jann Willem Cools, First Secretary, Forest and Environment Development Cooperation; Ambassador Irit Ben Abba of the Embassy of the State of Israel; Ambassador Herbert Jess of the Embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany represented by Dr. Ute Huebner, GTZ International Adviser; Dr. Sang Mu Lee, resident representative of the Food and Agriculture Organization; Terence Jones, resident representative of the United Nations Development Program represented by Jana Grace Rosario, program coordinator; and Sununtar Setboonsang, Poverty Reduction Specialist of the Asian Development Bank.

The awardees under the National Outstanding Implementors (or Performance Awardees) category follows:

1. Outstanding Gender Advocate:
  - Department of Agrarian Reform Ladies Association (DARLA), Nueva Vizcaya, Region 2 (Group Award) represented by Rogelio Follante, Provincial Agrarian Reform Officer; and
  - Director Lilia Nicolas, DAR Central Office (Individual Award).
2. Outstanding Advocate of the Moral Recovery Program:
  - Bulacan Provincial Agrarian Reform Office-Region 3 (Group Award) represented by Miguel Mendoza, Assistant Regional Director for Administration of Region 3 (Central Luzon); and
  - Ma. Katherine Somera – Region I (Ilocos) (Individual Award)

4. Technical Performance: Joven Tulang, Agrarian Reform Program Officer II of Region 13 (Caraga)
5. Frontliner Performance : Catalina Diwat, Agrarian Reform Program Technician/ Development Facilitator of Region 4 (Southern Tagalog)
6. Managerial Performance : Marion Abella, Provincial Agrarian Reform Officer II, Region 12 (Central Mindanao).

The President also presented citations to the following outstanding partners:

- Outstanding Landowner : Onofre Grino of Region 9;
- Outstanding Agrarian Reform Community: Upig/Basuit ARC (Agrarian Reform Communities), Bulacan, Region 3 represented by Oscar Sabariaga, ARC Chairman, Perlita Quito, Development Facilitator, and Jesus Lim, cooperative manager; and
- Outstanding Agrarian Reform Beneficiary: Wenefrido Cain of Zamboanga del Sur in Region 9.

Palace calls on local communities to be on the alert for possible sightings of Abu Sayyaf

Malacanang today called on the residents of the vicinity of Sirawai, Sibuco and Baliguian towns in Zamboanga del Norte to alert military authorities on any sightings of the Abu Sayyaf terrorists who are believed to be still in the area after the firefight last Saturday.

In an interview, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said the residents should be on the lookout of any suspicious-looking persons or activities so that they can help protect their communities from any new hostage-taking incident by the Abu Sayyaf bandits.

“Dapat maging alerto din sila para magbigay ng impormasyon kung sakaling may nakikita silang mga kahinalang mga kilos ng mga tao doon sa paligid (They should also be on the alert to relay information if they notice some suspicious-looking persons or movements in their locality),” Golez said.

Golez made his appeal in the wake of an unequivocal statement from Gracia Burnharm, the rescued American hostage, that the Abu Sayyaf should be treated as common criminals and should be brought to justice.

In a statement that she read before enplaning for the United States this morning, Burnham said that during their one-year ordeal, they were “repeatedly lied to by the Abu Sayyaf and they are not men of honor.”

“They should be treated like common criminals. We support all efforts of the government in bringing these men to justice,” Burnham said.

Burnham, widow of the slain Martin Burnham, also thanked the people for their prayers and support during their ordeal.

The Burnham family also absolved the Philippine government of any responsibility on the death of Martin.

“The family is not looking to find out the person who pulled the trigger that shot the bullet that killed Martin,” Doug Burnham, Martin’s younger brother, said in an interview last Saturday in Wichita, Kansas.

Doug said that “if Martin was killed by some other than the Abu Sayyaf, that is unfortunate, but we knew that was a risk in the military rescue.”

The younger Burnham also pointed out that the Abu Sayyaf bandits were the enemy and because they were the ones who took Martin and Gracia hostage, they should be brought to justice.

In the interview, Golez also called on the Filipino people to pray so that the country’s armed forces would finally succeed in wiping out the Abu Sayyaf.

“Sana ay magtagumpay sila sapagkat iyong tagumpay nila ay hindi lamang para sa military, kung hindi para sa ating mga Pilipino (I hope that they will succeed since their success would not only be the success of the military but also of the Filipino people),” Golez said.

GMA lauds D.A.R. for surpassing land distribution target under C.A.R.P.

CLARK FIELD, Pampanga — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Department of Agrarian Reform led by Secretary Hernani Braganza for exceeding its target of distributing 104,261 hectares of private agricultural lands to some 72,188 farmer beneficiaries all over the country.

“I would like to congratulate you. I would like to thank our official development assistance partners, because they helped us meet these targets without getting additional budget from the General Appropriations Act,” the President said in her speech at the 14th anniversary of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP) this morning at the Expo Filipino here.

“Nilampasan ninyo ang target na ibinigay ko sa inyo (You have exceeded the target I set),” she said, referring to her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July where she set a target of 100,000 hectares of private agricultural lands for distribution under CARP.

As the President called out the name of each province and the corresponding hectarage distributed under CARP, the huge crowd present, which included farmers, landowners, representatives of foreign donor-countries and DAR employees, cheered and applauded.

The President noted that the reason why Secretary Braganza was able to achieve the land distribution goal was because “he was able to have a very high absorption rate for official development assistance.”

The President recalled that during her State of the Nation Address, she cited agricultural modernization founded on social equity as one of the four major components of her administration’s fight against poverty.

According to the President, the social equity that her government worked on under the agricultural modernization program is land reform. “This is why land reform is one of the primary goals of my administration,” she declared.

Even when she was still Vice President, she said, she was articulating the four components of what she believes a program to fight poverty should have.

“I said many times that the promise of land reform, a commitment that spans several presidents, must finally be redeemed,” the President stressed.

“I said that without equity and modernization, we will never win the struggle against poverty in our rural countryside,” she said.

The President also said that other presidents aspired hard to achieve genuine land reform for the country.

She said that her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, considered the initiation of land reform in the country as the primary achievement of his presidency. She added that her father believed that tenancy is against the law.

“It is for this reason that I continue to work on what my father had started – the country’s land reform program,” the President stressed.

During her speech, the President enumerated the various provinces that have contributed their share to the success of CARP.

The President said the administration’s land reform project is two-fold.

“Ang pinaka-land reform, iyong private agricultural land. So iyon ay 100,000 hectares a year, ang ating goal. (Actual land reform covers private agricultural land. That’s 100,000 hectares a year, our main goal),” she said.

“There are also lands available owned by the national government or public domain that can be alienable and this is also another 100,000 hectares that we want to distribute every year,” she added.

The President arrived here at exactly 10 a.m. Upon arrival, she led the switch-on ceremonies of the agrarian reform communities already established in the country, including those formed and activated during the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

Among those present during the occasion were Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel Arroyo, Angeles City Mayor Carmelo Lazatin and other government officials.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal – Arroyo

I am very pleased and thrilled by the brilliant masterful defense of the IBF Junior Featherweight crown by Manny Pacquiao Sunday morning in Memphis, Tennessee. For a few anxious moments, millions of his countrymen, from around the world, had nothing else but the powers of their prayers to help him win. His skills, discipline and courage proved to be more than enough to give his country a rare moment of glory.

I cannot but think of it as coming like a ray of sunshine for our nation during a most difficult time. His victory also reinforces our faith in the capacity of the Filipino to rise above adversity to fulfill his most cherished dream.

Millions of our youth who have want of new heroes, find inspiration in his triumph. At his age, physical conditioning, and with the good people around him, Pacquiao will go far and win more laurels. He is now ranked with some of the great Filipino prizefighters of yesteryears like Pancho Villa and Flash Elorde.

His homecoming will be a joyous event for our country.

My congratulations and Godspeed.

Malacañang refutes distortions in reports on President's net worth

Malacañang today took very strong exception to certain distortions and miscalculations of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's net worth as reported in the media.

In a press briefing this afternoon at Malacañang, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said: "I would like to make it of record that her net worth in the year 2000 was about P58.3 million and her net worth in the year 2001 was about P66.7 million for an increase of about just P8.4 million," Afable said.

Reports said the President's net worth more than doubled to P66 million during her first year in office based on her statement of assets and liabilities which she filed as required by law.

Under the law, government officials are required to submit a statement of assets and liabilities each year. This is meant to discourage public officials from acquiring wealth illegally by showing that their wealth was acquired within their means.

The law also stipulates that falsification of financial statements or failure to make a disclosure is punishable by law.

Abalos named Comelec Chairman: 2 other poll commissioners, 2 Alvarezes reappointed

Malacañang announced today that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has appointed Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) Chairman Benjamin Abalos as the new chairman of the Commission on Election (Comelec), replacing Alfredo Benipayo.

Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said during an interview after his regular press briefing that the President appointed Abalos to the top Comelec position last June 5.

Afable also announced that the President reappointed on the same date Transportation and Communications Secretary Pantaleon Alvarez, Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Heherson Alvarez, and Comelec Commissioners Florentino Tuazon and Resurreccion Borra.

Afable said that in the meantime, the MMDA chairmanship remains vacant as the President is still evaluating the list of nominees to the position, which include former Marikina City Mayor Bayani Fernando and Muntinlupa Congressman Ignacio Bunye.

GMA okays export development plan for 2002-2004

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved the new Export Development Plan, the embodiment of the country's strategy for exports in 2002 to 2004.

The President approved the plan immediately after a briefing on its strategic and operational directions during the quarterly meeting of the Export Development Council at the Heroes Hall in Malacañang.

Under the plan, Philippine exports are projected to grow by 10 percent in 2002, 15 percent in 2003 and 16 percent in 2004, higher than the estimates in the Medium Term Philippine Development Plan of zero percent exports growth for 2002 and 10 percent for 2003 and 2004.

In approving the plan, the President noted that the United States, which is the Philippines's main export market, is beginning to recover. "Therefore things should only get better," she said.

She also stressed that China, a giant market, is entering the world trading system and so “we should benefit from that.”

“And then we have all the other markets and we identified the products that we should concentrate on under the Export Development Plan which has been approved and the mode of promoting these new products or improving the competitiveness of the old products,” she added.

The high estimated growth in the succeeding years is expected to come from the so-called 10 Revenue Streams, export products identified to have high growth potentials.

According to the EDC, these revenue streams are projected to post double-digit growth rates in the next three years, led by information technology which is forecast to grow by 95 percent in 2002, 64 percent in 2003 and 42 percent in 2004. Other product groups expected to perform well are marine products, organic and natural products, motor vehicle parts and components, electronics, giftware and holiday décor and food.

The plan will be jointly implemented by the government and private sector, led by the Department of Trade and Industry and Philexport, the country’s accredited umbrella export organization. The export sector contributes 35 percent to the Gross National Product and generates significant employment.

In 2001, Philippine exports decreased to $32.2 billion from $38.1 billion the previous year, due mainly to the general downturn in the global economy. The implementation of the PEDP is expected to focus government and private business efforts towards sustained growth.

The approval of the plan comes at a time when the country’s exports posted a 22.4 percent year-on-year increase last April, the first rebound posted in 13 months since the global economic slowdown in the last two years, which was aggravated by the terrorist attacks in the United States.

Among those present at the meeting were EDC chairman Trade Secretary Manuel “Mar” Roxas II and EDC Vice Chairman Sergio Ortiz-Luis Jr. of the Philippine Exporters Confederation Inc.

Representing the government sector in the EDC were Foreign Undersecretary Franklin Ebdalin, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor, Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Science and Technology Secretary Estrella Alabastro and Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas.

Those coming from the private sector were Charles Streegan (Cebu Furniture Industries Foundation Inc.) Domingo Teng (General Santos City Chamber of Commerce and Industry), Floro Oliveros (Kaunlaran ng Manggagawang Pilipino Inc.), Senen Bacani (Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry), Dr. Emma Teodoro (Philippine Software Association), Luis Sicat (Home Accents Group of the Philippines), Atty. Virgilio Sanchez (Christmas Décor Association of the Philippines) and Jose Pangilinan (Chamber of Furniture Industries of the Philippines).

NBI ordered to coordinate with military police authorities in hunt for ASG members

Justice Secretary Hernando Perez today directed the National Bureau of Investigation to coordinate with all military and police authorities to exert all efforts for the early apprehension of Abu Sayyaf Group members.

Perez also directed the NBI to coordinate with the Bureau of Immigration, International Police Organization, police and investigative agencies in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, and the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation for a possible regional or even worldwide manhunt for ASG members who might flee Philippine territory.

The top leaders of the ASG being hunted include:

1. Amir Khadafi Abubakar Janjalani a.k.a. Abu Muktar or Khadafi Monationio or Jihad Manalad

2. Jainal Antel Sali, Jr. a.k.a. Abu Solaiman
3. Aldam Tilao a.k.a. Abu Sabaya
4. Isnilon Toton Hapilon a.k.a. Abu Musab
5. Hamsitaji Marusi Sali a.k.a. Jose Ramirez or Siti Birkis or Tiberkis

Perez also approved the request of the NBI to issue Hold-Departure Orders against these ASG members.

He also directed Justice Undersecretary Merceditas N. Gutierrez to coordinate with the Department of Foreign Affairs and prepare requests for the extradition of any ASG members who may have fled to Indonesia, with whom the Philippines has an existing Extradition Treaty.

GMA's Zamboanga visit shows her resolve to fight terrorism, poverty in Mindanao

ZAMBOANGA CITY – In just a week's time after passing through here from nearby Dipolog City where she noted the needs of the people in the Zamboanga peninsula, the President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived in this city again today aboard a Lear jet that landed at the Edwin Andrews Air Base shortly before 10:00 a.m.

Military officials said the President's arrival demonstrated her resolve to lead her troops, as Commander-in-Chief, in the "no let-up" fight against the Abu Sayyaf and terrorism in Southern Philippines.

Civilian leaders added that she showed her commitment to rid the country of the scourge of poverty by later presiding over a meeting on socio-economic growth and peace and order in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao's (ARMM).

Upon her arrival, the President was warmly welcomed by Zamboanga City Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat, Zamboanga Rep. Celso Lobregat, Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus Dureza, ARMM Regional Governor Parouk Hussin, and military officials led by Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu, Southern Command (Southcom) Chief Gen. Ernesto Carolina and Western Mindanao Police Director Simeon Dizon.

Also on hand to welcome the President were leaders and members of the Aguman Kapampangan, the staff of the Department of the Interior and Local Governments regional office and officers of the Public Safety College.

From the air base, the President and her party motored to Camp Navarro, Southcom Hospital to visit soldiers and a military man wounded in gunbattles with the Abu Sayyaf in Siraway, Zamboanga del Norte.

The soldiers were part of the troops that engaged in a search-and-rescue operation to get back American missionaries Martin and Gracia Burnham and Filipino nurse Ediborah Yap from the hands of the Abu Sayyaf.

Following her hospital visit, the President had lunch with members of the local media with whom she shared insights on various topics, including the conduct of the Balikatan 02-1, in an informal conversation.

After an early lunch, at about 11:30, the President was flown by helicopter to Lamitan, Basilan where she immediately went to the wake of slain Abu Sayyaf hostage Filipino nurse Ediborah Yap.

The President is scheduled later today to preside over the joint meeting of the ARMM's Regional Economic Planning and Development Board (REPDB) and the Regional Peace and Order Council (RPOC).

With the President are Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, Presidential Assistant on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita;

Official Development Assistance Secretary Marita Jimenez, Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo, Presidential Assistant for Jobs Generation Luis Lorenzo, Presidential Assistant on Muslim Affairs Nur Jaafar, Electrification Deputy Administrator Edita Bueno, Local Water Utilities Administrator Lorenzo Jamora and Press Undersecretary Roberto Capco.

Following the ARMM REPDB/RPOC meeting, the President is slated to attend a short program where she would award a Community-Based Forest Management Agreement Utilization Permit to Sarri Bolon, president of the Maligue Multi-Purpose Cooperative.

The permit allowed the extraction of 500 cubic meters of forest products worth some P1.5 million in three barangays of Isabela City.

The President would also give out checks aggregately amounting to P1.285 million for core shelter, potable water, post-harvest, educational, skills training and other projects in different towns of Basilan.

She would also distribute Philhealth insurance cards and turn over medicines to officials of Lamitan.

GMA lauds gallantry of soldiers, militiaman wounded in clash with Abu Sayyaf

ZAMBOANGA CITY — A firm handshake, a steady smile, comforting words, a look at their wounds and an envelope containing P50,000 to start with.

These were the encouraging gestures President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today gave 11 soldiers, most of them Scout Rangers, and a militiaman wounded in separate firefights against Abu Sayyaf terrorists in Siraway, Zamboanga del Norte.

The President extolled the bravery and gallantry of the Filipino soldiers engaged in the battle against terrorism, as she visited one by one the wounded at their hospital beds in Camp Navarro, Southern Command Hospital here.

She showed her admiration for the soldiers and the army-trained militiaman who were ready to give up their lives to protect the people from terrorists and to defend freedom and democracy.

During the visit to the surgical ward of the Southcom Hospital where she was received by hospital chief Col. Joselito Castro, the President personally handed over a special fund assistance of P50,000 to each of the seven wounded.

She was assisted by Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus Dureza, Regional Governor Parouk Hussin of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), and Zamboanga City Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat.

The fund aid for those airlifted to Manila was given to relatives who represented them.

The recipients of the special fund aid included Sergeants Arsenio Peran, Radney Magbanua; Corporals Carlito San Pablo, Jose Lagadon, Jerry Pulmano and George Labastida; Privates First Class Rogelio Tuazon, Abner Eustaquio, Alvin Maddatu, Ramon Guilingan, Rey Balanay, Jonathan Cacalda and Rene Mabilog; and paramilitary man Elejandro Ebo.

Pulmano is with the Army's 2nd Scout Ranger unit; Labastida, Guilingan and Balanay with the 4th Infantry Battalion; and Cacalda, Peran and Lagadon with the 12th Scout Rangers.

All the others were part of the 15th Scout Ranger unit that shot it out with the Abu Sayyaf during the daring search-and-rescue mission on American hostages Martin and Gracia Burnham and Filipino nurse Ediborah Yap in Siraway last June 7.

But it was Ebo, who guided the Scout Rangers to the Abu Sayyaf lair, who received the best surprise of his life.

"Welcome to the Armed Forces of the Philippines," the President told him, hinting that Ebo should be enlisted in the military.

Aside, Col. Fredesvindo Covarrubias, head of the Combined Information Bureau for the joint RP-US Balikatan 02-1 military exercise, said Ebo would not find it hard to train as an enlisted army man anymore because of his experience in the field as a paramilitary man.

Ebo is attached with the Army's 44th Infantry brigade, First Infantry Division.

Newly-installed Southern Command (Solcom) chief Major General Ernesto Carolina requested the assistance for the wounded soldiers.

The June 7 gunbattle ensued during a search-and-rescue plan—codenamed "Operation Daybreak"—the military launched to get back the Burnhams and Yap.

The Abu Sayyaf snatched the vacationing Burnham couple in the Dos Palmas Resort in Puerto Princesa City, Palawan on May 27 last year. Yap, on the other hand, was taken hostage when the terrorists stormed the Torres Hospital in Lamitan, Basilan on June 2, 2001 in a bid to have their wounded treated.

The President earlier expressed sadness over the death of Martin Burnham and Yap during the rescue operation, but felt the military did a great job in recovering a wounded Gracia Burnham, who has returned home to Kansas in the United States Monday.

Last Saturday (June 8), the President visited Gracia, who is recuperating from a gunshot wound in the leg, at the US Chancery in Pasay City. The following day (June 9), she received the mother, brother and four children of Yap in Malacañang.

The President, following the hospital visit and lunch with the members of the local media here, flew to Lamitan, Basilan to attend the wake of Yap, at the Lamitan Parish Church early this afternoon.

She will also preside over the joint meeting of the Regional Economic Planning and Development Board and Regional Peace and Order Council of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

GMA mulls over naming hospital after Ediborah Yap

LAMITAN, Basilan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she plans to have a hospital named in honor of slain Abu Sayyaf hostage Ediborah Yap.

Arriving in this small town by helicopter early this afternoon from Zamboanga City, the President lauded the bravery and steel nerves of Ediborah, who lasted a year along with fellow hostages Martin and Gracia Burnham under the bestial hands of the Abu Sayyaf.

Ediborah and Martin were killed in an encounter between the military and the terrorist Abu Sayyaf in Siraway, Zamboanga del Norte last June 7. Gracia was rescued but suffered a bullet wound in the leg.

The President came here to once more condole with the family of Ediborah and express her deepest sympathies over their great loss.

Ediborah's mother, brother and four children went to see the President in Malacañang last Sunday.

Ediborah's remains lie in state at the Lamitan Parish compound.

"(Ediborah) died in the line of duty," the President said during an informal conversation over early lunch with the members of the local media in Zamboanga City.

"I think that is a very good insight of the Philippine Nurses Association," she said.

"I would like to name a hospital after her," she added, further stressing that she is looking for an appropriate hospital that would bear the memory of Ediborah.

"It must be meaningful," she said.

After the visit at the wake, the President motored to the Claret High School for the joint meeting of the Regional Economic Planning and Development Board and the Regional Peace and Order Council in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

The joint meeting is expected to tackle several issues and concerns on socio-economic growth and peace stability in the ARMM.

After the joint meeting, the President would later this afternoon proceed to the ground floor of the Claret High School to lead in the awarding of various checks for livelihood, community based forest management agreement that allowed the extraction of 500 cubic meters of forest products worth P1.5 million in three barangays of Isabela City in Basilan.

She would also give checks for core shelter assistance, for potable water projects, and allowance uniforms and school supplies to 93 PGMA scholars in the five towns of Basilan.

She would also distribute Philhealth Insurance cards and checks from the Department of Agriculture for the agri-modernization program in the province.

The President is expected to lead in the flag-raising ceremonies for June 12 Independence Day celebration here in Lamitan before going to Zamboanga City for her flight to Manila.

GMA urges speedy ARMM socio-economic growth

ZAMBOANGA CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on officials to help the people in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) attain faster socio-economic growth.

Over early lunch with members of the local media here, the President noted the imperative need to "make the ARMM develop faster because it is the poorest area, the poorest region in the whole country."

She explained that the ARMM's five component provinces—Basilan, Maguindanao, Lanao del Sur, Sulu and Tawi-Tawi—have remained as the country's five poorest provinces.

“That kind of economic exclusion really is a breeding ground for people who could be vulnerable to the call of terrorists,” she said.

The President made the call before she flew by helicopter to Lamitan, Basilan where she would be presiding over the joint meeting of members of the ARMM’s Regional Economic Planning and Development Board and the Regional Peace and Order Council (RPOC) at the Claret High School.

The meeting would tackle ways to fast-track ongoing social and economic programs and projects while working out ways to stabilize peace and order in the region.

Assisting the President during the meeting is Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) Governor Parouk Hussin, ARMM Executive Secretary Nabil Tan and ARMM RPOC Chairman Governor Datu Andal Ampatuan of Maguindanao province.

With the President are Cabinet Secretaries and other national government agency heads concerned with the President’s thrust to rid the country of terrorism and poverty.

GMA focuses on twin battle against terrorism, poverty

ZAMBOANGA CITY – Achieving a military victory over terrorism – such as that which the government is achieving over the terrorist kidnap-for-ransom Abu Sayyaf Group – does not end there.

Even if the Abu Sayyaf is wiped out, there is still the ‘twin’ of the war against terrorism, which is the war against poverty, to focus on.

This President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo stressed as she pushed for solutions to the problem of poverty in Basilan and in the Triple SB complex (Siocon, Siraway, Sibuco, Baliguan towns in Zamboanga del Norte).

Successful anti-poverty programs would nip in the bud any move to create “another outburst sometime in the future,” she told members of the local media who joined her for early lunch at the Southern Command Mansion House here.

“Even as we say ‘let’s finish the Abu Sayyaf,’ let us also move forward with the war against poverty,” she said.

“We cannot let other events distract us from our focus,” she added, as she hoped the anti-poverty campaign would be won within a decade.

The President said that “even as we address immediate threats, military threats, we must always remember that the focus is on the economy.”

She said a bad economy is a breeding ground for the mass base of terrorists.

The President, in answer to a media query, stressed that she has not given the military any timetable to pulverize the Abu Sayyaf.

“Take as long as it takes, as long as you win the war,” she told her audience that included ranking officials of the military and the Cabinet.

GMA to lead 104th Independence Day celebration with flag-raising rites in Lamitan tomorrow

With the stepped-up military campaign aimed at finally putting an end to the kidnapping scourge of the Abu Sayyaf bandit group in Mindanao as a backdrop, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will lead tomorrow the commemoration of the country's 104th Independence Day.

The President will kick off the nationwide celebration by raising the Philippine flag at 7:00 a.m. in Lamitan, Basilan, where she would be staying overnight.

After meeting with military and local officials in Zamboanga City, the President flew by helicopter to Lamitan, Basilan this afternoon where she presided over the joint meeting of the Regional Economic Planning and Development Board of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao and the Regional Peace and Order Council at the Claret High School.

The President also visited the wake of slain Filipino nurse Ediborah Yap at the Lamitan Parish Church.

Tomorrow's flag-raising ceremony in Lamitan will set off simultaneous flag-raising rites in Kawit, Cavite and in other parts of the country.

Afterward, the President would return to Malacanang to attend the traditional Vin d'Honneur, the reception hosted by the President for the Diplomatic Corps.

During the Vin d'Honneur, the President will deliver her message to the international community. The dean of the Diplomatic Corps will then make a response.

In the afternoon, the President will speak before the nation at the customary Independence Day celebrations at the Quirino Grandstand. A joint-civic military parade will then follow.

Last year at the 103rd celebrations of the Philippine Independence, the President denounced the Abu Sayyaf for simply being a money-crazed bandit group, without fear of God and word of honor.

The bandit group had then just kidnapped several vacationers at the upscale Dos Palmas Resort in Palawan, including the two American missionaries, Martin and Gracia Burnham.

"Ang galit ng taong-bayan ay umaapaw na. Ang ginagawang pandurukot ng mga Abu Sayyaf ay labag sa batas ng Kristiyanismo at Islam (The wrath of the citizenry is mounting. The kidnapping done by the Abu Sayyaf is against the laws of both Christianity and Islam)," she said. On Saturday, after the encounter with the Abu Sayyaf which resulted in the death of Martin Burnham and Yap, the President ordered the military to finish off the Abu Sayyaf now that they no longer have hostages to be used as shields.

Several colorful floats, a number of marching bands and hundreds of contingents wearing costumes in different shades representing the different government and private sectors will be the major attraction of the Araw ng Kalayaan celebration at the Quirino Grandstand in Rizal Park tomorrow.

The parade will start at 3 p.m. and is expected to finish at 6 p.m.

From among the participants will be chosen the Best Float, the Best Contingent, the Best Marching Band, Drum and Bugle Group in the different competition categories. All the participants of the parade shall be included in the judging with the exception of the Department of Tourism and the National Commission for Culture and Arts.

Tourism Undersecretary Oscar Palabyab said at least 35 will vie for the Best Float competition.

GMA calls on people to stay united in Independence Day message

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo called on the citizenry to unite and flesh out the country's democracy in order to achieve its goals of "alleviating mass poverty, eradicating graft and corruption, putting up a common front against international terrorism, setting moral standards in governance, and providing peace, justice and sense of community which is none other than national unity."

In her message commemorating the 104th anniversary of Philippine Independence Day tomorrow, the President said the country is at the "threshold of profound social, economic, political and cultural changes as we enter the brave world of the coming century and beyond."

"It is only by forging anew our unity as one country and one people, and strengthening our freedom on the basis of sustainable development and far-reaching reforms, change and renewal – enhancing our profound love of God and our pride in the Filipino race – can we attain our individual and collective goals, and seek our rightful place in the international community of nations," she said.

The text of the President's message follows in full:

Binabati ko ang buong sambayanang Pilipino gayundin ang ating World Class Filipino Workers sa iba't-ibang panig ng daigdig sa pagdiriwang ng ating ika-104 taon ng Araw ng Kasarinlan.

Kalakip nito ang ating taimtim na dalangin na simulan nating lahat ang lubusang pagkakaisa at pagpunyaging kailangan upang ating makamtam ang mga biyaya ng kasarinlan at ang kaligayahan, kasaganaan ng bawa't Pilipinong may katutubong pagmamahal sa kaligayahan at kapayapaan.

Today, we are called upon to stay united and to flesh out our independence which our country's President General Emilio Aguinaldo, proclaimed in Kawit, Cavite on June 12, 1898, and established the first democratic republic in Asia and Africa.

By remembering that day in history, we hope to remind our people of how hard a struggle our forebears had fought, of how much blood had been shed, to win our country's place in the community of nations.

Today, 104 years after, we are called upon to flesh out democracy in terms of alleviating mass poverty; eradicating graft and corruption; putting up a common front against international terrorism; setting high moral standards in governance; and, providing peace, justice, dignity and sense of the community which is none other than national unity.

Today, the Philippines is at the threshold of profound social, economic, political and cultural changes as we enter the brave world of the coming century and beyond. It is only by forging anew our unity as one country and one people, and strengthening our freedom on the basis of sustainable development and far-reaching reforms, change and renewal – enhancing our profound love of God and our pride in the Filipino race – can we attain our individual and collective goals, and seek our rightful place in the international community of nations.

Mabuhay ang sambayanang Pilipino!

Mabuhay ang Republika ng Pilipinas!

GMA calls Ediborah Yap a National Heroine

LAMITAN, Basilan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to the late Ediborah Yap, one of the two Abu Sayyaf hostages killed in a fierce clash between the military and the terrorists in Siraway, Zamboanga del Norte on June 7.

The President said nurse Ediborah Yap is not only the hero of Isabela, Lamitan and Basilan. She said Ediborah is the hero of the whole country.

“She died in the line of duty. Up to the end, she did her duty as a nurse. This is a good sign of the good ethics of the people of Lamitan. The good deed of Ediborah reflected the goodness of Lamitan and Basilan province as a whole,” the President said.

She said Ediborah Pamaran Yap was her relative by blood, on the side of her mother Evangeline Macaraeg-Macapagal.

She added that she found out today that the Pamarans were related to her relatives in Manukan, Zamboanga del Norte.

She made the discovery when she was tracing the family tree with the Pamarans at the wake of Ediborah at the Lamitan Parish Compound’s Jardin de Infancia.

The President visited her relatives in Manukan following the recent joint Zamboanga Peninsula Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order Council in Dipolog City.

Upon her arrival at the wake, the President presented a birthday cake to Lawrence William, youngest son of Ediborah who is celebrating his birthday today.

She stayed over one hour talking with the family of Ediborah, informing them that the district hospital of Basilan would be named Ediborah Yap District Hospital, in honor of the heroism of the late nurse.

GMA announces N.E.A. takeover of Baselco

LAMITAN, Basilan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the National Electrification Administration’s (NEA) takeover of the management of the Basilan Electric Cooperatives (Baselco) effective today.

The President said the rehabilitation of the Baselco plant would start soonest to avoid fluctuations, blackouts and the power outages in at least six towns of Basilan and in Isabela City.

She said the takeover was one of the recommendations brought to her attention when she visited Basilan last month.

The takeover was only one of the many socio-economic programs of the President pushed during her visit to the island-province today.

She also received a progress report on the needs of the residents whose houses were razed to the ground in a big fire that hit Barangay Kampurna, Isabela City on May 29.

She awarded three water pumps to the Kampurna fire victims. The water pumps would be used in place of firetrucks that could not penetrate the community due to the absence of roads. This way, “malawakang (widespread)” fires could be avoided in the future, she said.

Before a big crowd that met her at the Claret High School Grounds, the President awarded a community-based Forest Management Agreement Utilization Permit for the extraction of 500 cubic meters of forest products worth P1.5 million in three Isabela City barangays.

Sarri Bolon, president of the Maligue Multi-Purpose Cooperative, received the permit.

She also distributed checks worth P1.285 million for the following projects under the Department of Social Welfare and Development:

- P750,000 for the Core Shelter Assistance in Barangay Paniongan, Lantawan;

- P75,680 representing the initial fund release for the Barangay Buli-Buli, Sumisip Potable Water Project;
- P120,000 representing the initial fund release for the Tuburan Potable Water project;
- P174,750 for the allowance, uniforms and school supplies of the 93 President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo (PGMA) scholars in six municipalities of Basilan;
- P100,000 for the pre-post harvest equipment in Barangay Batungal, Maluso;
- P20,522 for the practical skills training on food processing of 20 women in Barangay Matering, Tipo-Tipo;
- P40,800 for the construction of a communal comfort room in Upper Beembegan, Sumisip; and
- P4,000 for kitchen utensils in Matibay, Lamitan.

The President also led in distributing PhilHealth cards to 500 recipients, and turned over 10 boxes of medicines worth P100,000 to the municipality of Basilan.

People seeks permanent stay of U.S. troops in Basilan

LAMITAN, Basilan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today received a letter-resolution from concerned citizens of Basilan asking her to let the Americans stay in Basilan permanently.

The letter was signed by Rev. Fr. Cirilo Nacorda, Parish Priest of Lamitan; Enriqueta Tan, president of the Parish Council; and some 3,000 concerned citizens.

The letter said that with the effort of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and local paramilitary groups, together with Americans troops participating in the joint RP-US Balikatan 02-1 military exercises, “we feel a surge of hope for peace and prosperity in the area.”

The letter stressed that the financial institutions in Zamboanga, where Basileños do their business with, attested to the fact that increases in trade, deposits and financial markets have been noted with the presence of the Americans in the area.

“We are hoping that this aura of peace and development will continue but we are uneasy with the thought that the Americans who are giving us moral and civic support will be leaving after their stay of six months. We are insecure with the thought that their absence will bring us back to square one,” the letter said.

The concerned citizens said that whatever people – from other places like Manila who did not experience what people from Basilan have experienced – think, “that’s their privilege and prerogative.”

“As for us who underwent terrors and hardships, the Americans are our hope, protector and inspiration,” they said.

The letter was given to the President when she visited the wake of Ediborah Yap at the Lamitan Parish Compounds’ Jardin de Infancia here.

GMA to raise RP flag in Basilan to open celebration of 104th Independence Day

LAMITAN, Basilan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she will lead the raising of the national flag to celebrate Independence Day at the Municipal Hall grounds here.

The President said raising the Philippine flag here signifies the declaration of the freedom of the people of Basilan from the bondage of poverty and terrorism.

The President said that when Aguinaldo raised the flag in Cavite, it meant freedom was attained.

“He declared that we are free and ready to fight for our freedom through blood and sweat,” she said.

The President made her remarks before convening the joint meeting of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao's Regional Economic Planning and Development Board and Regional Peace and Order Council at the Claret High School here.

She said that Tuesday's declaration of the fight against terrorism would signal the start of a relentless fight against poverty.

She expressed the hope that the day would come when Basilan would be the symbol of peace and development in the country.

The President would spend the night here and would raise the flag in front of the municipal hall at exactly 7:00 a.m. tomorrow, the 104th anniversary of Philippine independence.

14 JUNE 2002

- GMA bares plan to mobilize culture to improve moral standards in society, government
- GMA presents 'Gintong Kalabaw' award to 100 graduates of Cavite National High School
- GMA presents awards for Judicial Excellence to outstanding judges, prosecutors

GMA bares plan to mobilize culture to improve moral standards in society, government

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo expounded yesterday on the administration's policy of mobilizing culture to improve moral standards in society and ultimately attaining the goal of winning the battle against poverty.

The President told art and culture experts and heads of government and non-government agencies gathered at the Culture and Arts Conference at the Pearl Manila Hotel in Ermita, that culture reflects and molds moral standards.

She said culture has its place in the four core beliefs of her administration – the second tenet on the improvement of moral standards in government and society in order to provide a strong foundation for good governance.

“We must insure that our culture is strong, vibrant and attractive,” the President said.

The President said she would like to see the vision for a Filipino people inspired by its cultural and artistic life and heritage to improve moral standards in government.

“If we are to raise moral standards, first we must strengthen justice and the enforcement of law and order,” she said, adding that this pertains to two levels.

At the level of principle, the President said, the administration must affirm its commitment to the principle that no one is above the law. On the other hand, the second level pertains to our sense that justice prevails and the rule of law works in our daily lives, she added.

The President said the second level “is a great challenge to us in today's domestic and international environment which is challenged with crimes and terrorism all around.”

“In this challenging environment characterizing the dawn of the 21st century, we must mobilize culture to forge consensus on a just, lasting and honorable peace in our country,” she declared.

In mobilizing culture to influence moral standards, the President said, “we must arrive at a national consensus on the principles to guide our search for peace.”

In this connection, President Macapagal-Arroyo offered the following three-pronged principles for the Filipino people and the cultural community to consider.

“One principle is that our ultimate objective should be both peace and development. A second principle is that our framework must be based on constitutionality, national sovereignty and territorial integrity,” the President said.

The third principle, she said, is that the Philippines “must recognize that our society is a multi-ethnic one which should be founded on social justice for all and the institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions.”

“Christians and Muslims, Chinese and Spanish, Tagalog and Cebuano. These are but a few of the names to which the Filipino responds in a wondrous testimony to our rich and varied heritage as a nation,” the President said.

The President expressed the belief that the Medium-Term Plan for Culture and the Arts of the Arroyo administration should revolve around the vision of institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions. “This should be the unifying vision for our Medium-Term Plan for Culture and the Arts,” she said.

While many had expressed unease over an emerging mono-culture as a result of globalization, the President said, the fear was that the culture of developing nations will slowly be eradicated as the cultures of more advanced nations exercised their hegemony.

However, the President said, the reality is that “our culture could only be swamped by global forces if we do not take measures to preserve and defend it.”

“To preserve and defend our culture needs planning and preparedness,” she stressed.

The President also said “we must make culture available to the masses. We must make culture attractive to the masses.”

GMA presents ‘Gintong Kalabaw’ award to 100 graduates of Cavite National High School

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led government officials in presenting the Gawad Gintong Kalabaw award of excellence to 100 Cavite graduates in celebration of the centenary year of the Cavite National High School.

The President, assisted by Education Secretary Raul Roco, Cavite Governor Erineo Maliksi and Rep. Plaridel Abaya of Cavite, personally handed over the awards to the 100 graduates in ceremonies held this morning at Malacañang’s Heroes Hall.

One of the awardees is Elmer Abueg, the President’s former professor when she was taking up her Masteral Degree in Economics at the Ateneo de Manila University in 1972.

“Siya (referring to the President) ang pinakamagaling kong estudyante sa Ateneo (She was my best student in Ateneo de Manila University),” Abueg said as the President presented him the medallion of the Gawad Gintong Kalabaw.

Visibly elated, the President thanked Abueg for his remarks.

The President also presented the award to two of the oldest alumni of the Cavite National High School. They are Maria Rizalina Bautista Poblete of Batch 1926 and Honorato Vega of Batch 1931. Poblete will celebrate her 92nd birthday on June 19, which is also the birth anniversary of National Hero Jose Rizal.

GMA presents awards for Judicial Excellence to outstanding judges, prosecutors

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the presentation of Awards for Judicial Excellence to three outstanding Regional Trial Court judges, two outstanding Municipal Trial Court judges, two outstanding public prosecutors and one outstanding public attorney for, among other things, their contributions to law and jurisprudence and for having exhibited proven sense of justice and fairness.

The awards were traditionally presented at the Supreme Court, but this time their presentation was held at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang.

The awards were being given to personages in Philippine judiciary for excellent character, exemplary work, high ethics, and superior work standard.

The 2002 Awards for Judicial Excellence were given to the following:

- Outstanding Regional Trial Court Judges:
  1. Judge Clifton U. Ganay of the Regional Trial Court, Branch 31, Agoo, La Union who received the Chief Justice Cayetano Arellano Award for Judicial Excellence;
  2. Diosdado Peralta of the Regional Trial Court, Branch 95 of Quezon City who was given the Chief Justice Ramon Avancena Award for Judicial Excellence; and
  3. Judge Lucas Bersamin of the Regional Trial Court, Branch 96, Quezon City, who was awarded the Chief Justice Jose Abad Santos Award for Judicial Excellence.
- Outstanding Municipal Trial Court Judges:
  1. Judge Ma. Theresa Mendoza Arcega of the Metropolitan Trial Court, Poblacion, Bustos, Bulacan, who received the Justice Felicisimo Feria Award for Judicial Excellence; and
  2. Judge Rafael Crescencio Tan, Jr. of the Municipal Trial Court of Sibulan, Negros Oriental who was presented the Justice Alex Reyes Award for Judicial Excellence.
- Outstanding Public Prosecutors:
  1. Prosecutor Richard Anthony Fadullon, State Prosecutor II of the Department of Justice who received the Senator Ambrosio Padilla Award for Judicial Excellence; and
  2. Prosecutor Globert Justalero of the Office of the Iloilo Provincial Prosecutor who was awarded the Senator Lorenzo Tanada Award for Judicial Excellence.
- Outstanding Public Attorney:

Lawyer Ma. Clarita Tabin of the Public Attorney's Office of Baguio City who was presented the Justice Jose P. Laurel Award for Judicial Excellence.

In her message, the President encouraged judges, public prosecutors and public attorneys to strengthen their resolve toward a more effective administration of justice, which she emphasized, is the hallmark of civilized society.

Each of the awardees received P50,000 in cash and a trophy.

The board of judges for this year's awards was headed by Chief Justice Hilario Davide, Jr. as chairman with the following as members: Associate Justice Josue Bellosillo, Justice Ameurfina Herrera, Acting Court of Appeals Presiding Justice Cancio Garcia, Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, former Supreme Court Associate Justice Regino Hermosisima, Jr., Lawyer Teofilo Pilando, Jr., national president of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines; and Lawyer Federico Alikpala, Jr, president of the Philippine Bar Association.

The board of trustees of the Foundation for Judicial Excellence include Justice Jose Feria, chairman and president; Lawyer Ricardo Romulo, corporate secretary; Lawyer Santiago Dumlao, Jr., corporate treasurer; Lawyer Ricardo Guevarra, trustee; Lawyer Luis Sison, trustee; Justice Ameurfina Herrera, trustee, and Lawyer Lilia de Lima, trustee.

Among those present during the awarding ceremonies were former President Fidel V. Ramos and Acting Chief Justice Josue Bellosillo.

The President's Day: June 15, 2002

15 JUNE 2002

- Approved infotech projects to open some 10,000 jobs
- GMA urges Camarines Norte officials to unite behind gov't drive vs terrorism, criminality
- GMA wants D.O.T. to develop Daet's Bagasbas Beach into a surfing paradise
- GMA names veteran newsman Fajardo as NBDB executive director
- GMA lauds Daet local officials for innovative way in funding a local project
- Let's export Bicol pineapples to China and Korea, GMA exhorts local officials in Camarines Norte

Approved infotech projects to open some 10,000 jobs

Some 10,000 workers will be hired as soon as newly-approved information technology (IT) projects open nationwide.

Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II said the approved IT investments reached P1.7 billion or 11 percent of the total investments of P15.14 billion posted from January to April this year.

But the projects would generate 35 percent of some 28,000 jobs to be created by the investments the Board of Investments (BOI) and the Philippine Export Zone Authority (PEZA) approved in the four-month period, Roxas said.

The BOI and PEZA grant incentives like tax holidays to all approved project investors.

Roxas noted a 4.72-percent rise in job generation from new investments, compared to the 26,645 expected jobs in first four months of 2001.

He said the rise in jobs opened from January to April this year was mainly due to labor-intensive investments, particularly on IT projects.

On the average, an investment of P542,593 could create a job in the period under review. In contrast, investors had to sink in some P1.66 million to create a job for projects proposed in the same period last year.

Roxas said IT projects slated this year needed only an average investment of P177,506 to create a job.

He said the country continued to be attractive to IT investors, particularly in the fields of animation, call centers, medical transcription, shared service centers, engineering design and software development.

About 150 companies offering IT-enabled services are operating in the country.

The biggest recent IT investment in ecozone areas is the P143-million project of Soluziona Philippines, Inc. (SPI), a Spanish-Filipino firm providing innovative solutions. Expected to generate 308 jobs, SPI will locate in the Eastwood City Cyberpark in Quezon City.

SPI aspires to capture market shares in Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, China, Spain, Romania, Portugal, the United Kingdom, the United States, as well as in local electric company Meralco.

BOI, on the other hand, approved the P244-million IT expansion investment of Sykes Asia Inc., one of the world's leading providers of end-to-end customer care management solutions.

Four years ago, Sykes chose the Philippines as a hub for its centralized Asian call center with 500 existing seats.

The firm will add 350 seats to its call center operations. This will allow Sykes to link the Philippines with the rest of Sykes anywhere in the world.

The new facility will serve as a key hub for its global IT and telephony connectivity worldwide.

The Philippines offers a number of advantages over other Asian countries as possible sites for IT-enabled services.

Roxas said “the Philippines has various IT parks or zones equipped with all the infrastructure needed by an IT company.”

“Another advantage is our language ability. The Philippines can outpace other countries for voice-based call centers in view of our capability to adapt the accent of the West,” he noted.

Close to 30 call centers are operating in the Philippines doing mostly inbound calls.

The industry started as provider of e-mail response as well as handling and technical support and has since developed capabilities for almost any customer interaction, ranging from travel, financial, technical support, education support, consumer services as well as online business-to-consumer support and online business-to-business support.

Most of the call centers are located in Metro Manila.

Roxas said 12 prospective investors have expressed interest in locating in the country and several others have started doing their due diligence.

Further, more companies are implementing shared service centers worldwide and the scope of services is expanding to include several functions beyond finance and accounting.

Roxas said that the Philippines has become host to 13 companies offering shared services and is also carving its niche in outsourcing for software development.

“A number of major Wall Street companies are diversifying their global outsourcing for software development,” Roxas reported. So far, 42 firms are in software development.

Moreover, 38 companies are engaged in engineering design, 13 in animation and 14 in data transcription, Roxas said.

GMA urges Camarines Norte officials to unite behind gov't drive vs terrorism, criminality

DAET, Camarines Norte — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today exhorted all sectors here, particularly the local governments, to unite behind the government's stepped-up campaign against terrorism and all forms of criminality so that the province can attract investments and tourists.

The President arrived at the Daet Airport at about 10:30 am. She was met by local officials led by Camarines Norte Governor Jesus Typoco, Jr.

In her speech at the formal opening of the “Pinyasan Festival 2002” at Bagasbas Beach here, the President urged the provincial and municipal governments of Camarines Norte to fight those who would try to destroy the peace and order condition in the province.

Aside from attending the 10th Pineapple Festival in this town, the President also turned over livelihood assistance projects to qualified beneficiaries, including core shelter units under the government's Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) program.

The visit here of the President is part of the consultation process that she had adopted upon assuming the presidency in January last year wherein she vowed to bring Malacanang closer to the people in the countryside.

The President congratulated Daet Mayor Tito Sarion for a job well done in maintaining peace and order in his municipality.

As a gesture of her appreciation, the Chief Executive gave Mayor Sarion P1 million from the President's Social Fund to be used for the purchase of patrol cars for the Daet Police Force.

She noted that despite the lack of a patrol car, the local government and the local police were able to maintain the town's peace and order. With a mobile unit, the police force could further safeguard the peace in the town, the President said.

The President also held a private meeting with the local officials, police and military leaders in this province to further fortify the government's campaign against criminality and terrorism in the province.

"If we want tourists to come here, if we want to have more plane arrivals in your airport here in Daet, then what we need is peace," the President said.

Aside from Governor Typoco and Mayor Sarion, among those who joined the President in the meeting were Rep Renato Unico, Jr. (First District, Camarines Norte); PNP Regional Director Chief Superintendent Enrique Galang; and Southern Luzon Command chief Major Gen. Roy Kyamko.

GMA wants D.O.T. to develop Daet's Bagasbas Beach into a surfing paradise

DAET, Camarines Norte — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Department of Tourism (DOT) to seriously look into the possibility of developing the Bagasbas Beach here as a surfing paradise and a major tourist destination in the country.

In her remarks at the formal opening of "Pinyasan Festival 2002" at Bagasbas Beach here, the President recalled that some 30 years ago, she and First Gentleman lawyer Jose Miguel Arroyo used to surf in Dagupan City, in Pangasinan and in Baler, Quezon

"Daet is a promising place for tourism especially during the surfing season," the President told Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, who was with her official party.

The President explained that tourism is very important to the national government because with information and communications technology (ICT), tourism will lead in the human resource intensive-skills service sector where the country's advantages can be found.

The President told the crowd here at the Bagasbas Beach that she and her husband were the ones who introduced surfing in the country some 30 years ago.

Bagasbas Beach, according to the President, provides a good setting for beginners in surfing. Unfortunately, this is not a surfing season but the President assured the people of Daet that she will be back to surf here as part of her efforts to promote eco-tourism in various parts of the archipelago.

"We will look for good opportunity to surf because my husband is already too eager to see if he can still surf after 30 years from the last time we surfed," the President said.

The Chief Executive said Bagasbas Beach provides a good ambience and she was not surprised that the local government of Daet decided to hold this year's pineapple festival on the beach.

Bagasbas Beach is the most popular beach in the province of Camarines Norte and is also one of the most beautiful beaches in the country.

It is haven for swimmers and beach party enthusiasts due to its fine sand and cool waters.

From September to January the waves in the waters off Daet are ideal for surfing neophytes and aficionados. From the shore one can get a panoramic view of the blue Pacific Ocean and offshore islands.

GMA names veteran newsman Fajardo as NBDB executive director

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has appointed Daniel Fajardo, Editor in Chief of Panay News, as executive director of the National Book Development Board (NBDB).

The President appointed Fajardo as NBDB executive director on May 28, 2002 vice Ms. Nellie Apolonio. Fajardo's appointment paper was forwarded to NBDB Chairman Dennis Gonzales on June 5, 2002.

Fajardo, a product of Central Philippine University in Iloilo City and Siliman University in Dumaguete City where he finished his AB political science, hails from Mina, Iloilo.

A regular writer of the Manila Bulletin, Fajardo is president and chairman of the board of Panay News, the biggest daily newspaper in Western Visayas. He was former president of the Iloilo Press Club and executive vice president of the Publishers Association of the Philippines, Inc. (PAPI).

A veteran journalist, Fajardo is a recipient of several awards from international media and civic organizations.

Fajardo hosts a popular radio-television program, "Reklamo Publico," which is broadcast in Iloilo City but is beamed to the whole of Western Visayas.

GMA lauds Daet local officials for innovative way in funding a local project

DAET, Camarines Norte — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the local officials of this capital town for finding innovative ways on how to fund local projects such as the soon-to-rise public market near Bagasbas Beach.

In her speech at the formal opening of the "Pinyasan Festival 2002" at the Bagasbas Beach here, the President announced that the local government under Mayor Tito Sarion has already coordinated with the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP) and the Bureau of Local Government Finance (BLGF) for the immediate launching of the "WOW Daet Bonds."

The program entails the floatation of bonds not exceeding P80 million, and redeemable in 10 years at 100 percent face value.

Proceeds of the program shall augment the P5 million Local Government Social Economic Fund (LGSEF) available for the construction of the Daet Public Market, which has an estimated construction cost of P77.6 million.

The town's bond floatation program has already been approved by the BSP, LBP and BLGF, with the Land Bank as the prospective trustee.

The President recalled that when she was still a senator, she was able to contribute her own countrywide development fund (CDF) in the construction of Daet's public market.

Also in her speech, President Macapagal-Arroyo said she is hoping that the various local governments would appreciate her efforts in releasing their Internal Revenue Allotments (IRA) in full unlike during the previous administration when local officials were being made to beg for their IRAs.

"I don't want that kind of politics, that's politics of patronage," she said, adding that the full release of IRAs to various local government units is the thrust of what she called "new politics."

Instead of politics of patronage, the President said it should be "politics of empowerment of the local governments."

The President said what she would like to ask, in return, is for the LGUs to be self-reliant in funding their needs similar to what the Daet local government has done in the floatation of WOW Bonds.

The President said she has ordered the LBP, BSP and the BLGF to immediately approve the release of the WOW Bonds to speed up the development of the rural communities.

After her speech, the President turned over a P2 million check to Camarines Norte Governor Jesus Typoco, Jr. for various social development projects in the province.

She also distributed 50 units of gill nets and various construction materials to different organizations in Camarines Norte.

Under her core shelter project, which is implemented by the Kapit-Bisig sa Kahirapan (KALAHÍ) program, the President likewise turned over 159 certificates of house and lot ownership to 159 urban poor families in Barangay Alawihao here in Daet.

KALAHÍ is an expanded anti-poverty program being jointly implemented by the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) and the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

Let's export Bicol pineapples to China and Korea, GMA exhorts local officials in Camarines Norte

DAET, Camarines Norte – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the local government officials here to work for the possible export of the famous Bicol pineapples to China or South Korea.

The President made the call in her remarks at the opening of the "Pinyasan Festival 2002," held at the Bagasbas Beach here.

She proposed that Camarines Norte Gov. Jesus Typoco Jr., who comes from a prominent Chinese family and very good in business, should collaborate with the Department of Agriculture (DA) on a marketing project that would propagate the Bicol pineapples for the Chinese and Korean markets.

"Siguro pwedeng magtulungan si Gov. Typoco at ang DA na gumawa ng marketing project para sa China at Korea ng pinyang produkto ng Daet (Perhaps Gov. Typoco should collaborate with the DA to have a marketing project for the Chinese and Korean markets for Daet's pineapple products)," the President said.

The President said that the DA has been devolved and that the local government is the one that serves as the DA in the provinces. "The DA's role in the regions is just to assist the local government units)," she added.

The Chief Executive also assured Bicolanos that they would benefit from the coconut levy fund, which would be used as fund for micro-finance program for coconut farmers.

She said that she has instructed the Philippine Coconut Authority and the DA not to overlook the province of Camarines Norte in their micro-financing packages.

“Huwag ninyong kalimutang dalhin yung micro-finance ng coconut levy fund sa mga magsasaka ng niyog dito sa Camarines Norte (Do not forget to bring the coconut levy fund’s micro-financing to the coconut farmers of Camarines Norte),” the President said.

Development thrust of Region 6 to be ecologically-balanced, gender-responsive

ILOILO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved the development thrust of Region 6 (Western Visayas), which is to make the region ecologically-balanced and gender-responsive with a globally competitive economy.

In a presentation to the President and members of the Cabinet in today's 9th Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) Joint Meeting held at the Jordan Hall of the Barcelo Sarabia Manor Hotel and Convention Center here, National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Assistant Director General Rolando Tungpalan said that the region's development thrust is anchored on modernized agriculture, agro-based industries, tourism and small and medium enterprises.

Tungpalan enumerated the development objectives of the region as follows:

- Modernize the agricultural sector, promote its strong linkage with industry, and enhance its export potentials; and
- Develop and promote the region as a major tourist destination.

On sustainable agricultural development, Tungpalan emphasized the importance of modernizing, diversifying, and intensifying agriculture and fishery-based industries.

He also pointed out the importance of enhancing the economic viability of small and medium enterprises and the promotion of investments.

The NEDA proposed the expansion of the tourism industry through massive promotion, upgrading and improvement of tourist facilities, and enhancing cultural and ecological destinations.

Tungpalan outlined the following strategic interventions to complement the development thrusts of the region:

- Develop competent entrepreneurs and skilled human resources;
- Enhance natural resource endowments and promote ecological balance;
- Attract information and communication technology (ICT)-related enterprises and electronic industries to enhance their utilization in agri-industry and tourism development;
- Encourage and promote the clustering of urban communities through metropolitan arrangements and the formation of inter local cooperation;
- Provide adequate infrastructure facilities;
- Provide basic social services and improved their delivery; and
- Make the regional and local development planning, investments programming and budgeting gender responsive.

GMA appoints new MTRCB, TESDA, VRB officials

Malacañang today announced the appointment of four new officials of the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB), the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) and the Videogram Regulatory Board (VRB).

Acting Press Secretary and concurrent Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable, Jr. said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo approved, as early as end-May, the appointments of the four.

Afable said that Mari-len Y. Dinglasan has taken over as the new MTRCB Chairperson effective May 30. Dinglasan replaced Alejandro Roces.

Also last May 30, the President named former Cavite Governor Jose Marie “Bong Revilla” Bautista as new VRB Chairman and Lualhati R. Buenafe as Bautista’s vice-chairperson and executive director.

Afable added that since June 14, former Quezon City Congressman Dante Liban has replaced Lucita S. Lazo as the new TESDA Director General.

Earlier on June 13, former Marikina City Mayor Bayani Fernando took over the helm of the Metro Manila Development Authority, replacing former judge and Mandaluyong City Mayor Benjamin Abalos.

Abalos was named by the President as new Chairman of the Commission on Election and replaced former Supreme Court administrator Alfredo Benipayo.

Iloilo trip part of GMA’s continuing dialogue with people and local executives

ILOILO CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said her visit to this city is part of the continuing regional consultations that she is conducting to find out the needs of the people and the local government executives.

In a lunch with members of the local media at the Barcelo Sarabia Hotel and Convention Center here, the President said that through her provincial trips, local officials can present their problems directly to her and other heads of national agencies so that solutions can be threshed out immediately.

She said feedbacks from these dialogues would be used as inputs on the state of the regions in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) that she will deliver before a joint session of Congress on July 22, 2002.

The President said the interaction between national officials and local executives from Region 6 is being made possible through the 9th Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order (RDC-RPOC) joint meeting held here.

She said that an important item in the agenda at the RDC-RPOC joint meeting was agricultural modernization and the propagation of hybrid rice.

The President also said another relevant item discussed in the RDC-RPOC meeting was micro-financing for some 50,000 women throughout the country, wherein a housewife can borrow from P10,000 to P20,000 each for livelihood projects.

The government's micro-finance program was launched recently in Barangay Holy Spirit in Quezon City with some 2,000 women from Metro Manila awarded P10,000 each in collateral loans.

The President also cited some development projects that were delayed but were unlocked and are now being implemented, among them the Batangas Port in Batangas City, the rehabilitation of the Philippine National Bank, the reopening of the National Steel Corporation in Mindanao, and the development of the railroad project in the North that is expected to ease the flow of traffic from the metropolis to Northern Luzon.

GMA challenges Sangguniang Kabataan to prove relevance

ILOILO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today challenged the officers, members and alumni of the Sangguniang Kabataan (SK) to prove their relevance in these times.

In her very brief remarks at the 2002 SK National Congress at the Barcelo-Sarabia Manor Hotel here, the President said the SK should show that their existence is still important.

“Malaki ang hamon sa SK na ipakita ang relevance ninyo ngayon (There is a big challenge to the SK to prove that you are still relevant today),” the President said.

Amid the President's call for SK to show its relevance is a clamor to abolish the law that provides for the existence of SK since the youth is likewise able to learn governance in student-government bodies.

Upon arrival at the SK Congress, the President witnessed a seven-minute video presentation of the SK accomplishments under the present administration.

Afterwards, the President distributed OSKARs – Outstanding SK Awards and Recognition to -12 top SK members.

She also inducted the new officers of the SK Alumni Association.

The President also launched the SK Alumni Association website by logging on the computer keyboard.

Welcoming the President at the SK event were SK national president Richard Alvin Nalupta, SK Iloilo City president Julienne Baronda and SK Iloilo Provincial Federation president Rosario Mediatrix Tupas.

The SK Congress with the theme, “SK Leaders — Conquering New Horizons,” was attended by over 600 SK officials, members and alumni from various federations nationwide.

The involvement of the youth in all levels of governance — in the barangay, municipal, city, provincial and national levels — was instituted through the passage of Republic Act 7160 or the Local Government Code of 1991, which paved the way for the creation of the SK.

According to law, the SK is a non-partisan mechanism for youth participation in politics. The assembly of youth in every barangay known as the Katipunan ng Kabataan (KK), constitutes the core membership of the SK. The young people belonging to the KK are eligible to vote and be voted upon in the SK elections.

Agri modernization based on social equity is key to Iloilo’s competitiveness, says GMA

ILOILO CITY — To sustain the competitiveness of the city and province of Iloilo, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the need for continued agricultural modernization and fisheries development based on social equity.

The President emphasized this in her speech before a multisectoral group at the University of San Agustin, where she led an awarding ceremony.

Speaking in fluent Ilonggo, the President also said that when she was still an undersecretary at the Department of Trade and Industry, she oversaw the creation of an agro-industrial zone in Pavia, Iloilo.

The President also lauded Region 6 for being a leader in implementing a genuine land reform program.

The President noted that during her administration, at least 2,000 hectares of land in Iloilo province have been distributed to farmer-beneficiaries of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP).

She also noted that Negros Occidental, which is also part of Region 6, is considered the valedictorian of land reform as it has already registered 7,000 hectares out of the 100,000 hectares targeted for distribution nationwide.

The President announced the release of the last batch of Philhealth or the Social Health Insurance Cards for poor families enrolled in the City of Iloilo under the Greater Medicare Access (GMA) Para sa Masa program, completing the SONA target of 5,000 family-beneficiaries.

More than 15,000 health cards have already been awarded nationwide.

Mindanao, Palawan eyed as RP gateways to Asean in revitalized BIMP-EAGA

Mindanao and Palawan will soon rise above the scars of a Moro rebellion and the scourge of Abu Sayyaf terrorism.

As government nears to dealing a final blow on the Abu Sayyaf and pocketsize kidnap-for-ransom gangs in Mindanao and while its peace panel engages the Moro Islamic Liberation Front in talks to find a lasting and meaningful end to the Mindanao conflict, Philippine officials have put back its Asean regional growth thrusts back on track.

In a report to Malacañang, the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) said the government is on schedule in ably setting up the mechanisms, structures and policies to revitalize the Brunei Darussalam-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East Asean Growth Area (BIMP-EAGA).

Besides spurring regional investments, trading and tourism, the BIMP-EAGA is proving itself as a venue to promote Mindanao and Palawan as the country’s gateway to the Asean region.

The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) is a regional development grouping composed of BIMP member-countries, Thailand, Singapore, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam and Myanmar.

The PMS report, which outlined the accomplishment of commitments President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo made during her July 2001 State of the Nation Address, reported the operation of various air and sea routes linking Mindanao and Palawan to trade and tourism centers in the BIMP-EAGA.

Since last year, the Mindanao Economic Development Council (Medco) and other state agencies have pushed confidence building measures with BIMP-EAGA counterparts that led to the opening of air and sea passenger and cargo services between Davao and Manado; Zamboanga, Tawi-Tawi and Sandakan; Zamboanga, Tawi-Tawi, and Tawau; and Manila and Brunei Darussalam.

Officials are in talks for the use of Brunei's Muara Port as a transshipment point.

At the same time, business linkages and arrangements have been completed between and among the Brunei Malay Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Maguindanao Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the Business Council of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao.

There are similar discussions with Malaysian investors on ventures in oil palm production and extraction in mainland Mindanao.

Other ongoing trade talks are on the BIMP-EAGA-China and North Asia Relations that include the establishment of an Asean Promotion Center in Seoul, South Korea and the EAGA food supply network for China and North Asia.

A request has also been submitted to extend until 2004 the Uniform Port Tariff Agreement between the Philippines and Brunei.

The PMS report noted that government has pursued joint tourism marketing and promotions through familiarization tours and the development of joint tourism packages.

It has also expanded exchange programs through technical training through the BIMP-EAGA-sponsored Vocational Exchange Program. A group of Indonesian students recently completed the program.

Further, BIMP-EAGA officials have entered into a memorandum of agreement (MOA) that harmonized customs, immigration, quarantine and security (CIQS) rules and policies.

The MOA created a CIQS Inter-Agency Committee and a One-Stop Action Center for CIQS.

More importantly, the BIMP-EAGA has brought about increased cooperation in border security between and among the BIMP member-countries.

A trilateral agreement on security information exchange has recently been signed between the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia.

Under the Philippines-Malaysia Border Patrol Coordinating Group, an Air Border Patrol Operations has been delegated.

The PMS report said the revitalization of the BIMP-EAGA would practically put back Mindanao and Palawan in the radar screens of regional trading, tourism and security.

GMA resolves growth concerns in Western Visayas

ILOILO CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today resolved several issues and concerns raised during the Western Visayas Regional Development Council meeting.

On the need to rehabilitate nine irrigation system to boost agricultural production in Western Visayas, the President instructed the National Irrigation Administration (NIA) to formulate an effective system to identify and prioritize irrigation facilities requiring urgent rehabilitation and work so that these could be immediately funded.

The President also tasked the Presidential Commission on Ecological Waste Management to facilitate the conversion of the Calajunan Dumpsite in Mandurriao, Iloilo City from open dumping to sanitary landfill.

On the Panay River Flood Control Project, the President said the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) is planning to propose the project under the 27th Regular Yen Loan Package (RYLP) in 2005.

The DPWH said the flood control project was proposed under the 26th RYLP but was not accommodated because of the agency's annual budget ceiling. But it may also be proposed under the new special yen loan package special term economic partnership.

The President also instructed PhilHealth officials to prepare a separate National Health Insurance package for indigenous peoples, as she noted their culture and way of life. The Local Government Units (LGUs) will fund this project.

She further instructed the DPWH to release funds to complete the Leon-Tubungan Remegio Road that will open the mountainous portions of the road and shorten travel time between Iloilo and Antique.

It will also open up new areas for development, enhance peace and order in the area and assure the delivery of vital social services.

Other issues raised during the RDC meeting today included:

- The need to speed up the implementation of socialized housing projects and the issuance of a proclamation reserving portions of Barangays Veterans Village and Sto. Rosario here. The areas were once under the United States military reservations turned over to the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP). The Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) has endorsed the issuance of the proclamation, and the President has approved it.
- The non-approval of applications for land use conversion of agricultural lands to residential use in Barangay Balabag, Iloilo. The President instructed the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR)/PARC to fast-track the approval of applications to facilitate the final individual titling of the property and its eventual release to qualified beneficiaries of the resettlement site.
- The extension of the Iloilo Commercial Port Complex at Loboc, Lapuz, Iloilo City. The President instructed the speedy implementation of the project, such as the resubmission of letter by the NEDA to the Japanese government for a $63-million funding.

Philhealth overshoots enrollment target

Malacañang today announced that the Philippine Health Insurance Corporation (PhilHealth) has already enrolled 2.4-million beneficiaries or 440,828 families in urban areas nationwide as of June 1, 2002, surpassing President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's State-of-the-Nation Address (SONA) target of enrolling 500,000 urban poor beneficiaries in the National Health Insurance Program (NHIP) in a year's time.

"As early as December 2001, Philhealth already reached its SONA target of 500,000 beneficiaries, almost seven months ahead of schedule," Dr. Francisco T. Duque III said in his report to the President shortly before he enplaned to the United States to attend a USAID conference.

“We are confident that before the President delivers her next SONA, Philhealth would have enrolled 2.4 million beneficiaries, which is more than five times its target,” Duque said.

It will be recalled that in her first SONA, the President recognized the crucial role of social health insurance in the country’s development efforts as she committed the enrollment of 500,000 urban poor Filipinos in the NHIP.

Citing the need for universal health care to help the poor cope with the prohibitive costs of getting sick, the President directed the Philhealth to expand its network coverage to the poor, particularly those living in the urban areas.

Duque said that soon after the President pledged to expand Philhealth’s coverage, he created a team to push for plan 500 enrollment among the corporation’s regional offices.

One of the top performing government executives under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration, Duque is the son of the late Health Secretary Francisco Duque who served under former President Diosdado Macapagal and was regarded as the father of Medicare, the precursor of Philhealth.

He disclosed that a total of 402 urban local government units are currently participating in the NHIP-greater Medicare Access backed up with memoranda of agreements signed with the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG), Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR), the League of Provinces, Cities and Municipalities, and the Liga ng mga Barangay.

As of June 1, 2002, the following Philhealth regional offices have posted the following enrollment records: NCR-Rizal, 40,675 families or 203,375 beneficiaries; PRO CAR, 7307 families with 36,535 beneficiaries; PRO I, 22,551 or 112,755 beneficiaries; PRO II, 14251 or 71,255 beneficiaries, PRO III, 74,497 families or 372,485 beneficiaries, PRO IV A, 26,158 families or 130,790 beneficiaries; PRO IV B, 37,445 families or 187,225 beneficiaries; PRO V, 16,543 families or 82,715 beneficiaries; PRO VI, 48,282 or 241,410 beneficiaries, PRO VII, 4, 472 or 22, 360 beneficiaries; PRO VIII, 13,086 families or 65,430 beneficiaries; PRO IX, 9,433 families or 47,165 beneficiaries; PRO X, 81,372 families or 406,860 beneficiaries; PRO XI, 21,246 families or 106,230 families; PRO XII, 9,985 families or 49,925 beneficiaries; PRO CARAGA, 13,525 families of 67,625 beneficiaries.

Duque also cited some solons who allocated funds for the enrollment of their constituents in the health insurance program.

Legarda-Leviste assures GMA of continued support

ILOILO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night received assurances from Sen. Loren Legarda-Leviste of continued support for the platform of her administration in Congress.

“There’s no such thing. There are no such plans,” Legarda-Leviste said when asked to comment on reports that she had jumped ship and would be the running mate of the opposition candidate for president.

“That’s pure speculation from the media,” she added.

Legarda-Leviste was with the President at a dinner at Tatoy’s Restaurant in Arevalo district which was also attended by the leaders and officials of this Western Visayas City. The President was guest of honor during the affair.

The senator, who is in town to attend the 2002 Sangguniang Kabataan National Congress at the Sarabia Manor Hotel, arrived at the dinner while the President was discussing with Iloilo government officials ways of enticing foreign investors to pour more money and open more businesses in the area.

Stressing that she came to Iloilo City to speak before the SK forum, Legarda-Leviste said she reiterated to the President that she has no intention “of jumping ship.”

“And she believed my reassurance,” she added.

When Legarda-Leviste sat near the President, local officials teased her about reports that she would jump ship.

The President remarked, “Ninang ni (Pampanga Vice Gov. Juan Miguel) Mikey (Arroyo) ‘yan.”

The President was referring to the forthcoming wedding of her son to Angela Montenegro, where the senator will be one of the principal sponsors.

Aside from Legarda-Leviste, Senate President Franklin Drilon, who is also an Ilonggo, was at the same event.

Drilon said Senator Legarda-Leviste remains deeply loyal and firmly committed to the administration bloc in the Senate.

GMA distributes land patents, assistance, farm implements, Philhealth cards in Ifugao

LAGAWE, Ifugao — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led government officials in distributing 105 free patents for land titles, checks for procurement of post-harvest facilities and heavy equipment, farm implements and agricultural products as well as PhilHealth cards to qualified beneficiaries of Ifugao province and neighboring towns and cities.

The Chief Executive, dressed in an Ifugao costume, distributed various forms of government assistance after addressing thousands of Ifugao residents in celebration of the 36th Ifugao Foundation anniversary held this morning at the Capitol Plaza here. She was assisted by Ifugao Governor Teodoro Baguilat, Jr. and other concerned agency representatives.

The President said the 105 free patents for land titles distributed to Ifugao beneficiaries represents a 103-percent accomplishment rate for the year 2002.

It can be noted that the Department of Environment and Natural Resources office in Ifugao has a commitment of 101 free patents for 2002 as enunciated in the President's State of the Nation Address in July last year.

The President handed out some 100 PhilHealth cards from the Philippine Health Insurance Corporation to the indigent families enrolled in Lamut, Ifugao under the Greater Medical Access (GMA) Para sa Masa program.

During the awarding rites, the President also distributed checks for various government programs and projects in Ifugao and nearby towns and cities as follows:

- Department of Social Welfare and Development – a check worth P125,000 for water tank and pipe installation presence to Teresita Rillon of Barangay Laya, Alfonso Lista, Ifugao; P150,000 check for the construction of a foot bridge given to Pablo Guhip of Barangay Dulao; P150,000 check for the construction of Day-Care Center received by Donato Bubod of Barangay Pugol, Lamut, Ifugao; P145,000 check for the construction of a spring reservoir, to Johnson Chupalan of Barangay Banhal, Mayoyao, Ifugao; and P115,000 check for the construction of water system given to Rebecca Maguiwe of Mayoyao, Ifugao.
- Department of Labor and Employment – awarding of checks amounting to P1,300 each to 44 qualified students under the Special Program for Employment, and awarding of two checks amounting to P120,000 to two Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) beneficiaries.
- Department of Agriculture – P2.8 million check for post-harvest facilities and heavy equipment procurement presented to Mt. Province Vice Governor Anthony Warden; and a P1.8 million check for heavy equipment procurement given to Kalinga Vice Governor Joseph Delson.

The President arrived at the Capitol Plaza here at exactly 10 a.m. from the Loakan Airport in Baguio City. She was accompanied by Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Heherson Alvarez, and Acting Press Secretary and Presidential Management Staff head Silvestre Afable, Jr., who is CORD officer for the Cordillera Administrative Region, and other government officials.

Upon arrival at the Capitol Plaza, the President was officially welcomed by Governor Baguilat, Lagawe Mayor Joaquin Dugon, Jr., Congressman Solomon Chungalao and other local officials.

Work on DOTC rail lines in Metro Manila on track

A comfortable ride on faster on-time air-conditioned trains crisscrossing Metro Manila's main roads awaits everyone when the government completes the expansion and extension of two operating rail lines and the construction of a mass rail transit by 2004.

Another three new rail networks, to include those that will bring passengers north and south of the metropolis are projected for completion by 2007.

Government has tapped private sector support, through the Build-Operate-Transfer Law, to fund the projects that are expected to ease vehicular traffic in the country's capital, a Presidential Management Staff (PMS) report said.

The report cited the achievements of the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC) in relation to commitments President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo made during her July 2001 State of the Nation Address.

Targeted to be fully operational in December 2004 is the Metro Manila Strategic Mass Rail Development (MSMRD) project that stretches from Claro M. Recto Avenue in Manila to Santolan in Pasig City.

The DOTC said construction on the MSMRD, also known as the Mass Rail Transit (MRT) 2, has passed its halfway stage.

The MSMRD project depot is 64.03 percent complete, its substructure 89.47 percent finished, and its systems, vehicles and trackworks 36.28 percent done.

The extension work on the 16.8-kilometer MRT 3, which runs in the middle of EDSA from Taft Avenue in Pasay City to North Avenue in Quezon City, will also be completed by 2004.

The nine-kilometer extension will bring passengers from the MRT 3 depot on North Avenue to Monumento in Caloocan City. It will also complete the loop between the MRT 3 and the Light Rail Transit (LRT) 1 that runs from Monumento to Baclaran.

The DOTC said it has approved the Build-Transfer (BT) draft contract for the civil works, to include development rights, proposed by the Sobrepeña-controlled private firm Metro Rail Transit Corporation.

The Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) has endorsed the project with focus on traffic projections that the Inter-Agency Coordinating Committee (ICC) of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) is evaluating.

By April 2004, work on the air-conditioning of the old train fleet of the LRT 1 will be completed. A contract was signed last April 1 between the Light Rail Transit Administration (LRTA) and Japanese firm Marubeni Corporation.

The LRTA also projected the completion of additional civil works and the installation of 12 more air-conditioned four-car trains for the LRT 1 by December 2004.

The LRTA has approved the contract for concurrence by Japanese financing agency Japan Bank for International Cooperation.

The PMS-DOTC report further showed that the government hoped to operate the LRT 1 South Extension, the Northrail and the Southrail by 2005.

The LRT 1 South Extension stretches from Monumento to Bacoor, Cavite. The Implementation Agreement of the Joint Venture Agreement between the LRTA and Canadian rail company SNC-Lavalin was signed on December 20, 2001.

The DOTC, meanwhile, has submitted to the NEDA-ICC the draft Terms of Reference (TOR) for the Southrail project that would cover the Cavite-Laguna-Batangas-Rizal-Quezon (Calabarzon) growth corridor.

After a NEDA-ICC approval, the TOR will be referred to the Asian Development Bank for concurrence. The DOTC said a memorandum of understanding has been signed by the Philippine National Railways and Daewoo Corporation to conduct the feasibility study.

On the Northrail project, the Bases Conversion Development Authority (BCDA) has obtained the NEDA-ICC approval for the feasibility study for the project's Obuchi Fund-bankrolled Phase I, to operate from Caloocan City to Clark.

Finally, the PMNS-DOTC report said a French consortium is refining the proposal to build the MRT 4 that will ferry rail commuters from the Old Bilibid in Manila to the Batasan area in Quezon City. Project completion is targeted in 2007.

As this developed, the MMDA also reported the increase in traffic speed in Metro Manila's major thoroughfares.

Traffic speed in the metropolis leapt to 17.42 kilometers per hour (kph) in April from 16.18 kph in March and 13.5 kph earlier.

Increases in traffic speed were noted along EDSA, R. Magsaysay to Aurora Boulevard Commonwealth, Rizal Avenue España to Quezon Boulevard, E. Rodriguez Boulevard, A. Bonifacio, South Super Highway, Roxas Boulevard and Pres. Quirino Avenue.

The MMDA has also expanded its traffic discipline zone to cover 17 EDSA intersections from Balintawak to Taft Avenue.

Let's all help in preserving the Ifugao rice terraces, GMA calls on Filipinos

LAGAWE, Ifugao — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on all Filipinos, not only the tribal folks of Ifugao and the Cordilleras, to help in the preservation of the rice terraces, which have been declared as one of the world's heritage sites by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

Speaking before thousands of residents during the celebration of the 36th founding anniversary of the province of Ifugao at the Capitol Plaza here, the Chief Executive said that it is the duty of every Filipino to help preserve the rice terraces.

Wearing an Ifugao native costume, which was woven by the tribal folks, the President said that there are only a few heritage sites in the world and among them are the Ifugao rice terraces.

The President announced that her administration was able to secure from the UNESCO a grant of $75,000 for the preservation of the rice terraces.

She said that she was giving the Ifugao provincial government the responsibility to manage the UNESCO grant, adding that she did not believe in creating a task force to handle the money.

"If there is a task force, there's no more accountability. I believe in accountability resting in one office. And since the rice terraces are in Ifugao, then the UNESCO project be managed by the provincial government of Ifugao," the President said.

The President urged the people of Ifugao to support Governor Teodoro Baguilat, Jr., in the efforts to preserve the rice terraces.

She also directed the National Commission on Culture and Arts (NCCA) and the Department of Tourism (DOT) to provide technical support to Governor Baguilat for this project.

According to the President, the NCCA and the DOT are planning to put up a P50 million program for the rice terraces.

The President also expressed the hope that the Ifugao provincial government will use part of the UNESCO grant to provide the means to take tourists to the site of the rice terraces.

During her speech, the President also touched on the peace and order situation not only in the province of Ifugao but also the entire CAR.

She directed Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., to ensure the peace and order in the areas where the rice terraces are located "if we want more tourists to go there."

The President specifically ordered Regional Director George Alino of the CAR Philippine National Police “to help the governors of the Cordillera galvanize community action and become vigilant against those who transgress the law and peace of mind of the people.”

The tourists must feel safe when they trek to the rice terraces either in Hungduan, Batad, Banaue, Mayoyao, Kiangnan, Hingyon, the President told the PNP and local officials.

Authorities now tracking down the hostage takers in Zamboanga – Palace

BAGUIO CITY — Malacañang today said that military authorities can handle the latest hostage-taking incident off the waters of Tamuk Island, some 45 nautical miles from Zamboanga City, and operations are ongoing to track down the still unidentified hostage takers.

In a press briefing at the Mansion House here, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said the incident involving four Indonesian crewmen is still being investigated by military authorities.

Afable held the press briefing after the more than five hours of the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order Council of the Cordillera Administrative Region (CAR).

Afable said that it is unfortunate that this incident has happened when the pursuit operations of the remnants of the Abu Sayyaf terrorists in Sirawai, Zamboanga del Norte are still in progress.

“But I am sure that the authorities can handle the situation and be able to gain an early solution to this problem,” Afable told newsmen.

Elements of the Philippine Navy and Philippine Coast Guard have started search and rescue operations for the victims on the nearby islands.

Reports said that the victims of the latest kidnapping incident in Mindanao included the captain, chief engineer, chief petty officer and chief mate of an Indonesian tugboat towing a barge loaded with coal from Indonesia and bound for Cebu.

In another topic, Afable reiterated that Malacañang is not involved, nor will it get involve, in the partisan squabble in the Senate.

“It is not involved in raiding the opposition of any of these things. Actually the activities within the Senate itself and among its members are generating this hype of party raiding,” Afable said when asked to comment on reports that the administration senators are trying to lure opposition senators to their camp.

Afable also said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo proceeded to this city from Ifugao to preside over the RDC-RPOC joint meeting. In Ifugao, she attended the 35th founding anniversary of the province.

The President came all the way from Iloilo City where she stayed overnight, also to preside over the Region 6 joint RDC-RPOC meeting.

GMA transfers management of two Baguio properties to local gov’t

BAGUIO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced her approval of the transfer of the management of two government-owned assets to the city of Baguio.

President made the approval during the five-hour joint meeting of the 10th Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order Council held at the Mansion House here.

During the meeting, the President personally congratulated Baguio City Mayor Bernardo Vergara after announcing the turnover of the management of the Baguio Convention Center and Hilltop Hotel property.

President believes that the transfer of the management of the refurbished and well-maintained convention center would boost Baguio's reputation as a "convention capital" and center of the Cordillera Autonomous Region.

The Convention Center has been the site of national and regional conventions, stage plays, school graduation and other important regional events. Lately, however, it has been in a state of disrepair and neglect.

The Hilltop Hotel, meanwhile, has lain idle and unutilized for productive purposes after it was heavily destroyed by a strong earthquake of July 1990.

The President admits that the Hilltop property could be utilized for more productive purposes. This property is under the Asset Privatization Trust.

C.A.R. development thrust discussed extensively

BAGUIO CITY — The development thrust of the Cordillera Administrative Region (CAR) was discussed extensively as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo presided over a five-hour joint meeting of the Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) at the Mansion House here today.

National Economic and Development Authority Director General Dante Canlas said the CAR is envisioned to be the watershed of the country, the leading source of hydro power and non-conventional energy, the premier eco-tourist destination, the prime educational center, the leader in the manufacture of light industrial products and the food basket for semi-temperate fruits and vegetables.

The strategic interventions for CAR to become the watershed cradle of the county include the improvement of forest cover and quality of groundwater resources, promotion of equitable distribution of benefits from watershed and strengthening support activities.

On becoming the major energy producer, the strategies include the development of small-scale hydro power potentials; rehabilitation, upgrading and modernization of major power plants, transmission lines and substations; facilitation of the completion of on-going and committed power plants and expansion of rural electrification.

On the goal of CAR becoming the premier eco-tourism paradise, the strategies include the implementation of tourism cluster development approach, strengthening of tourism development bodies and institutions, intensification of fund sourcing for tourism projects, improving access infrastructure and tourism related services, intensification of tourism promotion and marketing activities, and development of regional eco-tourism database.

To be the center of responsive, basic, tertiary, technical and vocational education in North Luzon, the interventions include the development of quality teachers and administrators, promotion of responsive and relevant education curriculum, identification and development of CAR Centers of excellence and development of programs of advocacy, brokerage, direct action, research and development among institution.

On the thrust of the CAR to be a major contributor to national food security, the strategies include the expansion and cultivation of agricultural areas in accordance with appropriate development plans, cultivation of crops suitable to each province, implementation of indigenous natural resources management practices in agriculture projects; the fast tracking of installation and completion of irrigation projects.

GMA presents awards to 10 top students

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded this year's Ten Outstanding Students of the Philippines (TOSP) for their academic excellence, exemplary leadership, and social responsibility anchored on moral values as she personally presented them their respective awards.

The President — assisted by First Gentleman Jose Miguel T. Arroyo, former Trade and Industry Secretary and chairman of the TOSP Executive Committee Jose Concepcion, Jr., National Book Store president Alfredo Ramos, and Chairperson Ester Garcia of the Commission on Higher Education — handed out the trophies to the young achievers in ceremonies held this morning at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall.

The TOSP awardees, who received their awards from the President are the following:

- Carlos Alfonso Q. Santos, Doctor of Medicine, University of the Philippines-Manila, Cum Laude;
- Dionne Marie M. Sanchez, BS Business Administration and Accountancy, University of the Philippines-Manila, Summa Cum Laude and College Valedictorian;
- Arlene Maneja, Bachelor of Laws, University of Sto. Tomas, Magna Cum Laude;
- Sherlyn L. de Guzman, BS Management, Engineering, Ateneo de Manila University;
- Ryan C. Guinaran, Doctor of Medicine, University of the Philippines-Manila;
- John Iver Z. Solidum III, BS Nursing, Colegio San Agustin-Bacolod, Magna Cum Laude;
- Joemar L. Losaria, BS Marine Transportation, John Lacson Colleges Foundation-Arevalo;
- Emmeline Y. Aglipay, BA Economics, De la Salle University, Magna Cum Laude and Valedictorian;
- Gizelle Lou M. Cabahug, BA Political Science, Central Mindanao University, Summa Cum Laude and Class Valedictorian; and
- Jenny Lind D. Elmaco, AB Political Science, Silliman University, Magna Cum Laude.

The President offered a token of P20,000 each to the ten young achievers during the awarding ceremonies which coincided with the 141th birth anniversary of Dr. Jose P. Rizal.

Concepcion said the culmination of this year's search brings into focus the importance of the youth in living the fire of idealism and devoting their energies, commitment, and aspirations to the noble task of nation-building.

"The TOSP is more than just an award. It has been a continuing commitment to service and excellence for the last 40 years, interrupted only during the period of martial law," he said.

Concepcion pointed out that it is TOSP's mission to "create an atmosphere of lasting inspiration for our youth – our future, who (comprise) 56 percent of the 75 million Filipinos."

The TOSP was launched on June 19, 1961, aptly on the 100th birth anniversary of Rizal. It was held continuously until martial law was declared in 1972.

In November 1988, RFM Corporation and the Rotary Club of Makati Central, in cooperation with the Department of Education, Culture and Sports, revived the search, and in 1991, it was held under the auspices of the newly-created RFM Foundation.

NEDA chief upbeat on RP growth as GMA administration surpasses SONA targets

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has surpassed the targets she set during her first State of the Nation Address (SONA), according to Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante B. Canlas.

“The President will have a good story to tell to the people come July when she delivers another SONA,” Canlas said in an interview on cable TV recently.

Canlas, who also heads the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), said the overall performance in 2001 was very good, with domestic growth posting a 3.4 percent growth, higher than the 3.3 percent government target and the less-than-3 percent growth expectation of the private sector.

True to the President Arroyo’s pronouncements in her first SONA, Canlas cited that thousands of beneficiaries have already been identified for enrollment in the National Health Insurance Program, while the cost of commonly purchased medicines is now within reach.

“All 73 government hospitals are now stocked with select half-priced quality drugs from parallel drug imports and local manufacturers,” he added.

In contrast to the rise in the number of jobless persons in 2000, about two million jobs were created as of October 2001, with 1.2 million of these coming from the services sector and 800,000 from the agricultural sector.

Canlas said the peace and order situation has improved, with the President giving more focus on terrorism and kidnap-for-ransom activities.

He admitted, however, that just one case of kidnapping incident tends to “change the (positive) perception” of the public.

The NEDA chief brushed aside fears that the alleged political activities of some officials for the 2004 election would dampen the economic gains.

He said the administration has laid a solid economic foundation and noted that the political summit in April showcased platform-based programs rather than personalities.

For this year, Canlas predicted that the economy would continue to gather strength brought about by the economic policies that began last year.

The country’s farm sector, for example, grew by 3.8 percent in the first quarter of the year due to ample output gains in palay and mango, and stronger upturn in fishery.

In 2001, P29 billion was allotted to agricultural modernization, way above the P20-billion budget requirement under the Agricultural and Fisheries Modernization Act (AFMA).

He said information technology would be another bright spot in the economy in 2002.

The government expects to double the number of call centers in the Philippines to 80 next year from the current number of 40 to transform the country into a call center hub in the Asia Pacific region.

The passage of the Electric Power Industry Reform Act, which had been stalled for nine years in Congress, has also sent a good signal to investors, according to Canlas.

NEDA, USAID ink pact on governance, health, and environment and energy

The Philippines and the United States have signed three memoranda of understanding (MOU) that would effectively provide assistance to improve economic governance, the delivery of health and family planning services, and the management of environment and energy in the country.

The MOUs would serve as a framework that would guide the US Agency for International Development (USAID) in its activities in the Philippines.

Signing for the Philippines were Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas and National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Deputy Director-General Gilbert Llanto.

USAID Mission Director Patricia K. Buckles and USAID Deputy Mission Director Francis Donovan signed for the US.

In a report, Canlas said “the three MOUs will address major problems in the country and promote the social and economic development of the country.”

Buckles, on the other hand, noted that the MOUs further strengthened the partnership between the US and the Philippines.

She said the US looked forward to moving further ahead in achieving the goals of the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in reducing poverty and securing peace nationwide.

The MOUs stipulate the provision of USAID assistance in:

— Economic governance, whereby more transparent and accountable institutions, policies, and practices; the removal of competitive barriers to the development of infrastructure and trade; and taking advantage of the framework of international trade agreements are expected to be achieved.

— Health and family planning, whereby local government units are given better management of Acquired Immunity Deficiency Syndrome-Tuberculosis-Human Immuno Virus services; greater social acceptance of family planning; and improved policy environment and financing will be given priority.

— Environment, whereby assistance will focus on environmental policy reforms; building institutional capability and mobilizing public and private sector support for improved environmental management with emphasis on more transparent and accountable governance.

— Energy, whereby improved policy environment, increased use of clean and renewable fuels, and reduced vehicle emissions are sought.

Under the MOU, the NEDA and USAID agreed to conduct annual high-level bilateral consultations that would review overall program and policy directions, update relevant developments affecting program implementation, and identify new areas or activities eligible for funding.

A semestral review of results would be made to monitor the progress of ongoing activities and address any implementation concern.

GMA calls on TESDA to help resolve problem on job mismatch

CALAMBA, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) to prepare a new curriculum that would help solve the problem of job mismatch by training young people for jobs that are being offered by factories and other employers.

In her speech at the commemoration of the 141st birth anniversary of Dr. Jose Rizal at the Liwasang Lungsod here, the President said the so-called lack of employment opportunities is actually a problem of job mismatch.

The President said that in most jobs fairs that the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) has set up in Metro Manila and in the provinces, there were more job offerings than applicants.

“May trabahong naghahanap ng manggagawa, may manggagawa namang naghahanap ng trabaho (There are jobs looking for workers, and there are workers looking for jobs),” the President said, adding that what is needed right now is how to solve this job mismatch.

“Napakalaking problema ang job matching (To match jobs is a big problem),” the President said.

According to the President, this is one reason why she has reorganized the TESDA, with the appointment of former Quezon Congressman as new TESDA director general.

The President also announced that she has appointed former TESDA Director General Lucita Lazo as DOLE undersecretary for reintegration of Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs).

She said there is a need for this new office to attend to returning OFWs, especially those who are in their forties or near retirement age and who can no longer apply for work in factories.

The President said the job of Undersecretary Lazo would be to initiate a program that would provide gainful employment or livelihood activities to returning OFWs.

GMA urges healthy investment climate to create more relevant jobs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said her administration would aggressively go on looking for ways to provide every Filipino worker a job he loves to do and a service that investors need to be done.

“Hindi tayo titigil na maghanap ng paraan upang dumami muli and trabaho para sa mamamayan... Kailangan din ay bagay ang kakayahan ng manggagawa sa pangangailangan ng mga namumuhunan,” she said.

But this can only be done in a healthy investment climate where stable peace and order conditions and industrial peace are present, the President said in a speech in Calamba, Laguna where she joined the people in celebrating the 141st birth anniversary of national hero Dr. Jose Rizal.

“Iyong dalawang klaseng kapayapaan na iyon ay kailangan para sa trabaho (We need these two classes of peace to create more jobs for the people),” she said.

During a luncheon with local officials and members of the media, the President said that after her July 2001 State of the Nation Address, she had set her eyes on revitalizing the economy.

She said a lot of programs on the economy are on “automatic pilot.” Even the latest country review of the International Monetary Fund expressed belief that the government would hit its economic targets.

She noted that while Laguna is booming with industries, it is still beset with an 11-percent unemployment rate. “Gaano pa doon sa ibang lugar? (How then can other places unlike Laguna cope?),” she asked in her speech.

She said her administration has been seriously dealing with new forms of enslavement – terrorism and poverty – plaguing society.

She added that graft and corruption, political feuds and banditry have aggravated conditions, thus making the nation sink deeper in the pit of poverty.

“Hindi tayo titigil hanggang hindi mawawakasan ang karahasan ng mga terorista at mga kriminal (We will not stop until terrorism and criminality have been eradicated),” she stressed.

She cited the big help Interior and Local Government Secretary and former Laguna governor Jose Lina, Jr. gave to boost industrial growth in the province and in uplifting the lives of the people.

The President also took note of the country’s export growth that reached 20 percent compared to negative growth last year and the rising tourism growth of ten percent month-on-month.

“Pero marami pa ring walang trabaho, kaya’t dodoblehin natin ang ating kailangang gawin (But many still do not have jobs, so we will exert more efforts, double it, to have our anti-poverty goals met),” she said.

She also lauded the efforts of Luis Lorenzo, Presidential Adviser on One Million Jobs and a native of Laguna, for setting up job fairs nationwide.

GMA bares recovery of Indonesian in Sulu

CALAMBA, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the recovery of one of the four Indonesian nationals who were abducted early this week by unidentified armed men from a tugboat off Basilan.

The President made this announcement during an informal luncheon meeting with the local and national press, and the local officials of the province of Laguna at the shrine of Dr. Jose P. Rizal here where she was the guest of honor and keynote speaker on the 141st birth anniversary of the national hero.

She said the Indonesian hostage victim, identified as Ferdinan Yoel, 35, was recovered in Luuk, Sulu.

“They just recovered him now and they still have to debrief him. No details are yet available,” the President said during the luncheon.

The President said she received the news on the recovery of the Indonesian hostage via a telephone call from Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu shortly before the start of the luncheon.

Aside from Yoel, those who were abducted were Munku Yacobus Windwatan, Pieter Lerrich and a certain “Zulfifli.”

She noted that it was also in Luuk where American hostage Jeffrey Schilling was recovered by the military from the hand of the Abu Sayyaf bandits.

“The people there are super. I really love them,” the President said in reference to the people of Luuk, Sulu.

In the last senatorial election, the President even recalled that Luuk delivered a 13-0 vote in favor of her People Power Coalition (PPC) candidates.

Bunye tops list of candidates for Press Secretary, says GMA

CALAMBA, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said former Muntinlupa Mayor Ignacio Bunye is on top of the list of candidates to the position of press secretary.

In a luncheon meeting with the local and national media as well as the local officials here, the President said Bunye is the top choice of the search committee in charge of selecting and recommending possible appointments for key positions in her Cabinet.

She stressed that she will need Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. to head the Presidential Management Staff (PMS), adding that she needs somebody to do her strategic thinking.

The President explained that she needs Afable at the PMS to design special programs to remove the bottlenecks in agrarian reform, the expansion of urban land reform and for the overseas Filipino workers, among other things.

“I need him to do those things but I can’t even demand that of him now because he’s doing all those nitty-gritty work as press secretary,” she said.

While noting that Afable has other talents, the President pointed out that the Acting Press Secretary is above all a strategist.

“Many can be press secretaries but very few can be strategic thinker,” the President said in describing Afable’s skills.

On the position of the Presidential Spokesman, the President reiterated that Rigoberto Tiglao will retain the same post as soon as he returns from a three-month fellowship in Japan.

GMA urges people to unite and rally behind ideals of Jose Rizal

CALAMBA, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the entire Filipino nation to unite and to replicate the ideals of national hero Dr. Jose P. Rizal in the common battle against crimes and poverty in the country.

In her speech during the 141st birth anniversary celebration of Rizal here, the President stressed that unity among the Filipinos was the message of Rizal’s own struggle to free the nation from the perceived bad governance of foreign invaders.

“These are the ideals instilled to our hearts and minds by our hero Dr. Jose Rizal, for us to unite and free the country,” the President said, adding that Rizal was deeply concerned with the ascendancy of a united Filipino nation.

According to her, one of the reasons why Rizal became the national hero is because he left us with the legacy of nationhood, of being one race, one people.

“Rizal wanted his countrymen to create a new nation committed to a shared destiny,” she said.

In making Rizal a contemporary hero, the President called on all Filipinos to draw inspiration from his life and ideals.

Prior to her speech, the President offered a wreath at the marker of Rizal's birthplace in Calamba.

To provide more meaning to the commemoration of Rizal's birth anniversary, Calamba Mayor Severino Lajara prepared birthday gift bags for 1,000 indigent families in Calamba.

In an informal luncheon meeting that followed the ceremony, the President lauded the local government of Calamba for successfully maintaining peace and order in the area and providing a good business environment.

Among those present in the ceremony were Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Laguna Vice Gov. Dan Fernandez, Laguna Rep. Joaquin Chipeco, Jr, Southern Luzon Command (SOLCOM) chief Maj. Gen. Roy Kyamco and the mayors of all the toward in the province.

Gordon asks GMA to extend liberalized policy on visa issuance to Taiwan visitors

Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon has asked President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to extend a liberalized policy in the issuance of visas to facilitate the entry of visitors from Taiwan.

In a memorandum for the President, Gordon said the government's "progressive liberalization policy" on the air services pact between the country and Taiwan "saw a 12.56 percent increase" in tourist arrivals from Taiwan in 2001.

He said the rise in tourist arrivals from Taiwan was a result of the lifting of the suspension of flights of foreign air carriers from Taiwan.

He cited statistics that showed the deadlock in the air services agreement in 1998 caused a 24.56-percent decline in arrivals in 1999. In 2000, arrivals dropped to as much as 47.35 percent.

In 1998, tourist arrivals from Taiwan totaled 246,370. Two years later, only 75,722 tourist arrivals were recorded.

In his memorandum, Gordon proposed that all airlines operating from Taiwan to the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) and the Laoag International Airport (LIA) should "be authorized to collect, through a Manila Economic and Cultural Office (MECO)-designated representative, the visa fee from its passengers with the corresponding official receipt stamped on the passengers' passports."

The tourism secretary also proposed that upon their arrival at the country's premier airports, passengers from Taiwan should present their passports with the MECO-issued official receipts to the Bureau of Immigration for the issuance of an entry visa.

At the same time, passengers should be holders of a passport valid for not less than six months and that the immigration bureau should have the prerogative to refuse entry to passengers in the watch list of passengers who fall in a similar category.

Gordon said the government should maximize the potentials of Taiwan as a tourism and investment market.

"We hope to regain the standing of Taiwan as one of the Philippines' top five markets in terms of tourist arrivals by this year," he said.

There are 35 regular flights from Taiwan to the NAIA and 10 regular chartered flights to the LIA.

- GMA lauds Chinese-Filipinos for their contributions to nation building
- Madaris officials, tutors approve unified curriculum
- Semi-conductor firms hail moves to hasten implementation of open access to power scheme
- Power cost to go down by 20 percent in July billings, Perez tells Cabinet
- DOLE pushes drive against illegal recruiters

GMA to abolish NACC, gives General Ebdane one year to eliminate kidnapping

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the abolition of the National Anti-Crime Commission (NACC) as she gave incoming Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. the sole responsibility to go against criminal elements, particularly the kidnapers.

In her speech at the awarding ceremonies of the Dr. Jose P. Rizal Awards of Excellence for outstanding Chinese-Filipinos or Tsinoy held late Wednesday night at the Le Pavillon along Roxas Boulevard, the President also challenged Ebdane to eliminate kidnapping in the country within one year.

The President said that Ebdane was the choice of the Chinese-Filipino community for the top PNP post even during the start of her administration.

“Because I have given Jun Ebdane a challenge and I know you will support him, I will give him the full authority, and also the full accountability, for eliminating kidnapping,” the President said.

According to the President, as soon as Ebdane takes command of the PNP, the NACC will cease to exist, “so you talk only to one person in fighting kidnapping.”

Most of the victims in kidnapping for ransom incidents, especially in Metro Manila, have been wealthy Chinese-Filipinos.

The President said the Tsinoy community had been working closely with the government in solving kidnapping cases involving Chinese-Filipinos.

“I’m quite sure that it will work even more closely when General Ebdane becomes the PNP chief,” the President said.

She said with the continued support of the Chinese-Filipino community, the administration will meet the problem of kidnapping with more focus and counterforce.

The President also called on young Chinese-Filipinos to join the PNP and the Armed Forces of the Philippines and consider making police work as a lifetime career.

She also asked young Tsinoy to join in the training sessions of the PNP and other law enforcement agencies so that they would gain expertise needed in detecting and stopping kidnappings.

The President recalled that in her first State of the Nation Address in July 2001, she said that she wanted the bulk of the members of the kidnapping syndicates behind bars.

“With your choice at the helm of the PNP, let us work to eradicate the kidnap gangs and arrest, prosecute and jail the kidnap bosses,” the President told the leaders of the Chinese-Filipino community.

GMA lauds Chinese-Filipinos for their contributions to nation building

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Chinese-Filipino community for their contribution not only in advancing the interest of their community but also in helping build the nation through their personal vocations.

In her speech at the awarding ceremonies of the Dr. Jose P. Rizal Awards for Excellence held late Wednesday night at the Le Pavillon along Roxas Boulevard, the President said that the modern and enterprising Chinese-Filipinos (Tsinoy) have broken from the national stereotype that they are successful only in business and entrepreneurship.

The President said that more Tsinoy have now given significant contributions to such fields as art and culture, community service, education, journalism, management and finance, medicine, public service, science and technology and sports.

But no awards night for Chinese-Filipinos would be complete, the President said, without recognizing the lifetime achievements of the giant taipans of the Philippines.

She particularly cited successful Chinese-Filipino business leaders as Lucio Tan, Henry Sy, John Gokongwei, George Ty, Angelo King, Alfonso Yuchengco and Pao Shih Tien, who have all been recipients of Lifetime Achievement Awards in last night’s awarding ceremonies.

The ten recipients of the Jose P. Rizal Awards for Excellence were Ricardo Lee, for art and culture; Jose Dy Tan, for community service; Julie Yap-Daza, for journalism; Johnlu G. Koa, for business and entrepreneurship; Queena Lee-Chua, for education; Dy Bun Yok, for medicine; Josiah Go, for management and finance, Perry S. Ong, for science and technology; Naga City Mayor Jesse Robredo for public service; and Doreen Yu for journalism.

The President also congratulated the Manila Times and Kabayan for sponsoring the Awards as well as the co-sponsors, namely the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Kaisa, Philippine-Chinese Charitable Association, and the Chinese-Filipino Business Club.

According to the President, Dr. Jose P. Rizal is a classic example of the Chinese-Filipino whose life and work helped found the nation and brought Filipinos closer together.

The Dr. Jose P. Rizal Awards for Excellence, named after the national hero, honor outstanding Chinese-Filipinos who have demonstrated excellence in their chosen fields and have contributed to the growth of the nation.

The President said she was proud to have worked closely with the leaders of the Chinese-Filipino community, adding that under her administration, the government and the Tsinoy “have built new bridges of friendship and understanding.”

She then asked the Chinese-Filipinos to help her administration carry out and complete its program of change and reform.

The President said that she was sad that the public satisfaction of her administration has been much lower today than two months ago, apparently, according to her, because of public dismay over electricity rates.

She said that although the cost of electricity is not a problem of her making, she was doing the best “within her power” to alleviate the situation.

The President said she has instructed the National Power Corporation (Napocor) to reduce its purchased power cost adjustment (PPCA) to P0.40.

“Because of this, from being the second most expensive cost of electricity in the region, we will go down to number six after your PPCA reduction takes effect in your July billing,” the President said.

The President also called on all undocumented but qualified Chinese nationals to avail of the naturalization law so that they can help in achieving the government’s budget deficit ceiling target for this year.

Madaris officials, tutors approve unified curriculum

A curriculum focused on Islamic values and the Arabic language with a mix of English, Filipino, Science, Mathematics and Makabayan (Civic Studies) is very acceptable in the madrasah (Arabic school) system.

This was the common reaction of some 500 ulamas (Muslim religious leaders) who attended a seminar-workshop on the proposed Unified Madrasah Curriculum in Cotabato City from June 17 to 19.

The ulamas are proprietors, officials and faculty members of private madaris (plural for madrasah) operating in the provinces of Basilan, Maguindanao, Lanao del Sur, Sulu and Tawi-Tawi and in Marawi City, all in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

Presidential Assistant for Education Mona Dumlao Valisno said the ulamas appreciated the commitment of the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to make Mindanao a centerpiece of the national agenda for social and economic development.

Valisno said the adoption of the Unified Madrasah Curriculum would be a very significant breakthrough in the Philippine educational system.

“It is a dream realized after more than 30 years of hoping and pushing by all the stakeholders” from the government and private sectors, she said.

She reechoed the President’s optimism that the “mainstreaming” of madrasah education into the national education “is the only lasting persuasive and integrative strategy towards achieving peace and improving the human resource capabilities of the Mindanaons.”

“Through education, any resistance and conflict in beliefs, cultural practices, religion and perceptions of development can easily be mended, harmonized and unified,” Valisno said.

She said the unified curriculum would soon be implemented in five elementary and secondary schools in each of the five provinces and one city of the ARMM.

In her speech during the opening of the seminar-workshop, Valisno cited the madaris as a channel for promoting peace and development in Mindanao.

Through these Arabic schools, many Muslim families could be reached and be brought into the mainstream society to participate in nation building, she said.

The seminar-workshop was organized by ARMM Vice Governor and ARMM Education Regional Secretary Mahid Mutilan.

Semi-conductor firms hail moves to hasten implementation of open access to power scheme

Power-intensive industries led by the Semiconductor and Electronics Industries in the Philippines, Inc. (SEIPI) have expressed satisfaction on recent legislative moves to speed up the implementation of the open access scheme in the electricity sector.

In a report in today's Cabinet meeting, the Department of Energy (DoE) cited the SEIPI for saying that the pending congressional bills would positively help strengthen the competitiveness of industries suffering from very high power costs.

"The industry supports such move of the legislators as this would be a big relief in terms of our efforts in reducing the cost of doing business here in the Philippines," SEIPI executive director Ernie B. Santiago said.

The open access scheme would allow SEIPI members to opt for the cheapest and most efficient power supply that would meet their requirements, the SEIPI said.

This would also break the monopoly of power utilities as the exclusive distributor of electricity in their respective areas, it added.

Under the open access scheme, power consumers using at least one megawatt (1MW) monthly and located within the franchise area of a distribution utility may source power directly from generating plants as early as June next year by using the power lines of the distribution companies.

"If we can buy cheap electricity from other sources and at the same time this company can specifically address the quality of electricity we need, then we should only be allowed to do so under a deregulated power industry. If the accelerated open access will make this happen faster, we will support such move," Santiago said.

He noted that a major concern of the semi-conductor industry is the high costs of power, adding that electricity costs account for 10 to 20 percent of electronics manufacturing costs.

The average monthly consumption of a medium-sized semi-electronics industry usually ranges from P5 million to P10 million.

SEIPI also welcomed the decision of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to reduce the cost of power of the National Power Corp. (Napocor).

The President last May 8 ordered Napocor to peg at a uniform rate of 40-centavos per kilowatthour (kWh) its power purchased cost adjustment (PPCA) starting this month.

This would result in the reduction of between P0.10 to P1.13 per kWh depending on the grid. Napocor's average PPCA is about P1.25 per kWh, to be reflected in the monthly billings of consumers by July.

Santiago said that in the last six years, the power use of the electronics manufacturing sector has gone up to meet the growth in the demand of the product but the cost of power has also doubled, bloating the companies' operating costs.

He said this made it difficult for them to compete with other countries.

"Any move by the government in making the industry's production set-up more cost effective and efficient would bring a lot of competitive edges the Philippines has to offer," he said.

"Let us make sure that we can capitalize on those and work on the biggest export sector of the country, accounting for more than 70 percent or $22 billion of the total Philippine exports of merchandise goods," he urged.

Santigao explained that the opening of the China market might result in excess capacity in the electronics sector, which could lead to the reduction in the price of the product.

He said the only way to counter this scenario is to “improve the cost of manufacturing, particularly the electricity rate in the country, to put us in the same playing field as China.”

“The reduction in the power rate shows that the government is sincere in its well intended plan to work with the industry in facing the global challenges and changes ahead,” he added.

The DoE said that utilities and large firms sourcing their electricity supply from Napocor will enjoy the impact of a power cost reduction of about P1.13 per kWh in the Luzon area and some P0.67 per kWh in the Cebu-Negros-Panay grid.

But some large industries may not benefit from the reduction as some distribution utilities like the Manila Electric Co. source a large portion of their supply from other independent power producers, the DoE said.

Napocor, however, assured that the full benefit of the reduction will be enjoyed by end-consumers of distribution utilities that source 100 percent of their power from the government-run power firm.

SEIPI is the largest and leading organization of foreign and Filipino electronics companies in the country. Most of its member companies are located within the franchise area of a distribution utility, which is the exclusive power distributor in the area.

Power cost to go down by 20 percent in July billings, Perez tells Cabinet

Energy Secretary Vicente Perez today said that electricity costs will go down by as much as 20 percent in the July billings of power consumers within the franchise area of the Manila Electric Company (Meralco), which covers more than three-fourths of Luzon.

In his report to the Cabinet meeting held this morning in Malacañang, Perez said this was a result of the order last May 8 of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to the National Power Corporation (Napocor) to reduce its purchased power cost adjustment (PPCA) passed on to consumers by an average of P0.85 per kilowatt-hour.

Perez said that this is on top of the mandated rate reduction of P0.30 per kilowatt-hour for residential consumers implemented every month since July 2001.

He said that the review of contracts of independent power producers (IPPs) will be completed by the end of June; and if companies are found to have cheated the people, they would have to face the law.

Perez said the results of the review would be submitted immediately to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

The government would make sure the results are made public, Perez said, adding that “we will not spare companies that cheated the people” as “no one is above the law.”

But while the energy department would exhaust all measures to provide immediate relief to power consumers, Perez said the people should understand that “we need a sustainable solution” to the problem caused by the controversial PPCA.

Perez said everyone has to bear with the challenges of building a competitive market mechanism for power.

This would start with the privatization of the transmission and generation assets of the Napocor, he said, adding that there is also the need to come up with an imaginative refinancing plan for the state-run power firm.

He cited two important things. First is that there is no one-shot solution to the problem that has caused people untold hardships. Second, the affected consumers must share their part, through sacrifice and enlightenment, in solving the problem.

Perez assured that government would continue to implement reforms in the power sector.

He said there are always short-term pains to endure long-term gains.

DOLE pushes drive against illegal recruiters

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) has stepped up its campaign against illegal recruiters nationwide, even as the agency has given overseas Filipino workers (OFW) better services and assistance.

In a Presidential Management Staff (PMS) report showing the agency's achievements vis-à-vis commitments set in President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's July 2001 State of the Nation Address, the DOLE said it gave legal help in 906 cases of illegal recruitment involving 2,783 victims.

The PMS report, which covered the period following the SONA up to June 19, 2002, cited the DOLE for also handling and prosecuting 125 court cases involving 353 complainants.

To date, 12 illegal recruiters have been convicted. Four of them were sentenced to life imprisonment, the report said.

The DOLE conducted regular surveillance operations leading to the arrest of 26 suspected illegal recruiters and the closure of 40 establishments engaged in illegal recruitment.

Meanwhile, the agency has reduced the processing time and signatories for the documentation of OFWs with the implementation of its electronic link (E-Link) services.

By the end of June, the DOLE would have reduced OFW documentation time by 50 percent.

Land-based OFW documentation would go down to three hours from six hours while sea-based OFW documentation would take only six hours from 12 hours.

The agency has further installed a computerized system that would simplify and reduce the processing time for the Alien Registration System (ARS), the Private Recruitment and Placement System (PRPS) and the Special Program for Employment System (SPES).

The ARS processing time went down to eight hours from two days; the PRPS, to five minutes from one day; and the SPES, to eight hours from two days.

The DOLE has set up a 24-hour OFW hotline in the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration and the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration offices for document follow-ups and other queries.

Also launched was the OFW Electron Card to Balik-Manggagawa (Returning Workers) that would unify the transaction card for OFWs.

President's statement on Zamboanga encounter

SAN FERNANDO, La Union

This morning, there was an encounter between a unit of the Special Warfare Group (SWAG) of the Philippine Navy and the main Abu Sayyaf group led by Abu Sabaya aboard a boat, one kilometer off the coast of Sibuco in Zamboanga del Norte, at 4:30 this morning.

Three Abu Sayyaf members were wounded and jumped off their boat, while 4 others were captured. The captured Abu Sayyaf members confirmed that one of those who jumped into the sea was Abu Sabaya, who was wearing a black sweatshirt. The SWAG team also confirmed shooting the man in the black sweatshirt. Government forces are now scouring the coast for Sabaya, or his body.

I congratulate the Armed Forces for their continuing determination and tenacity to finish off the Abu Sayyaf. Even since Operation Daybreak began, we have seen the best fighting skills and courage among our soldiers. They deserve the accolade of our people.

Our no-ransom, no-negotiation policy is paying off. Terrorists will be hunted down relentlessly wherever they are, in the fastness of the jungle or in the high seas. They will be given no room to maneuver, to hide, or to rest. We will not stop until they are all accounted for.

GMA declares 'Araw ng Maynila' as special non-working day in City

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has declared Monday, June 24, 2002, as a special non-working day in the City of Manila.

In Proclamation No. 206 which she signed last June 10, 2002, the President said that every year, the City of Manila celebrates June 24 as "Araw ng Maynila" in commemoration of the founding of the city as the premier Christian City of Asia.

"Monday, June 24, 2002 marks the 431st Foundation Day Anniversary of the City of Manila," the President said.

The President said she issued the proclamation to give the residents of Manila, conscious of the historical and cultural significance of the event, the opportunity to celebrate "Araw ng Maynila" with appropriate ceremonies.

Bush happy over neutralization of Sabaya group, GMA says

SAN FERNANDO, La Union — United States President George W. Bush has expressed gladness over reports that notorious Abu Sayyaf leader and spokesman Aldam Tilao a.k.a. Abu Sabaya and his band of kidnapper-terrorists have been neutralized.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she had a phone conversation with President Bush, following reports that the military had tracked and fought it out with Abu Sabaya's group a kilometer off the coast of Sibuco, Zamboanga del Norte at about 4:30 this morning.

The President interrupted the meeting of the Ilocos Regional Development Council (RDC) here to announce that she "just talked with President Bush."

"He's happy that the Abu Sayyaf (problem) has been solved," she said.

"The Balikatan exercises will be finished on July 31 as scheduled," she added, referring to the joint RP-US military exercises being undertaken in Basilan province, lair of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf.

"But they are ready to schedule the next Balikatan exercises," she said.

Local officials and residents in Basilan and other parts of Mindanao have lately asked the government to extend the stay of, if not permanently allow, American troops participating in the Balikatan in the area.

The President also took time to monitor and report to the RDC meeting the latest developments in the military-Abu Sayyaf encounter.

Interrupting the meeting at times, the President said the military has recovered a satellite phone, dark glasses and bonnet believed to belong to Abu Sabaya, who along with two others, jumped into the sea during the firefight.

One of the soldiers was very sure he shot Abu Sabaya who was wearing a black sweat shirt, and fell down from the boat together with two others, she told the meeting. But Sabaya, dead or alive, has yet to be recovered.

Four others left in the Abu Sayyaf speedboat were captured, she added. Interrogation with the captured Abu Sayyaf members showed their three companions who jumped off the boat had gunshot wounds.

The President congratulated the military for aggressively monitoring the movement of Abu Sabaya's group who tried to get out of the Siocon, Siraway, Sibuco, Baliguian complex in Zamboanga del Norte.

The military has continued to scour the shorelines for Sabaya's body.

Gov't winning fight against poverty in Ilocos

SAN FERNANDO, La Union — Region I, composed of the four provinces of Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Sur, La Union and Pangasinan, and the eight cities of Laoag, Vigan, Candon, San Fernando, Urdaneta, Dagupan, San Carlos and Alaminos, is experiencing a big improvement in alleviating poverty.

During a presentation of the Ilocos Region socio-economic situationer to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo at the Joint Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) meeting at the Provincial Capitol here, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas said the number of poor families dropped from 47.9 percent in 1994 to 3.7 percent in 2000.

Canlas, however, said that the employment rate remained almost the same in 2000 and 2001 at 89.6 and 89.3 percent, respectively. These were a little bit higher compared to the country's 88.9 percent.

However, Canlas pointed out that the unemployment rate improved significantly, dropping from 20.1 to 12.7 percent in the two years, following the trend at the national level.

The region was also reported to have the highest percentage of households with sanitary toilets, at 90.6 percent. About 79.5 percent of its household have access to potable water, higher than the national average of 76.3 percent.

The President congratulated RDC Chairman and Pangasinan Gov. Victor Agbayani who reported to the Chief Executive that as of 2001, 99 percent of the barangays in the region have been energized.

Region I is located in the northwestern part of the country, whose coastline runs along the international sea lanes of the South China Sea.

It is the gateway to East and Southeast Asian countries. Travel from the Laoag International Airport to Hong Kong and Taiwan is less than one hour. It takes less than three hours to reach Singapore and about three and a half hours to Japan and Korea.

Aside from its location advantage, the region boasts of good roads and telecommunications facilities, adequate power supply, good peace and order situation and skilled manpower imbued with industrial discipline.

GMA distributes land certificates to new landowners in Ilocos

BANAYOYO, Ilocos Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today distributed more than 70 hectares of land to beneficiaries of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP) here, making at least 85 tenant-farmers into new landowners.

The President, assisted by Agrarian Reform Secretary Hernani Bragaza, Cabinet Officer for Regional Development (CORD) for Region 1 (Ilocos), personally handed over the Certificates of Land Ownership Awards (CLOAs) to the farmer beneficiaries in a ceremony held here.

The farmers who received their CLOAs came all the way from the municipalities of San Juan, Sta. Maria and Santiago in Ilocos Sur; Malasiqui, Mangatarem, Rosales, Villasis and Tayug in Pangasinan; and Caba in La Union.

The 85 farmer beneficiaries are part of the 533 beneficiaries from the Ilocos region who were given lands under the CARP since the start of 2002.

According to Braganza, for the first half of the year alone, the DAR personnel in Region I have distributed a total of 726 hectares of land representing 88 percent of the target for 2002.

He pointed out that the latest accomplishment brought to 116,585 hectares the total area distributed under CARP in the Ilocos region, leaving a balance of only 2,211 hectares.

“For the entire region, we have accomplished 98 percent of the target as far as land acquisition and distribution is concerned. We can safely say that the land distribution in Region I is almost finished,” Braganza said.

GMA reiterates need to privatize transmission, generation assets of Napocor

BANAYOYO, Ilocos Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reiterated the need to privatize the transmission and generation assets of the National Power Corporation (Napocor) to further reduce the cost of electricity for consumers.

In a speech here at the town plaza, the President also expressed the need for competition in the generation sector of the power industry as well as to come up with an imaginative and refinancing solutions for the Napocor.

The President took the opportunity to express her sadness over the recent drop of her net satisfaction rating which is perceived to be caused by the public perception of the controversial power purchased cost adjustment (PPCA) issue.

As a consumer herself, the President said she fully understands and feels the burden brought by the high monthly electricity rates to the consumers.

The President said consumers will eventually have the opportunity to choose where to buy their supply of electricity, adding that the power of choice will lead to the lowering of prices like in the telecommunications industry.

She explained that when the government deregulated the telecommunications sector, it took several years before the reduced cost of telephone bills was felt by the public.

With regards to the present problem on the PPCA, the Chief Executive asked for patience and understanding from the consumers but assured them that the reduction on the charges will be reflected in the electric billings starting this July.

President Macapagal-Arroyo recalled that last May 8, she directed the Napocor to lower its PPCA rates by as much as 40 centavos per kilowatt-hour on top of the 30-centavo reduction that she ordered in July last year.

She said the result of the review on contracts of independent power producers (IPP) will be made public by the end of this month, adding that those who will be found illegally exacting charges will not be spared from the law.

With the ongoing reforms being instituted in the power sector and the anticipated reduction of electricity bills in July, the President is optimistic that the Philippines will be downgraded to the sixth spot in the list of most expensive electric providers in the whole Asia. The Philippines is currently second to Japan.

Once these reforms take effect, the President said consumers will not only be freed from the burden of paying high cost of electricity but there will be renewed confidence among the investors and more infusion of fresh capital.

GMA identifies Laoag airport as vital to RP tourism

SAN FERNANDO, La Union — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today wished that the Laoag International Airport would attract more tourists from Hong Kong, Taiwan and Mainland China, especially this coming year, 2003, which is “Visit Philippines” year.

This should be like Thailand where tourism became popular because of its “Visit Thailand Year” promotion, the President said.

She added that she wanted the domestic tourism industry developed after the “Visit Philippines” in 2003, adding that Laoag is a most vital gateway for tourists coming from Taiwan, China and Hong Kong.

In a press briefing, Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo said that to achieve this goal, the President instructed the installation of needed facilities, like upgraded navigational aids, within 2002.

To address the needs of farmers and mitigate the effects of the El Nino phenomenon this year, the President directed the immediate release of P17 million, out of the P23 million allocated for agricultural and fisheries modernization, to fund projects like irrigation for Region 1.

The President also instructed Chief Presidential Legal Counsel, Avelino Cruz, Jr. to prepare the necessary document that would separate Poro Point in San Fernando, La Union, and Camp John Hay in Baguio.

The President said Camp John Hay would be under the Bases Conversion Development Authority (BCDA), while Poro Point would be under the regulatory function of the Philippine Ports Authority (PPA).

The ownership of both facility, however, would be retained by the BCDA, the President said. The separation of Poro Point from Camp John Hay would facilitate its development, the President said.

The San Fernando Airport would also be developed with Fedex committing to provide runway lighting facilities within three to six months. "This will allow night time landing at San Fernando Airport," Saludo said.

Another development is the petition from the local government executives of Region I to develop the Currimaog Port in Ilocos Norte.

The PPA, according to Saludo, is undertaking two things: updating the feasibility study which was done in 1993 and undertaking a program to upgrade the Currimaog port at a cost of P110 million. This would involve the expansion of the reclamation work, dredging and the construction of public utilities.

The President also announced that the North Luzon Growth Commission, which was abolished during the previous administration, has been restored.

GMA directs peace-order council to ensure that Barangay polls remain non-partisan

SAN FERNANDO, La Union — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today exhorted the members of the Regional Peace and Order Council (RPOC) here to ensure that next month's barangay elections are not used as tools of insurgency.

During the joint meeting of the RPOC-Regional Development Council (RDC) at the Provincial Capitol here, the President expressed concern that rebel groups and other elements might to influence the elections and prevent the expression of the true will of the people.

The President said the barangay elections are non-partisan, therefore there should be no interference by partisan groups.

The President enjoined all government and other groups in society, including political blocs, to join hands in ensuring that there is democracy and free expression of the people's will in these elections.

"You should not be intimidated by groups who may use violence and other terror tactics in trying to influence your votes," Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo quoted the President as saying.

On the issue of patrol boats needed to back up the police for peace and order duties on municipal waters, the President has offered to provide P3 million as counterpart funding if the local government can come up with the rest of the money needed to purchase the boats.

GMA announces arrest of Ativan Gang leader

BANAYOYO, Ilocos Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the arrest the leader of the Ativan Gang who was responsible for the series of robbery-holdup incidents, particularly the recent killing of a Korean diplomat.

In her speech here, the President identified the arrested suspect as Rodrigo Fabricante.

According to the President, the suspect was positively identified by the companion of the Korean diplomat who was killed by the said gang.

The President added that the suspect admitted that when they dumped the body of the Korean, the victim was still alive.

As for the Pentagon Gang escape, the President said she has instructed incoming Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. to immediately dismiss the guards who were directly involved in the escape of Pentagon leader Marohombsar Faisal

“I hope that these developments related to law enforcement augur well for our quest for peace and the personal safety of people who visit or live in our country,” the President said.

GMA elated over series of positive developments in fight against terrorism, criminality

BANAYOYO, Ilocos Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed elation over a series of positive developments in the government’s drive against terrorism and criminality, topped by a successful military campaign against an Abu Sayyaf band headed by spokesman Abu Sabaya early this morning off the coast of Sibuco in Zamboanga del Norte.

In her brief remarks during the awarding of certificates of land ownership awards (CLOAs) to farmer-beneficiaries here, the President said the other piece of “good news” was the arrest, also today, of Rodrigo Fabricante, the alleged leader of the so-called Ativan gang, which was pinpointed as responsible for the kidnap slaying of Chong Young Ho, third secretary of the Korean embassy in Manila.

The President said that she was informed by police authorities that Fabricante was positively identified by the Korean companion of the victim.

According to the President, Fabricante admitted that when they dumped Chong’s body, he was still alive.

The President also said that former Mayor Ruben Ecleo, the leader of a religious cult, the Philippine Benevolent Missionaries Association (PBMA), has already been brought to Cebu City where he will be incarcerated and where he will face criminal charges, including parricide and complexity in the massacre of his wife’s family.

She also said that she has ordered incoming Philippine National Police (PNP) chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, to summarily dismiss from the service and to file criminal charges against all the guards responsible for the escape from Camp Crame of Marohombsar Faisal and two of his men.

“I hope that these developments related to law enforcement augur well for our quest for peace and personal safety of the people who visit or live in our country,” the President said.

GMA distributes checks, farm and fisheries equipment for Ilocos Region beneficiaries

BANAYOYO, Ilocos Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today turned over some P7 million worth of checks as well as farm and fisheries equipment to qualified beneficiaries in the Ilocos Region.

The ceremony held here coincided with the birthday celebration of former Ilocos Sur Governor Luis “Chavit” Singson, which was held at a tobacco flue-curing barn here.

Among the items distributed by the President were 100 boxes of zinc mettalate, which is used to increase rice yield, one unit of four-wheel drive tractor, five units of multi-crop combined husker and thresher, and hybrid F1 seeds.

Instead of releasing funds from R. A. 7171 or the tobacco excise tax, the President said she was distributing the “goodies” as her gift for the birthday celebrator.

During the ceremony, the President also awarded 300 Philippine Health Insurance Corporation (PHIC) health cards to poor beneficiaries in San Fernando City, in La Union.

The checks handed over by the President will be used for the purchase of “lambaklad” or fishnets, rice and corn shellers, tractors, rice threshers, post-harvest facilities, motorized bancas and other farm equipment.

Part of the amount will also be used for the construction of potable water system, septic tanks, sanitation facilities and a hanging bridge.

One of the activities during the President’s visit here was a jobs fair organized by the Office of Presidential Adviser for Jobs Creation Luis Lorenzo, the Department of Labor and Employment, and the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

Among those present at the ceremony were Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Agrarian Reform Secretary Hernani Braganza, Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor, Ilocos Sur Governor Deogracias Victor Sabellano, Ilocos Norte Governor Ferdinand Marcos, Jr., and Ilocos Norte Representative Imee Marcos.

Press statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in San Fernando, La Union at 6:10 P.M. today, June 21, 2002

Kanina pong umaga tinawagan ako ng mga heneral para ibalitang nagsalpuhan kaninang madaling araw ang puwersa ng ating Armed Forces at ang pangkat ng Abu Sayyaf terrorist commander na si Abu Sabaya sa dagat malapit sa Zamboanga City.

Tiniyak sa akin ni General Ernesto Carolina, ang ating hinirang na South Commander, na tinamaan si Abu Sabaya at patay na. Hinahanap ngayon ang kanyang bangkay na nakitang nalaglag sa tubig at nalunod.

Marami na sa mga Abu Sayyaf ang nalagas. Kung hindi napatay, o nahuli ang iba sa kanila ay sumuko dahil sa takot sa ating mga sundalo. Malaki na ang hinina ng kanilang puwersa. Mula sa libu-libo ay malaki na ang nabawas sa kanilang lakas simula nang inilunsad natin ang ating kampanya laban sa terorismo, kasama na rin ang Balikatan exercises.

Mula sa dating kilos-hari sa Basilan at Sulu, ang Abu Sayyaf ngayon ay parang mga daga na nagtatago sa kanilang lungga. Mula sa pananambang, sila ngayon ang ating tinatambangan.

Mula sa panlulusob sila na ngayon ang sinasalakay. Baligtad na. Patuloy ang pagtugis natin sa mga natitirang Abu Sayyaf.

Ito’y pagpapatunay sa husay at tagumpay ng ating kampanya laban sa terorismo at pananakot ng mga bandido. Sa dahilang ito’y nagpapasalamat ako ng malaki sa kawal Pilipino na nagbubuwis ng buhay para sa ating kaligtasan.

Tinatanaw ko ang aking utang na loob at utang na loob ng buong bayan sa mga pangkaraniwang mamamayan sa Basilan, Zamboanga, Sulu at iba pang lugar sa Mindanao dahil sa kanilang suporta sa aking kampanya.

At nagpapasalamat ako sa nakararaming taong-bayan dahil sa kanilang pag-unawa, pasensiya, at panalangin para sa tagumpay ng ating pakay.

Hindi pa lubos ang ating kampanya laban sa terorismo. Marami pa tayong dapat gawin para sa katahimikan ng Mindanao at ibang bahagi ng ating bayan. Kaya naman may pakiusap ako sa ating sambayanan – habaan pa po ninyo ang inyong pang-unawa.

Kailangan po ng ating mga sundalo ang inyong panalangin at pang-unawa.

Inaasahan ko na bago bukas ng umaga ay may dagdag na impormasyon si General Carolina.

Kasabay nito'y patuloy ang ating pagtugis sa mga terorista. Sa tulong ninyo, walang imposible. Tatapusin natin ito. Magtutungan po tayo sa hamong ito.

Salamat po.

Farmers lives take off with GMA thrust on agricultural modernization

“Alam ko na matutupad ang aking pangarap na maiahon ang aking pamilya sa tulong ng pamahalaan (I know that government help can make my dream to give my family a better life come true).”

Donato C. Aquino, Jr., of Victoria, Laguna, is only one of the tens of thousands of farmers nationwide who are benefiting from the implementation of the Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Act (AFMA) under the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

“Simula pa lang nang mag-apply ako bilang farmer-beneficiary ay naramdaman ko na iyon at ngayon nga ay nag-uumpisa na ang pagginhawa namin sa buhay (Since I applied as farmer-beneficiary, our way of life began improving),” Aquino said.

He noted the government's aggressiveness in carrying out projects on communal irrigation and water supply, electrification, post-harvest facilities, solar drying, rice production and milling, livestock production and farm-to-market roads.

True enough, the government has allocated some P37.2 billion for AFMA programs and projects for this year alone.

Of the total, P22.3 billion came from the General Appropriations Act and P14.9 billion, from the Land Bank of the Philippines (LandBank) and the Development Bank of the Philippines

A Presidential Management Staff (PMS) report showed that as of April 30, some P2.369 billion have been loaned out to 94,195 farmers through the LandBank and the Quedancor credit and guarantee programs.

The PMS report focused on accomplishments made vis-à-vis the commitments made by the President in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July 2001.

During the first four months of 2002, the government has established three livestock auction markets and upgraded two biogas digesters; conducted 118 training sessions benefiting 4,492 agricultural workers; participated in the Foodex Japan trade fair and conducted 14 local trade fairs, 14 market matching and three market assessment activities.

In research and development (R&D), AFMA funds went to 11 ongoing national R&D projects, provided scholarships and upgraded 20 R&D facilities.

“Our cooperative was provided technical assistance for our corn harvest requirement, moisture meter, and technologically-advanced corn dryer,” said Rodolfo Santos III, a farmer from San Miguel, Manolo Fortich, Bukidnon.

“Kasabay ng agricultural modernization, inaasahan din naming mapapabuti ang kabuhayan ng mas maraming magsasaka (With agricultural modernization, we look forward to more farmers getting the best in life),” Santos said.

Last year, the government allocated P29.75 billion and used some P24.21 billion for AFMA projects and programs. This was done immediately after President Macapagal-Arroyo took over the reins of government from former President Joseph Estrada in January 20.

Of the used AFMA funds, P9.17 billion went to loans given to 232,342 farmers. Part of the money also went to the crop insurances of 35,868 farmers and guaranteed loans of 36,016 farmers.

The PMS report said P4.64 billion went to irrigation projects that watered 17,378 new hectares of farmlands and rehabilitated 61,664 hectares more nationwide.

About P4.4 billion bankrolled the formation of three business alliances among 40 farmer-cooperatives; the conduct of market matching for a for 78 cooperatives; the launching of an Internet-based marketing network; and the conduct of 24 trade fairs, 13 trade missions and exhibits and eight farmers’ congresses.

Some P2.65 billion went to the construction of farm-to-market roads, 1,310 of which have been completed and 1,185 are ongoing; and the establishment of a mariculture park in Samal, Davao City.

Another P1.04 billion supported the programs of 49 research and development (R&D) networks and 11 R&D centers and provided 72 degree and 108 non-degree R&D scholarships.

The purchase and distribution of post harvest machineries and the construction of 576 post harvest facilities totaled P760 million.

Jury Manunggal, 38, farmer from Kilangan, Pagalungan, Maguindanao, lauded the opening of the Malitubog-Maridagao irrigation project late last year.

“Ngayong tapos na ito, makakatanim na kami ng palay. Ito ay magsisilbing puhunan namin habang may buhay, pati na ang susunod naming mga salinlahi (With the completion of the irrigation project, we can start planting rice. This will be our investment for life. Moreover, the next generation will benefit from it),” Manunggal said.

The PMS report said the President’s commitment to create a million jobs in the agriculture sector is on schedule.

As of April, a total of 872,000 jobs have been created, including 232,000 in AFMA-related programs and projects.

Last year, 852,000 jobs were generated. From January to April this year, another 22,443 jobs were created, the report added.

Balikatan to end in July, says GMA

SAN FERNANDO, La Union — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the current Balikatan exercise in Basilan will definitely end on July 31, 2002.

The President told local and Metro Manila media representatives during dinner last night that the American soldiers participating in the Balikatan exercise can now go down to the company level where previously their training operations were limited to the battalion headquarters level.

The President said she received a message from United States President George W. Bush giving clearance to the Americans forces to get closer to the combat lines with the Filipino soldiers for training purposes.

Once the current military exercise ends in July, another Balikatan program would be scheduled, the President disclosed. The site for the new war games, however, will still have to be determined, she added.

The clearance from President Bush for US soldiers to conduct training maneuvers in the company level and start another Balikatan security and defense exercise was relayed to the President by US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone during the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council meeting here yesterday.

The President also said Mr. Bush and the Americans were very happy that the Abu Sayyaf problem has virtually ended, with the successful military campaign against an Abu Sayyaf band led by spokesman and chieftain Abu Sabaya at 4:30 a.m. yesterday off the coast of Sibuco, Zamboanga del Norte

According to the President, sophisticated US war materiel and equipment like spy planes and night-vision goggles helped Filipino troops in tracking the movements of the Abu Sayyaf.

The President also disclosed that the leader of the Special Warfare Group (SWAG) responsible for the downfall of Abu Sabaya and the capture of four of his companions, Deputy Brigade Commander Ariel Querubin, was from Bauang, La Union,.

“You should be proud of his courage and bravery,” the President stressed, saying that Querubin and his brigade will be awarded medals of honor.

All roads lead to Lubao for historic wedding

LUBAO, Pampanga — For the First Family, their relatives, friends and supporters, all roads to the presidential hometown of Lubao, Pampanga on Monday, June 24.

The reason: Presidential son and Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel “Mikey” M. Arroyo, 33, will tie the knot with beautiful Maria Angelica A. Montenegro, 27.

The wedding rites will be held at the Saint Augustine (or San Agustin) Church in Barangay San Nicolas, only a few hundred meters away from the municipal building of Lubao, the only town that produced two Philippine Presidents.

The wedding is historic for the First Family not only because of its setting but also because they are giving away their eldest son who, on wedding day, is not just the duly-elected Vice Governor but also the acting governor of Pampanga in the absence of Gov. Manuel “Lito” Lapid who is in the United States.

The wedding is also historic because it brings together the incumbent President, Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, the bridegroom’s mother, and two former Presidents of the Republic – Corazon C. Aquino and Fidel V. Ramos – together with other prominent godparents like Manila Bulletin Chairman Dr. Emilio T. Yap – in the first such event to happen in Saint Augustine Church in Lubao, some 120 kilometers or an hour’s drive from Manila.

Made of brick, sand and stones mixed with egg albumen, the Saint Augustine Church is said to be the oldest church in Pampanga and the second oldest church in the Philippines, according to Mrs. Anita Salalila Limson whose father Miguel, a prominent tailor of the town, made one of the first pants of the late President Diosdado Macapagal.

A marker placed by the Philippine Historical Commission (now the National Historical Institute) and donated by Judge Pedro Bautista and his wife, Atty. Lourdes P. Macapagal-Bautista, showed that the church was founded in 1572 in Sta. Catalina near its present site. Thirty years later, or in 1602, the church moved to its present site, an entire block of about one hectare bounded by San Nicolas I Street, San Nicolas II Street and Sta. Lucia Street which leads to big fish farms and the nearby town of Sasmuan (formerly Sexmoan)

The chief architect of the Saint Augustine Church was Fr. Antonio Herrera.

The colorful history of church includes its having served as the seat of the revolution against Spain in 1898 when it was occupied by the “revolucionarios.” The following year in 1899, following the defeat of the Spanish armada in Manila Bay by Commodore George Dewey, the church was converted into a hospital by the American troops.

The Saint Augustine Church was destroyed by shelling of the Japanese troops during the war in 1942. Full restoration was undertaken in 1949 to 1952 under the leadership of the parish priest, Fr. Melencio Garcia.

Many famous natives of Lubao like President Diosdado Macapagal, and his brother-in-law, actor and former Ambassador Rogelio de la Rosa, and his actor-brother Jaime de la Rosa attended Mass at the Saint Augustine Church.

Unknown to many, President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo’s father, President Diosdado Macapagal, was also baptized in the Saint Augustine Church. The young Macapagal, who was born on September 28, 1910 through midwife Escolastica Romero, was brought to the church by his parents Urbano and Romana Dadong for the baptism rites conducted by Fr. Francisco de la Banda on October 12, 1910 when he was only about a month old. Leading the sponsors then was one Angel Javier.

Cong Dadong’s baptism was recorded as the fourth entry on Page 38 of the Church’s Baptismal Book 32 by the parish priest, Fr. Pedro Diez.

Cong Dadong, who eventually became known as the “Poor Boy from Lubao” for his unprecedented feat, conquered extreme poverty to finish his education with highest honors, became bar topnotcher in 1936 and got his doctor of laws and doctor of economics from the University of Sto. Tomas. He was elected in 1949 as congressman of Pampanga and was reelected for a second term. In 1957, he was elected president of the Liberal Party and in 1961 he was elected as the fifth President of the Philippines in 1961 after his unsuccessful senatorial bid. After his presidency, he served as President of the 1971 Constitutional Convention. His term, which ended in 1965, was capped by his signing into law on August 8, 1963 of the Agricultural Land Reform Code which ended the centuries-old tenancy system in the country.

In his own words, the new law was his way to fight mass poverty in the country, an objective being pursued by his daughter, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, and her son, Vice Governor Juan Miguel Arroyo, through his Mikey Against Poverty or MAP program.

Bush says GMA did world a great service by being tough against terrorists

United States President George W. Bush has hailed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo following the reported killing of Aldam Tilao alias Abu Sabaya in a clash with the Navy’s Special Warfare Group in the waters a kilometer off Mantibo Point, Sibuco, Zamboanga del Norte Friday.

Abu Sabaya was the leader and spokesman of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf group that abducted American missionary couple Martin and Gracia Burnham in a resort in Palawan last year.

According to wire reports, Bush said President Macapagal-Arroyo “did the world a great service.”

In his speech in Orlando, Florida, Bush cited the President “for being tough and firm and strong to help rid the world of this particular threat.”

“I want to congratulate the President of the Philippines. I appreciate her leadership and her strength,” he said.

“(The Abu Sayyaf) kidnapped. They killed. And today, their leader met his maker. Thanks to one of our coalition partners,” he added.

“It goes to show that by assembling a vast coalition of freedom-loving countries, that when we work together and are strong and are diligent, we can succeed. And that’s what’s going to happen,” he stressed.

US Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld also welcomed the development and praised Philippine officials “for their continued battle against terrorism in their nation.”

Lt. Cmdr. Jeff Davis, a Pentagon spokesman, said American troops helped with planning, communications and intelligence-sharing for the naval operation against Abu Sabaya and his band.

GMA outlines 4 key principles in search for peace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today outlined four principles she said represented the national consensus in the search for lasting and meaningful peace throughout the country.

In her keynote speech during the 2nd Mindanao Budget Summit at the EDSA Shangri-la Hotel in Mandaluyong City, the President said the “ultimate objective should be both peace and development,” one working simultaneously with the other.

“A second principle is that our framework should be based on constitutionality, national sovereignty, and territorial integrity,” she said.

The third principle is the recognition of Philippine society as a multi-ethnic one.

Thus, all efforts to gain peace “should be founded on social justice for all and the institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions, Christian and Muslim, Chinese and Spanish, Tagalog and Cebuano,” she added.

The President noted a fourth operational principle: “In our search for peace, there is no role for terrorism or inhuman brutality.”

She said such acts should be universally condemned and addressed decisively.

She told her audience, composed of Mindanao’s leaders, that the government, in dealing with terrorism and criminal activity in some areas of southern Philippines, has always banked on the principle “that all reasonable efforts must be exerted to safeguard the lives of innocent victims, such as hostages.”

“But when it becomes necessary to use our police and military forces, we must extend them full moral and material support, for their lives are at stake,” she urged the Mindanao officials.

In her speech, the President also called the meeting between her and Mindanao officials “a great day,” coming at the heels of the reported killing of notorious Abu Sayyaf leader and spokesman Aldam Tilao a.k.a. Abu Sabaya in a clash with the Navy’s Special Warfare Group off the coast of Sibuco, Zamboanga del Norte Friday.

“I think the Lord planned this day. I think the Lord wants me to use this occasion to reaffirm today our determination to enforce law and order,” she said.

“The people must be safe in their homes and places of work. They must be safe not only in the cities but in the farms in the hinterlands,” she added.

“The Abu Sayyaf is virtually finished. We must not stop until we account for all of them,” she stressed, as she renewed this commitment before the Mindanao leaders, the people they represent, and the people of the whole of Mindanao.

She also resolved to further “strengthen the capability and discipline of our military and police forces,” as she took time to once again praise the troops “who stand heavy fire on land or at sea” and “who stand guard in far away detachments.”

“We shall upgrade the high quality of soldiering we already have. We shall put the police back in the high regard of the public. We shall modernize equipment and facilities,” she said.

The President also cited the big help of American troops participating in the ongoing RP-US joint Balikatan 02-1 exercises in Mindanao. “We shall continue to train with our foreign allies,” she said.

She reiterated her government’s resolve to wipe out the problem of poverty in Mindanao, and elsewhere in the country.

“Our problem in Mindanao is rooted in economic exclusion. The axis of poverty is often crossed by the axis of terrorism,” she said.

“I am not saying that poverty is the cause of terrorism. Evil is the cause of terrorism. But poverty and the sense of powerlessness it brings are the spawning grounds where terrorism can more easily spread its evil ideology. The war against terrorism is also a war against poverty,” she stressed.

GMA stresses resolve to strengthen law, order

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has directed Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes to “keep the Marine battalion in the Socsargen (South Cotabato-Saranggani-Gen. Santos City) area” to help hunt down escaped Pentagon kidnap gang leader Faisal Marohombsar.

In her speech before the 2nd Mindanao Budget Summit at Edsa Shangri-La Hotel in Mandaluyong, the President said “we will hunt him down.”

She said “the Marine battalion was supposed to be moved out of Socsargen and brought to Sulu to help catch the rest of the Abu Sayyaf,” in stepped-up operations following the reported killing of Abu Sayyaf leader and spokesman Aldam Tilao alias Abu Sabaya.

She stressed that her administration would strengthen law and order “because we want to free our people from the tyranny of lawlessness and terrorism.”

On Marohombsar’s escape, the President said she has told Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, General Leandro Mendoza and incoming Philippine National Police chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane that “they must immediately discharge the guards who were in-charge of guarding the Pentagon Gang leader, aside from charging them criminally.”

She said Ebdane has accepted the challenge of eliminating kidnapping within one year. “He has put his job on the line in his promise to comply with that challenge,” she said.

The President made a similar proposal for the Pasay City policemen who botched a hostage-taking drama that involved a four-year old boy.

“I feel the move they made transferring the policemen of Pasay City and putting them all under training is good but it’s weak. They should have dismissed immediately the ones who were directly involved,” she added.

“That is going to be our new ethic in the drive for peace and order,” she said.

“Anybody who makes a blunder will be discharged as well as charged immediately,” she stressed, adding that Mendoza and Ebdane have vowed to account for the fugitives.

In efforts to strengthen law and order, the President said she was not speaking only of the rich and privileged.

“I am speaking of ordinary people who get held up in jeepneys or who get victimized by snatchers in the streets. I am speaking of the likes of Ediborah Yap who had to endure poverty only to fall into the hands of terrorists. I am speaking of the people of Mindanao who earn their money through sweat only to be taken by bandits,” she said.

GMA says BIMP-EAGA security crucial in restoring investor confidence

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today noted the importance of putting the Brunei Darussalam-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East Asean Growth Area (BIMP EAGA) back on track.

But the President noted that enhanced security cooperation between and among member countries of the regional trading group was imperative to restore investor confidence in the area.

In her speech keynoting the 2nd Mindanao Business Summit at the EDSA Shangri-la in Mandaluyong City, the President cited the crucial role of the trilateral agreement on security recently signed between the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia.

“The trilateral agreement should strengthen border controls to enable the country signatories to apprehend criminals and terrorists plying our common waters,” she said.

She recounted that when she and Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad witnessed the signing of the pact in Kuala Lumpur, the Prime Minister urged immediate action on strengthening the border patrols of the three country signatories.

She said she had also discussed the same topic with Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes.

“We should work out immediately the joint patrols with our two neighboring countries (Malaysia and Indonesia) so that we could prevent another hijacking of tugboats the way it happened a few days ago,” she added.

In her speech, the President hoped that the travel tax exemption extension she allowed until 2004 would further increase the mobility of people in the Asean region.

The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) is a regional development grouping composed of the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, Brunei Darussalam, Thailand, Singapore, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam and Myanmar.

In a recent report to Malacañang, the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) said the government is on schedule in ably setting up the mechanisms, structures and policies to revitalize the BIMP-EAGA.

Besides spurring regional investments, trading and tourism, the BIMP-EAGA is proving itself as a venue to promote Mindanao and Palawan as the country’s gateway to the Asean region.

The PMS report, which outlined the accomplishment of commitments President Macapagal-Arroyo made during her July 2001 State of the Nation Address, reported the operation of various air and sea routes linking Mindanao and Palawan to trade and tourism centers in the BIMP-EAGA.

Since last year, the Mindanao Economic Development Council (Medco) and other state agencies have pushed confidence building measures with BIMP-EAGA counterparts that led to the opening of air and sea passenger and cargo services between Davao and Manado; Zamboanga, Tawi-Tawi, Sabah and Sandakan; Zamboanga, Tawi-Tawi, and Tawau; and Manila and Brunei Darussalam.

Officials are in talks for the use of Brunei's Muara Port as a transshipment point.

At the same time, business linkages and arrangements have been completed between and among the Brunei Malay Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Maguindanao Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the Business Council of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao.

There are similar discussions with Malaysian investors on ventures in oil palm production and extraction in mainland Mindanao.

Other ongoing trade talks are on the BIMP-EAGA-China and North Asia Relations that include the establishment of an Asean Promotion Center in Seoul, South Korea and the EAGA food supply network for China and North Asia.

A request has also been submitted to extend until 2004 the Uniform Port Tariff Agreement between the Philippines and Brunei.

The PMS report noted that government has pursued joint tourism marketing and promotions through familiarization tours and the development of joint tourism packages.

It has also expanded exchange programs through technical training through the BIMP-EAGA-sponsored Vocational Exchange Program. A group of Indonesian students recently completed the program.

Further, BIMP-EAGA officials have entered into a memorandum of agreement (MOA) that harmonized customs, immigration, quarantine and security (CIQS) rules and policies.

The MOA created a CIQS Inter-Agency Committee and a One-Stop Action Center for CIQS.

More importantly, the BIMP-EAGA has brought about increased cooperation in border security between and among the BIMP member-countries.

The BIMP-EAGA revitalization would practically put back Mindanao and Palawan in the radar screens of regional trading, tourism and security.

GMA to discuss conduct of more joint RP-US military exercises with Bush

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she expects to discuss with United States President George W. Bush, who she said would call her up tonight, the future of the joint RP-US Balikatan military exercises.

"Tonight, President Bush will call me up about many things, But I'm sure the Balikatan will be part of it," the President said.

In her speech before the 2nd Mindanao Budget Summit at Edsa Shangri-La Hotel in Mandaluyong City, the President said the Balikatan 02-1 would end on July 31 as scheduled, but she had instructed Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu to work out the details of the next Balikatan in the Mutual Defense Board meeting in Hawaii on Thursday.

"I told Gen. Cimatu and Secretary Reyes to make sure that it goes down the line," the President said.

“I’ve already said that even through each other’s officials, that while the military training portion of Balikatan 02-1 will end on July 31, we shall start the next Balikatan immediately because the Mutual Defense Board is meeting on Thursday,” she said.

“So by the time that July 31 comes, I hope that they have the next Balikatan already worked out,” she added.

The President said unlike Balikatan 02-1, she wanted the next one to be more geographically spread out.

“As a result of the clamor from people all over the country, this time, the Balikatan will be more geographically spread out unlike this Balikatan, which upon my request, had been concentrated in Basilan,” she said.

The President said she would inaugurate the Basilan Airport, which was renovated by the American Seabees, before July 1 to highlight the many contributions of the foreign troops.

Aside from the airport, the Seabees is constructing the Basilan circumferential road, an infrastructure that Basilan folk aspired for over the years.

Lower electric bills expected in July

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said yesterday Filipinos should expect their electricity bills to further decrease next month.

The President announced in her speech before the Second Mindanao Budget Summit at the EDSA Shangri-la in Mandaluyong City that she had ordered the National Power Corporation (Napocor) since May 8 to reduce their Purchased Power Cost Adjustment.

"When I told Napocor to bring it down to 40 centavos, this will now be reflected in the July billings," she said.

As result, the President said, the Philippines will come down from No. 2 to No. 6 of East Asia's most expensive country in terms of electricity rate.

"We will jump over four other countries in terms of competitiveness," she said.

Energy Secretary Vicente Perez had announced earlier that the decrease would be as much as 20 percent in the billings of power consumers within the franchise area of the Manila Electric Company (Meralco), which covers more than three-fourths of Luzon.

The latest decrease in power rates is on top of the mandated rate reduction of 30 centavos per kilowatt-hour for residential consumers implemented every month since July 2001.

Perez noted that an ongoing review of contracts of independent power producers will be completed by the end of June and if companies were found to have violated the law, they would have to face its consequences.

GMA urges agencies to realign budgets with regional development plans

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has instructed all concerned government departments and agencies to realign their regional budgets based on development programs for each area or region.

The President announced these instructions during her keynote speech yesterday at the Second Mindanao Budget Summit at the Edsa Shangri-la Hotel in Mandaluyong City.

The President said departments and other concerned agencies should not make their own regional programs separate from area-based development plans.

She said she has observed that area-based development plans are not funded because departments are doing their own regional budget priorities.

"They would say 'what are your proposed projects outside the development areas' because they thought development areas would have their special budget from outside their departments, which was not so," she said.

“Let me make it clear. These area development plans must be the regional development plans of the national departments as well,” she added.

The President stressed that the government is pursuing development projects and, at the same time, exercising fiscal discipline as a strategy for progress.

“The fiscal discipline that I exercised last year was the litmus test for the capital markets. That’s the reason why we graduated from negative to stable according to the international credit-rating agencies,” she said.

The President said fiscal discipline has led to the present low rates in interest and inflation as well as the stable peso.

“If we bloat our deficit in the name of more projects, even if it’s for projects in Mindanao, it will be more counterproductive. It will result in one-way inflation, sky-high interest rates and peso devaluation. It would not be worth all those projects,” she added.

GMA pushes for modern key transport facilities in Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has cited the importance of modernizing key transport facilities in Mindanao.

In her speech before the Second Mindanao Budget Summit yesterday at the EDSA Shagri-la in Mandaluyong City, the President cited the establishment of the P2 billion Mindanao International Container Terminal in Misamis Oriental.

The terminal has been designed to meet the increasing demands for cargo movement to and from Cagayan de Oro and Iligan cities.

The President also recalled that she had supervised the formulation of the master plan for the Cagayan de Oro-Iligan growth corridor while she was still Trade and Industry Undersecretary.

A landmark project under the plan was the construction of the Laguindingan Airport. “I am dismayed that it is not yet on the ground,” she said.

She instructed incoming Transportation and Communication Secretary Leandro Mendoza “to give it the highest priority.”

The President also said that work to upgrade the airports in Tawi-Tawi, Cotabato, Pagadian, Butuan and Dipolog should be given immediate consideration.

“The Asian Development Bank, exasperated by the five-year delay (in implementation), actually gave notice of project cancellation. But we have been able to save Dipolog and Butuan and we’re trying to save Pagadian and Cotabato,” she said.

“We do need to have some technical competence to be able to bring development, not only verbose pronouncements and strong words of support and braggadocio,” she stressed.

Meanwhile, the Mindanao Container Terminal Project (MCTP), Phase II Bulk and Food Terminal covers the extension of the existing 300- meter MCTP Phase I berth by 200 meters, the provision of a wharf bulk loader and unloader for easier cargo handling, and the expansion of support facilities and office.

The MCTP Phase II will be located on the shoreline of Macajalar Bay at Tagoloan, some 17 kilometers northeast by road from Cagayan de Oro City.

Its site is within the vicinity of the industries at PHIVIDEDEC Industrial Estate-Misamis Oriental (PIE-MO) adjacent to the MCTP Phase I.

Of the total cost of $40.9 million (P2.043 billion), around 60 percent will be funded under the Special Yen Loan Package (SYLP) while the remaining 40 percent will be shouldered by local counterpart funds.

The MCTP Phase II will cater to bulk cargos like fertilizer, animal feeds, grains, rice/palay and sugar.

The project is also expected to ease the already heavily congested Cagayan de Oro Base Port.

The MCTP Phase II has been designed to handle 2.3 million tons of dry and break bulk cargoes and accommodate the berthing of one 20,000 deadweight ton (DWT) vessel to two 150 DWT vessels.

Supporting facilities include terminal operation building, transit shed, maintenance shop, generator house and canteen and port workers room.

Project construction is expected to begin in 2003 and will be fully operational by 2006.

Lubao spruced up for favorite son's wedding tomorrow

LUBAO, Pampanga – Lubao, the only town in the country to have produced two Philippine presidents, has been spruced up for the historic wedding tomorrow of another favorite son, presidential son and Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel “Mikey” M. Arroyo to beautiful Maria Angela Montenegro.

For one, big streamers are now flying in many parts of the town welcoming and congratulating President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, her son Mikey and future daughter-in-law Maria Angelica.

The improvements are simple and the budget modest compared to the wedding of then-presidential daughter Irene R. Marcos and a scion of a prominent family, Gregg Araneta, also in a historic setting – the old Spanish church of Sarrat in Ilocos Norte, hometown of the late President Ferdinand Marcos.

Lubao will be the main beneficiary of the big event. This is the reason why Lubao folk are awaiting the wedding with great anticipation.

Mrs. Anita Salalila Limson and Vivian Turla Queri, whose houses stand beside the Saint Augustine Church, said they were thankful President Macapagal-Arroyo and Vice Governor Mikey chose their hometown as the site for the wedding.

“We are on a vantage point during the wedding and important event in our town because our houses are adjacent to the church. We are looking forward to this event on Monday,” they chorused.

For one, the nation will be focused once again on the town, they said. Still, some infrastructures in the town like bridges, roads and drainage canals leading to the Saint Augustine Church were improved in time for the wedding.

The 491-year-old Saint Augustine Church is the biggest beneficiary of the event. The church where Mikey's grandfather, President Diosdado Macapagal, was baptized on October 12, 1910, underwent a major facelift, especially its interiors.

To make everybody comfortable during the wedding ceremony which will start at 10 a.m., heavy-duty Carrier and Koppel air-conditioning units have been installed inside the church. Some 600 to 700 people could be accommodated inside during the wedding ceremonies.

The church's front yard, which is about half a hectare, was also given a facelift.

About a dozen split-type air conditioners were also installed at a newly-built fully enclosed white canvas tent with wooden flooring at the church courtyard dwarfed and dotted by centuries old trees, a centuries-old brick house for the priests and several buildings of the church-run Holy Rosary Academy.

To ensure that there will be no power disruption during the wedding and reception, a mobile power generator was installed at the back of the church.

Bishop Paciano Aniceto of the Archdiocese of Pampanga will officiate the wedding. He will be assisted by Fr. Rodolfo de Guzman, parish priest of Saint Augustine Church, and Fr. Pat Lim, parish priest of La Vista Church in Quezon City where the First Family resides.

The colorful wedding ceremonies will highlight the creations of couturier Pitoy Moreno (barong), Joe Salazar (wedding gowns), Ronnie Ong (cake), Tony Parsons of 517 (floral arrangement) and the Ateneo Glee Club Choir and String Minstrels (music).

Key participants in the ceremonies will be the parents of the bride and groom – President Gloria and First Gentleman Mike for Mikey and Rosario “Charito” Arroyo and German Montenegro for the bride.

Main sponsors are former Presidents Corazon Aquino and Fidel V. Ramos, Sen. Loren Legarda Leviste, Georgina de Venecia, wife of Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr.; Enrique Aboitiz, Salvacion Villaraza, presidential brother Diosdado Macapagal Jr., Manila Bulletin Chairman Dr. Emilio Yap, Mario Cruel and Norma Chan.

Mikey's brother, Diosdado “Dato” Arroyo, will be the best man; Emily Montenegro Yupangco, matron of honor; Rose Montenegro and Evangelina “Luli” Arroyo, maid of honor. The secondary sponsors are Alex Macapagal and Joanne Dawns, Greg Montenegro (candle) and Marinella Montenegro (veil) and Rafael Mondragon and Cetrin Datok (cord).

Presidential social secretary Betina Aboitiz will be the overall supervisor of the ceremonies.

After the Church wedding, the newlyweds and entourage and guests will proceed to the church courtyard for the celebration and reception which will approximate a barrio fiesta.

Food for the churchyard reception — consisting of an all-Filipino fare like lechon, halo-halo, crispy crablets, pancit luglog, tibok-tibok and a variety of seafoods — will be prepared by the Plaza and Cabalen. Caterer for the evening reception at Malacañang Palace will be the Manila Hotel and Graitto Forest.

Only a week before their wedding, Mikey Arroyo and Angela Montenegro were visibly happy and “a bit nervous,” said Claire Morales True, herself a native of Lubao, the vice governor's media consultant. The bride and bridegroom were at the Saint Augustine Church last June 18 for the final practice for their wedding ceremonies together with other principal participants of the wedding. “Happy because we have found our perfect partner but a bit nervous because, understandably, we are undergoing this process only once in a lifetime,” the couple said.

After the wedding, Mikey will take a leave as Pampanga's acting governor, duly-elected vice governor and presiding officer of the Sangguniang Panlalawigan. He and Angela will fly to the United States for their honeymoon.

Canlas says GNP, GDP forecast for 2002 achievable

Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas has remained confident that the country would attain the full year forecast of 4 to 4.5 percent gross domestic product (GDP) growth and the 4.5 to 5 percent gross national product (GNP) growth.

In a memorandum for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Acting Executive Secretary Avelino Cruz, Jr. cited a report from Canlas that said the country posted a higher GDP growth compared to four other countries in the Asian region.

These are Malaysia which posted a 1.1 GDP growth; Indonesia, 2.2 percent; Singapore, -1.7 percent; and Taiwan, 0.9 percent.

Only China, which posted a 7.6-percent GDP growth, and South Korea, which had a 5.7-percent GDP growth, registered higher rates than the Philippines.

Canlas has reported that while agriculture grew by 4.4 percent due to the rising production of crops, fishery and forestry, a slowdown is expected because of the occurrence of the El Niño weather phenomenon in the last quarter of the year.

But he said the continued strength in services and a pick-up in industrial growth would offset the slower annual growth of agriculture.

Highlight of the Canlas report showed that:

- The GNP, adjusted for inflation, grew by 4.9 percent, exceeding the government forecast of 4.3 to 4.8 percent. The GNP was buoyed by income from abroad that rose by 22.5 percent and the GDP which grew by 3.8 percent.
- Growth in personal consumption, especially in telecom-munications, reached 3.4 percent. Fixed capital investments increased by 2.8 percent but total investments fell 1.3 percent due to the drawdown of inventories to meet domestic demand.
- Net exports improved 19.1 percent as the decline in exports slowed to 2.9 percent.
- On the production side, services led with a 4.8-percent growth followed by agriculture at 4.4 percent. Industry strengthened at a rate of 1.9 percent due to mining and quarrying that rose 35.8 percent. Construction grew 1.5 percent; food manufacturing, 9.1 percent; and electrical machinery, 13.4 percent. However, the utilities sector dipped by 8.8 percent.
- In services, communications grew 19.6 percent; trade, 5.3 percent; and private services, 5 percent. Among private services, medical services grew by 8.3 percent while business services went up 8.2 percent. Real estate rebounded 6.9 percent while the banking sector, dragged by non-performing loans, continued to suffer.

Presidential son 'Mikey' Arroyo weds Angela Montenegro in simple rites in Lubao

LUBAO, Pampanga — Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel “Mikey” Arroyo, eldest son of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, today exchanged vows with Ms. Angela Montenegro in simple but solemn rites held this morning at the 430-year-old St. Augustine Church here.

The venue of the wedding is the same church where the late President Diosdado Macapagal, the bridegroom's grandfather, was baptized on Oct. 12, 1910.

The President, elegant in her celadon Filipina dress, arrived at the church grounds at exactly 9:30 a.m. With her were the First Gentleman, Mikey, second son Dato, and daughter Evangeline “Luli” Macapagal-Arroyo.

Upon her arrival at the church, the President was warmly welcomed by her cabalens who were gathered at the church grounds since early morning.

The President shook hands with her cabalens and greeted them in Capampangan.

In an interview before the start of the wedding ceremonies, Mikey said that he was both excited and happy over his wedding to Angela. He said because of his excitement, he only slept for three hours the night before.

Mikey also stressed that earlier, his parents asked him to be a “good husband” to Angela. He said that he and Angela would fly to San Francisco, California, on June 28 for their honeymoon.

Former President Fidel Ramos, who was one of the principal sponsors in the wedding, arrived at exactly 9:00 a.m. He wore a barong Tagalog.

Former President Corazon C. Aquino, also one of the principal sponsors, who wore a simple peach attire, was escorted by her son, Tarlac Congressman Benigno “Noynoy” Aquino III.

The bride's father, Herman Montenegro, escorted her daughter Angela, in walking down the aisle. He then “gave away” her daughter to Mikey who waited for them at the altar.

The historic church was packed with some 600 invited guests. The wedding rites were officiated by Bishop Paciano Aniceto of the Archdiocese of Pampanga.

Aside from Mrs. Aquino and Ramos, the other principal sponsors were Don Emilio Yap, Diosdado “Boboy” Macapagal, Jr., Mario Cruel, Enrique Aboitiz, Jr., Mrs. Norma Chan, Mrs. Gina de Venecia, Senator Loren Legarda-Leviste, and Mrs. Salvacion Villaraza.

Pope wishes Mikey and Angela abundance of joy and peace

LUBAO, Pampanga — His Holiness Pope John Paul II today greeted the newly-wed presidential son and Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel “Mikey” Arroyo and Angela Montenegro and wished the couple an abundance of joy and peace in their married life.

The Pontiff’s message, which was sent through Apostolic Nuncio to the Philippines Archbishop Antonio Franco, was read by officiating priest Pampanga Bishop Paciano Aniceto shortly before the prayer of the faithful portion of the concelebrated mass.

“On the happy occasion of their wedding, the Holy Father invokes an abundance of joy and peace upon Juan Macapagal-Arroyo and Angela Montenegro,” the Pope’s message said.

The Pontiff also said he prays that, strengthened and sustained by the grace of the Holy Sacrament of the Holy Matrimony, the Christian union of Mikey and Angela “will always be marked by mutual love, respect and fidelity and by unflinching harmony and confidence in meeting the challenges of family life.”

“As a pledge of God’s continuing assistance, His Holiness cordially imparts to them and to all present at the ceremony his apostolic blessing,” the message added.

According to Bishop Aniceto, the Pope’s message was signed by Cardinal Angelo Sodano, Secretary of State of the Vatican, and by the Papal Nuncio.

The couple exchanged vows this morning at a simple wedding ceremony held at the historic St. Augustine Church here.

The historic church was the same church where the late President Diosdado Macapagal, the bridegroom’s grandfather, was baptized on October 12, 1910.

More than 600 prominent guests attended the Arroyo-Montenegro nuptial. Thousands more of the President’s cabalens gathered at the church grounds to witness the wedding rites touted to be the wedding of the year.

Also present were some movie stars and friends of Mikey in the movie industry as well as local officials and prominent businessmen.

Palace calls on public utility firms to defer planned rate, fee hikes

Malacañang today urged public service and utility companies to try to at least defer any planned rate increase to relieve the people from additional financial burdens.

Acting Press Secretary and concurrent Presidential Management Staff Chief Silvestre Afable, Jr. said that at this time, it is best for all that the best means should be sought so as not to implement any rate increase for public utilities.

In his regular press briefing at Malacañang, Afable said there were rumors that the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System and other utilities wanted to raise their rates.

There are also possibilities that the South and North Luzon Expressways might increase their toll fees.

Afable said that if the reports were true, Malacañang would encourage these public firms to find a win-win solution to the problem.

He said any increases in rates and fees would definitely hurt the pockets of people since consumers later would have to shoulder such increases.

“Well, as we have seen from the effect of the PPA (power purchase adjustment), talaga namang nahihirapan ang mga tao (the consumers really suffered),” he stressed.

“The Palace would urge and encourage all public utility companies to find the best means by which they can relieve the burdens of our people at this time,” he added.

Lubao: a historic town awakens

LUBAO, Pampanga — Unknown to many, Lubao is a giant and historical town in its own right. It is one of the oldest towns in Pampanga, if not in the entire Central Luzon, having been founded by the Malayans. It was already an established settlement with local government headed by Rajah Macabulos when the first Spaniards led by Martin de Goiti set foot on its soil and “founded” it in September 1571.

Composed today of a total of 15,731.11 hectares and 44 barangays – the biggest of any town in the country – with a population of about 130,000, Lubao got its name from the Spaniards who baptized it “Lo Bajo” and eventually corrupted to Lubao.

The Augustian friars led by the Reverend Juan Callegos built the town’s first church, the Saint Augustine Church, the venue of the Arroyo-Montenegro wedding this morning, in 1572.

Records also showed that the first printing press in the country was established in the Saint Augustine Church in 1602.

Lubao became the capital of the Philippine Revolutionary government under General Emilio Aguinaldo in 1898. The Saint Augustine Church became the temporary and emergency seat of the Aguinaldo government when it fled from the Americans in 1898. In fact, one of the leading citizens of Lubao, Don Leandro Ibarra, occupied a prominent position in the revolutionary government, that of Secretary of Interior.

During the Second World War, a big warehouse and bodega in the town served as arsenal of the American Army, thus making it one of the main targets of the Japanese bombing missions.

The infamous Death March passed through Lubao. During those trying times, the people of Lubao exerted efforts to help the marchers by giving them food or medicines at the very risk of their own lives. In fact, many marchers escaped through the support and encouragement of the Lubao people although many more perished due to sickness and hunger.

During the Japanese occupation, underground movements or guerrilla units of the United States Armed Forces in the Far East (USAFFE) and the Hukbo ng Bayan Laban sa Hapon (Hukbalahap) were organized in Lubao and had endless encounters with the Japanese soldiers.

Despite producing in 1961 its first Philippine President, Diosdado Pangan Macapagal, Lubao has not grown by leaps and bounds as expected during his time.

President Macapagal, mainly due to his personal virtues of honesty, commitment, integrity, deep love and fear of God, did not concentrate and pour in projects to his hometown as his successor, Ferdinand Marcos, did for his home province of Ilocos Norte.

But Macapagal could be credited for initiating the North Luzon Expressway and the Epifanio de los Santos Ave. (EDSA) which cut short travel time to Pampanga, triggering faster development of the province much later.

Macapagal's issuance of the Agrarian Reform Law in 1963 also brought improved peace and order not only to Pampanga, then the hotbed of the Hukbalahap, or Huk, movement and communist insurgency, but to the entire Central Luzon region.

The post-Diosdado Macapagal era brought Lubao back to sleep.

With the ascent of Gloria Macapagal Arroyo in 2001 to the Presidency and the eventual election of her eldest son, Juan Miguel "Mikey" Arroyo, as vice governor of Pampanga, Lubao suddenly awakened from its deep sleep.

With a President in the Malacañang Palace and a Vice Governor, now acting Governor, at the Provincial Capitol in San Fernando City, the people of Lubao have high hopes for a faster and better development of their town in the coming years. Already, some projects have been poured into the town by the Arroyo administration. Pampanga's Governor, Manuel "Lito" Lapid is currently in the United States.

The people of Lubao — which now has a youthful mayor, Dennis G. Padilla, and a member of the Provincial Board Member in the person of his mother and former mayor, Lilia G. Pineda — are expecting more from the Arroyo administration to make Lubao, once the capital town of the Philippines and a center of printing in the country during the Spanish times, a premier municipality in the country again.

A simple but elegant wedding

LUBAO, Pampanga — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today witnessed the union in marriage of her son, Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel "Mikey" Arroyo to lovely Ma. Angela Montenegro in simple rites at the 491-year old St. Augustine Parish Church here.

Accompanied by First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo, the President led her family, relatives and friends to the simple yet very much elegant morning wedding.

White flowers, which included roses, chrysanthemums and hydrangeas, highlighted the aisle of the newly refurbished St. Augustine Church as bright lights flooded the church's interior and altar.

Made of brick, sand and stones mixed with egg albumen, the St. Augustine Church in Barangay San Nicolas is said to be the oldest church in Pampanga, and the second oldest church in the Philippines.

Unknown to many, the President's father, President Diosdado Macapagal was baptized in the parish church. The young Macapagal, who was born on September 28, 1910 through midwife Escolastica Romero, was brought to the church by his parents Urbano and Romana.

Fr. Francisco de la Banda conducted Diosdado's baptism on Oct. 12, 1910 when he was only about a month old.

Principal sponsors in the Arroyo-Montenegro nuptial included former Presidents Fidel V. Ramos and Corazon Aquino, Sen. Loren Legarda-Leviste, Don Emilio Yap, Gina de Venecia, Norma Chan and Salvacion Villarasa, Diosdado Macapagal Jr., Mario Cruel and Enrique Aboitiz Jr.

As in keeping with the Filipino motif, the Ninangs were in peach Filipiniana ensembles while the Ninongs were in pina barongs.

The march, led by Mikey's brother Diosdado "Dato" Arroyo, was undertaken to the tune of Con Te Partiro, Pachelbel Canon in D and songs like the Promise.

Other songs during the ceremony included Tanging Yaman, Lead Me Lord, Theme from the Ice Castle, Panunumpa, Anima Christi, The Prayer, Take and Receive and Sa 'Yo Lamang.

Clad in a celadon green terno, the President walked down the aisle unaccompanied as Atty. Arroyo walked in tandem with the bride's mother, Charito Montenegro, while the father of the bride escorted Ma. Angela.

A beautiful sight to behold, Ma. Angela was clad in a gown made of pina with a detachable embroidered and beaded panuelo worn with an old heirloom tiara.

Mikey was in a Barong Tagalog circa 19th century with tiny embroidery evoking the peace dove floating on geometric callado designs on the edges.

Other members of the entourage included Emily Montenegro Yupangco, matron of honor; Rose Montenegro and Evangeline Lourdes "Luli" Arroyo, maid of honor. The secondary sponsors were Alex Macapagal and Joanne Downs (candle), Gregorio Montenegro and Marinela Montenegro (veil), Raphael Mondragon and Katrina Datoc (cord).

After the Church ceremony, the newlyweds and entourage and guests moved on to the church courtyard for the celebration and reception, which appeared like a barrio fiesta.

Caterers Plaza and Cabalen prepared food for the churchyard reception. The food consisted of an all-Filipino fare like lechon, halo-halo, crispy crablets, pancit luglog, tibok-tibok and a variety of seafoods.

The main celebrant of the wedding was Archbishop Paciano Aniceto of San Fernando, Pampanga. Co-celebrants were Msgr. Patricio Lim, Fr. Rodolfo De Guzman, Fr. Dennise Antonio Paez and Fr. Manuel Roux.

During the wedding liturgy, the couple got a pleasant surprise – no less than a blessing from Pope John Paul II, sent through Papal Nuncio Antonio Franco, which was read by Bishop Aniceto.

In his homily, the bishop lectured on the sanctity of the sacrament of marriage while the liturgy touched on the oneness of husband and wife.

After the wedding, Mickey and Angela posed with their families and entourage in a brief photo shoot.

The couple later greeted Lubao townsfolk, who didn't have the chance to see the church rites. Subsequently, the two proceeded to the churchyard reception.

Aside from family, relatives and friends of the bride and groom, Pampanga officials, most of whom are colleagues of Mikey in government, likewise attended the ceremony.

Mikey's colleagues in show business to include Paquito Diaz, Tony Ferrer, Rez Cortez, Al Tantay, Roi Vinzons and movie scribe Aster Amoyo, who was among the liturgical readers, also attended the occasion.

Wedding giveaways at the church were paper and banig fans embroidered with the couple's names and the wedding date.

- Plan to tax cellular phone calls and text messaging not an administration move — DOF
- GMA presents P5-M reward to Abu Sayyaf aide

Plan to tax cellular phone calls and text messaging not an administration move — DOF

Contrary to published reports, the administration has no plans of imposing a tax on cellular phone calls and text messaging, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said today.

In an interview, Camacho said that the plan to tax cellular phone calls and texting actually came from the House of Representatives where there are two pending bills containing such revenue-generating move.

Camacho explained that whenever this is a tax measure proposed in Congress, the Department of Finance (DoF) is asked to give its comments.

He said that in giving its comments on the proposed measure, the DoF has recommended that if approved, 40 percent of the revenues generated should go to the general fund and only 60 percent should be used for the computer literacy education in public schools, which is the intended beneficiary of the measure.

“Ang sinasabi ng DoF ay kung magkaroon ng batas ay sana iyong 40 percent ay ilagay na lang sa general fund (What the DoF was saying was that if there is a law, 40 percent should go the general fund),” Camacho said.

He said that using all of the proceeds from this measure for the government's computer literacy program would not be prudent since the Department of Education is already getting a yearly budget for this particular program.

If approved by Congress, the tax on cellular phone calls and text messaging would raise for the government from P2 billion to P3 billion in additional revenues.

GMA presents P5-M reward to Abu Sayyaf aide

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today personally awarded a P5 million reward to Gardo Ibrahim, the courier and close-in security of Abu Sabaya, who said that the Abu Sayyaf spokesman was killed during the encounter in Sibuco Bay last June 21.

In her brief remarks, President lauded Ibrahim, a military informer, for the timely information he provided to the members of Philippine Navy and Philippine Marines which led to the encounter at sea where three Abu Sayyaf members, including Abu Sabaya, were killed and four others were captured.

“I think now that Abu Sabaya is dead and the Abu Sayyaf is largely neutralized,” the President said during the presentation of the reward to Ibrahim at Malacañang's Reception Hall.

“I would like to congratulate the people, and, of course, I would like to congratulate our soldiers and our Navy men who did such an astounding victory,” President added.

The President also thanked the people of Luuc in Sulu for their continuing support to the government's effort to eliminate the bandit group operating in Mindanao.

Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu presented Ibrahim to the President and the members of media in a simple ceremony at Malacañang this afternoon.

President said Luuc was the same place where former American kidnap victim Jeffrey Schilling was recovered by the military sometime in December last year and the place where an Indonesian national, Ferdinand Joel, was recovered after he escaped from the hands of his Abu Sayyaf abductors.

The President said she believes that the battle on Sibuco Bay off Zamboanga del Norte “was a perfect example of perfect surveillance, intelligence fusion, perfect planning and perfect execution. And I congratulate everyone involved in that.”

Ibrahim served as a courier of Abu Sayyaf Group and eventually became a close-in security of Abu Sabaya.

On June 20 at 8:00 in the evening, Ibrahim’s handler received information about Abu Sabaya requesting for a boat for their escape from Zamboanga del Norte.

According to the military, Ibrahim was with the group riding in the boat when the encounter occurred and he personally witnessed how Abu Sabaya was shot and killed by Navy personnel.

Upon receipt of the information from Ibrahim on the arrival of the group of Sabaya on the shoreline of Parang-parang, operation “Black Archer” was launched by a Special Warfare Group (SWAG) of the Navy and Marines.

The military also informed the President that based on the testimony of Ibrahim, there were actually nine people on board the Abu Sayyaf boat. Two of them, including Ibrahim, are informers of the military.

GMA stresses need to bring jobs, development to SSSB area in Zamboanga Del Norte

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today underscored the need to bring more jobs and community development to the Siocon, Siraway, Sibuco and Balaguian (SSSB) area in Zamboanga del Norte, especially now that the Abu Sayyaf bandit group has been neutralized.

“We have to bring more jobs to the areas where there is so much economic exclusion that the jobless people in those areas are easily led to follow the Syrian song of the easy money coming from being hatchet men and accomplices of the terrorist groups,” the Chief Executive said in her brief remarks after presenting a cash reward of P5 million to Gardo Ibrahim, an Abu Sayyaf courier and close-in security of Abu Sayyaf spokesman Abu Sabaya, in ceremonies held this afternoon at Malacanang.

The information fed by Ibrahim to the military led to the encounter that resulted in the killing of Sabaya and two other Abu Sayyaf members. Four other Abu Sayyaf terrorists were captured in the encounter.

The President said that the fight against terrorism is not only a military fight but it “is also a fight to have jobs available for our people.”

“We need to have jobs available for our people. Jobs that are decent, jobs that are in accordance with the law,” she added.

According to the President, she has already instructed National Anti-Poverty Commission chairperson Teresita Deles to start implementing the community development programs in the SSSB area.

The President recalled that during her speech before the Chinese-Filipino community last June 19, she called on them to “help us fight poverty in the SSSB area.”

President Macapagal-Arroyo noted that aside from the school- buildings they have contributed especially to the country's barangays without school-buildings, the Filipino-Chinese community also contributed funds, "so that we can introduce the Chinese hybrid rice to the SSSB area."

She said that the Chinese hybrid rice is being handled by Presidential Adviser for Job Creation Luis Lorenzo.

On the peace and order situation in Metro Manila, the President stressed that there should be no room for errors.

"People who make blunders will have to go. They have to be discharged and their superiors will have to answer in terms of command responsibility," she said.

The President defined command responsibility as the responsibility of the direct commander for the wrongdoings of his subordinates.

"So, if the one who did the wrongdoing is dismissed then his direct commander is suspended. But each time a unit makes a repetition of the blunder, the command responsibility goes higher and higher," the President said.

The President expressed the hope that with the strict observance of "command responsibility" in which errors are not going to be tolerated, crimes in Metro Manila can be prevented.

GMA working on ways to bring power rates down

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that her more than 18-month-old administration is working on a 10-point program to "look for every way by which we can bring power rates down."

"This is where I am going to be putting my attention in the next several months," the President said in her remarks after presenting a cash reward of P5 million to Gardo Ibrahim, an Abu Sayyaf courier and close-in security of Abu Sayyaf spokesman Abu Sabaya, held this afternoon at Malacanang.

The President said, however, that she and Energy Secretary Vicente Perez need a lot of homework, pencil pushing and desk work to do.

The President underscored the need to make the country's electric rates more competitive.

Right now, she added, the country's electricity rate is the second most expensive in the region.

"The only one more expensive than us is Japan. But in your July billing, when the rates go down, we will move from number 2 to number 6. We will overtake Singapore, Brunei, Hong Kong and, I believe, Cambodia in power rates," she said.

This is the reason why the administration has to do the privatization of the National Power Corporation (Napocor), the President said. "Because Napocor has contributed so much to our budget deficit," she added.

On the Power Purchase Adjustment (PPA) issue, the President said she did not invent it but she inherited it.

She expressed the belief that pointing fingers to solve the PPA issue is not productive at this time.

GMA to reform power sector, vows to concentrate efforts on bringing down electricity rates

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today vowed to devote her time and energy to attending to the issue of electricity rates in order to bring down the country's power rates.

In her speech at the Brotherhood of Christian Businessmen and Professionals (BCBP) Third National Grand Breakfast held this morning at the Intercontinental Hotel in Makati City, the President said she will spend "the next weeks and months to find ways to further bring down power rates."

"Every centavo matters even after the 20 percent cut in our July billings," the President said.

The President said her more than 18-month-old administration is determined to make the country's electricity rates more competitive.

"One of the reasons why I needed to reform the power sector is that I inherited the power sector whose electricity rates are also second highest in Asia, second only to Japan," she said.

The President pointed out that last May 8, she instructed the National Power Corporation to bring down its Purchased Power Cost Adjustment (PPCA), which is a component of the Power Purchase Adjustment (PPA) — to bring it down to 40 centavos.

She added that the cost adjustment will be reflected in the consumers' July billings. This elicited a big round of applause from the Christian businessmen present during the affair.

"When this reduction is reflected in your July billings — where hopefully, the bulk of the Meralco consumers will see it go down by 20 percent — we will move from number two to number six (among countries with high electricity rates)," the President said.

When this happens, the President said "we will overtake Singapore, Hong Kong, Cambodia and Brunei Darussalam."

GMA orders stepped-up hunt for 4 Abu Sayyaf leaders

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the military to step up its hunt for the four remaining leaders of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) as she moved to call off the search for the body of Abu Sayyaf spokesman Aldam Tilao alias Abu Sabaya in Sibuco Bay, Zamboanga del Norte.

But the President stressed that the P50,000 reward to be given to anyone who could recover Sabaya's body continued.

Being hunted by the government are ASG leaders Amir Khadafi Abubakar Janjalani, Jainal Antel Sali, Jr., Isnilon Toton Hapilon and Hamsitaji Marusi Sali.

Speaking before the Brotherhood of Christian Businessmen and Professionals Third National Grand Breakfast this morning at the Intercontinental Hotel in Makati City, the President said “the bulk of our forces (in Mindanao) should go not to finding the dead leader but the four remaining live leaders of the Abu Sayyaf.”

She said the United States Navy Seals have offered to help the government look for Sabaya’s body.

“Let’s have a small unit of ours, so it’s not all being done by the Americans alone,” she stressed.

The President pointed out that the government’s success against the ASG was “the result of our soldiers’ and policemen’s renewed focus on duty, integrity and honor aided by the advance technical expertise and sophisticated equipment of our international allies.”

She said the operation the military, through the Navy’s Special Warfare Group and the Marines, undertook last June 21 against the Sabaya-led ASG band in Sibuco Bay was done with “perfect technology, perfect planning and perfect execution.”

She narrated that a government asset, disguised as a pumpboat operator, involved in the operation were briefed by the soldiers before the firefight.

The asset was briefed and given a necklace which flashes when soldiers turn on their krypton flashlights in their night vision equipment, she said.

When the necklace flickered, the soldiers knew that bearer was “a friendly force and they are not supposed to fire at them,” she added.

The President further said the assets were told that the moment the attack on the ASG began — they should jump into the water.

“They followed it very well. It was a perfectly planned and perfectly executed operation,” she said.

GMA reiterates commitment to good governance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed that her 18-month old administration remained committed to institutionalizing good governance that “can serve as a pathway to peace, justice and the conquest of poverty” in the country.

In a speech before the Brotherhood of Christian Businessmen and Professionals’ (BCBP) Third National Grand Breakfast meeting at the Intercontinental Hotel in Makati City, the President said that since she assumed the presidency in January 2001, she launched a moral revolution from the top by exercising leadership by example.

“Then, as now, I insist that only moral strength can be the invincible foundation of good governance,” she said.

But she added that graft and corruption remained a bureaucratic scourge and a serious challenge to her administration.

“I would be the first to admit that .... graft and corruption rob the people of resources that otherwise could be channeled to priority programs and projects. It erodes the confidence of citizens and entrepreneurs in the integrity of our institutions,” the President said.

She added that graft and corruption have alienated the people from government.

In this connection, the President cited the Philippine Daily Inquirer’s top story on a Pulse Asia survey.

She quoted the story which said “19 percent of Filipinos agree with the statement that this country is hopeless, and if it were only possible, they would migrate to another country and live there.”

“Of course, we have to see the other side of the news. A glass is half full or half empty depending on how you want to see it. Yes, the glass is 19 percent empty, but it is more than half full because 60 percent disagrees with the statement,” the President said.

She, however, stressed that she was not discouraged by the news. But “we must recognize that graft and corruption are among the biggest hindrances to development.”

While the country ranked behind Singapore, Malaysia, and Thailand in good governance, the President said that “we, at least in this administration, are ranking ahead of them in economic growth and we can even grow more if we catch up with them.”

She recalled that her late father President Diosdado Macapagal left her a motto for her public and private behavior which is: “Do what is right, do your best and God will take care of the rest.”

In her speech, the President expressed elation over the BCBP’s dedication to good corporate governance, particularly in its drive to promote the honest payment of taxes.

“I thank you for that because that way, you help clean up the revenue agencies,” she said.

She disclosed that the Bureau of Internal Revenue has established a one-stop-shop inter-agency credit and duty drawback center and that signatures for verification reports have been reduced from six to two.

She also announced that criminal complaints have been filed against 64 firms that fraudulently acquired tax certificates amounting to P5.3 billion.

Further, she signed last year Executive Order 25 forming the Governance Advisory Council, which is working on simplifying the rules and regulations of certain government agencies, and how to raise the country’s international rankings on transparency, business ethics and integrity of business and financial transactions.

“This council is also facilitating and expediting national and corporate governance reforms and soon it will conduct a study on how to strengthen the judicial system to deal with graft and corruption,” she said.

The President said the council has pinpointed four critical elements in a good governance program: The rule of law taking into account the nuisances of our history and culture; a policy regime favoring competition reducing discretion and raising accountability; an effective enforcement mechanisms through professionalized public institutions such as the Philippine National Police; and a responsible citizenry nurturing a culture of compliance, ethics, social responsibility.

Fighting corruption means cutting red tape, she said, adding that over the past years, 12 departments and 19 agencies have pushed measures to reduce processing time for documents and transactions.

For example, the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council has reduced the number of signatories and the processing time for permits from 88 days to 45 days.

The Department of Labor and Employment has reduced by half the processing time for the Overseas Filipino Workers’ documentation from six hours to three hours for land-based workers, and from 12 hours to six hours for sea-based workers.

The President said the government’s computerization and automation program have also deterred acts of graft.

“The E-procurement systems have been adopted by several agencies for equipment acquisition,” she said, adding that this has reduced corruption and has resulted in savings for these agencies.

The President noted that she would like the Securities and Exchange Commission and other government agencies in the Capital Market Development Council “to work closely” with the business sector like the BCBP to ensure that the Code of Corporate Governance is strongly enforced.

“I have instructed them to actively implement the three-year program of corporate governance reforms that they adopted this year,” she said.

She added that the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas issued a circular requiring all the directors in the corporate boards of banks to take an orientation course on corporate governance.

For her part, the President has required all appointed directors in corporate boards of government-owned and -controlled corporations and government financial institutions to also take an orientation course on corporate governance.

“We must fight graft and corruption because morality is an end in itself. In fact, morality is the ultimate end because we were created to know God, to love God, and to serve within this world, so that we can be with Him forever,” she said.

Napolcom has mandate to supervise PNP — Palace

Malacanang said today that it will not interfere in the decision of the National Police Commission (Napolcom) to relieve four regional police directors and three other senior police officers for their alleged failure to stop illegal gambling, particularly the numbers game jueteng, in their respective areas of jurisdiction.

In a telephone interview with Malacañang reporters, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said the Napolcom has the mandate under the law to supervise the operations of the Philippine National Police (PNP).

In a resolution, the Napolcom, chaired by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. relieved Chief Superintendents Edgar Aglipay of the National Capital Region, Reynaldo Berroya of Central Luzon (Region III), Domingo Reyes of the Southern Tagalog Region (Region IV), and Avelino Razon of Central Visayas (Region VII).

The issue here, according to Afable, is the authority and the legitimacy of the actions taken by the Napolcom since the latter has the mandate to supervise the PNP.

“He (Lina) had made an action and I’m sure he can justify and substantiate the reasons behind his action,” Afable said.

Lina told a news conference earlier today that the relief order is contained in a memorandum circular that he and four other Napolcom commissioners had signed.

The Napolcom order came amid reports that illegal gambling activities have reportedly continued to proliferate in various parts of the country.

27 JUNE 2002

- RP, India ink trade, investments pact — DTI
- GMA commitments to 'bankang papel' children fulfilled
- Charter Change can wait, says Palace
- Land Bank grants more credit access to farmers to ease El Niño effects
- Afable says GMA letter not meant to be given to VP Guingona

RP, India ink trade, investments pact — DTI

The recent signing of a bilateral trade agreement between the Philippines and India is expected to enhance trade, investments and economic cooperation between the two countries in the coming years.

Trade Undersecretary Thomas Aquino said the pact would perk up countertrading, the exchange of information on business opportunities and contacts, and business matching activities, among others.

Aquino said the Philippines considered India as one of its top trading partners.

"There is a huge market for Philippine exports to India, it being home to over 1 billion or 15 percent of the world's population, with a large emerging middle class who has growing disposable income," he said.

"Its economic reforms since 1991 have helped the country achieve macro economic stability and a moderate degree of liberalization in its trade, investment and financial sectors," he added.

Aquino said he had talks with Indian Commerce Secretary Dipak Chatterjee on subjects such as the mutual cooperation in small and medium enterprise development and promotion, scientific and technical cooperation in pharmaceuticals, renewable energy sources and agricultural sciences and technology, information technology, and gems and jewelry.

The Philippines initially intended to promote metal parts and components, electronics components including semiconductor devices, processed fruits, ceramics, gloves and mittens, seaweeds and carageenan, fertilizers, chemicals like fatty alcohol, coconut oil, glycerine, and surface active washing or cleaning preparations in India.

The country's exports to India grew from $34 million in 1997 to $71 million in 2001 and balance of merchandise trade has narrowed down from $194 million in 1997 to $166 million in 2001.

The top five Philippine merchandise exports in 2001 included newsprint in rolls and sheets, phosphoric and sulfuric acid, and parts and accessories of motor vehicles. Semiconductor devices were among the top five exports of the Philippines to India in 1999 and 2000.

The top five merchandise imports included buffalo meat, airplanes and other aircraft, wheat and meslin, oil cake and other solid residues.

Through parallel importation, the Philippines bought branded medicines from India for the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI)-initiated Presyong Tama, Gamot Pampamilya (Right Price, Medicine for the Family) program.

A study by the Philippine International Trading Corp, a DTI agency, showed that medicines sourced from other countries including India, were up to 10 times cheaper than prices of drugs sold commercially.

The program on half-priced branded medicine was one of the major poverty alleviation goals that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo committed in her State of the Nation Address in July, 2001.

In a report, the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) said that all 73 Department of Health-retained hospitals have been stocked with selected low-cost quality drugs.

The drugs included Adalat Retard and Tenormin for hypertension; Bactrim Adult and Septran for infections; Daonil for diabetes; and Ventorlin and Becoride for asthma.

The PMS report added that all 249 National Food Authority-deployed rolling stores in the National Capital Region and 61 local government hospitals have started selling the low-priced quality medicines.

As of June 7, about P6.22 million worth of medicines were sold in government outlets, the report said.

GMA commitments to ‘bankang papel’ children fulfilled

The administration has fulfilled its commitments to the victims of the landslide tragedy in Payatas, Quezon City as pledged by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered before a joint session of Congress on July 23, 2001.

In a report to the President, coursed through the Presidential Management Staff (PMS), Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) said the more than 400 families comprising three organizations of Payatas landslide victims have expressed their “sincere thanks” to the President for the assistance that the government has extended to them.

When she delivered her first SONA, the President invited three children from Payatas—Jayson Banogoon, 10 years old; Erwin Dolera, 9 years old; and Jomer Pabalan, 10 years old—and three others who have figuratively floated a paper boat (bangkang papel) on the Pasig River containing their appeal to the President for help so that their dreams of a better life can be realized.

The President used the bangkang papel metaphor to emphasize the challenge that she hurled to the people and the nation to work together for poverty alleviation and national development.

Soliman said that as pledged by the President, the government, through the DSWD and the Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) program, has extended educational and livelihood assistance not only to the members of the three organizations of Payatas victims but also to other urban poor associations in Payatas.

She said the six children invited to the SONA were provided with educational assistance by the government and private benefactors for school year 2001-2002.

The families of the six children, Soliman said, were also provided with P10,000 each as seed capital for livelihood projects.

Another 400 elementary and high school students coming from families directly affected by the Payatas tragedy were given P10,000 each, also for livelihood projects, under the “PGMA-Payatas Scholarship Program. The program is directly funded by the President’s Social Fund.

Soliman said that the remaining 765 families were given livelihood assistance through their organizations, the Samahang Tunay ng Phase II Lupang Pangako, the Samahang Magkakapitbahay ng Payatas and the July 10 Payatas Victims Organization which received P400,000 each as capital for their livelihood projects.

Technical assistance to the families and their organizations were also provided by the DSWD and two community-based non-governmental organizations, the Kristong Hari Foundation and Kalipunan at Damayan ng mga Mahihirap (KADAMAY), Soliman said.

According to Soliman, the DSWD has also coordinated with the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC), the National Housing Authority (NHA) and the local government units in resolving housing and land-related issues raised by the victims of the Payatas tragedy.

She also assured the President that the DSWD, in coordination with NGOs and private foundations would continue to provide educational assistance to the more than 400 children of Payatas to help them complete their education and ensure a better future for their families.

Charter Change can wait, says Palace

Although there are provisions in the present Constitution that need revisions, this is not yet the proper time to discuss them, Malacanang said today.

In his regular press briefing, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said that the country is still saddled with economic and social problems that discussions on charter changes are not advisable at the moment.

“This has to be put off to a later date in the future when we, as a nation, can really have the time and the leisure to tackle this issue,” Afable said.

According to Afable, it has always been the stand of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that there are changes that could be done in the charter but not at this time.

On the relief of seven top-ranking officials of the Philippine National Police (PNP) for their inability to stop rampant gambling, particularly jueteng, in their areas of jurisdiction, Afable said that the President has continued to keep her hands off the issue.

“She will continue to leave it to the National Police Commission (Napolcom) to undertake the process by which this matter will be investigated and resolved,” Afable said.

Afable also explained that Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. in his capacity as chairman of the Napolcom, has acted on the matter based on principle, and not of political expediency.

“He (Lina) has been very vocal about the anti-jueteng campaign and he just decided to put his neck on the line. And he has acted within his authority,” Afable said.

Land Bank grants more credit access to farmers to ease El Niño effects

The Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP) has opened more windows for credit access to small farmers in the bank’s bid to help mitigate the negative effects to agriculture of the El Nino weather phenomenon.

A long dry spell is experienced during the El Nino, which officials expect to begin in September. This weather imbalance is a bane to farmers.

In a report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, LBP president Gary Teves said the bank has raised — to 65 percent by the end of 2004 from 38 percent in 2001 — the share of agriculture in the bank’s loan portfolio.

“As of March 2002, the LBP’s outstanding loans to the agriculture and agrarian sector reached P41.3 billion. This represents 41 percent of our total loan portfolio,” he said.

For 2002, the bank has targeted a P47.8-billion credit exposure to the priority sectors.

Loan releases will come from the implementation of various loan programs for the different sectors such as cooperatives, countryside financial institutions, participating financial institutions, small and medium enterprises (SME), local government units (LGU) and other clients in the agricultural business.

Teves said the LBP has also identified accounts for incremental loan releases, notable of which is the P1.3-billion additional loan intended for the National Food Authority.

This would be used for the financing requirements for local procurement and rice importation to fill in the country's required buffer stock, both for food security and prize stabilization, before the lean season.

He said the LBP has likewise allocated more resources to agri-infrastructure and agri-related activities, agri-business projects and SMEs.

Teves noted the P800-million rediscounting line to the Quedan Rural Credit and Guarantee Corporation (Quedancor) to bankroll the Ginintuang Masaganang Ani Countrywide Assistance for Rural Employment and Services (GMA Cares) and the Hybrid Rice Cultivation Project.

On top of this, Teves said the bank is evaluating the request of Quedancor for another P800-million rediscounting line for in-bred rice, hybrid corn and coffee production.

He added that the bank has streamlined its lending procedures, reducing the processing time for production loans from 75 to 45 working days and lessening loan signature requirements from 18 to 10.

He further noted the bank's implementation of flexible debt restructuring terms for cooperatives by providing credit relief to coops with past due accounts such as the condonation of penalties, capitalization of interest, reduction of interest on a case-to-case basis, extension of loan maturity dates.

After loan restructuring, the LBP would grant additional working capital to cooperatives and would take a pro-active approach in extending support to coops experiencing organizational difficulties.

Other pro-farmer measures included the:

- Packaging of a special credit facility for the repair and rehabilitation of irrigation systems at a lower interest rate of 10 percent per annum;
- Allocation of P500 million for borrowers who will build up small irrigation systems and shallow tube wells;
- Grant of loans to LGUs for the purchase of heavy equipment for use in building small water impounding units for farmers;
- Focus on marine and aquaculture projects such as bangus and tilapia production and municipal fishing;
- Encouragement of cooperative members to plant early maturing varieties and root crops that thrive during the El Niño.

Afable says GMA letter not meant to be given to VP Guingona

Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. today said his office made a mistake in releasing to the media a letter of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo offering Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. the position of Adviser on Foreign Affairs.

Afable said: "It was a mistake. I thought that this was a letter meant for release. It was a letter not supposed to be sent."

He said he should have double-checked such a “sensitive letter,” adding that what happened “was an inadvertence on the part of my office.”

He added that he got the letter from the Office of the Executive Secretary this morning.

The letter “was supposed to be torn up because it was not really meant to be sent to the Vice President,” he told reporters in an interview after a meeting between the President and Guingona early last night.

“I do not know the background of the preparation of the letter,” he said, adding that the letter was signed by the President “but it was not meant to be sent” to Guingona.

He added that the President admonished the Office of the Press Secretary to be more circumspect the next time. “And we intend to do that,” Afable said.

GMA proclaims July 2 special non-working holiday in Pasig

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has declared July 2 as a special non-working holiday in Pasig City.

In signing Proclamation No. 210 last June 19, the President said the day marks the city's 429th foundation anniversary.

The President said the holiday would give the residents of Pasig City the chance to "celebrate this milestone in their city's history with fitting ceremonies."

Historically, Pasig was one of the oldest towns in the Philippines, having been established in 1572 by early Spanish settlers.

Pasig became a major pueblo with an initial population of 2,000. In 1582, it was established as an encomienda under the administration and supervision of the alcalde mayor of Tondo.

With its strategic location, the town had been the site of revolutionary conflicts such as the Spanish-British war of 1762 and the staging ground for sporadic revolts in the Tagalog region during the Philippine revolution of August 1896.

When the American forces arrived in the country, the town was placed under military rule that paved the way for the establishment of a civil government.

On June 11, 1901, Pasig became part of the newly created Province of Rizal through the Philippine Commission Act No. 137, and became its capital town until 1975. However, in 1904, for seven months, San Felipe Neri town in Mandaluyong became the provincial capital.

But afterward, Pasig continued to be Rizal's premier town until 1975 when the Metro Manila Commission was created, integrating four towns and 13 cities, including the town of Pasig.

On December 8, 1993, former President Fidel V. Ramos signed Republic Act No. 7829 converting Pasig into a highly urbanized city.

The city is composed of 30 barangays, occupying a total land area of 3,100 hectares (31 kilometers) or about 4 percent of the total land area of Metro Manila.

Today, Pasig City has transformed itself into one of the major urbanized areas in Metro Manila, a bustling metropolis and a financial hub.

GMA orders mobilization of PMMA reserve officers for Barangay, Sangguniang Kabataan polls

SAN NARCISO, Zambales – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked Northern Command chief Maj. Gen. Rodolfo Garcia to enlist and mobilize the reserve officers of the Philippine Merchant Marine Academy (PMMA) for the forthcoming Barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan (SK) elections on July 15, 2002.

Speaking at the 179th Commencement Exercises of the PMMA here, the President said this is in keeping with the requirement to have an honest, orderly and peaceful elections this July. The members of the Philippine National Police and Armed Forces of the Philippines are deputized for these events.

The President said the PMMA has adhered to highly exacting global standards in training certification and watch keeping.

The President said that according to the International Standards Organization (ISO 9001), the PMMA graduates are among the most sought after in their fields.

“You have a 95 percent average passing in the national board exams and all of the passers are immediately given jobs by international shipping companies,” the President said.

The President also said that the PMMA is the source of 10 percent of the 50,000 Filipino deck and engine officers working in various shipping companies.

“It is difficult to equal this record,” the President said.

The Philippine government, the President said, has been able to guarantee the continued employment of Filipino sea-based workers.

She said the Philippines’ membership in the 32-member council of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) affirms the resolve to uphold all conventions, protocols and resolutions of this international body.

The power of sea-based Filipino workers lies not only in their competence but also in their vital contribution to the Philippine economy.

Sea-based workers gave the country P2 billion in annual remittances.

“Every year, P6 billion are sent to us by overseas Filipinos. And out of the that, one-third comes from sea-based workers,” the President said.

Out of the 235 graduates this year, nine men and a woman, Marycel Callejo, graduated cum laude.

All of them were commissioned as ensigns in the Philippine Navy.

PNP revamp is rehearsal of strict adherence to ‘command responsibility’ dictum, says GMA

SAN NARCISO, Zambales – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today that the ongoing major revamp at the Philippine National Police (PNP) is a “rehearsal” on the very strict interpretation of the rule of command responsibility in the drive against criminality, including illegal gambling, that she has earlier ordered.

Speaking at the 179th Commencement Exercises of the Philippine Merchant Marine Academy (PMMA) at the school’s parade grounds here, the President said “this is a rehearsal for a bigger challenge of applying the rule of command responsibility on kidnapping and illegal drugs.”

The President was referring to the recent order of Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. relieving seven top-ranking PNP officials for their alleged failure to curb illegal gambling, particularly the numbers game jueteng, in their respective jurisdiction.

The President, however, congratulated the PNP for the strong measures they have implemented to neutralize the terrorist cell in Northern Luzon.

She said the country's image abroad is somewhat diminished by security concerns here and this affects overseas Filipino workers, including the Filipino seafarers.

The President said that resolving the peace and order problem is as important to her as getting the country back on the growth path "because peace and development always come together."

"These are realities and the challenges of the world as you, young men and one woman, are entering the world of the great Filipino workforce," the President told the graduating students.

According to the President, the PMMA graduates are fortunate because they are assured of immediate jobs.

"When you sail out of our shores, keep in mind that you represent a nation renowned for workers of skills, industry, competence and integrity on the job," the President said.

The Philippines is one of the world's top suppliers of seafarers. Thousands of Filipino seamen are now manning ocean-going vessels around the world.

GMA urges PMMA grads, people to support gov't counter-terrorism campaign

SAN ISIDRO, Zambales – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the people to go on supporting the government's bid to rid the country of terrorist groups, as the world's powerful countries like the United States are looking up with pride in the Philippines' all-out campaign against the Al-Qaeda-backed Abu Sayyaf terrorists.

In a speech before 235 Philippine Merchant Marine Academy (PMMA) graduates here, the President said the peace and order problem remained a vital administration concern because the growth path of the country relied on the peace and development climate.

Keynoting the PMMA's 179th commencement exercises, the President said that last June 24, United States President George W. Bush called up and congratulated her for her steadfast desire to root out the Abu Sayyaf.

She said Bush was happy over recent developments and credited the Philippines as very active in the fight against global terrorism while standing up for homeland security.

She also reiterated the help Bush offered to step up the anti-terrorism campaign of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration. She added that Bush considered ongoing military operations against the Abu Sayyaf in their lairs in Mindanao as successful.

The President said Bush further informed American legislators that he called her to reiterate the US government's support for the fight against the Abu Sayyaf in the Philippines.

But she told Bush that what the Philippines needed was the further training of Filipino soldiers to keep them abreast with modern weaponry and strategies to flush out terrorism.

She said Bush was elated over her role in counter-terrorism. "She has proven she is with us (in the war against terrorists)," the President quoted Bush. "And I want to thank her for her leadership," Bush said of her.

“This is how the most powerful leaders of the world look at us. This is how the world looks at us and I pray that the Filipinos could have the same faith in my administration,” the President told the PMMA graduates.

Two days ago, Bush again said the Philippines had the most successes in ending global terrorism. “One of the recent successes is (President) Gloria (Macapagal) Arroyo in the Philippines,” Bush was quoted as saying.

“She’s a part of our vast coalition. She said early on we need to get after the Abu Sabaya group and she did it. And to her credit, it looks like the leader (Abu Sayyaf spokesman Aldam Tilao alias Abu Sabaya) has made his demise. The Philippines is better off for that and so is the world,” she said, quoting Bush.

Earlier, the President ordered the Armed Forces of the Philippines to call off and leave to an able military unit the search and recovery work on the body of Abu Sabaya.

She said the military’s bigger force should scour the jungles of Sulu for the remaining four leaders of Abu Sayyaf.

These leaders included Amir Khadafi Abubakar Janjalani, Jainal Antel Sali, Jr., Isnilon Toton Hapilon and Hamsitaji Marusi Sali.

“Sabi ko, imbes na hinahanap ang patay, hanapin ninyo ang buhay. Hanapin ninyo ang apat na buhay na (Instead of looking for the dead Sabaya, let us look for the remaining living) Abu Sayyaf leaders,” the President said, adding that the military had started doing that.

The President said the military would continue to hunt down the Abu Sayyaf leaders and members until they were all accounted for.

The PMMA is the country’s oldest marine school. It was established on April 5, 1890 under its old name Escuela Nautica de Manila.

During the American time, it became the Nautical School and in 1913, it was renamed the Philippine School of Arts and Trades. Later in 1963, it became the Philippine Nautical School.

In January 1968, the school was transferred to Fort Bonifacio in Makati and transferred to its most recent home, the 60-hectare complex here, on January 31, 1998.

GMA unveils 10-point program to further bring down cost of electricity

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today unveiled a 10-point comprehensive program aimed at “squeezing blood from stone” and bringing down further the cost of electricity to consumers.

In her remarks at the signing of the wholesale electricity spot market (WESM) at the Heroes Hall in Malacañang, the President also promised to lower the cost of electricity by P1.30 starting next month.

The President said she has also issued an executive order on tax equalization as required by the Senate in order to enable the Power Sector Reform Law to push through.

Two days ago, she said the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) promulgated its decision regarding petition of the National Power Corporation (Napocor) wherein the latter had asked for a 17-centavo increase in its rates.

She said the ERC has decided that Napocor should instead reduce its rate by six centavos.

In the same occasion, the President ordered the Napocor to follow that, not within 30 days, but within one week in order to get more relief.

In her 10-point program, first, the President said the government wants to reflect the true cost of service which has been happening now with what ERC did through the unbundling of Napocor and its cease and desist order to Meralco sometime ago which has resulted in lower electricity rate this month.

In view of her instruction to Napocor last May 8, the President said the people will see further reduction of electricity rates starting next month.

Under the first point, the President said the government shall ensure that the consumers shall only be charged the true and fair cost of electric services and only power services they have enjoyed and used.

She said the government will seek the elimination of charges from onerous contracts, stressing the need to review the IPP contracts and other contracts that the ERC is studying as well as regulatory loopholes such as the valuation and appraisal of assets.

Second, she said, is to introduce the declining block rate structure by introducing special pricing incentives for large consumers of electricity specially business and industries, to reduce cost of over capacity and encourage expansion in manufacturing and commerce.

“The more they use, the less unit cost they pay, therefore it will be cheaper to produce more products. Also, therefore they will use more electricity and that will reduce the excess capacity which is the source of the PPA,” she said.

Third, the President said we will optimize the utilization mix of NPC power plants by finding out the different efficiencies of the different plants.

While it requires a lot of homework, the President said she intends to stay put in Malacañang to help do the homework.

Further, she said the government will review and upgrade the country’s power development plan to better distribute generation capacity in relation to load centers, upgrade transmission system and minimize the vulnerability of the power grids from blackouts.

This move will include the transfer of power barges and matured build-operate-transfer (BOT) plants to regions where they can be better utilized and the enhancement of Napocor generation companies by providing them with better markets and quality supply contracts.

Fourth, the President saw the need to accelerate the operation of the wholesale electricity spot market (WESM) to provide a trading platform for power price competition and give power users a fair and transparent way to determine realistic power cost.

Fifth, the President said there must be an acceleration in the implementation of open access, which means that big buyers who buy more than 1 megawatt can choose the generating company they want to buy from.

While the law says that it should be done in four years, she said the open access implementation can be accelerated because consumer choice will certainly provide for greater competition and lower prices.

Correspondingly, she said the government will provide consumers with genuine supplier alternative through competition and encouragement of new players in the electric industry power sector.

Sixth, the President called for the promotion of efficient performance of distribution utilities by prescribing measurable standards of consumer service, shift to new rates setting methods that better protect consumers, assure integrity in procedures, and close all loopholes without necessarily denying the utilities’ right to earn the legal and fair return for their investment and services.

The seventh point of the measures is to strengthen and consolidate rural electric cooperatives, seek long-term solutions and strengthen them as distribution utilities in preparation for deregulation as mandated by the Electric Power Industry Reform Act.

“It is hoped that strengthened electric cooperatives will be able to bring down retailed electric rates in the rural areas,” she said.

Eighth, the President sought the review of IPP contracts and reduce contract cost, saying that whatever is completed in the review must already be submitted so that the government can begin the renegotiations.

“We will review the contracts of operating agreement by benchmarking for competitiveness, fairness and onerousness in the context of when the contracts were signed,” she said, adding that the government will also reduce the stranded cost through renegotiation, restructuring or non-renewal of Napocor’s IPP contracts as may be necessary.

Ninth, the President proposed the further exploration of financial engineering methods which the government has been doing and has resulted in the reduction of Napocor’s purchased power cost adjustment (PPCA) to 40 centavos.

This action, she said, will reflect in the electricity bills starting next month.

Lastly, the President said the government will help enhance the institutional capability of the ERC and encourage it to assert its mandate.

Also in her speech, the President noted what her administration has done in more than one year such as the creation of the Transmission Company (Transco), the Power Sector Asset Liabilities Management (PSALM) Corporation which will take care of non-performing assets and dispose them in the most efficient way, and the reconstitution of ERC.

- Palace to come up with a 'win-win' solution to the San Roque dam row
- PSG renews vow to protect President; reaffirms support to GMA's peace, development goals
- GMA urges speedy social service, economic program delivery in conflict areas
- GMA urges PSG to uphold security of nation

$100-M World Bank loan to fund KALAHI program

The government's poverty alleviation program Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) will get a big push with the impending approval of a $100-million World Bank loan by the Investment Coordinating Committee (ICC) of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA).

The KALAHI program is considered as a springboard for uplifting the lives of poor urban and rural folk throughout the country, empowering communities through enhanced participation in barangay governance.

Program implementation would fall under the Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

Rolando Tungpalan, NEDA assistant director-general for national development, said the KALAHI program — to be carried out in six years starting 2002 — embodied President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's poverty reduction goals.

However, the only component that needed firming up by the ICC was the multi-year budget cover for the program.

Tungpalan affirmed that the ICC would eventually give its nod, subject to the further determination of the budget cover.

"The budget requirement of the project may exceed the DSWD budget ceilings in future years," he said.

If the project's budget requirement goes higher than the DSWD budget ceiling, the government runs the risk of sacrificing other projects in its ongoing portfolio for the KALAHI to meet its full budget cover.

"To avoid this, the ICC is now working on a corresponding annual budget requirement for the project that must be represented in the national government budget," Tungpalan said.

The KALAHI program will involve the people in the barangay in designing, implementing and managing poverty reduction activities.

It consists of five components: social preparation, mobilization and community organization; capacity building and technical support; seed fund for community development; implementation support; monitoring and evaluation, studies and advocacy.

Under the component on seed fund for community development, Barangays will be given P300,000 grants for anti-poverty projects.

Palace to come up with a 'win-win' solution to the San Roque dam row

Malacanang has assured the families affected by the multi-billion dollar San Roque Multi-Purpose Dam Project (SRMDP) in Pangasinan and Benguet of adequate compensation package, relocation sites and livelihood projects, saying that it is exerting all efforts to come up a “win-win” solution to the problem.

Undersecretary Rene Diaz, presidential assistant for North Luzon, said that “we do not have a plus-minus situation here where one group will benefit while the other group suffers.”

“Our objective is to arrive at a win-win situation for all parties involved,” Diaz said.

Diaz, along with officials of the SRMDP and the National Power Corporation (Napocor), recently conducted a dialogue with representatives of the families affected by the project, including those coming from the upland barangays of Dalupirip and Ampucao, in Itogon, Benguet who are opposed to the project.

He said that families not previously classified as part of those directly affected by the project would be properly compensated if they are forced to leave their homes as a result of the project.

According to Diaz, some 60,000 families, mostly from the farmlands in the lower parts of Pangasinan, Nueva Ecija and Tarlac, will directly benefit from the project through improved irrigation system.

Aside from the improved irrigation system, Diaz said, the project would also help solve the perennial flooding caused by the Agno River, which affects at least 16 towns in Pangasinan and Tarlac, causing losses in the millions of pesos due to lost harvests.

Diaz said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has instructed him to address the concerns of all groups, whether they are lowlanders or highlanders, stressing that it is possible to provide for the welfare of one group without sacrificing the welfare of the other.

He said that the President has also made it clear that sustainable development is not a mere lip service but a statement of policy, adding that any development effort must take into consideration the environmental impact of a project.

“The key is not only to lessen the environmental costs, but to institute mechanisms wherein the project implementers will take an active role in preserving the environment,” Diaz said.

According to Diaz, the San Roque dam offers a long-term solution to the siltation problems of the Agno River. He said that income derived from the project would be channeled to the Agno River Integrated Watershed Management Program and will be used to fund the reforestation along the river’s banks.

The SRMDP is a 200-meter high, 1.2-kilometer embankment dam on the Agno River spanning the municipalities of San Manuel and San Nicolas, Pangasinan, with a reservoir of 12.8 square kilometers extending into the province of Benguet.

The project provides year-round irrigation for about 70,800 hectares of farmlands in Pangasinan, Nueva Ecija and Tarlac.

PSG renews vow to protect President; reaffirms support to GMA’s peace, development goals

Presidential Security Group (PSG) Commander Col. Hermogenes Esperon Jr. today ensured the unit’s continued care and protection for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, as he pledged the group’s support to the Chief Executive’s bid to bring the nation closer to a regime of lasting peace, justice and prosperity.

In a speech during the commemoration of the PSG’s 104th founding anniversary, Esperon said the PSG recognized the President’s determination in winning the war against poverty, criminality and terrorism.

“We commit to be with you everywhere – even in former rebel camps and anytime as you work long hours for glorious ends. We pledge to you: Pangulo, Sagot ng Grupo (The President, Our Responsibility),” Esperon told the President, who graced the anniversary celebration at the PSG Grandstand, Malacañang Park.

He noted that the PSG, since its birth on June 23, 1898, has committed itself to protect the President of the Philippines at all cost.

In 1986, the same commitment became the PSG pledge. Every PSG member has firmly vowed to perform his entrusted duty to protect the President to the best of his ability and with the highest sense of courage, valor and patriotism.

Esperon said a PSG member is ready to make the supreme sacrifice when it becomes necessary.

Beyond anything else, a PSG member’s commitment lies in the noble quest of living up to the genuine meaning of the profession of arms and serving the realization of the dreams and aspirations of the Filipino nation, he noted.

He added that the same pledge has become “the ultimate source of strength and grim determination” of a PSG member “when the going gets tough.”

He stressed that from February to December last year, the PSG secured the President in 138 provincial sorties.

Within the first three months of 2002, the President had 121 provincial engagements, all of which were successfully covered by the PSG.

Besides this, the PSG was at the President’s side in an average of 1.3 engagements she made in Metro Manila.

“That we have come through brings us fulfillment and unqualified pride,” Esperon said.

“Certainly, we believe that securing the President is to the well-being of the whole nation. And we can only thank all of you that are here today for the encouragement and guidance and the operational as well as the organizational support that you have extended to the PSG in order to sustain our operations,” he added.

Among those who attended the celebration were Defense Secretary Angelo T. Reyes, National Police Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane Jr., Acting Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Gregorio Camiling Jr., Deputy Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya, Air Force Chief Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Army Chief Lt. Gen. Dionisio Santiago, Acting Flag Officer in Command Pastor Ramos, Gen. Leo Alvez, Gen. Jose Calimlim, Deputy Executive Secretary Waldo Flores, Public Estates Authority Manager Ernest Villarreal, Philippine Ports Authority Manager Alfonso Cusi, Undersecretary Susana Vargas of the Office of the President and Evangeline Lourdes “Luli” Arroyo.

This year’s parade of PSG troops was highlighted with the demonstration of the unit’s capability in protecting the President and members of the First Family and the seat of government as well.

Fourteen PSG personnel including three civilian friends of the group received various medals and citations from the President.

The awardees included: (Military Merit Medal) Airman First Class Randy Demegello, Seaman 1 Antonio Tambal, Staff Sergeant Percival Perante and Police Officer 2 Richard Daguman; (Plaque of Merit) Captain Emil Cruz, Senior Inspector Lilian Castillo, Sergeant Gerardo Calar, Senior Police Officer 2 Bartolome Marigondon, Airwoman First Class Barby Cabanilla, Police Officer 2 Edeliza Egan and Carolina Bartolo; (Plaque of Recognition) Don Antonio Martel, Dr. Metodio Palaypay and Precy Asuncion.

For the past year, from June 2001 to date, the PSG effectively and efficiently performed a total of 739 local and foreign protective security operations, including providing protective details to visiting heads of state and ambassadors.

The PSG has also involved itself in environmental protection and conservation activities with the planting of 1,062 fruit and non-fruit bearing trees in Malacañang Park.

The unit also carried out a Solid Waste Segregation Program, part of which is the Health Awareness Program dubbed as “Bantay Kalusugan.”

GMA urges speedy social service, economic program delivery in conflict areas

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for the immediate delivery of social services and economic programs in conflict-affected areas following military operations.

The President stressed this during the first en banc meeting of the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) at the State Dining Room in Malacañang.

She said communities in conflict areas should right away benefit from the anti-poverty Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHÍ) program.

The KALAHÍ is a project under the Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services being implemented by the Department of Social Welfare and Development.

“The people must feel that governance is at work (in their areas),” the President said.

The KALAHÍ program is considered as a springboard for uplifting the lives of poor urban and rural folk throughout the country.

It empowers communities through enhanced participation in barangay governance.

The program involves the people in the barangay in designing, implementing and managing poverty reduction activities.

It consists of five components: social preparation, mobilization and community organization; capacity building and technical support; seed fund for community development; implementation support; monitoring and evaluation, studies and advocacy.

Besides presiding over the NAPC meeting, the President officiated the oath of office of 11 new representatives from the basic sectors.

Sworn in were 11-year old Paul Bernard Sumaya of the Samahang Nagkakaisa ng mga Karapatan ng mga Bata sa Tondo; James Sian, PNRC; Richard Arceno, Bigay-Buhay Multi-Purpose Cooperative; Susanito Tesiorna, Informal Sector Coalition of the Philippines; Zoilo dela Cruz Jr., National Congress of Unions in the Sugar Industry of the Philippines; Fidel Rancio, Urban Land Reform Task Force; Marcelino dela Cruz, Federation of Senior Citizen Association of the Philippines; Rizalino Segundo, Samahan sa Cagayan Valley; Oscar Francisco, Philcos-Visayas; Jose Loreto Proclamos Jr., Misamis Occidental Federation of Coops; and Mary Lou Caharlan, Pilipina National.

They would assist government in creating policies and programs for the poor.

NAPC lead convenor Teresita Deles said the success of the President’s anti-poverty programs would lie in the cooperation and participation of the poor from the basic sectors.

Republic Act 8425 or the Social Reform and Poverty Alleviation Act provided the policy framework by which basic sector participation at all levels of social, political and economic decision-making shall be pursued.

The law created the NAPC, a unified body tasked to oversee all government anti-poverty programs. It also institutionalized basic sector participation in the highest level of decision-making and governance.

For the past months, the NAPC has worked on establishing the organizational landscape on which government and basic sector partnership towards social reform and poverty alleviation could be pursued.

GMA urges PSG to uphold security of nation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Presidential Security Group (PSG) for giving it their all in ensuring the safety of the President of the Republic of the Philippines and the First Family.

But the President said the PSG's responsibilities have become broader in time, particularly after the September 11 terrorist attacks in the United States.

In her speech during the 104th anniversary celebration of the unit at the PSG Grandstand in Malacanang Park, the President said that over and above the PSG's duty to protect the President and the First Family, the group should also protect the nation.

"You have other additional duties to be assigned by the President given the exigencies of the moment, given the material conditions of the specific time in our history," she said.

Protecting the nation has become one of the critical tasks of the PSG, she noted, adding that this extra responsibility became a need to fight global terrorism.

In response to continuing challenges, the President said she has prompted PSG Commander Col. Hermogenes Esperon to send some of his senior officers to work on administration's programs in various part of the country.

She said the PSG has successfully hurdled many challenges from the time of the arrest of Congressman Romeo Jalosjos, an extra assignment for then PSG Commander Gen. Jose Calimlim from President Fidel V. Ramos.

"I told (Col.) Jun (Esperon) – you have been a deputy of Gen. Calimlim, I think you have to revive that old machinery so you can do a special assignment for me. It was perfect because he happens to be the head of the special task force on Congressmen Jalosjos," she said.

The President said she sent Col. Delfin Bangit to Sorsogon to oversee the government's anti-insurgency drive in the province.

"And the people there said 'what a big signal that you sent the head of your Presidential Escort to Southern Luzon Command in order to oversee' so to speak, as the representative of the President of the Philippines, the anti-insurgency drive," she said.

From that time, there have been seven successful anti-insurgency campaigns in Sorsogon.

The President also cited Col. Charlie Holganza who, despite being a PSG officer, also held a position in the Presidential Anti-Organization Crime Council.

GMA declares special non-working hoilday in Valenzuela

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has declared July 11, as a special non-working holiday in Valenzuela City.

The President, in signing Proclamation No. 209 last June 19, said the day will commemorate the 133rd birth anniversary of the city's most illustrious son, the late Dr. Pio Valenzuela.

The city was named after Valenzuela in 1963.

She said the holiday would give the people the chance to "celebrate the event with appropriate ceremonies."

Dr. Valenzuela was born in Polo, Bulacan on July 11, 1869. He died on April 6, 1956.

A major figure during the Philippine Revolution against Spanish colonizers, Valenzuela secretly established Katipunan branches in many areas in Morong and Bulacan.

He helped Emilio Jacinto establish the Katipunan paper, Kalayaan, using stolen types from the Diario de Manila.

He was chosen to see Jose Rizal in Dapitan to convince the latter to support the revolution. To fool authorities, he was accompanied by a blind man who pretended to be a patient of Dr. Rizal

The doctor exhibited the values of dedication, patriotism and unity.

Historians quoted from him two learning messages: "Mahalaga sa pambansang katatagan ang ating pangangalaga sa makatarungang adhikain at kalayaan (A just cause and liberty are important to our national strength)" and "Ang komunikasyon ay mabisang instrumento sa pagkakamit ng pagkakaunawaan at pagkakaisa(Communication is an effective instrument in achieving understanding and unity)."

GMA to join Davaoenos in Celebrating 35th foundation day

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is set to celebrate with the people of Davao del Norte their 35th foundation anniversary on July 1.

It was on July 1, 1967 that the then province of Davao was subdivided into three independent provinces: Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur and Davao Oriental.

Similar foundation day celebrations will be held in Digos City, Davao del Sur and in Mati City, Davao Oriental.

Governor Rodolfo del Rosario, also president of the League of Provinces of the Philippines and the Union of Local Authorities of the Philippines, confirmed the President's arrival.

President Macapagal-Arroyo will deliver an anniversary message in a program at the RDR-BSP Training Center, Mankilam, Tagum City. She will later have lunch with local officials and heads of national agencies at the Tahanan ng Punong Lalawigan.

She is also expected to lead officials in inaugurating and blessing the new building of the Davao Regional Hospital.

Before the President's arrival, a cultural and multi-sectoral parade along the streets in Tagum City, the provincial capital, will be conducted as early as 5:30 a.m.

The President's visit will highlight the culmination of the week-long celebration — which bears the theme, "Dabaanon: Panaghiusa, Pakigdait ug Kalambuan Ipadayon!" — of the province.

On the night of July 1, a neo-ethnic musical fashion show will be held at the Tagum Cultural Trade Pavilion. The show will feature the rich cultural heritage of the province through music and art in fashion and a video presentation on the different tourist spots in the province.

Historians claimed that Davao probably derived its name from the ancient Bagobo word "daba-daba" or fire that the people used for rituals. The Tagabaua tribe called the river bisecting the region "Daba" and the Guiangan tribe, "Davoh".

The Davao region was already an ethnic melting pot way before the Spaniards arrived. Its eastern shores were occupied by the members of the Manobo, Tagacaolo, Guiangan, Bilaan and Aeta tribes. The western part was inhabited by the Bagobo and Mandaya tribes. Samal and Talicud Islands belonged to the Samal tribe.

Davao was first visited by the Spaniards, led by Alvaro de Saavedra, in 1528. Lopez Villalobos explored Manay, Baganga and Sarangani Island later in 1543. The first Spanish settlement was established in 1591 in Caraga (Davao Oriental).

However, the entire region remained under the Sultanate of Maguindanao. It was only in 1844 that the ruling Sultan ceded Davao to Spain.

The Muslim inhabitants refused to be ruled by Spaniards. So Spanish forces, led by Don Uyanguren, quelled the revolt and killed Muslim leader Datu Bago in 1847. Uyanguren became the first governor of Guipuzcoa (an area that now comprising Davao City and environs).

In 1900, the Japanese established extensive plantations of abaca around the Davao Gulf and engaged in fishing, logging and trading. The number of Japanese steadily increased such that the area was called Japan kuo (little Japan). It had its own Japanese embassy, school, Shinto shrine, Buddhist temple and newspaper.

The Moro province was organized in 1903 with Davao as its district. In 1914, the Department of Mindanao and Sulu was created and Davao was one of its provinces.

Davao City received its charter when Elpidio Quirino formally inaugurated it on March 16, 1937. The post-war years saw an influx of "pioneers" from all over the Philippines trooping to Davao in search of opportunities.

GMA turns over CLOAs, certificate of completion of P21-M bridge in a visit to Magsaysay, Davao Sur

MAGSAYSAY, Davao del Sur – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the turnover of the certificate of completion of a multi-million peso bridge and awarded certificates of land ownership awards (CLOAs) to agrarian reform beneficiaries of Davao del Sur during a brief stopover here

The President was on the first leg of her three-day working visit to Davao del Sur, Davao del Norte, Maguindanao and Cotabato City.

In simple ceremonies here, the President turned over to Hagonoy Mayor Jose Superales, Jr. the certificate of completion of the Balatucan-Lapulabao Bridge.

The bridge was built at cost of P21,620,207 by the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) under its Agrarian Reform Community Project and funded by the Asian Development Bank (ADB).

She also turned over a total of 64 CLOAs to 60 agrarian reform beneficiaries covering 91 hectares in the province of Davao del Sur.

To date, DAR said, the Macapagal-Arroyo administration has exceeded its targets on CLOA distribution for the Davao del Sur province as enunciated by the President in her State of the Nation Address last July 2001.

She also distributed assorted medicines worth P50,000 from the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO) and another P50,000 worth from the Department of Health (DOH) for indigent residents of this town.

The assorted medicines were turned over by the President to Magsaysay Mayor Arthur Davin.

After the awarding rites, President Macapagal-Arroyo and her official party motored to Quezon Avenue in Digos City to attend the wake of former Davao del Sur Vice Governor Antonio Sunga.

From there, the President proceeded to Tagum City to grace the 35th Foundation Anniversary of Davao del Norte and to preside over the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and the Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) of Region XI.

GMA releases some P15.6 million worth of checks for livelihood projects, farm equipment for Davao Norte

TAGUM, Davao del Norte – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded some P15.6 million worth of checks for various livelihood projects and loans for small entrepreneurs as well as farm equipment for qualified beneficiaries in Davao del Norte.

The President was the guest of honor and speaker during the 35th Founding Anniversary of the province of Davao del Norte held at the BSP-RDR Gymnasium, Mankilam in this city.

She also presided over the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and the Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) of Region XI held here.

During the ceremony, the President handed a P10 million check under the cattle distribution scheme of the Department of Agriculture (DA) that would benefit some 2,500 cattle raisers in Mindanao within the period of 10 years.

Under the administration's micro-finance program, which is funded by the Quedan Corporation (Quedancor) and the Ahon Movement, the President turned over checks worth some P3.74 million to benefit a total of 321 women entrepreneurs in Davao del Norte.

She also distributed purchase orders amounting to P4.16 million to 306 farmers under the Quedan/Ahon's self-reliant farmers/fisherfolk program.

The President also turned over 2,000 assorted seedlings to 54 families from the Davao City Tribal Council for Peace and Development under the DA's orchard establishment of indigenous upland farmers program.

Still under the DA, the President turned over the following:

- four units of 4-wheel drive farm tractors under the Ginintuang Masaganang Ani (GMA) corn program;
- seven units of global positioning system (GPS) to 25 fishermen of the seven municipalities of Davao del Norte and Compostela Valley;
- one unit of multi-purpose dehydrator for the Samal Island Mango Producers Multi-Purpose Cooperative;
- four units of power sprayers to the Davao del Norte Mango Growers Council;
- three units of shallow tube wells for farmers of Davao del Norte.

In the same program, the Chief Executive released a check in the amount of P750,000 from the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO) as endowment fund of the Davao Regional Hospital to be used for indigent patients.

Another check amounting to P125,000 from the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) was handed over by the President to Tanglaw Livelihood Sea-K (Self Employment Assistance – Kaunlaran) Association.

To the Kabayangan Sea-K Association, the President also turned over a check in the amount of P125,000.

Under the DSWD's core shelter assistance project, the President also awarded a total of 100 checks at P25,000 each to the same number of beneficiaries from Davao Oriental.

From the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), the President turned over a check in the amount of P100,000 to the SUYAPA Farmers Association of Alegria and Compostela, in Compostela Valley for its Quick Response Team (QRT).

The President also awarded certificates for scholarships to 57 technical-vocational scholars administered by the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

For the health needs of indigent residents of the province, the President turned over 500 PhilHealth cards, making the total health cards released for Davao del Norte to 17,413 as of July 1.

On top of that, the President also distributed a total of 238 certificates of land ownership awards (CLOAs) to 2,810 agrarian reform beneficiaries from Davao City, Davao del Norte, Compostela Valley and Davao Oriental, covering an area of 1,548 hectares.

According to the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR), they have exceeded their target of CLOA distribution for Region XI for the first semester of this year.

Davao del Norte was originally a part of what was then collectively known as Province of Davao until the late Congressman Lorenzo Sarmiento, Sr. authored a bill, which was later passed into law – Republic Act No. 4867 – that divided Davao into three provinces, namely Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur and Davao Oriental, on May 8, 1967.

On June 17, 1972 the name Davao del Norte was changed to Davao under R.A . No. 6430.

All three Davao provinces simultaneously celebrate their anniversary every 1st of July.

GMA continues to enjoy full support and confidence from LAKAS-NUCD-UMDP members

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, chairman of the ruling Lakas-National Union of Christian Democrats-Union of Muslim Democrats of the Philippines (Lakas-NUCD-UMDP), continues to enjoy the full confidence and support of party members.

In a statement, Secretary Gabriel Claudio, chief of the Presidential Legislative Liaison Office (PLLO), said that the party members were not disappointed nor disenchanted with the President over the resignation issue of Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. from the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA).

“There continues to be no doubt about her (the President) as the highest and most deserving symbol of political authority and leadership within the party,” Claudio said.

Claudio, who is also the senior deputy secretary general of Lakas NUCD-UMDP, likewise said party members recognize that the Guingona-DFA issue is not a party matter.

“This is an issue of effective governance, particularly on the composition of the President’s Cabinet, which in the final analysis is the prerogative of the President,” Claudio said.

Claudio also said there is absolutely no truth to reports that some Lakas-NUCD-UMDP members harbor doubts about the President’s loyalty to the party.

He noted that the President assumed the active chairmanship of Lakas, “even as she is titular head of the broader administration coalition of political parties and groups.”

“Lakas members recognize and appreciate the high regard of President Macapagal-Arroyo for them and the party,” Claudio said.

According to Claudio, the members of the ruling party have no cause “to believe the intrigue that she will join or rely on another party as the principal vehicle to support the political and economic programs of her administration.”

RP is aiming to be world’s top banana producing country, says GMA

TAGUM, Davao del Norte—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed the hope that the Philippines would become the number one banana producer in the world as she called on the people of Davao del Norte to work toward that goal.

In her speech at the 35th Founding Anniversary of the province of Davao del Norte held at the BSP-RDR Gymnasium here, the President said the Philippines is now the world's number three banana-producing country after displacing Colombia.

The President congratulated the people of Davao del Norte because their province, according to her, is the center of the country's "strong and vibrant" banana industry.

She said that if the big China market would be added to the traditional markets of the Philippines for its banana exports, then the country might become the world's top banana-exporter.

"We might even become the number two or the number one banana producer in the world, and that is up to the people of Davao del Norte to work for it," the President said.

The President also said that Australia, another potential market for Philippine bananas, is set to announce the result of its regular quarantine inspection service that is being undertaken in consultation with its private sector.

She said that it is very important for the Department of Agriculture attaché to Australia to work with the Australian private sector so that Philippine bananas could finally penetrate the Australian market.

The President said that the Philippines should continue to "work and pray" so that the two big markets—China and Australia—would be opened for Philippine bananas.

Also in her speech, the President congratulated Davao del Norte for being a model province in cooperative development. "Your cooperatives are models of strong leadership and cooperative governance," she said.

Later in the program, the President turned over checks for livelihood projects, farm equipment, and loans for micro-finance programs worth more than P15 million.

P700-M in coco levy earnings now available to benefit coconut farmers nationwide – GMA

TAGUM CITY, Davao del Norte – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that the United Coconut Planters Bank (Cocobank) is now ready to make available some P700 million in coconut levy earnings for the benefit of the country's coconut farmers and the coconut producing provinces.

The Chief Executive made this announcement in her speech before thousands of residents here who attended the 35th Foundation Anniversary of Davao del Norte held at the BSP-RDR Gymnasium here.

The President recalled that during the Independence Day celebration this year, she had announced that the board of the Coconut Industry Investment Fund has approved the release of P86 million as first-year premium under the expanded farmers life insurance program.

"The upgraded life insurance policies for more than one million farmers are ready for distribution to the region," the President said.

She expressed the hope that in Region XI, the Department of Agriculture can supervise the distribution of the new life insurance policies for coconut farmers throughout the country.

The President also said she was elated to know that the price of coconut per kilogram is now P13.50 from its earlier price of P6.00 per kilogram.

“This is the highest price in the last three years. So that by itself, the coconut farmers now have doubled their income,” she stressed.

The President likewise said that she has instructed all concerned government agencies to see to it that the first fruits of the coconut levy fund should go to micro-financing for coconut farmers at P1,000.00 per coconut farmer.

Saying that coconut farmers would like to pull their funds for cattle breeder programs, the President instructed the Philippine Coconut Authority (PCA) through Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor, to work this out with the different provincial agricultural officers in the coconut producing provinces beginning with the provincial agricultural officer of Davao del Norte.

In the livestock sector, the President said that her administration is now replenishing the cattle population.

“We have come up with the policy to decrease the cattle hectare ratio from one is to one, to one is to six,” the President said.

“We want to make it attractive for coconut farmers to grow cattle underneath your coconut trees here in Davao del Norte,” the President said.

In this connection, the President announced the release of P10 million for the cattle distribution scheme of the Department of Agriculture for some 2,500 cattle raisers in Mindanao “so that they can spread out and develop the cattle industry in Mindanao for the next 10 years.”

GMA reiterates vow to help Mindanao prosper

MAGSAYSAY, Davao del Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for peace, unity and cooperation among all Filipinos, as she reiterated her resolve to help Mindanao and its people attain socio-economic growth.

Arriving at Barangay Lower Bala here by helicopter from Davao City this morning amidst cloudy skies and an off-and-on drizzle, the President lauded Magsaysay Mayor Arthur Davin for fast-tracking the completion of various projects for the town’s constituents.

In a speech delivered in fluent Cebuano, the President asked the people of Davao del Sur to rally behind government programs and projects meant to uplift the quality of life of all, particularly the poor.

She said she took pride in the completion of the Kilolog Bridge which has started to link people from at least nine barangays in Magsaysay and has spurred agricultural trading activities in the area.

Magsaysay, a palay-producing area, is some 80 kilometers southwest of Davao City.

She thanked the British government for providing a loan to bankroll the construction of the 58-linear meter steel bridge over Bulatukan River and of other bridges in other villages nationwide.

The President said: “Let this project also serve as a bridge for all of us to be united in pursuing peace and socio-economic development.”

She recalled that today’s visit was the second she made in this town. The first was when she was still vice president when she attended a gathering of farmers in the town.

She said that she was the second Macapagal to have recognized the town and its people.

The late President Diosdado Macapagal, father of President Macapagal-Arroyo, was responsible for the creation of the town some 35 years ago, according to Mayor Davin.

In her speech, the President also took note of the faster delivery of basic services — such as those on health care, agricultural development, education, infrastructure, among others — in poorer communities in the country.

“As a child of Mindanao — having lived in the region for many years, I reiterate my resolve to see the region grow economically,” she said.

A huge crowd of townspeople — gathered at the foot of the makeshift stage built alongside the road right after the Kilolog Bridge — applauded the President many times in the course of her short speech.

On her way to Lower Bala, people — most of them schoolchildren in their uniforms — lined on both sides of the main highway and waved at the President and her party.

The President took note of this and thanked the people here for the warm welcome accorded her.

After her speech, the President led officials in turning over some P100,000 worth of branded medicines to Mayor Davin for the use of the townspeople.

Assisted by Cabinet Officer on Regional Development 11 Secretary Pantaleon Alvarez and Davao del Sur governor Reynerio Llanos, she also distributed 90 certificates of land ownership award (CLOAs), covering 91 hectares of farmland, to 60 agrarian reform beneficiaries.

She further gave out bags of agricultural produce worth P1,000 each to the people as part of the government’s “Pagkain ng Bayan” program.

As the program was going on, a medical civic action program was conducted across the stage.

The medical mission, which served some 300 folks, was undertaken under the “Paglilingkod Abot Kamay” of Mayor Davin, in cooperation with the Army’s 25th Infantry Battalion, 601st Brigade; the Presidential Security Group, Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office and local government agencies.

Nearby, a National Food Authority-deployed rolling store sold cheap rice and other food products and medicines to the village people.

From here, the President went to nearby Digos City, capital of Davao del Sur, to visit the wake of the late former vice governor Antonio Sunga, who also was Lakas-NUCD provincial chairman and head of the Aguman Ding Capampangan group in the province.

GMA honors former Davao Sur Vice Governor Sunga

DIGOS CITY, Davao del Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to the late former Davao del Sur Vice Governor Antonio Sunga, who had set a shining example of honesty and integrity while in public office.

The President went out of her way from a hectic schedule to motor to the Sunga residence in 272 Quezon Ave. here, where Sunga’s remains lie in state, to condole with the bereaved family — Sunga’s wife Dulia, and children Romeo, John, Anthony and Joseph.

The late former vice governor was supposed to be among those who should have met the President in her visit to nearby Magsaysay town where she inspected this morning the newly-opened Kilolog steel bridge and awarded various socio-economic programs and projects to benefit the town's people.

Sunga, a doctor, would have represented the Aguman Ding Capampangan, Inc. (Davao chapter) group as its president.

The Aguman members have been very supportive of the President in her efforts to bring about growth in the country, particularly the countryside.

Also a native of Pampanga like the President, Sunga succumbed to cardiac arrest last Thursday, June 27.

People remembered Sunga, who also served as chairman of the Davao del Sur Lakas-NUCD-UMDP party, as their three-time vice governor until he lost in his gubernatorial bid in the last local elections.

But more than this, they looked up to the standards set by Sunga in the field of good governance, adding that he was one of the best political leaders the province had.

After the visit, the President flew to Tagum City in Davao del Norte where she attended activities commemorating the province's 35th foundation anniversary.

It was on July 1, 1967 that the entire province of Davao was divided into three — Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur and Davao Oriental.

GMA leads Cabinet in meetings on growth, peace concerns with RDC-RPOC's in Mindanao

DAVAO CITY — Continuing her commitment to give Mindanao what is due the region, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led Cabinet members in attending to development and peace issues in Southern Mindanao (Region XI).

Joining the President in the joint Region XI Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) meeting held in Tagum, Davao del Norte this afternoon were at least 34 Cabinet men and other ranking government officials.

Tomorrow, the President and many of her Cabinet members are expected to be in Cotabato City to discuss the same concerns with officials of Central Mindanao (Region XII).

The President arrived here by Lear jet from Manila at about 9:30 a.m. and was given planeside honors.

On hand to welcome the President were Presidential Assistant for Regional Development Paul Dominguez, Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus Dureza, Southern Mindanao Police Chief Superintendent Eduardo Matillano, Regional Political Officer Encarnacion Blanco and Davao City International Airport Manager Frederick San Felix.

“Bringing her top-notch men to the regions is one of the best ways by which the President shows her resolve to keep the government closer to and make it more responsive to the needs of the people,” said a local official.

The President's men included Transportation and Communication Secretary and Cabinet Officer for Region XI Pantaleon Alvarez, Presidential Assistant for Jobs Generation Luis Lorenzo, Education Secretary Raul Roco, Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, Local Government Secretary Jose Lina Jr., Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, National Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes;

Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor, Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Heherson Alvarez, Agrarian Reform Secretary Hernani Braganza, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Science and Technology Secretary Estrella Alabastro, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, Anti-Poverty Commission Lead Convenor Teresita Quintos-Deles;

Official Development Assistance Secretary Marita Jimenez, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo, Press Undersecretary Roberto Capco, Budget and Management Undersecretary Mario Relampagos, Energy Undersecretary Benhur Salcedo, Presidential Assistant for Agricultural Modernization Angelito Sarmiento, Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office Chairperson Ma. Livia de Leon; Irrigation Authority Administrator Jesus Emmanuel Paras, National Police Chief Director General Leandro Mendoza, Armed Forces Chief of Staff Roy Cimat, Army General Dionisio Santiago, Fisheries and Aquatic Resources Director Malcolm Sarmiento, Water Utilities Administration Representative Alfredo Espino, Corrections Bureau Director Ricardo Macala, Presidential Assistant Mona Valisno, Transportation Undersecretary Carina Valera and Local Government Undersecretary Alipio Fernandez.

Hybrid rice user gets P30,000 net income per hectare, says GMA

TAGUM, Davao del Norte — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the introduction of the hybrid rice into the country gives the Filipino farmer P30,000 net income for each hectare that he tills.

Speaking at the 35th founding anniversary of Davao del Norte held at the BSP-RDR Gymnasium in Mankilam here, the President said earlier in Davao del Sur that she met some of farmers “who planted hybrid rice and have already harvested and they are P30,000 richer than they were before they adopted hybrid rice.”

The President said her administration intends to introduce hybrid rice to some 80,000 hectares throughout the country by October this year. In Mindanao, the President noted, hybrid rice has already been introduced to some 37,000 farmers.

She noted that every farmer who adopts the hybrid rice program gets P10,000 loan from the Land Bank of the Philippines through the Quedan Rural Credit and Guarantee Corporation (Quedancor).

The President further noted that the research and development of the hybrid rice has been given a budget of P450 million.

On irrigation, the President said more irrigation facilities are going to be built in the next few months. In the past year, at least 10,000 hectares in Mindanao have been irrigated on top of the total 26,000 hectares nationwide, resulting in the irrigation of more than 129,800 hectares.

The President also said that more than half a million farmers were granted various types of loans during her administration: 36,000 farmers extended crop insurance and 50,000 covered with guaranteed loans.

The President further noted that the Land Bank is restructuring the past due debts of impoverished farmers after two years of impasse.

She said Land Bank President Gary Teves informed her that most of those responsible for the big past due debts are big corporations and not small farmers.

“So I said, since the past due debts of small farmers is just a smaller portion of the past due debt of the Land Bank, be strict on the big corporations but give the small farmers a chance to rehabilitate themselves,” she said.

“Now, the Land Bank is undertaking debt restructuring to small farmers, waiving its penalties and past due interests,” the President said.

The President also noted that under the agriculture and fisheries modernization program of her administration some P250 million have been made available to marginal fisherfolk communities for financing.

During the program, the President distributed purchase orders amounting to more than P4 million to 306 farmers under the self-reliant farmers and fisherfolk program.

She said her administration would continue to construct farm-to-market roads, market halls and stalls, processing plants, laboratories and post-harvest facilities to facilitate the needs of the Filipino farmers.

She suggested the research on bananas be set up in Davao “so that our bananas can enter the very strict market of Australia.”

DILG official calls on people to harness people power for national development

DIGOS, Davao del Sur — Lawyer Wencilito Andanar, Interior and Local Government Undersecretary for Peace and Order, today sought the institutionalization of people power as a way to bring about growth and progress in the country.

In his speech during the commemoration of the province’s 35th foundation anniversary at the Capitol here, Andanar stressed the need for the people to continue harnessing the strength they have gained from the experiences of the past.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was the guest of honor and speaker at the founding anniversary.

“It is high time for all of us to unite and cooperate as we pursue our common aspiration of raising the quality of life of every Filipino,” Andanar said.

He noted that government resources are not that big to meet all the requirements of building the nation.

“Thus all sectors of society should consider being partners of government in nation-building,” Andanar said.

Andanar stressed that the strength of a nation lies in its people. “The voice of a united people will always be heard,” he said.

“We have seen this before, during the times when we all clamored for the ouster of a dictatorship and wanted democracy to live on in the country,” Andanar recalled.

“We have had a similar experience in EDSA 2, when we sought for good governance and morality in public service,” he added.

In both instances, people power prevailed, Andanar said.

“People empowerment is a means by which we, united and cooperating with each other, can achieve national development,” he said

Andanar cited the unity shown by local officials, led by Governor Reynerio Llanos, and the people of Davao del Sur in transforming their once sleepy agricultural province into a more progressive production and trading hub in southern Philippines.

“Good governance gets its inspiration and strength from an empowered citizenry,” he said.

Davao del Sur, Davao del Norte and Davao Oriental were carved out of the big province of Davao on July 1, 1967.

GMA accepts Guingona's resignation as Foreign Affairs secretary 'with regrets

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has accepted "with regrets" the resignation of Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. as secretary of foreign affairs, effective July 15.

The President and Guingona had a heart to heart talk in Davao City Monday evening where the President rested overnight after visiting Davao del Sur and Davao del Norte.

A joint statement released this morning said that Guingona's resignation from the Cabinet "stemmed from an honest difference of opinion concerning policy."

"Since the President is the chief architect of foreign policy, the Vice President yields. The Vice President continues to hold the President in high esteem, and is committed to good governance," the joint statement said.

The full text of the joint statement signed by the President and the Vice President:

"The Vice President had a heart to heart talk with the President in Davao City last night. The Vice President tendered his resignation as Secretary of Foreign Affairs, which the President accepted with regrets, effective July 15, 2002.

"The resignation stemmed from an honest difference of opinion concerning policy. Since the President is the chief architect of foreign policy, the Vice President yields. The Vice President continues to hold the President in high esteem, and is committed to good governance.

"The Vice President expressed his appreciation to the President for the opportunity to serve as Secretary of Foreign Affairs. The President thanked the Vice President for his patriotism and devotion to duty in implementing the nation's foreign policy.

"The President shall continue to support the following programs initiated by the Vice President in his capacity as Secretary of Foreign Affairs:

1. The Overseas Filipino Investment Bond project undertaken in coordination with the Department of Finance, envisioned to generate savings for overseas Filipinos and empower them with skills training to enhance their occupations or professions;
2. The housing program, coordinated with HUDCC, intended to provide shelter to the OFWs and their families; and
3. The rehabilitation and establishment of an integrated National Steel in Mindanao."

GMA lauds Davao City officials for City's low crime rate

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has lauded the city government of Davao City for attaining one of the lowest crime rates in the country.

The President made this statement during the 12th Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) meeting held Monday at the CAP Development Center in Tagum, Davao del Norte.

In this report to the President and the RDC-RPOC members, Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, chairman of RPOC XI, said the province has achieved a decrease of 124 incidents or 12.09 percent from January to May 31 this year as compared to the same period last year.

Duterte said crime volume distribution for the said period shows that crime incidents decreased in Compostela Valley, Davao del Sur, and Davao City.

Based on the crime volume recorded, Duterte said the computed average monthly crime for the period of January to May 2002 is 5.63 incidents per 100,000 population per month.

More importantly, Duterte noted that Region XI has been spared of such major crimes as kidnapping, bombing, major armed robberies and terroristic activities.

Duterte said the region is investing a lot in their intelligence gathering activities against the perceived presence of threat groups such as the local communist movement, the secessionist groups and organized criminal syndicates such as the Pentagon group.

In varying degrees, these factors, according to Duterte, can affect the peace and stability in the region, including those drug-related criminal groups.

He also reported that a small Pentagon satellite group previously identified to be operating in the region, specifically in Davao City, has moved elsewhere.

In the overall context, however, he attributed the improvement in crime situation to the collective vigilance of the people of the region, its officials, the police and the military.

“On the whole, our crime situation in terms of the average monthly crime rate and crime solution efficiency is certainly much better than the rest of the country and we are determined to continue doing our best,” Duterte told the President.

The RPOC XI chairman and Davao City mayor also assured the President that under her leadership, “we will continue to strive to sustain peace and stability in our region so that our people can productively pursue their individual and collective endeavors, enjoy the fruits of their labor and continue to contribute in nation building.”

Canlas cites Region XI's impressive growth in agriculture sector

Socio-economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas has cited Region XI's impressive growth in the agriculture sector for the first quarter of year 2002.

In his report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during the 12th Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) held Monday at the CAP Development Center in Tagum, Davao del Norte, Canlas told the President that production of palay and corn significantly grew by 56 percent and 42 percent respectively, during the first quarter of the year.

Canlas, who is also the director general of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), said majority of the provinces in Region XI planted early this year in anticipation of the El Niño next month.

Region XI, or what is now known as Davao Region, is composed of the provinces of Compostela Valley, Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur and the cities of Davao, Digos, Panabo, Samal and Tagum.

Canlas noted that production levels of major fruits such as banana, pineapple, mango, and durian followed a similar upward trend due to increased number of fruit-bearing trees.

In his report, Canlas said that banana and pineapple production grew by 2.9 percent; mango by 6.7 percent; and durian by 9.3 percent.

He said that durian used to be a seasonal crop but can now be enjoyed in abundance all year round due to more intensive propagation.

Canlas stressed that the region's strength lies in the agriculture sector as it supplies most of Mindanao's and the country's requirements, notably banana and cacao production, which accounts for 61 percent and 70 percent respectively of Mindanao's total output.

Accordingly, banana exports remain to be the Davao Region's top dollar earner.

During the first three quarters of year 2001, Canlas said banana exports had a total value of US$221.8 million, followed by coconut oil at US$57.1 million and coconut refined at US$27.1 million.

Significantly, he said the exports of portland cement reached US$5.1 million, making it to the top ten of the region's export products.

As of 2001 to the present, Japan and the United States are the region's major buyers of top exports such as banana and coconut crude oil while Palau and New Zealand have emerged as new promising markets for its products.

GMA turns over checks amounting to P6.7 million to speed up rehabilitation of Camp Abubakar

CAMP ABUBAKAR, Barira, Maguindanao—Putting flesh into her avowed policy of turning the ruins of this former stronghold of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) into a zone of peace and prosperity, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today turned over checks totaling P6.7 million to finance various infrastructure projects in the area.

The President, who arrived in this former MILF encampment by land from Cotabato City, also assured the local officials of Barira, Buldon and Matanog that she will extend all her support to the Iranun Development Council (IDC), which will spearhead the development of the area under the government's Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) program.

The Iranuns are the natives that reside in the area before it was taken over by the MILF.

The President and her official party were supposed to come here by helicopter but inclement weather forced them to instead travel by land. Because of the change in travel plans, the President's schedule was delayed by about two hours.

During her one-hour visit here, the President was joined by United States Ambassador Francis Ricciardone and top Cabinet officials, which included Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor, Agrarian Reform Secretary Hernani Braganza, Lead Convenor Teresita Quintos-Deles of the National Anti-Poverty Commission, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, and AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu.

In her remarks at the formal launching of the IDC, the President said that henceforth the area should no longer be called Camp Abubakar but Sitio Bumbaran, Barangay Tugaig of this town.

After her remarks, the President turned over a check amounting to P5.48 million from the Philippine-Canadian Development Fund to Matanog Mayor Naser Imam for various infrastructure projects in the town.

From the Department of Social Welfare and Development of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (DSWD-ARMM), the President also turned over a check in the amount of P340,000 to Mayor Naser Imam of Matanog and another check worth P720,000 to Barira Mayor Alex Tomawis.

The checks would be used for barangay projects in Barira and Matanog, the two towns hardest hit by the all-out military offensive against the MILF in 2000, resulting in their recovery by government forces.

The President also turned over 12 units of agricultural implements like corn shellers, rice threshers and floating tillers for the farmers of Barira, Buldon and Matanog.

Also for the 34 barangays of the three municipalities, the President distributed planting materials under the government's household enhancement project for Muslim communities.

The mayors of the three towns also received from the President assorted medicines worth P120,000 donated by the Philippines Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO) and to be distributed to poor residents.

After the awarding ceremonies, the President returned to Cotabato City where she presided over the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and the Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) of Region XII.

GMA wants to transform Abubakar into a civilian-military camp for peace and development

CAMP ABUBAKAR, Barira, Maguindanao — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said her administration is in the process of transforming Camp Abubakar, the former main enclave of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), into a civilian-military camp for peace and development.

In her remarks at Sitio Bumbaran, Barangay Tugaig here where Camp Abubakar used to stand, the President said the area would be a new model of a peace and development zone.

“In other words, any Filipino could live here,” she said.

The President noted that the Iranun tribe, which claims part of the camp as their ancestral land, is a good example that people here just want to live in peace.

“This place also belongs to the Iranun and I think today (there) should be a closure. I think we should no longer call this place Camp Abubakar. I think we should call it what the Republic of the Philippines calls it, a sitio or a barangay,” the President said.

She said that henceforth, Camp Abubakar should now be known simply as Sitio Bumbaran, in Barangay Tugaig, Barira.

The President said that one of objectives of her visit to this former MILF stronghold is to dispel the rumors spread by the political opposition that her government is returning the camp to the MILF.

She said she has ordered the Philippine Army's 603rd Brigade to be permanently stationed here.

“Itoy upang ipakita sa buong Pilipinas at sa buong mundo, lalo na iyong mga nagdududa na baka ibalik ang kampo sa mga rebelde ng ang Camp Abubakar ay buong nasa kamay ng Republika ng Pilipinas (This is to show to the whole Philippines and to the whole world, particularly to those who have doubts that the camp might be returned to the MILF, that this camp is now entirely in the hands of the Republic of the Philippines),” the President said.

The President noted that the Iranun tribe has always been a productive and progressive people long before the armed conflict with the MILF started in the early 1970s.

“During the MNLF war, they (Iranuns) were forced to leave their communities as it was destroyed. Afterwards, MILF, that took control of the area, occupied their communities,” she said.

On efforts to bring peace and development to the area, the President said her administration is committed to rehabilitate the 34 barangays of the three towns of Barira, Buldon and Matanog that comprise the former camp.

She said that the government has brought electricity to the towns and has built farm-to-market roads costing some P7 million.

The construction of the roads was done by the 54th Engineering Brigade of the Armed Forces of the Philippines headed by Col. Eduardo Lena.

Earlier, the President launched the Iranun Development Council (IDC), which will spearhead the development of the area under the government’s Kapit- Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) program.

GMA receives released Korean kidnap victim in Cotabato City

COTABATO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented to the media released kidnap victim Jae Keon Yoong, a Korean national who was abducted last February by an unidentified armed group in the province of Maguindanao.

The President, who was presiding over the joint 13th Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) meeting here, briefly interrupted the proceedings to present the Korean kidnap victim before the local and national media.

“Welcome back!,” the President greeted the kidnap victim as the latter was presented to her by incoming Philippine National Police (PNP) chief, Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. and Presidential Adviser for Mindanao Jesus Dureza.

In turn, the President handed over the rescued victim to a consular official of the Korean Embassy who was here in Cotabato City to receive their national.

“I am now turning you over to your embassy official safe and sound,” the President told the Korean national.

The President congratulated all those who have worked for the release of the victim who had spent more than five months in captivity.

In an interview, Dureza said the Korean’s release from his abductors was made possible by the joint efforts of the PNP, the military, local government units in the province, as well as certain officials of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

Both Dureza and Ebdane assured the public that no ransom has been paid for the release of the victim, saying they have strictly maintained the no-ransom policy of the government in seeking his release.

GMA thanks U.S. for assistance to former MNLF rebels

CAMP ABUBAKAR, Barira, Maguindanao — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked the United States government for supporting the rehabilitation of 300 former Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) combatants to have a new lease on life under peaceful conditions.

In an extemporaneous speech during her visit to this former Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) camp here, the President announced that the US government, through the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), is also willing to provide assistance to former MILF combatants, especially those residing in this area so that they can go back to normal life.

The President said that US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone, who was with the presidential party that visited Abubakar, informed her of the willingness to help another batch of 300, this time former MILF combatants.

The President, quoting the US Ambassador, said “it is in this part that the Philippine government won the war against the MILF.”

The Chief Executive said that the USAID is ready to rehabilitate these former rebel combatants so that they will understand that they can also achieve development if they join the mainstream of the Filipino society.

The USAID assistance to former rebel combatants is provided in the memorandum of agreement, the signing of which was witnessed by the President when she visited the United States in February this year.

GMA turns over some P422.6 M worth of checks for gov’t assistance, livelihood projects in Region XII

COTABATO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today distributed a total of P422.6 million worth of government assistance and livelihood projects for residents of Region XII in an effort to help improve their economic condition and way of life.

The Chief Executive, assisted by representatives of concerned government agencies, personally turned over the various government assistance to qualified beneficiaries during awarding rites held this afternoon at the Regional Government Center grounds here.

From the Philippine Coconut Authority, the President handed over a Group Insurance Certificate amounting to P413.38 million for some 41,338 coconut farmers in Region XII. The certificate was given to Norberto La Paz, president of the Coconut Farmers Federation, on behalf of the coconut farmer beneficiaries.

From the Department of Science and Technology (DOST), she distributed four sets of computers to four state colleges and universities in Central Mindanao.

The other DOST assistance turned over by the President were the following:

- Meat processing equipment consisting of meat grinder, corned beef shredder, tie linker, meat stuffer and meat slicer, for 97 members of the SANGKAP under the Livelihood Enhancement for the Poor, Vulnerable, Disabled and Women Sector. Recipient: Phoebe Ardinas, president of SANGKAP.

- A check amounting to P200,000.00 for the establishment of feedmill for the farmers and livestock growers in PALMA Complex, Midsayap, Cotabato. Recipient: Engineer Benjamin Ontal, president of the Midsayap Livestock, Poultry and Aqua Producers Association.
- A check amounting to P91,520.00 for the upgrading of muscovado processing in San Pedro, President Quirino, Sultan Kudarat. Recipient: Joel Pedral, president of San Pedro Sugar Cane Planters Association.

From the Department of Labor and Employment, the President awarded three checks amounting to P50,000.00 each under the Tulong Alalay sa Taong May Kapansanan (TULAY) 2000 program for augmentation capital of disabled persons who are engaged in livelihood projects.

The President likewise distributed the following DOLE assistance for the benefit of the poor beneficiaries of Cotabato City:

- A check amounting to P268,125.00 for the construction of municipal building Phase III in Aleosan, Cotabato under the Rural Works Program. Recipient: Aleosan Mayor Vicente Sorupia.
- A check amounting to P300,000.00 representing first release for the construction of Bagsakan Public Market Building Phase I in Maitum, Sarangani under the Rural Works Program. Recipient: Maitum Mayor George Yabes.
- A check amounting to P100,000.00 for duck egg production project of the Samahan ng mga Magulang ng mga Batang Manggagawa ng Barangay Impao. Recipients: Isulan Mayor Ernesto Matias and Bartolome Licor, president of the Samahan ng mga Magulang ng mga Batang Manggagawa ng Barangay Impao.
- A check amounting to P50,000.00 to the United Laborers Association of Tinaugan for re-lending to its members. Recipients: President Quirino Mayor Rodolfo Erese and Gina Pacaunces, United Laborers Association of Tinaugan.

She also awarded from the Technical Education Skills Development Authority (TESDA) 79 grantees of the checks representing stipend and book allowance (P2,750.00 each) to 79 Private Education Student Financial Assistance (PESFA) in Cotabato City.

The President handed over 25 checks from the Overseas Workers' Welfare Administration (OWWA) with a total amount of P15,000.00 at P600.00 each representing payment of allowance to grantees of its skills for employment program.

Also from OWWA, President Macapagal-Arroyo awarded various assistance as follows:

- Six checks amounting to P1,000.00 representing payment of monthly allowance to the grantees of the Sagip-Batang Manggagawa Project. Recipients: Nehad Nehad, Prince Aldan Agom, Unayzah Kasan, Adziz Herb Nor, Jameel Pacal, and Nasser Utto.
- A Check amounting to P3,500.00 under the Migrant Workers Scholarship Program. Recipient: Bai Lejanie Diocolano
- Five checks at P3,000.00 per grantees under the Sagip Batang Manggagawa Project (Tulong sa Pamliya ng OFWs). Recipients: Saima Abdullah, Norlaila Ascar, Alham Camsa, Samrah Malik, and Jayson Nueva Espana.

The President also distributed from the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) two checks from the Philippine Canadian Development Fund for barangays Simone and Peditad, municipality of Kabacan: P1,875,000.00 for the Undungan Sudang and another (P1,875,000.00) to the president of Mads Giamil.

She distributed Certificates of Land Ownership Awards (CLOAs) from the Department of Agrarian Reform to beneficiaries from barangays Kenram and Mapantig, Isulan, Sultan Kudarat.

From the Department of Agriculture, the President awarded the following:

- Certificate of turn-over for two units of tractor with accessories under the Inter-Act Mindanao Project to the Provincial Government of Cotabato. Recipient: Cotabato Governor Emmanuel Pinol.
- Two Certificates of Completion of the communal irrigation projects in the municipalities of Columbio and Kalamansig, Sultan Kudarat. Recipient: Sultan Kudarat Governor Pax Mangudadatu.

She also turned over certificates of Completion for farm-to-market road projects in Sultan Kudarat and Cotabato.

Lastly, the President awarded three checks amounting to P98,933.57 to Pag-IBIG Housing Loan borrowers from Kidapawan City.

GMA spells out 3 main components of her Mindanao policy

COTABATO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today spelled out three components of her administration’s policy towards Mindanao: one, that peace and development should go together; two, that the quest for peace should always be based on the recognition of Philippine sovereignty; and third, the realization that Philippine society is a multi-ethnic one.

In her speech at the Regional Government Center where she officiated an awarding ceremony, the President noted that there could never be real peace without development.

“To bring progress to Region XII, there should first be peace in the region,” the President said.

On the quest for peace, the President said this should be pursued with due consideration to the Philippine Constitution.

She noted that there were rumors that she was going to Camp Abubakar in Maguindanao to give back the camp to the Moro Islamic Liberation Front. “That’s not true, I came here to give the camp to the Philippine Army,” she said.

The President said the third consideration should be that Filipinos should acknowledge the fact that its society is a multi-ethnic one.

“This is the beauty of our race. We are very rich in tradition because of our diverse culture. We should acknowledge our different cultures and strive for social justice for everyone,” she said.

In emphasizing the need for peace and development, the President noted the recognition given by the Organization of Islamic Conference on the Moro National Liberation Front headed by Southern Philippine Development Authority chairman and Cotabato City Mayor Muslimin Sema.

The President likewise led the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order Council RDC-RPOC for Region XII in Cotabato City.

Earlier in the day, the President was in Camp Abubakar where she extended support for the Iranun Development Council and reiterated that she’s not giving away the camp to the MILF.

She also turned over checks totaling P6.7 million to finance various infrastructure projects in the area.

- GMA issues E.O. closing Nayong Pilipino, transferring land to MIAA for new terminal
- GMA underscores need for gov't, private sector cooperation in fighting poverty
- GMA will assume DFA post if no replacement for Guingona is named by July 15 — Palace

Camp Duma Sinsuat to erase grim image of Camp Abubakar

BARIRA, Maguindanao — Camp Abubakar is history. So is its image of being an impregnable camp of the secessionist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

Retaken by government troops in July 2000, this sprawling 10,000-hectare mix of clearings and thick forests shall be called by its geographical name: Sitio Tugaig, Barangay Bambaran, Barira town, Maguindanao province in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

Since the camp's recapture and henceforth, no other flag except the Philippine tricolors will be hoisted in the area, which is bounded by the towns of Barira, Matanog and Buldon in Maguindanao.

Further, the former MILF camp will be known as Camp Duma Sinsuat, in honor of the first Muslim member of the Cabinet who served during the term of former President Diosdado Macapagal and who distinguished himself as a man of honor and integrity in the public service.

The infamous Bedis Academy, a two-hectare camp clearing where the MILF trained its armed forces and where MILF Chairman Salamat Hashim and his lieutenants used to live in and hold office, shall soon be the springboard for peace and development in the area.

The academy complex will permanently host the headquarters of the Philippine Army's 603rd Brigade under Col. Antonio Romero. The brigade headquarters is located in Pigkalan, Sultan Kudarat, Maguindanao.

Thus ordered President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, who braved intermittent heavy rains as she motored through a long stretch of bad muddy roads and crossed two bridgeless rivers to visit this town Tuesday.

The President's move, a local official here said, would totally renew the image of the former MILF camp.

From being a rebel training center, the area will be transformed to a Philippine civilian-military camp with twin goals — that of maintaining peace and pushing development in the area.

The President had earlier considered asking the Army's 54th Engineering Brigade under Col. Eduardo Lena to move in with the 603rd Brigade.

But she noted that the military's engineering group — which has done so much in building and improving infrastructure support facilities like roads and bridges in the area in the last two years — is based in Manaoag, Pangasinan.

During her recent visit to the engineering camp in Pangasinan, the families of the builder-troopers asked the Chief Executive when she would recall their loved ones back to their home base, she recounted.

The move to put the military permanently in the Camp Abubakar area, for all its worth, outweighs perceived disadvantages.

For one, this will finally “tell the whole country and the world” that the MILF main camp is wholly “nasa kamay ng pamahalaan (in the hands of the government).”

Secondly, the presence of the military in the former MILF stronghold will finally make its imprint that the government has no intention to return any captured lair to any rebel group.

This thus dispels the notions and claims of critics and detractors that the government is returning to the rebels the latter’s self-proclaimed territories.

Thirdly, it will reassure that Filipino civilians affected by the Mindanao conflict will get immediate government help.

“Hindi natin ibinabalik ang mga kampo sa MILF. Ang ginagawa natin ay kaunlaran (We do not return camps. What we do is development),” the President stressed.

The Iranon and other communities in the area will settle in the perimeters of Camp Duma Sinsuat.

The President took note of the sacrifices of the people of Barira, Matanog and Buldon during the conflict. She said the Iranons claimed the former MILF stronghold as their ancestral land.

“Itinatayo natin ang mga bahay ng mga naapektuhang mamamayan (We are rebuilding the houses of conflict-hit Filipinos),” she said, adding that more efforts would be made to also rebuild their lives.

Fourthly, it will push forward ongoing peace talks between the government and the MILF in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Just recently, the peace panels of both sides signed an agreement to push the development of the area and the soonest reintegration of conflict-affected civilians to the mainstream of Philippine society.

But people do not have to wait for signings to bring about development.

It is the government’s duty to promote and see to it that the people, especially the poor, get the most out of government social services and economic opportunities, the President stressed.

“Pilipino tayong lahat (We are all Filipinos),” she said, as she urged unity and cooperation in rebuilding Camp Duma Sinsuat, in particular, and the nation, in general.

GMA authorizes issuance of optional motor vehicle plates with preferred inscription thru public auction

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has authorized the Department of Transportation and Communications, through the Land Transportation Office, to issue optional motor vehicle plates bearing preferred inscriptions through a system of public auction.

The President issued Memorandum Order No. 65, dated June 20, 2002, upon the recommendation of the Land Transportation Office (LTO), to address the need to regulate the issuance of motor vehicle plates bearing preferred inscriptions.

Under this order, all proceeds received by the LTO in excess of the cost incurred in issuing and processing these special vehicle plates shall accrue to the general unappropriated funds of the national government.

Subject to the approval of the Department of Finance and the Department of Budget and Management, the President mandated the LTO to promulgate the rules and regulations necessary to implement the objectives of the Memorandum Order.

GMA issues E.O. closing Nayong Pilipino, transferring land to MIAA for new terminal

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo has issued Executive Order No. 11 closing down the Nayong Pilipino and authorizing the transfer of 8.6 hectares of the Nayong Pilipino Foundation property in Pasay City to the Manila International Airport Authority (MIAA).

The foundation and the MIAA earlier entered into a memorandum of agreement to effect the transfer of a portion of the land occupied by the Nayong Pilipino park for redevelopment as part of the new passenger terminal at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport known as the International Passenger Terminal 3.

In the executive order, the President explained that the construction of an additional parallel taxiway and surface road connection between NAIA Terminal 2 and Terminal 3 requires the 8.6 hectares of land, covered by TCT No. 18445 of the Register of Deeds of Pasay City, and the closure of the park for the safety of the general public and the security of the premises.

The construction of the taxiway and road link is in compliance with International Civil Aviation Organization flight standards to ensure the safe and efficient movement of passenger, baggage and cargo at the NAIA.

The transfer of the land occupied by the park to another person or entity requires authorization from the President under Section 7 paragraph (a) of Presidential Decree No. 27, which created the Nayong Pilipino Foundation.

GMA underscores need for gov't, private sector cooperation in fighting poverty

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today underscored the need for a continued partnership between the government and the private sector in the country's total fight against poverty.

"I would especially like to seek your support in increasing employment opportunities for the poor," the Chief Executive said in her speech at the Asian Forum on Corporate Social Responsibility held this morning at the Dusit Nikko Hotel in Makati City.

The President said more than 24 million of the 75 million Filipinos, or one out of every three, are poor. "And they will likely remain poor unless we and they themselves do something about it," she said.

The philosophy behind the corporate citizenship is that the Filipino people are more than consumers, more than laborers, more than hired help but part of one society and that "we are all responsible for the well-being of one another beyond business and beyond politics."

The President thanked the organizers for initiating the Asia Forum on Corporate Social Responsibility and for advancing positive approaches to solve the country's social problems.

"Your consolidated program is an appropriate strategy as we in government are also seeking to converge our own social programs. This assures us of maximum reach and cost effectiveness," she declared.

According to the President, the single biggest problem of the country today is unemployment, saying that 13 percent of the country's work force, or almost five million people in absolute number, is out of work.

"I believe that the most important imperative for corporate social responsibility today, and for government programs for that matter, is to attend to this army of unemployed. Either providing them with emergency employment or empowering them to become self-employed or re-engineering them to qualify for the jobs available or providing them maximum basic needs if they absolutely cannot find work,” the President said.

The President also said that the specific pledges made by the members of the corporate community can help push forward the “Kapit-bisig Laban sa Kahirapan” (KALAHI) and it can also inspire similar acts of generosity from the private enterprise.

“We are bent on working closely with the private sector and with the people’s organization and non-government organizations (NGOs) to make a dent in finding jobs and livelihood for our people so as to fight poverty,” she said.

In her meetings with the Regional Development Councils in the country, the President said she discovered “an irony that the most progressive regions in our country are the ones with the highest unemployment.”

The President expressed the hope that the members of the corporate community in the country will “help fund or even run the KALAHI programs for some 1,000 communist-influenced or infiltrated barangays in Regions 3, 4 and even 5.

“Our KALAHI programs must enter those barangays immediately because KALAHI is the face of the government for those deprived areas,” the President said

The President said that if KALAHI fails to come in immediately for lack of funds, or lack of manpower or lack of machinery, a vacuum will be created once again and the insurgents will just return. “So, this is where, I hope, corporate social responsibility will be directed at this time,” she added.

She told participants to the forum that their commitment to enhance their level of exposure in various social development programs could provide government with the flexibility it needs to focus its resources on other urgent national priorities, particularly in bringing down the power rates and enforcing peace and order in Metro Manila.

GMA will assume DFA post if no replacement for Guingona is named by July 15 — Palace

Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. today said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will assume the post of foreign secretary in a concurrent capacity if by July 15, the date when the resignation of Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. as foreign secretary takes effect, no replacement has been named yet.

In his regular press briefing, Afable said the President will assume the post until such time that the special search committee she has formed has finally recommended a nominee and appointed to the vital post.

“With the kind of communication facilities that the Office of the President has, she can run DFA from here,” Afable said.

In a separate interview, Joey Rufino, presidential adviser for political affairs, also said there would be no problem with the President assuming the foreign affairs portfolio since she is, after all, the chief architect of the country’s foreign policy.

But Rufino said he is confident before July 15, the President would be able to appoint the new foreign secretary.

A joint press statement issued Tuesday by the President and Guingona said that the latter’s decision to leave the Cabinet stemmed from “an honest difference of opinion concerning policy.”

“Since the President is the chief architect of foreign policy, the Vice President yields,” the statement said.

According to Afile, the special search committee created by the President is different from the regular search committee in the Office of the President that screens presidential appointees.

The function of this special search committee is specifically to go over the qualifications of nominees for the post soon to be vacated by Guingona, Afile said.

He added, however, that the composition of the special search committee has not been completed yet.

The President's Day: July 4, 2002

04 JULY 2002

- Statement of the President
- GMA bares 8-point foreign policy guideline
- GMA orders Mendoza to solve Metro Manila traffic problem, clear piers of smuggled, goons
- Eliminate kidnapping in one year, GMA tells new PNP chief
- GMA sees more decreases in electricity bills

Statement of the President

I am pleased to announce that the IPP Interagency Review Committee, chaired by the Secretary of Finance and established by the EPIRA (Electric Power Industry Reform Act), has now completed their review of all thirty-five (35) IPP contracts with the presentation of their report to me yesterday.

Of the 35 contracts, the Committee found that –

1. six (6) contracts had passed their review with no legal or financial issues;
2. eleven (11) contracts, while passing the review, have some remedial financial issues that need to be addressed to assure that the government and the public are not being financially prejudiced;
3. two (2) of the contracts, while having some remedial policy issues, were found to be financially sound;
4. eleven (11) contracts have some financial issues that may require re-negotiation of the financial terms;
5. lastly, five (5) contracts were found to have both legal and financial issues that need to be referred for appropriate study, renegotiation and possible legal action.

On the latter (5) contracts, I have instructed the DOJ and PSALM to work together to formulate a plan of action.

For the twenty-two (22) contracts requiring the study or re-negotiation of certain financial terms, I have instructed the DOE and PSALM to initiate the necessary steps to arrive at an acceptable solution to the issues or work out a plan of action for the same.

For the two (2) contracts with remedial policy issues. I have instructed NEDA, in coordination with the DOJ to review these contracts.

I have given these agencies three months to take action on these contracts and come up with results.

It is the overall objective of our administration to reduce the cost of electricity for the consumer, while respecting valid commercial contracts and the Rule of Law. I am confident that the steps to be taken by the relevant government agencies will be consistent with the mandate of EPIRA and our goal of rationalizing the power industry and bringing about lower electricity rates.

GMA bares 8-point foreign policy guideline

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that on July 15, she will assume the post of Secretary of Foreign Affairs in a concurrent capacity.

Addressing the 33rd National Marketing Conference at the Westin Philippine Plaza, the President said that as such she will make sure to strengthen the international linkages not only to fight terrorism and uphold the law everywhere but to be able sell the country's goods and services.

The President said there are eight realities of the regional and international environment which will guide her foreign policy. These are the following:

1. The paramount influence of China, Japan and the United States in the security and economic evolution of East Asia.
2. The growing context of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) in global affairs.
3. The role of the international Islamic community.
4. The looming importance of inter-regional organizations.
5. The protection of the environment, natural resources and maritime territory.
6. The drive for foreign markets and foreign investments in which Europe is also a major source along with the US, Japan, China and Asean.
7. The importance of international tourism, and;
8. The crucial role of the overseas Filipinos in the socio economic stability.

The President said that these eight realities will shape the foreign policy of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

To make our country competitive and attractive to investors, the President said the country must be on the ball in world affairs.

“Why did Malaysia become competitive? Because (Prime Minister) Mahathir was there in world affairs as well as internal reforms,” the President said.

GMA orders Mendoza to solve Metro Manila traffic problem, clear piers of smuggled, goons

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed newly-appointed Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza to work with Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) Chairman Bayani Fernando in solving the traffic problem in Metro Manila.

The Chief Executive issued the directive during the Philippine National Police (PNP) change of command, where Mendoza, as outgoing PNP Director General, handed over the PNP command to Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. in ceremonies held this morning at Camp Crame in Quezon City.

The President also tasked Mendoza to work with Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo “to cleanse the waterfronts all over the Philippines of smugglers and goons.”

According to the President, Bernardo had informed her that unlike Internal Revenue Commissioner Rene Banez who has to deal with white-collared crooks, the Customs Bureau crooks are blue-collared cooks.

This is the reason, the President said, why she decided to have a “top cop to help him there.”

“I need a top cop in the streets of Metro Manila and the ports of the other cities. That is why Larry Mendoza is now the Secretary of Transportation (and Communications),” she added.

In her speech, the President also paid tribute to Mendoza for his stint as PNP chief.

She said Mendoza came well prepared for the top post of the PNP, adding that he is well prepared to be the top enforcer of the streets and waterfronts, carrying a diploma from the Philippine Military Academy, a round of assignments along the entire breadth of police duties, and two masteral degrees.

What makes Mendoza a cut above the rest, the President said, are his outstanding trustworthiness, steadfastness and a tenacious drive to perform his duties well. These, she stressed, are “qualities that came into public view in the tense days of Edsa 2 and also in the May 1 riot last year and in several other occasions that tested the inner strength of many police officers.”

As a top cop, the President added, Mendoza led his men well. He also cared and loved the men and women of the PNP, she added.

The President announced during her speech that as Mendoza leaves his post in the PNP this month, the policemen and policewomen, including the police officers, “will feel their pay increases this July.”

Specifically, the President said, a police master sergeant, starting July, will be receiving a higher pay than the salary of the military brigadier generals.

The President thanked the congressmen for having passed a law increasing the soldiers’ pay. “Incidentally, we will begin to phase in the implementation of that military salary increase at the end of the year,” she said.

She recalled that during Mendoza’s term as PNP chief, she sought from him the further professionalization of the PNP.

“So, in order to increase police visibility and deter crime, especially kidnapping, during Larry’s term, he hired new policemen, all college graduates,” the President said, adding that Mendoza had these policemen and policewomen, old and new, trained and retrained as needed.

The President expressed the belief that the salary increase and the professionalization of the PNP will make the PNP “an attractive force for our good elements in the community to join.”

She also noted that the country’s crime solution efficiency index now stands at 90 percent in kidnap-for-ransom cases.

“The resolution rate was better in the year 2001, Larry’s year, than the year before, with 63 percent of the cases solved compared to 48 percent the year before. And this 63 percent solution rate is so far the highest solution efficiency for kidnap-for-ransom cases in the last five years,” the President said.

At the same time, the President said the market for illegal drugs was significantly downgraded in the year 2001.

“We had our biggest haul in the drug trade last year. We confiscated 500 kilograms of shabu in Quezon province,” she said.

In the case of the shabu raid in Quezon, the President praised the provincial director, Col. Roberto Rosales, and his men for resisting bribery, temptation and catching the biggest fish caught so far in the whole history of the country’s drug war.

She also said the raid on the laboratories in Batangas and Zambales, which netted a total haul of 1,300 kilograms of shabu, and the Quezon drug raid are the largest drug busts ever in the history of the government’s crime-fighting efforts.

Eliminate kidnapping in one year, GMA tells new PNP chief

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today challenged the new chief of Philippine National Police (PNP) to eliminate kidnapping in one year.

Speaking at the formal installation of Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. as the 10th chief of the PNP during the traditional turnover ceremonies at Camp Crame, the President said the “better news was that General Ebdane accepted the challenge.”

The President, however, said Ebdane will not be without expert help in his battle against kidnapping syndicates and against drug lords. She said Ebdane will be assisted by a special task force headed by Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte.

With Ebdane’s ascendance to the top post of the PNP, the President said she has abolished the anti-kidnapping task force under the National Anti-Crime Commission (NACC) and, for that matter, the NACC.

“I am giving Jun (Ebdane) total accountability and responsibility for kidnapping,” the President said.

The President also directed Ebdane to call a summit on kidnapping this coming Tuesday.

The President said she expects this summit to clearly define, once and for all, all the parameters of command responsibility in the police, including the application of due process which, she pointed out, the whole PNP organization must understand and accept.

“After this there will be no more excuses,” the President said.

The President said Ebdane comes very well endorsed by the Chinese-Filipino community and two former Presidents.

In addition to his seniority, and in addition to her own assessment of his loyalty and capability, the President said Ebdane impressed the Chinese-Filipino community with his outstanding integrity when he was head of the Western Police District.

“It was the special trust of the Filipino-Chinese community that I considered when I named Jun Ebdane the head of the controversial Presidential Anti-Organized Crimes Task Force (PAOCTF), and even the head of the NACC, which I especially created to fight kidnapping after the abolition of the PAOCTF,” the President said.

The President said that the anti-kidnapping task force under Ebdane has improved the resolution rate of kidnap cases with its two-pronged approach to kidnapping, which are neutralizing the enemy and educating the community.

GMA sees more decreases in electricity bills

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today took more firm steps to rationalize the power industry and bring about lower electricity rates.

Following the receipt yesterday of the report of the Independent Power Producers (IPP) Interagency Review Committee which conducted a reappraisal of all 35 IPP contracts, the President issued a series of directives that are expected to further reduce the cost of electricity for the consumers while at the same time respecting the rule of law and the validity of legal contracts.

The review committee is headed by Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho and includes Justice Secretary Hernando Perez among its members.

She ordered the Department of Justice (DOJ), Department of Energy (DOE), National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) and Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Management (PSALM) to re-negotiate the contracts, institute policy remedies and take legal action within three months.

“I hope that now that you have a big decrease in your electricity bills, these actions will result with more decreases along the way,” the President said.

Negotiations don’t happen overnight, the President said, adding that “at least there is something to look forward to over the long or short term, depending on how easy or how difficult the re-negotiations will be.”

“We cannot unilaterally just change the rates,” the President said. “Where there is a legal issue, we must go to court. Where there is no legal issue...negotiations.”

Of the 35 contracts, six passed the review with no legal or financial issues, “so they can go and operate and the rates are more or less fair,” the President said.

The six are the Limay (Bataan) Combined Cycle Gas Turbine A; the Navotas Gas Turbine Plant Unit 4; the Ambuklao Hydroelectric Plant; the Toledo Thermal Plant; and the Paragua Diesel Plant.

The President also said 11 contracts passed the legal review but have some financial issues that need to be addressed to assure that the government and the public are not financially prejudiced.

“Maybe in this review, we might be able to find room for some more centavos decrease,” the President added.

The 11 contracts involve the Pagbilao Coal-Fired Plant; the Panamucan Diesel Power Plant; the Leyte-Cebu Geothermal Plant; the Naga Power Plant Complex; the Leyte-Luzon Geothermal Plant; the Mindanao I Geothermal Plant; Malaya Thermal; Zamboanga Bunker-C Fired Diesel Plant; Gen. San. Bunker-C Fired Diesel Plant; Bakun Hydroelectric Plant; and the Mindanao Coal-Fired Thermal Plant.

Two of the contracts reviewed by the committee, while having some remedial policy issues, were found to be financially sound. These are the Benguet Mini-Hydro Plant and the Caliraya-Botocan Kalayaan Project.

“Probably we cannot squeeze any blood anymore from those stones,” the President said.

The President added that 11 other contracts have some financial issues that may require renegotiation of financial terms. “Maybe these renegotiations might bring about some bigger decreases in power rates,” the President said.

The contracts involve the Navotas Gas Turbine Plant Plant Units 1-3; Mindanao Power Barges; Ormat Binary Cycle Geothermal Plant; Bunker C-fired Diesel Generating Plant Iligan I; Bunker C-fired Diesel Generating Plant Iligan II; Subic Bunker-fired Diesel Plant; Bauang Diesel Plant; Bataan EPZA Power Plant; San Pascual Cogeneration Facility; Iligan Natural Gas; and the Mindanao II Geothermal Plant.

Five contracts, according to the President, were found to be both legal and financial issues that have to be referred for appropriate study, whether re-negotiations or possible legal actions, or both.

The five involve the Binga Hydroelectric Plant; the Cavite EPZA Diresel Plant; the Sual Coal-Fired Thermal Plant; the Casecnan Multipurpose Project; and the San Roque Multipurpose project.

Of the five contracts that are both legally and financially problematic, two are not operating, the President said. “So, even if we renegotiate and file legal actions, they won’t result in lower rates,” she added.

The President ordered the DOJ and PSALM to work together to formulate a plan of action on the five contracts.

For the 22 contracts requiring study or renegotiation, she instructed the DOE and PSALM initiate the necessary steps to arrive at an acceptable re-negotiation of the issues.

For the two contracts with remedial policy issues but which are financially sound, the President instructed the NEDA to coordinate with the DOJ in reviewing them.

Gov't to meet deficit ceiling for 2002, GMA assures business community

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the business community that the government would be able to meet its deficit ceiling for this year as she cited positive economic indicators during the past six months.

In her keynote speech at the opening of the 59th Council Meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations-Chamber of Commerce and Industry (ASEAN-CCI) held this morning at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang, the President said if her administration was able to meet its target deficit ceiling last year, it will also be able to achieve its target of P130 billion for 2002.

"We believe we will be able to achieve (the target) this year because our five-month deficit so far is smaller than the five month deficit that we had last year at this time," the President said.

The President said that one proof that the government could meet its deficit target is that the bonds recently floated by the Department of Finance at 12 percent, which she said is too high, were oversubscribed.

"And so, that's why we're quite liquid. And even if we have a deficit right now, the liquidity is there to finance it. And that's why we have interest rates going down again," the President said.

For the first five months of this year, the deficit stood at P107.5 billion, or almost 83 percent of the full year 2002 target. .

Earlier, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said he too is confident that the government will be able to achieve its deficit target of P130 billion for this year, saying that the situation would reverse before the end of the year through improved tax collections.

"The wider gap between revenue and expenditures for the five month period in 2002 is not indicative of our full-year performance," Camacho said.

Aside from the low interest rates, the President said the June inflation rate went down to 3.0 percent from the 3.6 percent in May, which is even below the projected 4.5 to 5.5 percent average target for this year.

The President said that interest rates are at their lowest during her administration in the last 15 years, adding that she has lowered the cost of capital by developing and strengthening the country's financial markets.

She said that in her government's quest for more jobs, it has improved the competitiveness of industries and services in a number of ways.

For example, the President said, the government has taken measures to reduce the cost of power, transportation and communications, which are the lifeblood of commerce.

The President said that with these measures, the ranking of the Philippines from being number six among the most expensive country in Asia in terms of electricity rate, will improve to number two.

To further increase productivity, the President said, the government is strengthening labor-management relations, working to eliminate corruption and red tape, and expanding retraining programs to prepare the country's work force for the demands of the new global economy.

ASEAN remains as cornerstone of Philippine foreign policy, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that more and more foreign policy decisions of her more than 18-month-old administration will have to be made in the context of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

In her speech at the 59th ASEAN-Chamber of Commerce and Industry (CCI) Council Meeting and 15th ASEAN-CCI Conference held this morning at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall, the Chief Executive said the commitment to ASEAN "is a cornerstone of Philippine foreign policy."

The President, who will assume the position of a Foreign Affairs Secretary in a concurrent capacity effective July 15, thanked the officers and members of the ASEAN-CCI led by its president, Jose Concepcion, Jr., for its efforts in pushing for the causes and concerns of the developing world.

The President said she places great importance to regional trading arrangements. "I have faith in the viability of the ASEAN Free Trade Area," she added.

"We cannot generate adequate investments unless we become part of a larger, integrated regional market. This is the only way we can compete for markets and investments with the giants elsewhere in the world," the President stressed.

The President said that ASEAN member-countries are also "looking beyond our immediate borders to extend the benefit of regional integration to our major trading partners in the region – the so-called ASEAN plus Three with China, Japan and South Korea."

At the beginning of the year, the President said, the ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA) process reached a significant milestone when the first signatories of the AFTA agreement — namely, Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand – "achieved tariff levels of zero to five percent on almost all goods traded among us."

The President pointed out that the Philippines will remain firm in implementing its commitments to ASEAN as a strategy to achieve global competitiveness towards attaining sustainable growth and development.

However, she said, that AFTA has a long way to go before becoming an effective means for strengthening the region's competitive position in the global market.

It is for this reason, the President said, why she supports ASEAN's resolve to go beyond tariff cutting. She added that the leaders of ASEAN are now meeting and working on the elimination of non-tariff trade barriers.

"We are harmonizing our product standards and developing mutual recognition arrangements. We are negotiating the liberalization of trade in such important areas as financial services, telecommunications, construction, air and maritime transport, and tourism," she declared.

The President also cited the efforts of ASEAN in binding the region together by expanding the transportation and energy networks and easing the flow of goods, people and power throughout the region.

“We are drafting an agreement to make it easier and less expensive for tourists to come and travel within ASEAN. Closer integration is necessary for the long-term survival and prosperity of each of the ASEAN countries,” she said.

The President lauded the organizers of the conference for having successfully brought together the leaders of the various chambers of commerce and industry of ASEAN.

She also congratulated the Chambers of Commerce and Industry of the Lao People’s Democratic Republic and the Kingdom of Cambodia for their accession to the ASEAN-CCI. “All 10 ASEAN countries are now part of the ASEAN Chamber of Commerce and Industry,” she said.

Earlier, ASEAN-CCI vice president Miguel Varela announced the accession of the Chambers of Commerce and Industry of the Lao People’s Democratic Republic and Cambodia as members of ASEAN-CCI. Concepcion presented copies of the joint accession documents to the representatives of Laos and Cambodia.

GMA: China, Japan, U.S. will be determining influence in security situation, economic evolution of East Asia

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that China, Japan and the United States and their relationships “will be the determining influence in the security situation and, therefore, the economic evolution of East Asia.”

Keynoting the 59th Association of Southeast Asian Nations-Chamber of Commerce and Industry (ASEAN-CCI) and the 15th ASEAN-CCI Conference opening ceremonies held this morning at Malacañang’s Ceremonial Hall, the President said that this aspect is one of the primary realities of the regional and international environment that drives her eight-point foreign policy guidelines.

“With China’s entry into the WTO (World Trade Organization), the nations of ASEAN and ASEAN as a region must reflect on our own economies to determine how we can best position ourselves to ensure the continued competitiveness of our exports and capitalize on the opportunities presented by a more open China,” the President said.

The President, who will assume her post as Foreign Affairs Secretary on July 15 in a concurrent capacity, said the China-ASEAN Free Trade Area will create a market of 1.8-billion people and a combine of Gross Domestic Product (GDP) of $2 trillion.

“It is projected that this would boost ASEAN exports to China by 48 percent and increase ASEAN’s GDP by nine-tenths of one percent,” she stressed.

According to the President, the Philippines will benefit from expanding exports to the rapidly growing Chinese market and developing, manufacturing and service facilities in ASEAN that can feed the expanding mainland operations of Chinese and multinational companies.

“This is an excellent opportunity for our logistic service, manufacturing and commodity firms to develop strong business links with post-WTO China,” she added.

The President said Japan’s trade with ASEAN totaled more than $120 billion last year.

In this connection, the President announced that the outline of an ASEAN-Japan economic partnership is “being worked out.” But in the meantime, she said, a so-called New Age Partnership arrangement with the Philippines is under study.

The President noted that this has become more significant now that Japan is out of recession.

“The rapid phase, depth and breadth of global integration is the foremost reality we face,” she said, adding that this involves not just the flow of goods but also of services, people, ideas, best practices of governance, doing business and investing.

The President pointed out that this factor is linked to another reality in the regional and international environment that guides her foreign policy – “that the country’s economic growth will continue to heavily involve direct foreign investments.”

The President said the Philippines will maintain its economic ties with the rest of the world to the extent that these ties are consistent with the country’s commitments and the welfare of the Filipino people.

GMA views Asean as vital in promoting common goals

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the growing importance of multilateral and inter-regional groups in pushing common interests, particularly trading.

In a speech before the 59th ASEAN-Chamber of Commerce and Industry (CCI) council meeting and 15th ASEAN CCI Conference at the Malacañang Ceremonial Hall, the President said the recognition she placed on multilateral and inter-regional groups was one of the factors that “drives my foreign policy.”

She stressed the importance of ASEAN, a regional grouping whose members are the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, Brunei Darussalam, Thailand, Singapore, Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and Myanmar.

She said she supported the ASEAN’s “rules-based multilateral trading system.”

This is what “the World Trade Organization (WTO) is supposed to be,” she said. “Our support is pragmatic, not ideological. We want what works for the people.”

“It is imperative that the rules underpinning the system ensure economic growth, employment and development for all,” she added, pointing out that everyone should benefit from trade.

If this does not happen, developing nations may be unable to sustain the imports of capital equipment and raw materials. Further, the benefits of trade liberalization will be put in doubt.

“The system itself could lose credibility. This could undermine our ability to mobilize support for trade policy reforms. And it does not help when developed countries persist in maintaining protectionist barriers against products of interest to developing countries like the Philippines and many of the ASEAN countries,” she said.

The products include textiles and garments and tropical, agricultural and fishery products.

The President lamented that while developed countries promote the virtues of a market-driven economy, they subsidize their farm production with billions of dollars.

This prejudices the global commitment to trade flow while emboldening protectionists and complicating the work of officials in developing nations.

The President also stressed that the Philippines would remain focused on several goals that would make the Doha Round — or the 4th WTO Ministerial Conference conducted in Doha, Qatar from November 9 to 14, 2001 — live up to its billing “as truly a development round.”

She said one of the goals focused on how to do away with “tariff escalation and tariff peaks for products of interest to developing countries.”

Philippine trade officials and negotiators should “make these part of the early harvest of results,” she said.

They should likewise convince the WTO to “make corollary efforts to lessen the burdensome requirements for developing countries to meet the stringent standards in developed country markets,” she added.

She noted that compliance, in many cases, has proven to be onerous and expensive.

She noted that Philippine mangoes and bananas have a hard time penetrating the markets in some developed countries that seek exhaustive data collection and certification requirements lasting for years.

She said that “sanitary requirements and technical standards seem to be the weapon of choice of protectionists.”

The Chief Executive also sought greater liberalization of the temporary entry of service providers in the General Agreement on Trade in Services.

She said this has a lot of potential for developing countries and where support for such liberalization is strong such as in the information and communications technology (ICT) sector.

Further, she asked trade negotiators to work on “raising the requirements for the initiation of anti-dumping actions and rationalizing the standards for determining injury” due to dumping.

Dumping occurs when a company exports a product at a price lower than what it normally charges for the same product in the home market.

Another goal she stressed was how to “make special and differential treatment truly operational by providing more funds and resources for capacity building to enhance supply-side capacities, improve private sector competitiveness, implement trade agreements and meet continuing obligations under those agreements.”

The trade negotiators should also focus in assessing the feasibility of providing for the further differentiation of treatment among developing countries.

She stressed that this was imperative, given the wide range of levels of development from the current two categories of least developed and developing. “Because even in the developing category, there are wide variations and circumstances,” she said.

The President said the Philippines would remain supportive of the consensus of the Cairns Group – a coalition of 18 agricultural exporting countries — “that export subsidies in the agricultural sector should be eliminated.”

But she said that “we will make a strong case for special and differential treatment on other agricultural issues to enable us to have sufficient flexibility to pursue vital development goals.”

She cited poverty alleviation as one of the Philippines’ development goals and as a cornerstone of her administration.

Late last May, during the ASEAN Free Trade Area conference in Makati City, the President noted that she placed great importance in regional trading arrangements which she viewed as building blocks towards a more open multilateral trading system.

“They prepare us to compete effectively and give us the confidence to take on multilateral commitments,” she said.

The WTO Ministerial Conference is the organization’s highest-level decision-making body that meets at least once every two years, as required by the Marrakesh Agreement establishing the global trade grouping.

The Doha Round declaration mandates negotiations on a wide range of subjects, and other work including issues concerning the implementation of present agreements.

The negotiations take place in the Trade Negotiation Committee and its subsidiaries. Other work under the work program takes place in the WTO councils and committees.

GMA's PPA order lowers inflation rate for fuel, light and water in Metro Manila

As a result of the order of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to reduce the Purchased Power Adjustment (PPA), the inflation rate for fuel, light and water (FLW) in the National Capital Region (NCR) significantly went down by 19.7 percentage points for the month of June, the National Statistics Office said yesterday.

In a report, the NSO also said this is on top of the decrease in the year-on-year inflation from 3.6 percent in May to 3 percent in June as the inflation rates of all the commodity groups also slowed down.

Notably, the NSO said, the 3.0 percent inflation rate in June is the lowest year-on-year rate registered since May 2000.

In its summary inflation report on the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for the months May and June, the NSO also noted that inflation rate of FLW went down by 19.7 percentage points at 7.1 percent in June from 26.8 percent in May.

The NSO said the decrease is "mainly due to the 14.3 percent annual reduction in the PPA for electricity (from P2.38 per kilowatt per hour in June 2001 to 2.04 per kwh in June 2002)."

Meanwhile, the inflation rate of food, beverages and tobacco (FBT) slid to 1.1 percent in June from 1.4 percent in May; housing and repairs (H&R), to 6.8 percent from 7 percent.

But inflation rates of clothing and services have slightly increased to 3.5 percent and 5 percent in June from their May rate of 3.4 percent and 4.4 percent respectively.

Inflation in the NCR decreased by 1.4 percentage points at 3.7 percent in June from 5.1 percent in May, the lowest inflation rate since July 2000.

According to NSO, this was mainly effected by the 19.7 percentage points decline in the inflation rate of fuel, light and water (FLW).

The inflation rate of food, beverages and tobacco (FBT) eased to 1.8 percent in June from 2.3 percent in May; clothing, 2.6 percent from 2.7 percent; housing and repairs (H&R), 5.0 percent from 5.1 percent; FLW, 3.7 percent from 10.1 percent; services, 4.8 percent from 5.0 percent; and miscellaneous items, 1.8 percent from 1.9 percent.

Meanwhile, inflation rate in Areas Outside NCR slowed down to 2.5 percent in June from 3.0 percent in May due to the decline in the inflation rates of all the commodity groups except for FLW.

GMA cites four realities in regional, int'l environment that drive foreign policy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today outlined four important realities in the regional and international environment that drives her administration's foreign policy.

In her speech before the 59th council meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Chambers of Commerce and Industry (ASEAN-CCI), the President stressed that first of these realities is that more and more Philippine foreign policy decisions have to be made in the context of ASEAN.

ASEAN is composed of the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, Brunei Darussalam, Thailand, Singapore, Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and Myanmar.

She said the country's commitment to ASEAN is a cornerstone of Philippine foreign policy, citing in particular the role of the ASEAN-CCI in pushing for the causes and concerns of the developing world.

"We cannot generate adequate investments unless we become part of a larger, integrated regional market. This is the only way we can compete for the markets and investments with the giants elsewhere in the world," she said.

The second and primary realities, according to the President, is that China and Japan and the United States and their relationships will be the determining influence in the security situation and economic evolution of Asia.

With China's entry to the World Trade Organization (WTO), the President said the nations of ASEAN as a region must reflect on their own economies to determine how they can best position themselves to ensure the continued competitiveness of their exports and capitalize on the opportunities presented by a more open China.

The President pointed out that this reality has become more significant now that Japan is out of recession.

She said the rapid phase, depth and breadth of global integration is the foremost reality that the region is facing.

"This involves not just the flow of goods but also of services, people, ideas, best practices of governance, doing business and investing," the President said.

The third reality that guides her foreign policy is that the country's economic growth will continue to heavily involve direct foreign investment.

Each of the ASEAN member, she explained, is taking an enlightened and balanced approach to the third reality, saying that for the Philippines, "this starts with our vision of winning the battle against poverty within the decade which is mainly by creating jobs and that is mainly by having investments."

Fourth, the President said is that the coming years will see the growing importance of multilateral and inter-regional organizations to promote common interests.

In this context, the Chief Executive said her administration is supportive of the rules-based multilateral trading system which the WTO is supposed to be.

"Our support is pragmatic, not ideological. We want what works for our people," she said.

Moreover, the President said it is imperative that the rules underpinning the system ensure economic growth, employment and development for all.

"Because if we don't benefit from trade, we may not be able to sustain the imports of capital equipment and raw materials," she said.

COMELEC now all set for July 15 polls, GMA, Cabinet told

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today was assured by officials of the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) headed by Chairman Benjamin Abalos that the COMELEC, with the assistance of its deputies, is ready and capable of ensuring the conduct of free, honest, orderly, peaceful and credible Barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan elections on July 15.

Briefing the President and the members of her Cabinet in today's Cabinet meeting on the preparations for the synchronized elections, to be held in ten days, Abalos said that in 41,935 barangays, there will be a total of 671,120 officials to be elected, with more or less 40-million voters going to the polling places on election day.

For these elections, there will be separate ballots, separate election returns and separate tally sheets, with one board of election tellers, and one ballot box per precinct for the Barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan elections.

The COMELEC has reactivated its different working committees and has promulgated resolutions to implement the Omnibus Election Code, RA 9164 and other elections laws, Abalos said.

Abalos also said the COMELEC has also strictly implemented the gun ban.

"We have likewise provided safeguards and ensure the timely delivery of election form supplies and paraphernalia to the field offices," Abalos said.

The COMELEC head said it has deputized other government agencies to help them ensure an orderly conduct of the upcoming elections.

To ensure peace and order, Abalos said the COMELEC has deputized the Department of National Defense, the Armed Forces of the Philippines and its four major services, as well as the Department of Interior and Local Government, the National Bureau of Investigation and the Bureau of Penology and Jail Management.

On election duties, the COMELEC has deputized the Department of Education, whose members will compose the board of election tellers.

And for custody and safekeeping, COMELEC has deputized the Department of Finance.

Other agencies, such as the Department of Transportation and Communications, among others, have also been deputized so that the COMELEC will be able to use their facilities and utilities during and after the elections.

OIC keen on giving RP observer status, says Ermita

The powerful Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) has found no problem in granting the Philippines an observer status.

In a report during the Cabinet meeting, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said OIC Secretary General Dr. Abdelouahed Belkeziz has proposed the formation of a team to visit the country.

Ermita said the OIC team would assess the implementation of the 1996 peace accord between the Government of the Republic of the Philippines (GRP) and the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

The team would be composed of the Committee of the Eight headed by Indonesian Foreign Minister Nur Hassan Wirayuda and other members.

Ermita said a positive OIC report would merit consideration on the country's application for observer status during the 30th Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers (ICFM) in Tehran, Iran in June 2003.

Ermita, together with Governor Parouk Hussin of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), met with Belkeziz on June 25 during the three-day (June 25 to 27) ICFM in Khartoum, the Sudan.

During the Khartoum ICFM, the OIC Final Draft Resolution on the "Question of Muslims in Southern Philippines" noted that the Islamic group:

- Recognized the successful conduct of the plebiscite in the ARMM on August 14, 2001 and the election of Hussin as the new regional governor;
- Renewed its support for the 1996 GRP-MNLF peace pact and called on both parties to preserve the gains achieved as a result of its signing;
- Reaffirmed its position that the question of the MNLF leadership is an internal concern of the MNLF;
- Adopted a forward-looking position in relation to the implementation of the peace pact based on actual conditions on the ground;
- Maintained the observer status of the MNLF;
- Stressed the necessity for the Philippines to finalize the remaining procedures for the full integration of MNLF members into the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police;
- Welcomed the ceasefire between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) and the agreement for unity between the MNLF and the MILF;
- Urged all OIC member-states and subsidiary organs, including the Islamic Development Bank, to increase their economic, financial, technical and material assistance for the rehabilitation and development of Southern Philippines through the ARMM;
- Appealed to all Islamic and other charitable organizations in OIC member-states to continue extending economic, humanitarian and other assistance through appropriate channels to help displaced people in conflict-affected areas; and
- Commissioned the Committee of the Eight and the Secretary General to continue the necessary contacts with the government and the MNLF to define a timetable to finalize the implementation of all the articles of the peace pact.

The presidential adviser said he also had discussions with Wirayuda on the status of the remaining three Indonesian hostages taken by pirates in Philippine waters.

He said he had assured the Indonesian official that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered the military to pursue the kidnappers and recover the hostages.

Ermita said Wirayuda reiterated Indonesia's stand to pull out its monitoring team from Mindanao as "it believes that Phase I of the (1996 GRP-MNLF) Peace Agreement has already been completed."

The Indonesian foreign minister also disclosed that the peace talks between the GRP and the MILF" were not "covered by the mandate of the OIC Committee of the Eight," he added.

Ermita told the Cabinet that on June 26, the Committee of the Eight convened with Belkeziz in attendance, a first in the organization's history, "which showed his real concern over the GRP-MNLF issue."

Besides the positive outlook of OIC member-nation's on the country's efforts to uplift the lives of Muslims, Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Treki disclosed the establishment of the Islamic Development Foundation that would extend assistance to Muslims in the Philippines, Ermita said.

The Philippine delegation to the Khartoum ICFM included Ermita, Hussin, Ambassador to Saudi Arabia Rafael Seguis and his Third Secretary Ezzedin Tago, Philippine Embassy in Egypt Consul General Sahid Glang, Sulu Governor Yusop Jikiri, ARMM Regional Legislative Assembly member Hatimil Hassan, Abdul Sahrin, Office of Muslim Affairs executive director Mujahab Hashim, Abu Amri Taddik, Amil Hamsa Manda, MILF negotiating panel chief Hadji Murad Ebrahim, Ustadz Abdulaziz Mimbantas and Abu Sarip.

GMA shows Filipinos made of sterner stuff in Barira visit

BARIRA, Maguindanao — Tough, decisive, committed.

This was how people described President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo following her visit to Barira, Maguindanao Tuesday.

Dato Akhmad, 63, of Sitio Tugaig, Bambaran, Barira could not believe that he would live to see a President of the republic who is tough enough to go through the daily grind of Iranons in the village.

Akhmad was among over 2,000 men, women and children who patiently waited for the arrival of the President at a clearing in the two-hectare newly-named Camp Duma Sinsuat while drizzles developing into heavy rains fell from time to time, aggravating already bad conditions of the dirt road that snaked its way — through two shallow rivers — to the camp from the national highway in Langkong, Matanog some 9.5 kilometers away.

Camp Duma Sinsuat is the new name of the Bedis Academy where Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) rebels used to train in warfare. It is located at the center of the 10,000-hectare Camp Abubakar, erstwhile MILF stronghold, which is bounded by the towns of Barira, Buldon and Matang, all in Maguindanao province. A recipient of planting materials given under the state's Pagkain ng Masa (Food for the Masses) program, Akhmad came with other folk from different parts of Barangay Bambaran and its environs.

Most, if not all, of them were wet and dripping, their bodies barely covered by banana leaves used as emergency umbrellas and their feet covered with mud.

Like him, 10-year old Zorayda, donned in her blue and white public school uniform, shivered as she tagged at her mother's dress.

Having waited in military tents from 8:00 a.m. until the President arrived near noon, Zorayda shared with her townmates the eagerness to witness a very rare appearance of a President who would visit her place for the first time (although the President had been in Barira poblacion late last year).

"Mabuhay ang Presidente ng Pilipinas (Long live the President of the Philippines)," she, along with some 50 other children, cheered when the Chief Executive arrived.

The cheer was earlier rehearsed, but more than the cheer was the inspiration Zorayda and her peers felt when the President, barely shielded by an umbrella from the downpour, walked through a muddied path dotted with puddles, warmly smiling and waving at her near cold welcomers.

“Matapang siya (She is brave),” was the only comment Zorayda gave. After running like mice to escape the horrors of war in the area as they fought for survival and dear life, the people must have looked up to bravery as a prime virtue.

At about 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, talks went around that the President, supposed to have been flown in by helicopter from Davao City at 9:55 a.m., might cancel her trip to Camp Duma Sinsuat because of the bad weather.

Not even the most experienced chopper pilot would dare fly across a hemisphere of rainclouds nestling on thick foliage of Barira’s mountains.

But throughout the waiting, visitors — including United States Ambassador Francis Ricciardone and his wife – and Barira folk stood their ground, as military radio crackled to know where the President was and if she would come.

Near noon, it was announced that the President was on her way. From Davao, she was flown to the Air Force base in the Awang Airport complex in Dinaig, Maguindanao. She stayed there for several minutes with her party, and led a convoy of about 30 vehicles to Barira, some 70 kilometers away.

The Awang airport is 6.8 kilometers south of Cotabato City. From the city to the Narciso Ramos Highway-Langkong, Matanog crossing is about 54 kilometers. The road stretch from Awang to the highway is paved. A 9.5-kilometer “first class bad road,” however, snakes its way from the crossing inward to Barira.

“She will come?” an awed official of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) said in the Maguindanaon dialect after hearing the announcement

“She’s stern and decisive! She’s fit to be our President,” she noted, as grateful Barira folk applauded upon hearing the announcement.

“We are happy. The President is willing to experience what we go through day in and day out here and comprehend our sacrifices to keep the place secure from rebels and have it developed into a productive area,” an Army soldier of the 54th Engineering Brigade commented.

But more than braving her way through the rain, the bad roads and perceived security risks, people here will remember the President for her commitment to stabilize peace and deliver socio-economic programs and projects to the area and its people.

A barangay official simply nodded his approval as the President later announced that the Army’s 603rd Brigade – based in Picalagan, Sultan Kudarat, Maguindanao – will have to move into Camp Duma Sinsuat.

He averred that existing in a state of war, uncertain of any good future, has never been the cup of tea of the people in Barira. “Now, with the military permanently based here, we can start sleeping soundly, ready and strong to do what we must do to grow as a community,” he said.

He also noted the many improvements — including the roads built, houses and mosques put up and repaired, farmlands made productive again, among others – the military and state agencies have undertaken in Barira.

Officials saw the President’s visit as her way of bringing to the fore her resolve and commitment to find a lasting and meaningful resolution to the problems faced by the people of Mindanao, of which many areas continue to wallow in the quagmire of poverty.

But in her speech, slightly baffled by on-and-off rainfall, the President lauded the toughness of Barira’s people for surviving the sacrifices brought about by conflict and underdevelopment; their decisiveness to ward off the influences of rebellion and distrust to support government initiatives; and their commitment to work hand-in-hand to make themselves more peaceful and more productive citizens of the nation.

Entrepreneurship to narrow ranks of jobless in Metro

In keeping with the commitment of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to provide gainful employment to the citizenry, the Million Jobs Office headed by Luis Lorenzo Jr. is pushing for entrepreneurship and self-employment to generate jobs in Metro Manila

In a statement, Lorenzo said the entrepreneurship program is a multi-agency effort from both government and private sectors.

Lorenzo said he is tapping the Quedan and Rural Credit Guarantee Corp. (Quedancor) to train and finance 50,000 women entrepreneurs in Metro Manila, who will be lent an average of P10,000 after undergoing training on values and the proper handling of finances for businesses they would run.

On July 12, 17 and every 10 days thereafter until it reaches the quota of 50,000 new women entrepreneurs, Quedancor's five offices in the National Capital Region (namely in Roosevelt, Quezon City, Antipolo, Pasay, Dasmariñas, Cavite, and Malabon) will provide capability-building skills for processing, training and lending services to these future entrepreneurs, Lorenzo said.

The President has confirmed attendance in the July 12 and 17 checks distribution.

Lorenzo is also tapping the private sector through Donald Dee of the Employers Confederation of the Philippines (ECOP), Sergio Luis Ortiz of the Philippine Exporters Association and Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI), and Dante Liban of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) on a "skills level program for marketable jobs matched with job fairs and domestic export market-based opportunities."

This particular endeavor will provide market-oriented livelihood opportunities for garments, furniture, stuffed toys and processed food and is envisioned to create 10,000 jobs in depressed areas like Commonwealth and Holy Spirit in Quezon city and other metropolitan slums, Lorenzo said.

Lorenzo is working out with ECOP/PCCI leaders and organized labor groups for the reinstatement of some 300,000 workers in labor subcontracting. Discussions are now centered in "allowing this accommodation under agreed parameters," Lorenzo said.

Additionally, the Jobs Office is also working with the city government of Makati City for the dispersal along Ayala area by August of some 114 food trailers for the livelihood program of the city.

"This pilot program will generate 218 jobs to man the trailers and another three workers per trailer (352 jobs) to handle marketing, cooking and delivery. If it works, we can roll it out all over Manila. Again this is private sector led," Lorenzo stressed.

On July 15, 50 company stores of ECOP will allow their 20,000 employees and families to purchase basic commodities at 20 to 50 percent less than retail market rates.

Lorenzo said he expects that a hundred stores will be put up in a year.

GMA renews call for Filipinos to unite and support the gov't in solving the country's problems

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today renewed her call for the Filipino people to unite and support her administration in solving the country's problems, especially in the fight against poverty and criminality.

In her nationwide radio address this morning, the President said that despite the reduction of the cost of electricity to consumers after she ordered the state-owned National Power Corporation (Napocor) to cut its purchased power cost adjustment (PPCA), the President said there are still a lot of work to do, particularly in maintaining peace and order, generating jobs, and eradicating poverty.

“Kaya humihiling po ako sa inyong lahat—huwag sana tayong mainip, at patuloy tayong magkaisa at magtulongan (That is why I implore all of you—don’t get impatient but unite and cooperate with each other),” the President said.

The President stressed that in order to attract more investments and generate jobs for the Filipino people, the country needs peace and order.

That is why, the President said, she has ordered Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, new chief of the Philippine National Police (PNP), to step up the campaign against all criminal elements, particularly those involved in drug trafficking and kidnapping.

She said that she has given General Ebdane one year to finally put an end to the activities of kidnapping syndicates throughout the country.

The President also said that she has asked Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, a known crime-buster, to help General Ebdane in the campaign against criminal syndicates.

“At sa inyo, mga kababayan, akoy nanawagan na tulungan ang ating mga awtoridad sa ating kampanya laban sa krimen (And to you, my countrymen, I call on you to help our authorities in the campaign against criminality),” the President said.

On PPCA issue, the President said as a consumer herself, she knows the burden that high electricity cost has put on consumers but added that she only inherited the problem from the past administration.

According to the President, her administration is undertaking both short-term and long-term solutions to the problem.

“It is the overall objective of our administration to reduce the cost of electricity for the consumer, while respecting valid contracts and the rule of law,” the President said.

The President said that with the adoption of a 10-point program in solving the power problem, the Philippines hopes to be competitive in electricity rates among its Asian neighbors.

From being second only to Japan in having the costliest electricity rate in the region, the Philippines could slide down to number six with the reforms that she has ordered implemented in the power sector, the President said.

Starting this month, the President said, the cost of electricity in the Philippines would be less than those in Singapore, Hong Kong, Cambodia and Brunei Darussalam.

With reduced electricity rates, more confidence from foreign investors in the Philippine economy can be expected and this would mean more investments. “And new investments, my countrymen, mean more jobs,” the President said.

According to the President, there is now a need to generate jobs for some 4.5 million unemployed Filipinos and that is why the country needs additional investments.

“Kaya kailangan natin ang mas maraming new investments, at kailangan nating maging competitive ang presyo ng ating kuryente, at ng kapayapaan (That is why we need plenty of new investments, and we need to be competitive in the cost of electricity, and to have peace and order),” the President said.

No gov't posts offered to Puno, Policarpio, says Palace

Malacañang today said that no presidential or government appointments have been offered to Messrs. Ronaldo Puno and Jaime Policarpio, two former officials of the administration of deposed President Joseph Ejercito Estrada.

In a statement, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said even if President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has not offered any position to the two, she welcomes any offers of assistance to her administration, made in a private capacity, by well-meaning and competent individuals.

“The President reaffirms good governance as core value of her administration,” Afable said.

Earlier, there were reports that the two former officials were offered posts in the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

Puno was a former undersecretary of the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) while Policarpio was the former chief of the Presidential Legislative Liaison Office (PLLO).

GMA asks Ermita to follow up RP request for observer status in O.I.C.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has directed Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita to follow up the request of the Philippine government for an observer status in the influential Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC).

In a statement, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. today said that the President gave the directive to Ermita in Friday's marathon Cabinet Meeting in Malacañang.

Afable said that in yesterday's meeting, the Cabinet received the report of the Philippine delegation to the 29th Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers held last June 26-27 in Khartoum, Sudan headed by Secretary Ermita.

According to Afable, the President described the OIC as the United Nations of the Islamic world and welcomed the support of the OIC for the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) now headed by Governor Parouk Hussin.

The President said that having an observer status in the OIC would enable the government to access assistance from Islamic financial institutions, which can be used for rehabilitation and development in Mindanao.

According to Ermita, the OIC has found no problem in granting the Philippines an observer status.

He said OIC Secretary General Dr. Abdelouahed Belkeziz has proposed the formation of a team to visit the country preparatory to the granting of an observer status to the Philippines.

Ermita said the OIC team would assess the implementation of the 1996 peace accord between the Government of the Republic of the Philippines (GRP) and the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

The team would be composed of the Committee of Eight headed by Indonesian Foreign Minister Nur Hassan Wirayuda and other members.

Ermita said a positive OIC report would merit consideration on the country's application for observer status during the 30th Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers (ICFM) in Tehran, Iran in June 2003.

GMA orders DA, police to strictly enforce on ban on illegal fishing

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered the Department of Agriculture and police authorities to strictly enforce the ban on illegal fishing to protect the country's fishery resources.

In a statement, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said today that the President's directive was issued after Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor presented the National Fisheries Plan in Friday's Cabinet Meeting in Malacañang.

Afable said that the President also ordered a stop to fishing in over-fished and severely degraded areas, and the immediate provision of alternative sources of livelihood to small fisherfolk in these areas, particularly aquaculture.

The priority areas where this directive will be implemented are in the Southern Tagalog and Bicol regions, Afable said.

The President has also ordered that marine parks, which play a significant role in eco-tourism, will continue to be protected areas, Afable said.

Ateneo cites GMA as "Most Distinguished Alumna in Economics"

The Ateneo de Manila University (ADMU) today conferred on President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo the title of "Most Distinguished Alumna in Economics."

The President was given a plaque with the citation by ADMU President Fr. Bienvenido F. Nebres, S.J. in simple rites at the Henry Lee Irwin Theatre at the ADMU campus in Loyola Heights, Quezon City.

In the citation, the school noted the President was one of its first female faculty members who went on to acquire her doctorate on economics while she continued teaching in the Department.

The school noted that Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo went on to become a member of the Aquino Cabinet, senator, vice president and now, President of the Republic."

The Economics Department of ADMU started out as a sub-department of Social Science. When it was finally established in 1953, it had only one faculty member, Rev. Michael McPhelin, S.J., who became the first moderator of the Economics Society of Ateneo when it was founded in 1962.

Today, the department is widely recognized as one of the most important academic groups in the country. It boasts of faculty members who not only provide analytical assistance to government agencies, multilateral organizations and non-government organizations, but also lead their students into careers that are dedicated to the improvement of the country's economy and national well-being.

In her keynote speech, the President said she hopes that many of her fellow Atenean economists would join her in her bid to improve the economy and specifically lower the electricity rates.

Accompanying the President in the event were daughter Evangeline Lourdes "Luli" Arroyo and Presidential Adviser on Jobs Generation Luis Lorenzo.

On hand to welcome the President at the campus, aside from Fr. Nebres, were Social Sciences Dean Fr. Jose Cruz, S.J., Doctors Leonardo Lanzona (Department Chair), Luis Dumlao (graduate program director) and former Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Cielito Habito (Economic Research and Development Director).

GMA says 10-point program to reduce electricity cost and reform power sector

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that ten-point strategy that she had earlier announced would reduce the high cost of electricity and reform the country's power sector.

In her keynote speech marking the 50th anniversary of the Economics Department of the Ateneo de Manila University in Quezon City, the President noted the need to make the country competitive in attracting investments.

"We all know (that) in a free enterprise economy, to create job, the primary means is to encourage investments. And to encourage investments, we must be competitive, including in our electricity rates," the President said.

The President, who was cited as ADMU's Most Distinguished Alumna in Economics, said power consumers could expect lower electricity bills this month due to her instructions to the National Power Corporation (Napocor) to lower the purchased power cost adjustment (PPCA).

Starting this month, the President said, the cost of electricity in the Philippines would be less than those in Singapore, Hong Kong, Cambodia and Brunei Darussalam.

In her 10-point program, first, the President said the government wants to reflect the true cost of service which has been happening now with what Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) did through the unbundling of the electricity rate and its cease and desist order to Meralco sometime ago which has resulted in lower electricity rate this month.

Under the first point, the President said the government should ensure that the consumers should only be charged the true and fair cost of electric services and power that they have used.

She said the government will seek the elimination of charges from onerous contracts, stressing the need to review the contracts with the independent power producers (IPPs) and other contracts that the ERC is studying as well as regulatory loopholes such as the valuation and appraisal of assets.

Second, she said, is to introduce the declining block rate structure by introducing special pricing incentives for large consumers of electricity specially business and industries, to reduce cost of over capacity and encourage expansion in manufacturing and commerce.

Third, the President said we would optimize the utilization mix of Napocor's power plants by finding out the different efficiencies of the different plants.

Further, she said the government would review and upgrade the country's power development plan to better distribute generation capacity in relation to load centers, upgrade transmission system and minimize the vulnerability of the power grids from blackouts.

This move will include the transfer of power barges and matured build-operate-transfer (BOT) plants to regions where they can be better utilized and the enhancement of Napocor generation companies by providing them with better markets and quality supply contracts.

Fourth, the President saw the need to accelerate the operation of the wholesale electricity spot market (WESM) to provide a trading platform for power price competition and give power users a fair and transparent way to determine realistic power cost.

Fifth, the President said there must be an acceleration in the implementation of open access, which means that big buyers who buy more than 1 megawatt can choose the generating company they want to buy from.

While the law says that it should be done in four years, she said the open access implementation could be accelerated because consumer choice will certainly provide for greater competition and lower prices.

Correspondingly, she said the government would provide consumers with genuine supplier alternative through competition and encouragement of new players in the electric industry power sector.

Sixth, the President called for the promotion of efficient performance of distribution utilities by prescribing measurable standards of consumer service, shift to new rates setting methods that better protect consumers, assure integrity in procedures, and close all loopholes without necessarily denying the utilities' right to earn the legal and fair return for their investment and services.

The seventh point of the measures is to strengthen and consolidate rural electric cooperatives, seek long-term solutions and strengthen them as distribution utilities in preparation for deregulation as mandated by the Electric Power Industry Reform Act.

Eighth, the President sought the review of IPP contracts and reduce contract cost, saying that whatever is completed in the review must already be submitted so that the government can begin the renegotiations.

Ninth, the President proposed the further exploration of financial engineering methods which the government has been doing and has resulted in the reduction of Napocor's PPCA to 40 centavos.

This action, she said, will reflect in the electricity bills starting next month.

Lastly, the President said the government would help enhance the institutional capability of the ERC and encourage it to assert its mandate.

- GMA orders study on expansion of drug rehab center in Region 12
- GMA urges more aggressive campaign to make Philippines top producer of bananas, mangoes
- GMA quest for PAF anniversary tomorrow

EO 110 places PDTF under PCFC to spur microfinance projects for poor

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has issued Executive Order (EO) 110 directing the People's Credit and Finance Corporation (PCFC) to administer the People's Development Trust Fund (PDTF) and ensure the delivery of microfinance services to the poor and help them develop enterprises.

In signing the EO last June 20, the President said the PDTF was set up under Republic Act. 8425, also known as the Social Reform and Poverty Alleviation Act.

She said the PDTF should be used to develop a nationwide network of viable and sustainable micro-finance institutions and micro-enterprise business development service groups.

But the PDTF should also provide a supportive and appropriate policy environment and institutional framework for a private-led micro-financial market, she said.

Under RA 8425, the President was empowered to assign the administration of the PDTF to the PCFC, a government-controlled corporation registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission pursuant to Administrative Order 148 dated September 8, 1994.

The PCFC is tasked to mobilize financial resources from both local and international funding sources for micro-finance services for the exclusive use of the poor.

The act also assigned the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) to monitor the utilization of the PDTF.

As such the, NAPC shall source funds for establishing and augmenting the PDTF and recommend to the PCFC the accreditation of groups and institutions that shall act as resource partners in conducting institutional development and capability-building activities for accredited organizations and beneficiaries of micro-finance and micro-enterprise programs.

It shall further ensure that validation and monitoring activities are conducted for funded institutional development and capability building projects/programs/beneficiaries; and promote research and development work on livelihood and micro-finance technology and publications/communications programs that assist beneficiaries.

The PDTF has been allotted P4.5 billion over a span of 10 years and other additional amounts provided through voluntary contributions, grants and gifts from both local and foreign sources as may be accepted or decided on by the NAPC.

“Any amount added to the PDTF shall form part of the Corpus of the PDTF, unless the donor, contributor or grantor expressly provides as a condition that the amount be included in the disbursable portion of the PDTF,” she said.

The PCFC directly administers the utilization of the trust fund. “With the approval of the Department of Finance, the PCFC shall deposit the PDTF in a duly authorized banking institution; and /or invest the PDTF in government securities.

The PCFC shall not have the authority to invest the PDTF in other securities or assets, ” she said.

As provided under Section 11 of RA 8425, PDTF income should be used for:

- Consultancy and training services for micro-finance institutions and their beneficiaries on the establishment of the necessary support services, social and financial preparation of beneficiaries, preparation of plans and programs including fund sourcing and assistance, establishment of credit and savings monitoring and evaluation mechanisms;
- Scholarships or training grants for micro-finance staff and officers, and selected beneficiaries;
- Community organizing for micro-finance, livelihood and micro-enterprise training services;
- Livelihood/micro-enterprise project/programs, and other similar facilities;
- Information and communication systems, such as baseline surveys, development monitoring systems, socio-economic mapping surveys, organizational assessments and other similar activities;
- Legal and other management support services such as registration, documentation, contract review and enforcement, financial audit and operational assessment;
- Information dissemination of micro-finance technology and
- Other activities to support micro-finance, as approved by the PCFC.

The EO also provides that the PDTF may be accessed by registered micro-finance organizations engaged in providing micro-enterprise services for the poor, local government units (LGU) providing micro-finance and micro-enterprise programs to their constituents; and LGUs with self-help projects where at least 25 percent of the total earnings of the PDTF shall be used exclusively for the provision of materials and technical services.

As PDTF administrator, the PCFC shall not qualify as a PDTF grantee.

The EO shall take effect 15 days from publication in two newspapers of general circulation.

GMA orders study on expansion of drug rehab center in Region 12

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has directed Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman to study the possibility of expanding the capacity of the drug rehabilitation center in Davao City to accommodate the reported increasing number of drug users in Region 12.

The President made this directive during the 13th Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) meeting in Cotabato City last Tuesday.

Region 12 is composed of the provinces of North Cotabato, Sarangani, South Cotabato and Sultan Kudarat and the cities of Cotabato, General Santos, Kidapawan, Koronadal and Tacurong.

During the meeting, RDC Region 12 chairman and Cotabato City Mayor Muslimin Sema told the President that while there is lack of information on the magnitude of the drug problem, “there is an apparently increasing number of drug users, especially among the youth in the region.”

Sema noted that most of these drug users are coming from poor families who could not afford to pay for rehabilitation-related expenses.

“They need to be rehabilitated to keep them from making further troubles in the community,” Sema said.

The nearest rehabilitation center is situated in Davao City, which is about 250 kilometers from the center of Region 12.

According to Secretary Soliman, the Davao rehabilitation center only serves as a “halfway house” for first-stage drug addicts and can only accommodate about 50 patients at one time.

The President also ordered all other agencies such as the Department of Health (DOH) and the Dangerous Drugs Board (DDB) to assist the DSWD in the proposed expansion program of the Davao rehabilitation center.

She said there is no need at the moment to set up another rehabilitation center elsewhere in the region since rehabilitation cases are not necessarily emergency cases.

GMA urges more aggressive campaign to make Philippines top producer of bananas, mangoes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is battling for a more aggressive campaign to make the Philippines the top producer and exporter of bananas and mangoes in the world.

During her visit to the Davao region last week, the President urged the people of Davao del Norte to work towards the goal of making the Philippines as the number one banana producer even as she congratulated the province for being the center of the country’s “strong and vibrant” banana industry.

Aside from the upward trend in the banana industry, the Bureau of Agricultural Statistics (BAS) has reported that mango output in Region XI has increased in the first quarter of this year by 6.77 percent.

Davao del Sur remained by far the region’s biggest producer, accounting for more than 50 percent of total production with 1,640.4 metric tons, followed by Davao Oriental at 715 metric tons. Davao City at 560 metric tons. Davao del Norte at 322 metric tons and Compostela Valley at 175.037.

For the first quarter of year 2002, the entire Davao region accounts for the production of 482,553 metric tons of banana and 3,462 metric tons of mango.

As compared to the same period last year, banana and mango production grew by 2.9 percent and 6.7 percent, respectively.

In a report to the President, Regional Development Council (RDC) Chair for Region XI Jesus Ayala said they are pushing for a fully integrated mango industry cluster to enable them to establish a strong niche for both domestic and export markets by year 2004.

Ayala said they have just recently started branding the region’s mangoes, some of which have already found their way in the stringent Taiwanese and Australian markets, thus providing that they have reached world standards.

Further, Ayala said they are also pushing for the strengthening of tropical fruit research and mango information network, engage in investment promotion, and undertake more aggressive market promotion and development.

As for the banana industry, Ayala informed President Macapagal-Arroyo of plans to encourage investors to go into banana processing and packaging.

During her visit to the Davao region, the President disclosed that the Philippines is now the world’s number three banana-producing country after displacing Columbia.

She said that if the big China market would be added to the traditional markets of the Philippines for its banana exports, then the country might become the world's top banana-exporter.

"We might even become the number two or the number one banana producer in the world, and that is up to the people of Davao del Norte to work for it," the President said.

GMA quest for PAF anniversary tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will be the guest of honor and speaker during the celebration of the 55th anniversary of the Philippine Air Force (PAF) tomorrow.

During the program, the President will lead in the traditional parade and review, inspection of troops and the awarding of different medals to 21 distinguished men and women of the PAF.

After her speech, the President will receive a memento from Lt. Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Jr., PAF commanding general.

Prior to the program, spectators will be treated to a sky-diving, fly-by aircraft exhibition and an all-female silent drill.

Among this year's PAF honorees are the following; former Western Command chief, Maj. Gen. Santiago Madrid who died in a helicopter crash in Palawan last year; Maj. Gen. Marciano Ilagan as commander of Tactical Operations Command for taking charge of the air attack in Kabatangan against a group of some 300 MNLF renegades; First Lt. Ma. Rita Fabian as pilot of an OV-10A aircraft during a major air strike and close air support mission against armed MILF guerillas in Maguindano; First Lts. Gaudencio Laureon and Jun Samilin, pilots of an UH-1H helicopter that recovered the hostage victims held by the Abu Sayyaf in Sirawai, Zamboango del Norte;

Col. Jose Saplan for his distinguished service in the development of the retrofitted "Layang II" aircraft project; T/Sgt. Virgilio Dris, munitions and armament technician; Col. Jose Nano, officer-in-charge of 15th Strike Wing; Col. Valentino Prudencio, officer-in-charge, 3rd Tactical Operations Wing (TOW); Brig. Gen. Rodante Joya, wing commander, 220th Airlift Wing; Col. Vladimir Trino, wing commander, 2nd TOW; Lt. Col. Carlix Donila, Tactical Operations Group XII; Maj. Raymundo Elefante of 206th Tactical Helicopter Squadron; T/Sgt. John Redota, Engineer Abraham Acosta, Rosalinda Bilog, Cadet Major Rodel Curaza and ROTC cadet Capt. Loraine Pilingen.

For the past year, the PAF has completed 20,898 flying hours, a 40- percent increase from year 2000.

PAF records showed that the bulk of these sorties directly supported government initiatives to re-establish and preserve peace by way of close air support, combat air patrol, air interdiction, transport of logistics and personnel, ferry of VIPs, search and rescue missions, medical evacuation and support to the May national elections.

During the PAF's anniversary celebration last year, General Defensor introduced the new title, "First Force," which aims to transform the PAF into an institution, focused on the completion and development of its core competencies.

First Force is both an operational and development strategy, combining the objectives of the Armed Forces of the Philippines' (AFP) national military strategy, the focus of PAF's airpower strategy and the thrusts of AFP modernization.

PAF's path to modernization includes aircraft upgrade projects, acquisition projects, bases support and system development and real estate management.

Future Balikatan to have heavy dose of night flying exercises, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today disclosed that the future Balikatan exercises will have a heavy dose of night flying and other capabilities that will enhance the expertise of the military, particularly the Philippine Air Force (PAF).

In her speech during the 55th anniversary of the PAF at the Villamor Air Base in Pasay City, the President also stressed that while the coming Balikatan will have a Sulu component, the joint Philippine-United States military exercises should come back to Luzon, to Clark Air Base in Pampanga, to Fort Magsaysay in Nueva Ecija, and to Camp Capinpin in Tanay.

“The Balikatan exercises of 2001 and 2002 breathe new life into our training programs. Future Balikatan and other programs under our various bilateral and multilateral agreements will have a heavy dose of night flying and other capabilities that will enhance the expertise of the Philippine Air Force,” she said.

A large part of this year's Balikatan exercises, according to the President, will be concentrated on maintenance training and other measures that will ensure the safety of Filipino pilots.

The President recalled that several aircraft accidents have claimed the lives of pilots such as Capt. Daniel Policarpio, Lt. Mary Grace Tenorio and Lt. Rizza Simon.

Also in her speech, the President saw the need for reliable air surveillance equipment as highlighted during the conduct of the Balikatan exercises.

“Balikatan showed us how indispensable these are. Our pilots need electronic eyesight when navigating in bad weather or at night,” she said.

In view of the $10-million pledge of military assistance from US President George W. Bush, the President instructed Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu to make sure that the drawdown will include electronic eyesight equipment that will enable PAF pilots to fly at night and in bad weather.

The President recalled that in her speech during the PAF anniversary celebration last year, she committed the selling of the Presidential plane to augment the PAF modernization funds.

“We have put that plane on the block, but so far there have been no takers,” she said.

During the occasion, the President took the opportunity to thank Sen. Loren Legarda, Rep. Gilbert Teodoro as well as the other senators and congressmen for paving way for the passage of a law that would increase the salary of soldiers to the level of the teachers.

She said the phase-in implementation of the law raising the salary of soldiers will be realized using the savings at the end of this year.

GMA congratulates PAF men for role in rescue of Gracia Burnham

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the gallant members of the Philippine Air Force (PAF) for their significant role in the rescue of American missionary Gracia Burnham from the hands of the Abu Sayyaf Group.

“Because of you, Gracia Burnham is alive today,” the President said in her speech during the 55th anniversary celebration of the PAF at the Villamor Air Base in Pasay City.

In her speech, the President recalled a story told to her by Gracia Burnham when she was rescued by the military during the encounter with the group of Abu Sabaya in Sirawai, Zamboanga del Norte.

The President said Gracia recounted to her how she was extricated by Air Force helicopter within one hour from the start of the firefight in the heavily forested area in Sirawai.

According to the President, Gracia told her how the Air Force men attended to her and comforted her during the helicopter flight to the Southern Command headquarters in Zamboanga City.

“She said she was so touched when one of them kept tapping her cheek lightly to revive her and pleading, ‘Don’t die, don’t die,’ and she didn’t die,” the President said.

“Gracia Burnham told me after telling the story of the men in the helicopter ministering to her, ‘Madam President, you must be very proud of your men,’” the President said.

For that very momentous occasion, two of the Air Force helicopter pilots who participated in the rescue of Gracia Burnham were awarded in yesterday’s ceremony with Gold Cross Medals. The pilots were Lt. Gaudencio Lauron and Lt. Jun Samilin.

“Both braved hostile fire, treacherous terrain and hazardous weather to bring Gracia Burnham to safety,” the President said.

At the same time, the President paid tribute to the other awardees in this year’s PAF anniversary celebration led by the late Maj. Gen. Santiago Madrid who died in a helicopter crash in Palawan shortly after last year’s elections.

She also cited Lt. Maria Rita Fabian, one of the first to see action in Buldon, Maguindanao, for personifying the power and capability of female combat pilots and all other female combatants of the AFP.

“Our female pilots are outstanding. They make it easier for our male soldiers to deal with a female Commander in Chief,” the President said.

Furthermore, she commended the vigilance of the Tactical Operations Command under Maj. Gen. Marciano Ilagan for pre-empting a rebel attack last November in Cabatangan Complex in Zamboanga City.

The President also cited the innovative spirit of the Air Force research and development under Col. Jose Saplan, the heroic rescue efforts of Lt. Col. Edgar Fallorina in the Sirawai operations, as well as the effective non-combatant support provided by T/Sgt. Virgilio Dris to air strikes against the enemy in Mindanao.

She also acknowledged the exemplary service provided by the 250th Presidential Airlift Wing for taking care of her safety while conducting sorties in the different provinces and regions throughout the country.

After her speech, PAF commanding general Lt. Gen. Benjamin Defensor presented to the President a memento in recognition of her inspiring effort in taking the lead in building a faster and stronger and better Air Force.

Among those who attended the PAF anniversary celebration were Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Sen. Loren Legarda, Rep. Gilbert Teodoro, AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu, AFP Vice Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Gregorio Camiling, and Philippine Navy Flag Officer-in-Command Vice Admiral Victorino Hingco.

GMA directs PAF to help in drive vs. kidnapping, other high crimes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed the Philippine Air Force (PAF) and the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to jointly embark on a high mission to fight kidnapping and other similar heinous crimes.

Speaking at the 55th PAF's anniversary celebration at the Villamor Air Base in Pasay City, the President also directed the 730th Civil Security Group (CSG) and the Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (AKTAF) to attend the anti-kidnapping summit to be held tomorrow at the Manila Hotel.

The said summit, which is being spearheaded by the Philippine National Police (PNP), will be mainly focused on kidnappings, illegal drugs and command responsibility.

In order to have more investments and provide more jobs, the President urged both the AFP and the PAF to pursue not just the terrorists but also members of kidnap-for-ransom gangs.

During her speech, the President suggested that the PAF's civil security group should now be attached to AKTAF, the anti-kidnapping task force of the AFP, which was formed last year shortly after the rescue of American kidnap victim Jeffrey Schilling.

The President said AKTAF was originally created to help the police fight urban kidnapping.

The 730th CSG is the group that helped quell the May 1, 2001 riot in Malacañang. It was later attached to "Task Force Libra" to beef up the security of the seat of power.

"But since the threat of destabilization has died down and Task Force Libra is mainly to protect the seat of government against destabilization, I think that the group should now be attached to AKTAF," the President said.

The President noted that when the Dos Palmas kidnapping occurred, the AKTAF devoted much of its effort in the year-long siege against the Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG).

"With the ASG now largely degraded, the AKTAF should now go back to fighting urban kidnapping," the President said.

According to the President, a relentless pursuit of terrorist has won the country praise from the international community.

However, she stressed that what the country needs is not just praise from the international community as well as from the national community but "investments to create more jobs for our people and earn not only their praise but also their investments."

"I commend all our airmen for their year-long achievements, and I hope that you will also join in the fight against kidnapping and crime because I consider these as serious threats to our national security," the President stressed.

GMA orders crash program to check depletion of fisheries resources, poverty in six bay areas

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed the Department of Agriculture (DA) and the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources (BFAR) to undertake a crash program in six bays to address the depletion of fisheries resources and persistent poverty among the fisherfolk in these areas.

In a press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable Jr. said the instructions were issued by the President during an Executive Committee Meeting which she presided over this afternoon at Malacañang.

Afable identified the six bays as Calauag Bay, Tayabas Bay, San Miguel Bay, Ragay Gulf, Lagonoy Gulf and Sorsogon Bay, all in the Southern Tagalog and the Bicol Regions.

Afable said the President also ordered the Agriculture Department to release P16 million for the training of fishermen in these areas in aquaculture and seaweed farming and to get them alternative sources of livelihood.

Afable noted that the crash program for the fisherfolk will start within the next few days.

The President did this, he said, because during her trips to the regions she saw that “there was really very extensive poverty among the fisherfolk in the marine degraded areas.”

According to Afable, the DA presented the National Fisheries Program during the last Cabinet Meeting in the Palace.

“The President wanted this program focused and telescoped on these six areas immediately,” Afable said, adding that “this will really be a crash program on these areas because she feels that the fisherfolk there are really in need of some relief from the government.”

GMA acts to ensure entry of RP pineapple exports to Australia

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Department of Agriculture, Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of Foreign Affairs to work together to collate all the technical papers to bolster the position of the Philippine government and to come up with a stand within 30 days to ensure the entry of the country’s pineapple exports to Australia.

Briefing reporters at Malacañang, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said the President issued the directive during an Executive Committee Meeting, which she presided over at the Palace this afternoon.

“As we know, there have been sanitary standards that are being imposed by Australia on Philippine pineapple,” Afable said.

Afable stressed that this technical position “will, in effect, seek reconsideration of the standards or constraints imposed by Australia on Philippine pineapple.”

Asked whether the Philippines will also export bananas to Australia, Afable said the Australian position on bananas is still on the draft stage.

“It is not yet final. The position on pineapple is final,” he said.

GMA orders all-out war against 21 kidnap syndicates

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered an all-out war against 21 kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) syndicates operating in the country.

“We target 21 KFR syndicates... It is all-out war against the 21 KFR syndicates,” the President told the top police commanders of the country, from the newly-installed Philippine National Police chief, Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., down to the regional and provincial commanders gathered at the Manila Hotel for the Summit on Illegal Drugs, Kidnapping and Command Responsibility.

Three of these 21, which are considered the most active, will be the biggest target, the President told the audience, which included not only the nation's top police commanders but also leaders of non-government organizations actively involved in anti-crime campaigns.

Intelligence efforts will be concentrated on these syndicates, she said.

Earlier, the President asked Ebdane what the government is up against and how many KFR syndicates are now operating in the country.

Ebdane replied: “As of this time, we have 21 kidnap-for-ransom syndicates. Compared to last year, we had 26. So we actually neutralized five for year 2001 up to the middle of this year.”

The President ordered the all-out war against kidnapping syndicates in an effort to ensure peace and order in the country, attract more investments, particularly from abroad, generate more jobs for the people and, ultimately, win the war against poverty.

The President stressed that the effort will not be limited to the 21 identified KFR rings. If there is new information on other syndicates, these gangs will also be targeted, she added.

In his briefing on the kidnapping situation in the country, Ebdane vowed that the PNP will work harder to improve on the 63-percent solution rate of kidnapping cases in 2001.

“The first six months of 2002 reflect the results of our hard work: a 33-percent decrease in reported KFR incidents and 63 percent less victims from the Chinese-Filipino sector,” he said.

Ebdane stressed that the overall directions against kidnapers are contained in the National Anti-KFR Campaign Plan which, he said, provides comprehensive action parameters for key operational areas.

He also said that information on KFR groups and their members have been inputted into what is now a growing KFR Database.

On the need for modern surveillance and operational equipment, Ebdane said that part of the allocation from the President of P200 million for anti-kidnapping operations has been utilized for this purpose.

Ebdane likewise thanked the Chinese-Filipino community for the generous support they have extended in the form of new equipment.

In Washington, United States President George W. Bush expressed anew his appreciation for efforts of the Philippine government led by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to take action and get results in the international war against terrorism.

“There’s a lot of action that take place that you’ll never see,” Bush told White House correspondents during a press conference Monday (Tuesday in Manila).

“Some of it will continue to take place as a result of the actions of our friends, such as that which took place in the Philippines – Abu Sayyaf, the leader evidently was killed by Philippine troops. And that’s positive. That’s a positive development,” the US President said.

PNP vows stepped-up war against drugs

The Philippine National Police (PNP) today vowed to step up its campaign against illicit drugs as it vigorously implements Presidential Letter of Instructions No. 1 or the National Anti-Drug Program of Action (NADPA) issued by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on July 4, 2001.

“The government may be waging an uphill battle against the drug menace. But with the full and sustained implementation of the National Anti-Drug Program of Action, we are optimistic that we shall realize our vision of a drug-free Philippines earlier than 2010,” police Chief Superintendent Ruben Cabagnet said in his report to the President during the Summit on Illegal Drugs and Kidnapping and Command Responsibility held this morning at Manila Hotel’s Centennial Hall along Roxas Boulevard in Manila.

Cabagnet, who is officer-in-charge of the PNP Anti-Narcotics Group, said the year 2001 and the first semester of 2002, which marks the salvo of NADPA, “is characterized by large seizures of illicit drugs.”

NADPA is a unification of efforts of the different national government agencies, local government units and non-government organizations. It provides for a holistic approach in combating and eradicating the drug menace.

Cabagnet said Presidential LOI No. 1 proved its importance in the campaign against illicit drugs.

“This was realized with a greater arrest rate in the year 2001 as compared to the preceding year,” he said.

He noted that the Anti-Drug Enforcement Units nationwide, with the PNP Narcotics Group in the forefront, conducted a total of 36,070 positive narcotics operations.

According to Cabagnet, a total of 32,227 people were likewise arrested and 22,012 cases filed.

“The total confiscation and seizure of illegal drugs are 1,561,145 grams of shabu; 22 pieces of Nubain ampules; 263 kilograms of Ephedrine; 39 tablets of ecstasy; 2,184 tablets of Bangkok pills; 2,050 grams of cocaine; 706,418 grams of dried marijuana leaves; 2,684,413 pieces of fully-grown marijuana plants; 73,023 grams of marijuana seeds; 5,607,646 pieces of marijuana seedlings, 10 grams of hashish and 10 grams of heroine or a total market value of P3.9 billion,” he said.

Cabagnet also reported that from January to May 31 this year, the Anti-Narcotics nationwide conducted a total of 9,940 positive narcotics operations. He added that 12,276 people were arrested and 8,127 cases filed in court

A total of 28,430 grams of shabu; 2,977,371 marijuana plants; 625,446 marijuana seedlings; 1,009,119 dried marijuana leaves; 265,000 grams of hashish; 15,331 grams of marijuana seeds; 6,308 kilograms of cocaine; and 465 liters of Ephedrine were seized. All these have an estimate value of P801.5 million.

He told the President that the strategy being adapted by the PNP in the war against illicit drugs is prescribed in the Master Plan SANGBANAT: BANAT (Barangay Against Narcotics Abusers and Traffickers).

Cabanot defined BANAT as a sustained campaign against the use, distribution/trafficking and manufacture of illicit drugs, and the rehabilitation of drug dependents.

“The strategy empowers the barangay as a self-policing entity in clearing itself of drug affectation,” he stressed.

Records show that as of May this year, 4,006 or 9.5 percent of the 42,061 barangays nationwide are affected by drugs involving 1.8 million regular users and 1.6 million occasional users.

He also said that while the emergence and discovery of clandestine laboratories indicate a daring shift in strategy by drug traders to expand local production, shabu supply suffered a major setback during the months of February and March after the interdiction of 853 kilograms in Quezon City and Zambales and the dismantling of the San Juan clandestine laboratory.

Cabanot said that based on intelligence reports, there is a lull in illegal drug trade which is “attributed to the anticipation and fear of the new drug law.”

“The PNP foresees a drastic downtrend of the illegal drug market in the coming months due to Republic Act No. 9165 and the imposition of stringent responsibility and public accountability check on drug enforcers,” he said.

Gov’t prepared to fund contingency measures in calamity-stricken areas, says Boncodin

The government is prepared to finance contingency measures to speed up the relief and rehabilitation of areas in Metro Manila and other parts of Luzon hit by continuous rains brought about by monsoon rains and typhoon “Gloria.”

In a radio interview, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin noted that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had already alerted various government agencies to use, if necessary, their individual Quick Response Fund (QRF).

“At kung kukulangin ay magsabi lang sa amin sa DBM (And if it’s not sufficient, they need to only inform the Department of Budget and Management),” Boncodin said.

To date, Boncodin said, she considers the government’s calamity fund as very much adequate.

“So far, ang nakikita ko, yung calamity fund natin ay sapat na sapat pa (I deem that the calamity fund is very much sufficient),” she said.

On Monday, the President ordered the release of P300 million to various national government agencies engaged in relief and rehabilitation activities in calamity-stricken areas.

Boncodin said that out of the P300 million QRF, P100 million will go to the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), P80 million to the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH), P60 million to the Office of Civil Defense, and P60 million to the Department of National Defense.

According to Boncodin, arrangements are now being made to formally transfer funds for flood control projects in the National Capital Region (NCR) from the DPWH to the Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) as ordered by the President.

She said that funds for flood control projects in Metro Manila are adequate.

In a related development, the DSWD said that as of Tuesday, it has released, through local government units, non-government and government organizations, the amount of P3,073,887.23 in their efforts to help those affected by the typhoon.

The DSWD also attended to a total of 58,276 families of which 4,667 families or 20,651 individuals were accommodated in 96 evacuation centers.

Relief operations are continuously being conducted through the concerted efforts of the member-agencies of the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC).

GMA gets briefing on policies on command responsibility

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was presented today with the situation briefing on the policies on Command Responsibility in the Philippine National Police.

PNP Director for Personnel and Records Management Virtus Gil gave the lecture during the Summit on Kidnapping, Illegal Drugs and Command Responsibility at the Manila Hotel.

During the briefing, Gil recounted the background of command responsibility through the series of executive orders and memorandum circulars.

Gil defined the doctrine of command responsibility as the accountability of every police commissioned officer (PCO) to closely supervise, coordinate, control and monitor the discharge of duties by subordinates as well as the responsibility to control and monitor the activities of others who are operating within his area of jurisdiction and to take preventive or corrective measures as may be warranted.

Gil also underlined the accountability of any government official and supervisor, or officer of the PNP or that of any other law enforcement agency in the principle of “neglect of duty” in the doctrine.

He said this official shall be held accountable if “he has knowledge that a crime or offense shall be committed, or has been committed by his subordinates, or by others within his area of responsibility; and, despite such knowledge, he did not take preventive or corrective action either before, during or immediately after its commission.”

Gil also stated the principle of “presumption of knowledge” under the doctrine, which defines that a government official or supervisor or PNP commander, is presumed to have knowledge of the commission of irregularities or criminal offenses in any of the following circumstances:

- When the irregularities or illegal acts are widespread within his area of jurisdiction;
- When the irregularities or illegal acts have been repeatedly or regularly committed within his area of responsibility;
- When members of his immediate staff or office personnel are involved.

Also under the doctrine, the director or commander of a unit or chief of office in general shall have command responsibility over personnel under his direct supervision and control.

“He shall assume the responsibility for all that his unit accomplishes and fails to accomplish. This principle shall apply down to the supervisor of the smallest functional unit of the PNP. He is also responsible for every breach of discipline, lapse in security, abuse of authority or violation of human rights or law committed by the men under him,” Gil stated.

In a situation where a police commissioned officer of a higher echelon is present in the area and has knowledge of a commission of misconduct or its imminent act but fails to take appropriate action, he is administratively liable and accountable for the said misdemeanor or unlawful act.

Likewise under the doctrine, responsibility for an improper act of a PNP officer ends at the level of a director/commander having found responsible according to the rule as specified and to the extent of effect of consequence of the improper act to the police organization or particular area of jurisdiction.

“If the outcome affected the whole PNP or the whole country, two or more regions or an area more than the limit span of one region, the responsibility and liability may be determined through the conduct of investigation up to the level of the director general,” Gil said.

If the affected organization is a regional officer or a national support unit, the PNP chief shall determine the responsibility.

If the consequence affected a region, responsibility may be determined through investigation up to the level of the regional director and in case of the lowest units, responsibility may be determined through the conduct of investigation up to the level of chief of police as the chain of command starts with him, Gil added.

Based on Memorandum Circular No. 95-03 of the National Police Commission, the rules in determining the level of command responsibility are as such:

The commander shall be held responsible not only for the misconduct, abuse of authority, or criminal offense committed by his subordinates but also for gross inefficiency and vicious or immoral habits of the officers and personnel under him.

He would also be held liable and responsible in such instances: when the commander cooperated in the commission of abuse of authority, improper or unlawful act by subordinates;

When the commander used his command authority or position to force or induce his subordinates to perform the improper or unlawful act; and

When the commander has previous knowledge of his subordinate’s improper or unlawful act but tolerated or failed to do anything to prevent the occurrence of the same.

GMA visits flooded areas in 2 Pampanga towns

GUAGUA, Pampanga—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today visited the evacuation centers in this town and nearby Sasmuan to personally assess the damage wrought by monsoon rains and typhoon “Gloria” in her home province of Pampanga.

From the Manila Hotel where she attended the Summit on Illegal Drugs, Kidnapping and Command Responsibility organized by the Philippine National Police, the President motored directly to Barangay San Pablo of this town.

Then the President and her party proceeded to Barangay Sta. Lucia in Sasmuan.

The President waded through floodwaters in going to the public school buildings in the two barangays that served as evacuation centers.

Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), who accompanied the President, distributed relief goods to families housed in the two evacuation centers.

Aside from Soliman, those who accompanied the President in her visit to evacuation centers here included Executive Director Melchor Rosales of the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC), Northern Luzon Command chief Maj. Gen. Rodolfo Garcia, and provincial officials led by Pampanga Gov. Lito Lapid and Vice Governor Juan Miguel “Mikey” Arroyo.

On Monday, the President also made a surprise visit to flooded areas and evacuation center in Barangay Catmon, Malabon City and in Valenzuela City.

Late Saturday night, at the height of the heavy downpour, the President also visited the Tatalon Estate in Quezon City.

The President has earlier ordered the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) to release the initial amount of P300 million for relief and rehabilitation efforts in calamity-stricken areas in Metro Manila and some parts of Luzon.

Explosives supplier of Metro bombing suspect arrested, presented to GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated newly designated Philippine National Police chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. and Philippine Army chief Lt. Gen. Dionisio Santiago for the arrest of the alleged supplier of explosives of an Indonesian who claimed responsibility for the series of bombings in Metro Manila on December 30, 2000.

The suspected explosives supplier, Hussain Ramos, 35, alias Ali Ramos/Abu Ali, of Barangay Caloocan, Marawi City, was presented to the President in Malacañang by Ebdane and Santiago.

During the presentation of the bombing suspect, the President said it is a “buena mano” (a first) for the new chief of PNP who officially took over as the officer in charge of the PNP only last July 4.

According to the President, joint Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police personnel arrested Abu Ali by virtue of Warrant of Arrest No. 15859 issued by Judge Marivic Trabajo Daray on July 8 for violation of Section 1 of Republic Act 8294.

Abu Ali was implicated by Rohman Fathur Al-Ghozi alyas Abu Saad as his source of more than one ton of explosives and accessories stashed in Gen. Santos City.

The explosives were to be transported to Singapore when recovered by the elements of the AFP and the PNP last January 2002 at the house of a certain Datu Malagat.

Al Ghozi is the Indonesian member of the Jima’ah Islamiah arrested last January 2002 in Manila. He admitted in a signed sworn statement his participation in the December 30 bombings and the procurement of more than one tons of explosives and accessories.

During the initial tactical interrogation, Abu Ali admitted his participation in the procurement of boxes of explosives sometime during the recent Ramadan (November 15-November 17 2001) to be transported to Singapore.

- GMA to attend PNP "Order of Battle" workshop
- Strong republic cannot afford termites from within, says President
- Shahani taking part in UNESCO roundtable
- GMA still waiting for search committee recommendation on DFA Secretary
- Sophisticated U.S. gear to be left behind for RP soldiers when Balikatan ends
- CIQS issues discussed in Davao meet

GMA declares July 15 special non-working holiday

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today issued Proclamation No. 217 declaring Monday, July 15, 2002, as a special non-working holiday throughout the country.

The Sangguniang Kabataan and Barangay Elections will be held on that day.

The President said she issued Proclamation No. 217 "to give the people the fullest opportunity to participate in the said elections and exercise their right to vote."

GMA to continue meeting with local execs, check on implementation of projects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today she will continue to meet with local government officials, particularly the governors, and personally look at the implementation of projects on the ground.

"I must look at the implementation (of projects and directives) not at the Cabinet level any more but at the level of local governments," the President told members of the Malacañang Press Corps during a luncheon meeting.

The President shifted her system of governance and turned to joint Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) meetings in the provinces on May 2 in Tuguegarao, Cagayan.

But even before that, the President had been conducting frequent trips to remote areas in the provinces to bring the government closer to the people and to personally heed the concerns of the people and act on them on the spot, whenever possible.

She said she intends to carry on these provincial consultations and project inspections even after she delivers her State of the Nation address before Congress on July 22.

The President said she has still two more Regional Development Council meetings to attend before she delivers her second State of the Nation address. These are in Metro Manila on July 16 and in Bohol on July 17.

The President explained that in the RDC meetings, a lot of problem solving is being done when major projects are presented and their implementation discussed, including bottlenecks and prioritization of projects.

"So I think that these were very, very useful," she said, stressing that she will continue meeting with the governors regularly, as regularly as she would be meeting with members of her Cabinet.

The President also said that Cabinet members concerned with the "issues on the ground" take part in these RDC-RPOC meetings.

Before the RDC-RPOC joint meetings in the provinces, the President pointed out that a program usually consisted of a pattern of Cabinet members distributing the benefits to the poor such as PhilHealth cards, hybrid seedlings, and livelihood assistance.

During lunch with the Malacañang reporters, the President also disclosed that she will inaugurate the Basilan Airport on July 31, when the joint Balikatan exercises in Basilan and Zamboanga are scheduled to be terminated.

“It is very important that the people see the airport in Basilan, because that is very obviously a fruit of the Balikatan,” she said.

She also said that the people must see that her policy to push Balikatan and bring it to Basilan and Zamboanga was the correct policy.

GMA to attend PNP “Order of Battle” workshop

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will be attending the “Order of Battle” workshop organized by the Philippine National Police (PNP) at Camp Crame tomorrow, July 11.

“I will not make a speech, but I will sit down with them and work out the order of battle,” the President told the members of the Malacañang Press Corps during lunch at Malacañang.

The President, however, emphasized that she will not tell them (PNP officers and men) the order of battle “but I will listen to their order of battle so that we can trace the progress.”

The President said the workshop is a follow-up on the Summit on Illegal Drugs, Kidnapping and Command Responsibility held yesterday at the Manila Hotel.

During the summit, the President ordered an all-out war against 21 kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) syndicates operating in the country, three of which will be the biggest targets.

The President ordered the all-out war against these KFR syndicates in an effort to ensure peace and order in the country, attract more investments, generate more jobs for the people and, ultimately, win the war against poverty.

The Chief Executive said that the order of battle workshop tomorrow “is still part of the baseline.”

“The baseline condition was how many are they and then the next step is how do you prioritize,” the President said.

Strong republic cannot afford termites from within, says President

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed that a strong republic under her administration cannot afford to have “termites from within.”

The President made this reaction following reports that Council for Philippine Affairs (COPA) head Pastor “Boy” Saycon had criticized her administration for the alleged recruitment of certain personalities closely identified with the previous dispensation.

“He (Saycon) will have to make his choice. A strong republic cannot afford termites from within,” the President told reporters during an informal luncheon meeting in Malacañang.

Saycon’s accusation came following a meeting last Monday between several Cabinet officials and certain members of the various civil society groups.

The President said she asked her Cabinet members to arrange the meeting with the civil society groups and other members of several non-government organizations.

She explained that the meeting is part of the new politics of institutionalized consultation with the people.

She added that those Cabinet members who attended the meeting were “quite disappointed” with the way media has played up the issues that evolved during the discussion.

Among the Cabinet members who were present in the consultation meeting were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) chair Teresita Quintos-Deles, Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) chair Michael Defensor, Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. and Presidential Adviser Marita Magpili-Jimenez.

“They (Cabinet members) called me up and they were flustered. Basically, they would like to be able to be interviewed to give their version because they were all there and they called the meeting,” the President said.

The President pointed out that Saycon was not in the meeting because his organization (COPA) was never invited.

Although there were COPA members who attended the meeting — namely Tracy Sison and Boy Montelibano — the President said the two came as representatives of the Couples for Christ (CFC).

Shahani taking part in Unesco roundtable

Presidential Adviser on Culture Leticia Ramos-Shahani will represent the Philippines in the Roundtable of Ministers of Culture under the auspices of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and the Government of Turkey in Istanbul on Sept. 16-17, 2002.

Shahani, along with the ministers of culture of other UNESCO member-countries, will participate in the two-day meeting to share their views and discuss the themes, “Cultural Diversity and Sustainable Development: What Challenges for the Intangible Cultural Heritage”; and “Mobilizing International Solidarity to Safeguard, Transmit and Promote Intangible Cultural Heritage: Policies and Mechanisms for Implementation at the Local, National and International Level.”

Intangible cultural heritage refers to music and oral literature, among other things, of which the Philippines, in view of its numerous ethno-linguistic groups, is particularly rich.

Shahani, a career ambassador and former undersecretary of the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), has had a long experience in the United Nations.

She was formerly a member of the steering committee of the UNESCO World Commission then headed by former UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

UNESCO was established on November 16, 1945. It has its headquarters in Paris, France and 73 field offices and units in different parts of the world.

The main objective of UNESCO is to contribute to peace and security in the world by promoting collaboration among nations through education, science, culture and communication in order to further universal respect for justice, for the rule of law and for the human rights and fundamental freedoms which are affirmed for the peoples of the world, without distinction of race, sex, language or religion, by the Charter of the United Nations.

GMA still waiting for search committee recommendation on DFA Secretary

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she has to wait for the Search Committee to come up with its recommendation for the position of the Secretary of Foreign Affairs to be vacated by Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. on July 15, 2002.

During a luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President clarified that the Search Committee helps her make a decision.

“It does not make a decision for me,” the President.

The President ticked off the names of those she called “very good products” of the Search Committee – Jose Isidro Camacho of the Department of Finance, Manuel Dayrit of the Department of Health, Lina Alabastro of the Department of Science and Technology and Vicente Perez, Jr. of the Department of Energy.

The President also disclosed that all of the Chief Operation Officers (COOs) of the government financial institutions and banks are products of the Search Committee.

The President likewise said that her decisions to appoint individuals who were not the Search Committee’s recommendees, to several Cabinet posts, “turned out very well.”

These are Richard Gordon of the Department of Tourism, Raul Roco of the Department of Education and Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council.

Sophisticated U.S. gear to be left behind for RP soldiers when Balikatan ends

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said some of the sophisticated equipment used by the United States soldiers in the Balikatan 02-1 in Basilan will be left behind when the current military exercise ends in July 31.

In an informal luncheon meeting with the members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said she told the US government to make sure that some of the night-flying equipment will be left behind for the use of the Philippine military.

“That’s very, very valuable to us,” the President told reporters.

She explained that the equipment to be left behind by the US soldiers will be part of the $10-million military assistance that US President George W. Bush recently announced.

The President recalled that in the year 1999-2000, the total amount of US military assistance to the Philippines was only about $1.9 million.

At the same time, she announced that the Basilan airport will be inaugurated at the expiration of the current Balikatan exercise on July 31.

During the luncheon meeting, the President said the construction of the circumferential road in Basilan is a US contribution and not part of the $10-million military assistance.

“I told them to make sure to build that circumferential road,” she said.

Also on the Balikatan, the President stressed that the Sulu component in the next joint military exercise is an idea from the United States side.

She said there is nothing firm on the details of the Sulu component until they present to her the curriculum on the next Balikatan exercises.

“The Sulu component came from the US side because my own concern is that it goes back to Fort Magsaysay (Nueva Ecija) and to Tanay,” she said.

CIQS issues discussed in Davao meet

The Mindanao Economic Development Council (MEDCo) and the Bureau of Immigration (BI) are jointly holding the First BIMP-EAGA (Brunei-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines-East ASEAN) Customs, Immigration, Quarantine and Security (CIQS) Conference today and tomorrow at the Marco Polo Hotel in Davao City.

MEDCo chairman Jesus Dureza said the two-day conference is in line with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s policy of revitalizing the BIMP-EAGA.

He said a total of 80 foreign delegates have confirmed their participation in the conference.

The conference aims to provide a venue for the discussion of CIQS-related issues and concerns to harmonize and streamline CIQS rules, regulations, and procedures to facilitate freer movement of people, goods and services within the sub-region.

Dureza also said that the gathering hopes to draw common action agenda on CIQS in collaboration with private sector leaders and representatives, to promote trade, investments and tourism initiatives within EAGA.

“The conference expects to gather a total of 250 participants composed of officials from CIQS agencies as well as heads and representatives of various private sector organizations from all over BIMP-EAGA,” he said.

MEDCo is the Philippine Coordinating Office of BIMP-EAGA.

The conference is also being held in cooperation with other institutions such as the Bureau of Customs, Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources, Bureau of Plant Industry, Bureau of Animal Industry, Bureau of Quarantine and International Health Surveillance, and the Philippine National Police-Maritime Group and Aviation Security Group.

Salceda notes gov't positive SONA target achievements

A 104-page report the House of Representatives Committee on Oversight published last July 5 was "positive" on the government's performance in accomplishing the commitments made by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her July 2001 State of the Nation Address (SONA).

This Rep. Joey Sarte Salceda, chairman of the House Committee on Oversight, stressed to clarify media accounts that the report gave or suggested a negative overall rating for the administration.

Salceda said committee findings showed "the Arroyo administration's SONA accomplishment record, has been, on the whole, positive, contrary to some media accounts."

In a press statement, he said the committee "noted 'technical or substantial compliance' with 22 targets, while only 13 were underperforming, based on preliminary data" on the 35 SONA targets.

But more recent information from the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) noted that "several targets that seemed to be behind will now be achieved," he added.

The targets included the distribution of 100,000 hectares of public land, construction of classrooms in villages not served by nearby schools, distribution of textbooks in key subjects for Grades 1 to 4 and Years 1 to 2, emergency hiring of out-of-school youth, and the release of the P500-million Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) fund.

Salceda said the House committee "will continue to monitor the government's compliance with the SONA targets."

"We will review and validate new data from the PMS," he said.

GMA congratulates PNP for arrest of 5 kidnap suspects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the Philippine National Police (PNP) for the early resolution of the kidnapping of the principal of the Labasan Elementary School in Bongabong, Oriental Mindoro.

The President also commended the unwavering support of Bongabong Mayor Alex Enriquez and Vice Mayor Hercules Umali in the successful PNP operations against the kidnapers.

The five principal suspects in the kidnapping were presented to the President during the Order of Battle Workshop at Camp Crame.

The President called the feat another "buena mano" or first for newly-designated PNP chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. Just the other day, the President congratulated Ebdane for another "buena mano," the arrest of alleged terrorist bomb supplier Hussain Ramos.

The five kidnapping-for-ransom gang members were arrested by joint elements of the PNP intelligence group and Police Regional Office 4 through the active cooperation and assistance of local officials of Bongabong, led by Mayor Enriquez and Vice Mayor Umali.

The President likewise commended the officers and men of the PNP Intelligence Group and the Police Regional Office 4 for painstakingly following up several leads that led in the arrest of the five suspects.

The five suspects – Pepito Manago Iglecerio, Rico Mendoza Iglecerio, Rolando Soriano Labay, Redentor Bagaporo Paquita, and Sulpicio Murada Fajutag, were arrested on July 6 and 7 in the towns of Pinamalayan, Bansud and Bongabong, Oriental Mindoro.

According to Ebdane, the suspects were positively identified by witnesses as the ones who abducted Romeo Bayanay, principal of the Labasan Elementary School, on July 1 at Barangay Labasan, Bogabong.

The principal was released on July 4 after his family paid P1 million as ransom.

The President said that out of the P1-million ransom money, the joint elements of the PNP was able to recover P98,410.

GMA okays creation of new PNP anti-kidnap force

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo approved today the creation of a new anti-kidnapping task force in the Philippine National Police (PNP) recommended during the one-day Order of Battle Workshop the PNP conducted at Camp Crame.

The President said the members of the new police task force, dubbed as the Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (PACER), are those considered “magagaling sa dati” (better members of the former anti-kidnapping task force).

The President said PACER would go after kidnapping, drugs, and holdup and robbery syndicates.

The Order of Battle workshop, the President said, has already identified who the most active kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) syndicates are, where they are operating, and their probable headquarters and safe houses.

Of the 21 KFR syndicates, three are very active.

The President suggested that the operation against the KFR groups should be “military style.”

“Neutralize the kidnapping syndicates, so that there will be no more kidnapping crimes in the future,” the President said.

The specific plans on how to accelerate manhunts, the next step after identifying the kidnappers, would be presented to the President tomorrow, July 12, by PNP Chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr.

What the PACER need as support from the Office of the President would also be included in the report, the President said.

Administration will deliver on what it says, GMA assures

“Huwag kayong mawalan ng pag-asa dahil itong gobyerno ninyo ay tinutupad ang sinasabi (Don’t lose hope; this administration will do its job and deliver on what it says).”

This was the assurance made today by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during the launching of the United Laboratories' RiteMED Philippines at Watsons Drugstore in SM Megamall, Mandaluyong City.

The President said the launching of pharmaceutical industries like RiteMED Philippines, Inc. exemplified the administration's commitment to improve the health and welfare of the Filipinos, particularly the poor.

The President recalled that during her State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July last year, she pledged that her administration would bring down the price of medicines by half.

"Ito ay natutupad na sa mga botika ng government hospital dahil sa pagsisikap ni Mar Roxas na unang nag-pioneer niyan dahil sa DTI ginawa ito para sa probinsiya niya sa Capi (Pharmacies in government hospitals now sell medicines at lower prices because of the efforts of Secretary Manuel Roxas II of the Department of Trade and Industry who initiated the move in his home province of Capi)," she said.

A monitoring report of the Presidential Management Staff, headed in a concurrent capacity by Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr., said that as of July 6, at least 72 Department of Health (DOH)-retained hospitals were dispensing more brands of medicines at cheaper prices.

Some P22.4 million worth of medicines would be delivered to 61 local government unit hospitals by the 3rd quarter of 2002. Herbal and selected over-the-counter drugs are also being sold in 990 rolling stores and 2,500 Botika sa Barangay (village drug stores) nationwide.

The President congratulated United Laboratories (Unilab) for the successful launching of RiteMED Philippines, which is in line with her administration's vision to make health requirements such as medicines accessible to most Filipinos, especially the poor, at cheaper cost.

The President said that with RiteMED, even shoppers in malls and those who go to their private doctors can now avail themselves of medicines at half the price.

RiteMED Philippines, Inc. is a new pharmaceutical company specializing in high quality yet economical off-patent drugs.

In his remarks, Joselito Campos, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Unilab, expressed his profound thanks to the President for her presence in the launching rites of their new affiliate company, RiteMED Philippines.

"This new company will market nationwide affordable medicines of the highest quality," he told the President.

"We have spared nothing to ensure that RiteMED get the widest coverage and the strongest presence to reach as many end-users as possible," Campos said, adding that his company has assembled a portfolio of medicines that answers the most pressing health needs of our countrymen.

While RiteMED is a permanent commitment, Campos said, it is also a grand project that is made feasible primarily because of the vision and leadership of the Macapagal-Arroyo government.

"Our plan is to build on what we have right now by putting on stream off-patent drugs as quickly as possible to increase the people's health benefits further," he said.

After her speech, the President, Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Secretary Roxas and RiteMED officials witnessed the dispensation of RiteMED medicines to the first lucky customer.

RiteMED medicines are said to be more economical than the leading brands.

GMA stressed on gov't policy, Afile clarifies

Malacañang today said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo only insisted on the adherence by officials to government policy and never criticized anyone or any group.

Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afile, Jr. today made this clarification following news reports that the President engaged Pastor "Boy" Saycon, secretary general of the Council on Philippine Affairs (COPA), and the civil society group in a "word war."

"The President was not talking about criticisms; she was talking about policy," Afile said in a press briefing.

"What the President was saying is that once there is a government policy and you are in the government, you either adhere to that policy or get out of government. That was the thrust of her position," he explained.

He said the President, in a luncheon meeting Wednesday with members of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines and the Malacañang Press Corps, reechoed the policy that "every executive department really has to uphold that kind of discipline."

He added that the executive department has a set of policies to follow.

Part of the discipline in the executive department is to make sure that everybody down the line follows the policy of the President as long as it is in accordance with law.

"So the President was saying that if you cannot stick to the policy or if you cannot support the policy, you really have no business being in the government," Afile said.

He also brushed aside talks that a loyalty check is being conducted on officials and that Cabinet members are submitting resignation letters.

He said there was no need to conduct loyalty checks since the President merely stressed on adherence to policy.

Meanwhile, Afile confirmed that on July 15, the President is scheduled to take over the post of Foreign Affairs Secretary following the resignation of Vice President Teofisto Guingona from the post effective that date.

Afile admitted that the search committee headed by former Presidential Management Staff head Vicky Garchitorena, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman and Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas has not yet finished its selection of the next Department of Foreign Affairs chief.

He said the President did not issue a timetable for the search committee to give it the leeway to widen the range of their choices. A shortlist of probable candidates has been submitted to the committee.

Set aside subculture of divisiveness, GMA urges various sectors of society

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the Filipino people to set aside the subculture of divisiveness among the various sectors of the society in order to further strengthen the country's human development index.

In her keynote address at the launching of the Fourth Philippine Human Development Report in Malacañang, the President cited the important role being played by the civil society in building a "strong Republic."

"We must strive to finally dismantle a subculture of divisiveness and self-centeredness and transform our families, our communities and other civil society organizations into engines for national prosperity," she said.

The vibrant civil society, according to her, is a "cornerstone of a strong Republic," of which the community, the non-government organizations (NGOs), the media and the churches have vital roles in building the republic, as well as in doing some of the state's tasks to improve the conditions of every citizens

She added that it is also civil society here, as anywhere in democratic countries in the world, that has the prime responsibility of developing and advancing Philippine culture.

In addressing the event's theme, the President noted that the Philippine Human Development Report is a fruit of the continuing dialogue between the civil society and government.

"We may not always agree with each other but dialogue makes us understand each other," he President said.

One clear example of that understanding, she said, is the use of the human development index (HDI) as the basis for the computation of the country's growth, the very first country to ever do so.

The President added that the HDI is a product of institutionalized consultation for the common good.

She explained that the politics of institutionalized consultation with the people as espoused by her administration requires a vibrant civil society.

"But civil society, a warrior in toppling a dictatorship and corrupt government, must now learn to forge its swords into hammers for building the Republic," she said.

Also in her speech, the President commended the author and the publishers of the Human Development Net (HDN) report, which is a very useful guide in pursuit of her administration's efforts to create more jobs as a primary means to fight poverty.

Guingona still enjoys trust and confidence of GMA, says Palace

Malacañang today said that although Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. has resigned as foreign secretary, he still enjoys the full trust and confidence of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as an ally in the ruling Lakas-NUCD-UMDP party.

In a statement, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said that aside from being an ally in the ruling party, the Vice President has also the full trust of the President in governance and nation building.

The President is chairman of the Lakas-NUCD-UMDP while Guingona is president.

In announcing his resignation from the Cabinet last July 2, the Vice President said that he will continue to hold the President in high esteem and is committed to good governance.

In accepting his resignation “with regrets,” the President also assured the Vice President that she would continue the latter’s programs at the Department of Foreign Affairs, including those that would benefit the overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

Malacañang also strongly denied that Vice President Guingona has asked for political or personal concessions from the President in connection with his resignation as foreign secretary.

“Allegations and reports on this matter are malicious and unfair to everyone involved,” Afable said.

Afable said that the Vice President resigned from the Cabinet in “view of honest differences of opinion with the President.”

“There are no concessions or conditions attached to his resignation, or discussed in the course of events leading to it,” Afable stressed.

Guingona’s resignation as foreign secretary takes effect on July 15, after which the President will assume the foreign affairs portfolio in a concurrent capacity until such time that she can choose a successor to Guingona.

A special search committee created by the President is now in the process of screening a short list of probable contenders to the post, Afable said.

Bataan officials express full support to GMA

The provincial officials of Bataan today expressed full support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, extending wholehearted, unconditional and continuing assistance to the “Leader of the Times.”

In a letter they signed and sent to the President, Bataan Gov. Lenardo Roman, Vice Governor Rogelio Roque and Rep. Antonino Roman, municipal mayors and the Sangguniang Panlalawigan said “we are one with you in the challenges besetting our country.”

“We derive strength in the union borne out of faith in you. We emulate the virtues in governance that you exemplify. We pursue the programs you have formulated for your people,” the Bataan officials said.

The officials said they cannot but admit the daunting tasks ahead, especially for the President.

“We believe that your assumption into office was spurred by the dictates of the times. The Omnipotent Power intervened, the threshold of the nation demanded and the voice of the people cried for a happenstance in you,” they said.

The officials said they earnestly hope for the success of the people under her administration.

“We humbly pray for you and for the fulfillment of the dreams of generations of Filipinos under your stewardship. We eagerly await the realization of the Leader of the Times,” they said.

The letter was also signed by Bataan Mayors Liberato Santiago, Jr. (Abucay), Nelson David (Limay), Jose Alejandro Payumo III (Dinalupihan), Estrella Santos (Pilar), Efren Pascual, Jr. (Orani), Norberto Ricardo (Bagac), Efren Cruz (Hermosa), Angel Peliglorio, Jr. (Mariveles), Teodorico Albelda (Samal) and Norberto Linao (Morong).

Among board members who signed were Wilfredo Apostol, Eduardo Calimbas, Reynaldo Muli, Dante Manalaysay, Edwin Enrile, Sergio Mariano, Rodolfo Salandanan, Melanio Banzon, Lucila Payumo and Fernando Austria and Sangguniang Kabataan president Junilene Viesca.

Gov't, private groups release P11.6 million for relief efforts for typhoon and flood victims

A total of P11,601,075.23 has so far been released for relief and rehabilitation efforts of concerned government agencies, in cooperation with the private sector, for families affected by the monsoon rains and typhoon “Gloria”.

An update released this morning by the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) said that the amount was extended to flood victims through the combined resources of the DSWD, local government units (LGUs), non-government organizations (NGOs), and government organizations (GOs).

The relief and rehabilitation efforts are being coordinated by the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC) and its provincial and municipal chapters.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has earlier ordered the Department of Budget and Management to release the initial amount of P300 million for relief and rehabilitation efforts in calamity-stricken areas in Metro Manila and some parts of Luzon.

In its latest report, the DSWD said the government was able to extend assistance to a total of 104,743 families, or 473,377 individuals.

Out of this number, 6,983 families or 31,813 individuals were accommodated in 184 evacuation centers set up in Metro Manila and some provinces of Central and Southern Luzon.

The DSWD said that as the floods have subsided in some areas, only 75 evacuation centers have remained while 109 have been closed.

Since the start of the heavy rains and the subsequent flooding, the number of affected families totaled 355,749 or 1,644,199 individuals.

Most of the victims came from 1,613 barangays in 26 cities and 15 provinces, the DSWD said.

The DSWD said that 566 families were left homeless at the height of the disaster, while 2,363 others had their houses partially damaged.

Though the rains stopped and the floods subsided, relief operations are continuously being conducted through the concerted efforts of the member-agencies of NDCC.

The President has personally visited flooded areas and evacuation centers in Metro Manila and nearby Pampanga to personally assess the damage wrought by rains and typhoon.

GMA lauds PNP, AFP for role in conviction of Indonesian national for possession of explosives

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Philippine National Police (PNP), the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and other government law enforcement agencies following the conviction of Indonesian national Agus Dwikarna for illegal possession of explosives.

In a brief ceremony at the PNP-Intelligence Group (IG) office in Camp Crame, Quezon City this afternoon, the President said the conviction of Dwikarna was a “victory for the country’s criminal justice system as well as to the government’s fight against terrorism.”

Dwikarna was presented to the President by top-ranking government officials led by Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, PNP chief, Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., and PNP-IG head Chief Superintendent Robert Delfin.

Earlier today, Pasay Regional Trial Court (RTC) Branch 117 Judge Henrick Guingoyon meted Dwikarna with 10 years of imprisonment for violation of Presidential Decree No. 1866 or the illegal possession of firearms and explosives law.

The PNP said Dwikarna was arrested by police authorities at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) last March 14 while in possession of two pieces of oval-type C-4 explosives and five detonators.

GMA seeks more investments, jobs to eliminate poverty

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the Fourth Human Development Report for raising interesting points on the country’s human development efforts, as she stressed the need to create more jobs to raise the human development index of over 80 million Filipinos.

In a speech at the launching of the Fourth Human Development Report at the Malacañang’s Heroes Hall, the President said the report would serve as a useful guide in her administration’s pursuit of providing “more jobs for our people as a primary means of fighting poverty.”

She commended the report’s authors, the Human Development Network and the United Nations Development Program for publishing the document, adding “the report is a fruit of the continuing dialogue between the civil society and government.”

One of the report’s interesting points the President cited was that “unemployment and poverty do not amount to the same thing.”

“I now see jobs as basically solving unemployment ... as our main means of fighting poverty in a free enterprise economy,” she said.

The President said Sulu, the poorest province in terms of per capita income as mentioned in the document, also happened to have the second lowest unemployment rate. But she believed that Sulu would double its efforts to attain peace and development.

She said that while Sulu’s unemployment rate was 3.1 percent, Tawi-Tawi, the second poorest in per capita income, had the seventh lowest unemployment rate of 4.2 percent.

On the other hand, Metro Manila, the most prosperous region in the country, had the highest unemployment rate of 17.5 percent.

She added that Cavite and Tarlac, two relatively rich provinces, were among the 10 provinces with the highest unemployment rates.

“On the macroeconomic level, this helps me to understand why our economy is the best performing in Southeast Asia and the third best performing in Asia, and yet, it has more than 4 million people out of work,” she declared.

Another report highlight the President noted was that some provinces had very high levels of underemployment.

She said it was sad to see the underemployment rate in at least 10 provinces going over 40 percent.

Bukidnon and Camarines Sur had unemployment rates of more than 50 percent. In these provinces, “more than half of the workers are looking for additional work and it is most likely because of inadequate pay,” she said.

Under the conditions, “we need to have a more competitive investment climate. Part of this investment climate is grounded on objective, quantitative reality which is making our power rates more competitive,” she added.

She spelled out the measures her administration has been doing to shore up business confidence in the country, including bringing in investments and creating better paying jobs for the people.

The President said eight of the top 10 provinces in the country’s human development index (HDI) are in Luzon that makes up 60 percent of the population.

She said Mindanao had bright potentials. “It is encouraging that two of its provinces, Davao Oriental and South Cotabato, are among the top 10 gainers in human development.”

Misamis Oriental, she said, had the highest HDI, aside from being a top-performing province in the area of education.

She stressed the need to address the low HDI of the bottom five provinces as quickly as possible, explaining that if these provinces also have low unemployment rates, “it is because the unemployed of those provinces quickly migrate to the provinces with the highest development and look for jobs there.”

“They just stay there. They don’t go back home again. This explains why the richest regions also have the highest unemployment rates. So, I still believe it is still jobs, jobs, jobs we must create to raise the HDI of our people as a whole,” she said.

“In a free enterprise economy, this is a tall order because in the end, jobs will be created not by government economic activity but private sector investment decisions.” the President said.

“We need an effective law and the necessary infrastructure. We need an effective state to uplift its poorest and weakest citizens, empower them and dismantle the structures that make them poor and weak,” she said.

The President urged everyone to work together to raise the country’s HDI. “Let us make faith an important part of our indices. Let us move as one with stout heart and strong republic. God will make us victorious.”

GMA wraps up Zambo, Basilan visits with historic Independence Day flag-raising in Lamitan

ZAMBOANGA CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ended her visits to Zamboanga City and Lamitan, Basilan on a historic note.

For the first time in the nation's history, the President led the flag-raising ceremony for the celebration of Philippine Independence Day in Mindanao, specifically at the municipal hall grounds in Lamitan, Basilan.

By raising the Philippine flag in Lamitan to signal the start of activities for the country's 104th Independence Day anniversary, the President echoed the common aspiration of the people of Basilan, of Mindanao and of the entire Filipino people to be finally free from the bondage of terrorism and poverty.

The President raised the flag at exactly 7:00 a.m., simultaneous with other flag-raising rites conducted nationwide.

She was assisted by Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu, Basilan Governor Wahab Akbar and Lamitan OIC-Mayor Arleigh Eisma.

Immediately after the flag-raising rites in Lamitan, the President was flown by helicopter to the Edwin Andrews Air Base (EAAB) here where she took off for a flight to Manila where she is expected to grace Independence Day activities at the Rizal Park.

In Lamitan where she stayed overnight and braved security risks, the Chief Executive convened the joint meeting of the Regional Economic Planning and Development Board and Regional Peace and Order Council of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao Tuesday afternoon.

Following the meeting, the President attended a short program where she awarded a Community-Based Forest Management Agreement Utilization Permit to Sarri Bolon, president of the Maligue Multi-Purpose Cooperative.

The permit allowed the extraction of 500 cubic meters of forest products worth some P1.5 million in three barangays of Isabela City.

The President also gave out checks aggregately amounting to P1.285 million for core shelter, potable water, post-harvest, educational, skills training and other projects in different towns of Basilan.

She further distributed Philhealth insurance cards and turned over medicines to officials of Lamitan.

The helicopter bearing the President landed in Lamitan shortly after noon Tuesday.

From the landing site at the Claret High School grounds, she went directly to the Jardin de Infancia inside the compound of the Lamitan Parish to attend the wake of slain Abu Sayyaf hostage and nurse Ediborah Yap.

Yap, who the President declared a heroine, was one of the hostages killed in the encounter between the military and the Abu Sayyaf in Siraway, Zamboanga del Norte last June 7.

The President earlier came from this city where she visited soldiers and a militiaman healing from wounds they got in gunbattles against the Abu Sayyaf in Siraway, Zamboanga del Norte.

At Camp Navarro, Southern Command Hospital, the President talked casually with the wounded soldiers and extolled their bravery and gallantry in defense of freedom and democracy.

She distributed cash assistance worth P50,000 each to the soldiers who were part of the troops that engaged in a search-and-rescue operation to get back American missionaries Martin and Gracia Burnham and Filipino nurse Ediborah Yap from the hands of the Abu Sayyaf.

Following her hospital visit, the President had lunch with members of the local media with whom she shared insights on various topics, including the conduct of the Balikatan 02-1, in an informal conversation.

With the President were Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, Presidential Assistant on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita,

Official Development Assistance Secretary Marita Jimenez, Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo, Presidential Assistant for Jobs Generation Luis Lorenzo, Presidential Assistant on Muslim Affairs Nur Jaafar, Electrification Deputy Administrator Edita Bueno, and Local Water Utilities Administrator Lorenzo Jamora.

Baselco takeover beneficial to Basilan power users

LAMITAN, Basilan — People in Basilan province and Isabela City can consider frequent power outages and poor electric services a sordid thing of the past.

After the National Electrification Administration (NEA) took over Tuesday the management of the Basilan Electric Cooperative, Inc. (Baselco), Basilenos will soon see the light at the end of the dark tunnel.

In a report to Malacañang, the Department of Energy (DOE) said the NEA takeover of Baselco sought to end the daily brownouts power users in the province have been experiencing for several months now due to insufficient power supply from Baselco.

The DOE report said Baselco has a peak load of six megawatts, but it could only produce four megawatts and deliver power by consumer sectors in six towns of Basilan and Isabela City.

The DOE said Baselco has also been experiencing frequent line tripping brought about by damaged insulators, unbalanced load per phase, right-of-way clearing and uncoordinated protection setting between the National Power Corporation's (Napocor) relay and Baselco's recloser.

It is a pity that while the national, regional and local governments have pushed hard to change the people's perception of Basilan as a lair of terrorists to that of an area of peaceful co-existence among its culturally-diversified people, of agricultural productivity and of tourism, unstable power conditions have stymied growth in the province.

Basilan officials have been implementing various support infrastructure projects to give tourism and agricultural trade in the area a boost in a bid to raise the standard of living of their constituents.

This has led Isabela City's Sangguniang Panlungsod to pass last April 17, Resolution 02-1146 recommending the NEA takeover of Baselco's management to save the cooperative from folding up and to protect the interests of member-consumers.

"It is unfortunate that while the local governments of Basilan are doing their best to improve (the people's) living conditions, they are experiencing the poorest electricity service," said Energy Secretary Vicente Perez.

"We have to exercise available options to ensure that the people of Isabela City and Basilan get efficient and reliable power service," Perez stressed.

The DOE report said NEA and Napocor officials met on June 4 to plan out and effect the Baselco takeover. An agreement was finally reached between and among the two government agencies and Baselco detailing the takeover arrangements.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, during her visit Tuesday to Basilan, announced the takeover.

Napocor records also showed that Baselco owed the state-run power firm some P332 million as of April 30, 2002.

The amount represented Baselco's current due of P4.44 million, overdue of P125.6 million and restructured debt of P202.1 million.

Napocor has served several disconnection notices to Baselco but the latter ably arranged acceptable repayment schemes.

But Perez said the repayment schemes were not enough. Baselco should settle their obligations in full as Napocor is also beset with obligations of its own.

Baselco also owed NEA some P408 million as of December 31 last year.

The cooperative's system loss, or the amount of electricity loss from pilferage and technical problems, has reached 24.05 percent, way above the 14-percent required on electric cooperatives.

Meanwhile, the DOE also reported that it has energized some 52 barangays in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) as of end-May 2002.

The accomplishment is in line with the commitments made by President Macapagal-Arroyo in her July 2001 State of the Nation Address.

Energized were 17 barangays in the towns of Indanan, Panamao, Parang and Talipao, all in Sulu; 13 barangays in Barira, Buldon, Datu Odin Sinsuat, Datu Paglas, Kabuntalan, North Upi, Sultan Kudarat and Sharif Aguak, all in Maguindanao

Thirteen barangays in Tandubas and Simunul, Tawi-Tawi; six barangays in Lamitan, Lantawan and Tuburan, in Basilan; one barangay each in the towns of Lumba-Bayabao, Maigo and Wao, in Lanao del Sur.

GMA says June 12 also 'Freedom Day' of coconut farmers

LAMITAN, Basilan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said yesterday June 12 should be commemorated not only as the country's Independence Day but also the "Araw ng Kalayaan (Freedom Day)" of small coconut farmers nationwide.

The President said that starting on June 12, coconut farmers could avail themselves of the fruits of the coconut levy fund “which we have fought for (in the last) several decades” for their benefit.

The President made the announcement during a program conducted before the joint Regional Economic Planning and Development Board and Regional Peace and Order Council of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) at the Claret High School.

She said the coconut farmers in Basilan and elsewhere in the country have been entitled to a P10,000 insurance, up 100 percent from the old insurance coverage of P5,000 they used to avail of from the Philippine Coconut Authority.

She added that registered and accredited small coconut farmers could begin availing themselves of micro-financing of P1,000 each.

Coconut farmers, however, may pool their resources together to engage in small but more productive coconut farming efforts and get better returns from their micro-finance and livelihood project, she said.

The President also announced that farmers could sell their copra directly to oil mills put up and funded through the coconut levy.

The oil mills offer better prices for copra, she said, adding that farmers do not have to suffer from the hands of middlemen who dictate copra prices to the disadvantage of farmers.

The President, during the program, also distributed 500 Philhealth Insurance cards to beneficiaries from this town.

She said holders of Philhealth cards could take advantage of subsidized medical care, particularly in state-run hospitals.

Meanwhile, a report from the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) showed that as of May 15, 2002, a total of 8,040 poor families of 36,984 persons in the ARMM have been enrolled under the National Health Insurance Program (NHIP).

In Basilan alone, 1,726 families have been enlisted, with Lamitan having 1,000 family-beneficiaries; Maluso, 395; and Sumisip, 366.

The PMS report said 6,221 families from six towns in Lanao del Sur and Marawi City are enjoying the benefits of the NHIP. A total of 5,817 families are in Marawi City, 164 in the town of Masiu, 130 in Piagapo, 58 in Ditsa-Ramain, 20 each in Madamba and Madalum, and 12 in Balindong.

Twenty families are covered by the NHIP in Indanan, Sulu and 38 in Sapa-Sapa, Tawi-Tawi.

Besides providing benefits under Philhealth, the government has also stocked four Department of Health-retained hospitals in the ARMM with low-cost imported medicines, the PMS reported.

These are the Sulu Sanitarium in San Raymundo, Jolo, Sulu; the Maguindanao Provincial Hospital, Sharif Aguak, Maguindanao; the Dr. Serapio Montaner Provincial Hospital, Malabang, Lanao del Sur; and the Buluan District Hospital in Buluan, Maguindanao.

As of May 31, 2002, the National Food Authority has deployed 93 rolling stores in the ARMM.

The Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera Rolling Stores have served some 108,000 consumers in 72 villages in 18 towns and cities of the region, the report added.

Papal Nuncio lauds GMA's 'new culture of politics' and fight against poverty, terrorism

Archbishop Antonio Franco, apostolic nuncio to the Philippines, today lauded President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for promoting a grassroots-based consultation process and for her commitment to fight terrorism and poverty.

In his response to the President's remarks at the traditional Vin d'Honneur held this morning at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang, Franco, who is also the dean of the diplomatic corps, said that the diplomatic community welcomes the President's desire to promote "a new culture of politics intended to integrate and to favor greater participation."

The Vin d'Honneur was held as part of the commemoration of the country's 104th Independence Day.

The President just flew in from Lamitan, Basilan where she led the flag-raising ceremonies to kick off the nationwide Independence Day celebration. This was the first time that any incumbent President has led the flag-raising rites on Independence Day in Mindanao.

Franco said that this process of dialogue and consultation that the President has been conducting throughout the country is conducive to a healthier environment and speedier development of the Philippines.

"We appreciate your commitment to dialogue with all—troops and other sectors of the Filipino society—in order to reassure them of their innate rights and respect for human dignity," Franco said.

Franco also cited the President's stance that the fight against terrorism is invariably linked to the fight against poverty which her administration is waging in the country today.

According to Franco, in order to find a lasting solution to the problem of suffering and terrorism, it is essential for world leaders to realize that this human tragedy often arise from "uninterrupted human frustrations owing to painful poverty and the lack of respect for human rights."

He said that the religion that one group professes, the language that they speak, or their profession, ideology, or prosperity should never be used to suppress others, or to foment a division, wage a war, or disseminate distrust and destruction.

"Our common hope is that the collective efforts of the international community will lead eventually to the eradication of the roots and the manifestations of the evils that we all denounce," Franco said.

Speaking for the diplomatic community, Franco said that with her able leadership and the full dedication of her government as well as the contribution of the opposition, the President would succeed in maximizing the fruits of true freedom and in promoting peace and prosperity not only in the Philippines but also in other parts of the world.

"We assure you of the collaboration of the governments and the organizations that we represent. We pray that together we could build a better world," Franco said.

Franco closed his brief remarks by offering a toast "to the good health of the Her Excellency, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, and to the prosperity of our beloved Filipino people."

GMA pays tribute to nation's martyrs, day-to-day heroes and heroines

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to the nation's heroes and heroines, the martyrs who shed their blood and the ordinary people whose small acts of courage, civic duty, honesty and dedication inspire others to take bold and decisive measures.

During the traditional Vin d'Honneur on the 104th anniversary of Philippine Independence, the President told the world's ambassadors and envoys gathered at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang of the great acts of courage and martyrdom of such heroes as Dr. Jose P. Rizal, the dedication to duty and sacrifice made by hostage-nurse Ediborah Yap, and the honesty and selflessness of teacher Marilyn Bonguiat.

"Independence Day is not only for great acts of courage and martyrdom, the President said. "Day to day, our nation is built with small but unnoticed acts of courage and civic duty," she added.

The President said the farmer, the street sweeper, the police officer on the beat, the worker in the export factory all serve the family, the community and the nation.

"We salute them all for all their honesty and dedication," she stressed.

The President noted that Ediborah died in the line of duty and had taken care of Gracia and Martin Burnham when they were in captivity.

"She was a nurse to the very end. She stuck to her professional oath even in the darkest depths of adversity," the President said, adding that the death of Ediborah Yap, the last of the Filipino Dos Palmas hostages, challenges the entire Filipino citizenry anew to the fight against terrorism.

The President also recalled the honesty of Marilyn Bonguiat, the teacher from Calabanga, who returned P6.6 million inadvertently added to her meager pay check.

"She is telling us that civic duty comes ahead of personal gain," she said.

While many people could find it difficult to believe that this is happening in the Philippines, President Macapagal-Arroyo said the "truth is that we have heroes and heroines all around us."

"These heroes and heroines all around us inspire us to take bold and decisive measures towards national consolidation. They inspire us to provide leadership and the example of hard work. They inspire us to deliver care and service to our people," she declared.

According to the President, the keel of democracy is balanced on freedom and responsibility.

"Here and now, we are buoyed by a new sense of resolve and hope in successfully restoring the political and economic moorings of our nation," she said.

The President noted that the 104th anniversary celebration of Independence Day is also a celebration of the Filipino people's common ideals. "Ideals that all peoples live and fight for at work, in the streets, and homes all over. These are the ideals of human freedom, human dignity, human excellence," she said.

However, the President noted that there are times in history when the promotion of these ideals calls for the ultimate sacrifice.

"Some, like Dr. Jose P. Rizal, consciously answered that call. Others, like Ediborah Yap, answered that call, though nothing in their previous life had warned them that they would have to do it," she said.

Among those who attended the Vin d'Honneur were Papal Nuncio to the Philippines Archbishop Antonio Franco, Senate President Franklin Drilon, House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Acting Foreign Affairs Secretary Franklin Ebdalin, members of the Cabinet and members of the diplomatic corps.

Gov't to use all resources in fight against terrorism, poverty, GMA tells envoys

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said her administration is committed to use all its resources, including that of the military, in the fight against terrorism and poverty in the country, particularly in Mindanao.

Speaking before the diplomatic community at the traditional Vin d'Honneur held this morning at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall, the Chief Executive likened terrorism to a phantom in the night that stalked the world and the southwestern Philippines.

"But we have learned to muster the military and development of forces to fight this evil," the President said.

The Vin d'Honneur was held as part of the commemoration of the country's 104th Independence Day.

The President said her administration has recognized that beyond physical security what is needed is "total human security" which relates to basic human needs as food, shelter, education and employment.

"Unless all these are comprehensively addressed, impoverished and disillusioned communities will continue to be the recruitment grounds for the evil of terrorism," the President said.

According to the President, in her visits to countries in the region, she has expounded on two main points: one, is that the drive towards economic integration is part of the answer to the problem of poverty in the world and in the region, and the other is that there should be a united front against terrorism and international crime.

The President said that the Balikatan exercises of Philippine military troops with the United States holds a profound significance to national security.

She also said her government has formalized its cooperation with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) in order to "check transnational crimes and terrorism."

"This is found in the trilateral agreement of Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines recently joined in by Thailand to share intelligence and maintain tighter control of borders to stop the flow of weapons and terrorists," she said.

According to the President, the agreement includes within its purview other transnational crimes, such as money laundering, hijacking, drug trafficking and piracy.

"The integration of Asean, once a hazy vision, is now a reality. From the early part of this year, when most of the goods traded among us had their tariffs go down to zero to five percent," she said.

The President said she was reminded of the European experience where, between 1870 and 1945, there were three major wars between France and Germany, "but they, eventually overcame the past to win the future."

She noted that Europe's economic integration led to greater political stability and security.

In this connection, she asked the ambassadors and envoys present during the Vin d'Honneur to think and act together as East Asians rather than just individual nations and cultures.

She also said that the Philippines will be a part of this new economic order working with, though not dominated by, regional and international economic and financial organizations.

But even if the country becomes a part of the new economic order, the President said she still subscribes to what her late father, Diosdado Macapagal had said – that the "Philippines and its government should become truly independent so as to adopt policies and decisions on the overriding issues of national interest."

“It is only if our government and its leaders are free to decide and act in the highest interest of our people that we can solve our vital problems, particularly the redemption of the poor from poverty,” she said.

The President said she looks forward to continued partnership with all countries represented by their respective ambassadors at the diplomatic reception.

In her speech, the President also cited the accomplishments of her government during the past one and a half years based on the targets that she set in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA).

For instance, she said, the government has distributed 104,261 hectares of private agricultural land more than the target of 100,000 hectares of land, which she pledged during in the SONA.

The President said that the administration has also provided with health insurance a total of 1.5 million rural and urban poor individuals from her target of 500,000.

“I said that all public school students will have textbooks for priority subjects in grades one to four and first and second years in high school. And by September this year, we will have five textbooks in the hands of every child in the public schools,” she said.

The President said this is the essence of human freedom. “People are not truly free if they do not have education. They are not truly free if they do not have access to health care. They are not truly free if they are landless,” she added.

In closing, the President thanked the ambassadors present during the occasion “for helping the Philippines achieved true freedom for its people.”

She then proposed a toast to all the nations and peoples “in order that we may continue to work together and harder, to attain our dreams of world peace and prosperity.”

GMA calls on people to pursue war against poverty initiated by nation’s heroes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the Filipino people not to forget the sacrifices of the country’s heroes like Andres Bonifacio and to carry on the struggle they initiated, particularly against poverty.

In her Independence Day speech at the Quirino Grandstand in Rizal Park, the President stressed that aside from terrorism, the nation’s main enemy is poverty.

She said that as long as poverty exists, a nation and its people can never be considered truly free and independent.

That is why, the President said, she has made the war against poverty the central theme of her administration.

The fight against poverty is a carry-over from the past, she added, initiated by Andres Bonifacio as part of the nation’s struggle for independence.

The war against poverty never ended as poverty continues to exist to this day, the President said, at the same time urging the people to unite and bring to an end, within the decade, the battle launched by Bonifacio.

The President prodded the Filipino people to draw more power and knowledge from the lessons of the past, from the country’s heroes and heroines who demonstrated determination and resolve, courage and civic duty, dedication and selflessness.

She also said that a few years before her father, former President Diosdado Macapagal, died, he wrote an article and discussed poverty and its possible cures, one of which is independence.

“The Philippines and its government should become truly independent so as to adopt policies and decisions on the overriding issues of national interest. It is only if our government and its leaders are free to decide and act in the highest interest of our people that we can solve our vital problems, particularly the redemption of the poor from poverty,” the President quoted her father.

The President said she strongly believes that progress and development would not materialize if the majority of Filipinos is not free from poverty.

She then reiterated the four core beliefs that guide her administration: to win the war against poverty within the decade; to improve moral standards in government and society; to change from personality-driven to party and program-based politics; and to promote leadership by example.

The President said the priority programs of the government involve jobs for the people, education, food on every table, health care and shelter.

GMA calls on Filipinos to close ranks in fighting the Abu Sayyaf scourge

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on all Filipinos to close ranks in responding to the needs of the nation and in fulfilling their respective obligations, especially in fighting the Abu Sayyaf scourge in Mindanao.

In her speech during the 104th Philippine Independence Day celebration at the Quirino Grandstand in Luneta, the President said no other group has sowed so much hardship, fear and instability in Basilan and elsewhere in Southwestern Philippines except the Abu Sayyaf terrorist group.

The President said that for as long as the Abu Sayyaf terrorists are not brought to justice, the suffering of the people of Southwestern Philippines would not be assuaged.

“Mga kababayan ko, ang mga terorista ay naghangad ng gulo kung kaya’t sila ang dapat makatikim nga makatarungang galit ng sambayanang Pilipino, ng mga kawal, at maging sibilyan man (My countrymen, these terrorists are out to sow trouble, and that is why they should be dealt with the full fury of the Filipino nation, by the soldiers as well as the civilian population),” the President said.

In calling for unity among the people, the President cited the case of the people of Lamitan, Basilan who became divided in the aftermath of that unfortunate incident involving the incursion of Abu Sayyaf bandits in their area.

The President noted that this year’s theme of the Independence Day celebration, “Bayan Ko, Sagot Ko” aptly described how the people of Lamitan have responded to that call by posting stickers in the walls along the streets calling for unity among the residents.

When she led the flag-raising ceremony in Lamitan early this morning, she also noticed that the people there are now talking about how to close ranks, to move on and to unite in fighting the Abu Sayyaf menace.

By moving on, the President said it is a way for the people of Lamitan to show that they really care about their place.

“Independence Day is not only for great acts of courage. Day to day, our nation is built through small unnoticed acts of courage and civic duty. The farmer, the street sweeper, the police officer on the beat, the worker in the export factory, all serve the family, the community and the nation. We salute them all for their honesty and dedication,” the President said.

After one year that everyone was praying to end the abduction of Filipina nurse Ediborah Yap and the Burnham couple from the hands of the Abu Sayyaf bandits, the President stressed that now is the time to show that the terrorists should not be allowed to escape from justice.

“As we have shown time and again, it is the Filipino who can love the Philippines so much as to lay down his life for his country so that others may enjoy the blessings and joys of living in this land,” she said.

Time and again and generations after generations, the President added that the call to make the ultimate sacrifice has been made.

“Some like Rizal consciously answered that call. Others like Ediborah Yap answered that call though nothing in their lives had warned them that they would have to do it. Yet, all in all, our history has been sanctified by the sacrifices of martyrs,” the President said.

- Life insurance policies of 1.02 million coconut farmers now upgraded
- GMA calls on economic team to speed up major projects
- GMA enjoins voters to participate in the July 15 polls
- RP needs a strong government for all Filipinos, says GMA
- Solon says GMA's SONA target commitments positive

Life insurance policies of 1.02 million coconut farmers now upgraded

The Philippine Coconut Authority (PCA) is now ready to distribute to some 1.02 million coconut farmers throughout the country their upgraded COCOLIFE insurance certificates.

According to PCA Administrator Danilo Coronacion, the upgrading of the coconut farmers life insurance policies from P5,000 to P10,000 is being undertaken under the Upgraded Insurance Project of the Coconut Industry Investment Fund (CIIF).

Coronacion said that Region VII tops in the list of coconut farmers with upgraded life insurance policies, with 161,106 beneficiaries; followed by Region VIII, with 135,558 beneficiaries; Region VI-A, with 125,730 beneficiaries; Region V, with 99,476 beneficiaries; and Region IX, with 84,154 beneficiaries.

The increase in the insurance coverage of coconut farmers has been ordered by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as part of the package of benefits for the coconut growers after the Supreme Court has decided that the coconut levy fund is "public in nature."

The President has earlier announced that the United Coconut Planters Bank (Cocobank) is now ready to make available some P700 million in coconut levy earnings for the benefit of the country's coconut farmers and the coconut producing provinces.

The Chief Executive made this announcement in her speech before thousands of residents who attended the 35th Foundation Anniversary of Davao del Norte held in Tagum City early this month.

The President recalled that during the Independence Day celebration this year, she had announced that the CIIF board has approved the release of P86 million as first-year premium payment for the expanded life insurance program for coconut farmers.

"The upgraded life insurance policies for more than one million farmers are ready for distribution to the region," the President said.

The President likewise said that she has instructed all concerned government agencies to see to it that the first fruits of the coconut levy fund should go to micro-financing for coconut farmers at P1,000.00 per coconut farmer.

GMA calls on economic team to speed up major projects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has directed anew her economic team to address bottlenecks that have stalled the country's major infrastructure and investment projects.

"We must provide reinforcement to the understandably timid business community these days," the President said in her speech at the launching Friday of the Fourth Philippine Human Development Report at Malacañang's Heroes Hall.

She said administration projects in the pipeline should be fast-tracked.

The projects included the construction of the North Rail and the linking of the Light and Mass rail transits, the opening of the new Nayong Pilipino Tourism Estate, housing, the reopening of the National Steel Corporation, the construction of the Batangas Port, and the rehabilitation of the Philippine National Bank.

She said more focus should be given in implementing the projects, as well as programs in improving peace and order and reducing utility rates.

The President said: “We will not stop until we are satisfied that we have squeezed every drop of blood from stones. But at the same time, we must be responsible and respect the sanctity of contracts, despite the histrionics of some, because this is needed if we are to preserve the gains that we have made in our credit risk ratings.”

To make investors and citizens feel safer, the President said her administration — together with Philippine National Police chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes, Jr. and Davao City Rodrigo Duterte — has been concentrating on breathing new life and efficacy into the country’s anti-kidnapping efforts.

She said she is dealing with the threat of kidnapping the way she dealt with the threat of the notorious terrorist group Abu Sayyaf.

“I nag the police everyday today the way I used to nag the military everyday since May first,” she added.

“After I was convinced that we had seen the last of the destabilization threat because May First was very peaceful, I began to work on breathing down the necks of the military. And thanks God, the Abu Sayyaf has been defeated,” she said.

The President also cited the Order of Battle Workshop which pinned down 21 kidnapping syndicates. The workshop was held Thursday at the Police Headquarters in Camp Crame in Quezon City.

She said Ebdane would give her his report on what “needs to accelerate the manhunt for the syndicates at the top of the Order of Battle.”

“I will not micro-manage them as I did not micro-manage the war against the Abu Sayyaf. But I will personally track progress,” she stressed.

The President expressed the hope that the government “will win this battle with hands on persistence combined with good intelligence, and as in Edsa I and Edsa II, and many other struggles.”

She noted that spirituality was important especially when “it’s a matter of being discouraged or encouraged, no matter what the numbers look. It is the Spirit that will help lift us up from the feeling of hopelessness to the feeling of faith.”

“That is what we are doing to shore up our business confidence: bring investments and create better and higher paying jobs for our people,” she said.

GMA enjoins voters to participate in the July 15 polls

Calling on the need to revitalize democracy in the lowest political levels of the Philippine government, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today enjoined voters to go out and vote in the barangay elections on Monday, July 15.

In her regular Saturday radio address, the President noted that the barangay council is the basic form of government which renders public service in the nation’s communities.

The Sangguniang Kabataan, on the other hand, serves as the stepping stone of the youth in becoming responsible leaders of the country, she said.

The President said the people must not only go out and vote but also ensure that the polls would be honest, orderly and peaceful.

“Mahalaga ang bawat boto ninyo. Sagrado sa ating demokrasya ang inyong karapatang pumili ng ating mga pinuno (Your votes are important. Your right to elect our leaders is sacred),” the President added.

Earlier, the President declared July 15 as a special non-working holiday to enable qualified voters to exercise their right to vote.

The President said the people should take part in the affairs of their respective communities.

“Sa barangay level, higit na naiintindihan ng inyong mga pinuno ang inyong damdamin at mga pangangailangan. Sila rin ang nakakaalam kung ano ang ikabubuti ng inyong lugar dahil kilala nila ang mga totoong residente ng inyong komunidad. Sila rin ang nakatutok sa mga serbisyo at programa ng gobyerno sa inyong lugar – lalo na ang mga may kinalaman sa paglaban sa kahirapan (In the barangay level, the officials understand your needs and concerns because they know the issues in your area. They know the residents of your communities And they render public service and implement programs especially the anti-poverty thrust of government),” the President said.

RP needs a strong government for all Filipinos, says GMA

In summoning the people to go out and vote in the barangay elections on Monday, July 15, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the nation needs a strong government, not for a few, but for all Filipinos.”

“We need a republic so strong that it could help and defend the poorest, the weakest of Filipinos,” the President stressed.

She pointed out that having survived the elements of destabilization after EDSA II, “it is our mission now, the duty of this generation, to finally build a strong republic in the 21st century.”

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo recalled that when she became President last year, she emphasized that a dedicated government has as pillars the following;

First, a moral foundation that will guide the leadership in all levels of government. Second, a philosophy of transparency in the conduct of government. And third, an effective implementation of policies and program in the entire bureaucracy.

“These three pillars are the first and foremost cornerstone of a strong republic — an effective government, from national to local, with a devoted professional civil service, that delivers services to the majority, keeps the peace and order, helps the poor and the weak, and administers the law and justice to all,” she said.

The President said “it is our duty to protect our freedom and democracy by taking part in elections.”

“We need to strengthen our republic based on the new politics of programs and institutionalized consultations that we want to aim to achieve in these times,” she added.

“We have proven that we can conduct peaceful elections like the recent elections in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) despite the conflict in certain parts of Mindanao. I hope we can achieve this on July 15,” she said.

“On Monday, let’s all go out and vote. Let’s all work for honest, orderly and peaceful elections. Let us show to the world that our republic is strong,” she concluded.

Solon says GMA’s SONA target commitments positive

A comprehensive report of the House of Representatives Committee on Oversight has classified as “positive” the government’s performance in accomplishing the commitments made by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her July 2001 State of the Nation Address (SONA).

Rep. Joey Sarte Salceda, chairman of the House Committee on Oversight, stressed this to clarify media accounts that the report gave or suggested a negative overall rating for the administration.

Salceda said committee findings showed that “the Arroyo administration’s SONA accomplishment record, has been, on the whole, positive, contrary to some media accounts.”

Salceda said the committee “noted ‘technical or substantial compliance’ with 22 targets, while only 13 were underperforming, based on preliminary data” on the 35 SONA targets.

But more recent information from the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) noted that “several targets that seemed to be behind will now be achieved,” he added.

The targets included the distribution of 100,000 hectares of public land, construction of classrooms in villages not served by nearby schools, distribution of textbooks in key subjects for Grades 1 to 4 and Years 1 to 2, emergency hiring of out-of-school youth, and the release of the P500-million Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) fund.

Salceda said the committee “will continue to monitor the government’s compliance with the SONA targets.”

“We will review and validate new data from the PMS,” he said.

GMA names Bayani Fernando MMDA Chairman

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the appointment of former Marikina City Mayor Bayani Fernando as the new chairman of the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority replacing Benjamin Abalos who is now Chairman of the Commission on Elections.

The President made the announcement during her speech at the opening ceremonies of the two-day Culture and the Arts Conference held this morning at the Pearl Manila Hotel along Gen. Luna St, corner Taft and United Nations Avenues in Ermita, Manila.

The President first issued a series of directives, including the revival of the Metropolitan Theater in Manila to give the masses access to cultural activities and a review by the new MMDA chairman of the allocation of the proceeds of the ongoing Metro Manila Film Festival.

“Incidentally, you might want to know to whom I will give the instructions. You might want to know who will be the new MMDA chairman. It is Bayani Fernando, the former mayor of Marikina City,” she declared.

The President noted that when she asked former chairman Richard Gordon of the Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority to be Secretary of Tourism, she told him that what he did in Subic “you’ve got to do for the country.”

“When I called Bayani, I said, ‘BF, what you did for Marikina, you must for the whole country’,” she added.

The President said that in the review of the allocation of the proceeds from the film festival, “they should ensure that the endowment or the production subsidy contributed by the National Commission on Culture and the Arts (NCCA) to the semi-finalists or the qualifying scripts should become a permanent fund. So therefore, it should keep returning as much as possible to the NCCA so that you have the money again for next year’s subsidy.”

The President said that she began advancing money from the President’s Social Fund “not to give an award to the best movies at the end of the Metropolitan Film Festival but near the start.”

In other words, she said, there is a preliminary judging on the best scripts.

In this connection, the President announced that she has also allocated an initial P50 million to spread out as a subsidy for the production of the best scripts that will be chosen by the Metro Film Festival committee.

She acknowledged that this idea was given to her by Caloocan City Mayor Reynaldo Malonzo whom she also asked to help her work out the implementing guidelines for the use of the subsidy.

Ifugao officials should have main role in preserving rice terraces — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the national government will help in the preservation of the world famous rice terraces in Ifugao but the initiative should come from local officials.

“I am very happy that we are going to be preserving the Ifugao rice terraces,” the Chief Executive said in her speech at the two-day Culture and Arts Conference 2002 held this morning at the Pearl Manila Hotel located at the General Luna St. corner Taft and United Nations Avenues in Ermita, Manila.

The President asked the officers and members of the National Commission on Culture and Arts (NCCA) and other artists present during the conference to support Ifugao Governor Teodoro Baguilat, Jr., who, she described as “a very young Ifugao, educated, dynamic and dedicated.”

“Let’s empower the people of Ifugao to preserve their cultural heritage,” the President said.

The President recalled that when she was still vice president, there was an Ifugao Rice Terraces Task Force that was organized to handle the preservation of the terraces where she was a member.

But after a while, the President said, she saw that she was the only one taking the job seriously.

As a member of the task force, President Macapagal-Arroyo said, she was responsible for organizing development projects for the poor in the various towns that had rice terraces community. This was in the form of food for work but the actual work was to preserve the rice terraces.

Since this was the only specific activity that was being put forward by the task force, the President said that when she assumed the presidency in January 2001, she abolished the task force.

“Committees don’t work, task forces work for a specific period with a deadline,” the President said, adding that if it is within a particular geographical jurisdiction, she believes that the primary responsibility of preserving the rice terraces should be on the local government of Ifugao.

GMA stresses need for inter-faith dialogue

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the need to cultivate a culture of inter-faith dialogue even as the fight against the twin evils of poverty and terrorism continues.

During a courtesy call of the participants of the four-day Fifth World Congress of the International Religious Liberty Association (IRLA) in Malacanang, the President noted that inter-faith understanding holds the key to a better world, “not just to live and let live.”

The President conferred with IRLA leaders who include Denton Lotz, president of the IRLA and general secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, and John Graz, secretary general of the International Religious Liberty Association and coordinator of the Fifth World Congress on Religious Freedom. IRLA concluded their conference today.

In their brief conversation, the President recalled to the delegates her meeting with British Prime Minister Tony Blair during a visit to London last January, wherein they discussed the importance of religious tolerance and understanding.

The President noted that just as important as the link between terrorism and poverty, which she always emphasized, is “the relation between terrorism and religious understanding,” which Blair has always stressed.

With the President to receive the IRLA delegates were Secretary Gabriel Claudio, chief of the Presidential Legislative Liaison Office, Northern Samar Rep. Hardin Abayan and Ambassador Bienvenido Tejano.

Chartered in 1893, the IRLA has advocated religious freedom for 105 years.

It does not identify with any political party anywhere, nor does it endorse candidates for political office. Leaders of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church originally organized the IRLA, but its purpose is universal and non-sectarian. Various religious traditions are represented on the Board of Directors.

The presidency rotates annually among a panel of vice presidents. The president in 1989 was the former general secretary of the Lutheran World Federation; in 1991, the general secretary of the Baptist World Alliance.

The IRLA has no paid staff. Officers and directors serve voluntarily. Funding for IRLA operations comes from organizations supportive of the association's purpose.

GMA wants Metropolitan Theatre to new home of NCCA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for the revival of the Manila Metropolitan Theater and make it a new home of the National Commission for Culture and the Arts (NCCA).

In her speech before experts, artists, cultural workers and heads of government and non-government agencies attending the two-day Culture and Arts Conference which opened this morning at the Pearl Manila Hotel in Ermita, Manila, the Chief Executive said it is a good idea investments for the NCCA to use part of its income from the endowment fund to revive the Metropolitan Theater.

"This is one specific operational instruction that I would like to give to our government representatives," the President said.

In her speech, the President also underscored the need to make culture, including the movies, attractive and available to the masses.

A great movie fan herself, the President said she grew up in Iligan City and movies were the only "culture available to us." She added that she loved to watched the movies of the late actress Nida Blanca and Nestor de Villa when she was a child in Iligan City.

She said her grandmother used to bring her to the theater, and they would watch movies over and over again.

"That's mass culture. Let's make it available to everyone," she said, adding that is what she wants the Metropolitan Theater to offer to the masses.

The Metropolitan Theater is jointly owned by the Government Service Insurance System and the City of Manila.

The President underscored the need to use cultural establishments to be able to offer movies that would bring out "those beautiful values that we must preserve in our society."

That is the reason why the President said she was advancing money from her Social Fund — not to give an award to the best movies at the end of the Metropolitan Film Festival but at the start.

For this reason, the President said she has allocated an initial P50 million to be spread out as a subsidy for the production of the best scripts that will be chosen by the Metro Manila Film Festival committee.

WB launches $1-B program to assist GMA administration strategy for poverty reduction

The World Bank (WB) is launching a three-year strategic program to assist the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo achieve poverty reducing growth and ensure that the poor participate and benefit fully from development.

Dubbed as the new Country Assistance Strategy for the Philippines, the World Bank plans to provide about US$1 billion in loans to the Philippines over the next three years beginning this coming July 1.

The World Bank has said that the amount of lending could go as high as US$1.7 billion depending on the pace of policy and institutional reforms, government revenue mobilization and budget management, and portfolio performance.

In addition, the World Bank will provide analysis and technical assistance to improve delivery of services to the poor, strengthen the business environment and support peace and development in Mindanao.

According to Robert Vance Pulley, WB Country Director for the Philippines, it is more important than ever that the World Bank support actions of Filipinos, especially the poor, as the country emerges from the period of modest economic growth.

Pulley cited in particular the recent actions of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration to restore fiscal discipline by meeting the country's deficit target and commitment to fiscal consolidation by 2006, implement key structural reforms such as passage of the Power Sector Restructuring Bill, the Anti-Money Laundering law, and continue government revenues and strengthen the banking sector.

He likewise stated the need to improve government revenues and strengthen the banking sector.

Pulley explained that a high priority is to spur investment and job creation and mobilize adequate public resources for education, health, rural infrastructure and agricultural modernization.

To ensure that the poor participate and benefit fully from development, the strategy also calls for the focusing on efficient provision of other basic services such as shelter, water supply and sanitation, rural power and other infrastructure.

It also suggests increased access to productive assets such as land, technical extension services and credit. Also, the strategy will require the strengthening of organizational and financial capacity of the poor to engage in local development activities.

Malacañang announces resignation of DOTC's Alvarez

Malacañang announced today that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has accepted the resignation of Secretary Pantaleon Alvarez of the Department Transportation and Communications (DOTC).

In a regular press briefing in Malacañang, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said Alvarez submitted his resignation after June 5 when the President re-appointed him.

Afable said Director General Leandro Mendoza, chief of the Philippine National Police (PNP), is expected to take over the DOTC top post as earlier announced by the President.

He said that Alvarez wanted to free the President from the burden arising from unfair and unfounded charges hurled against him, which, he said, have no basis in fact.

Alvarez felt it is his duty to help resolve the problem rather than be part of it, Afable said.

While admitting that the appointment of Mendoza has already been signed, Afable said he did not know the exact effectivity date of the appointment because “there are some transition matters that have to be taken up.”

But Afable added that the appointment of Mendoza is already a done deal and he will step in as DOTC chief soon.

Afable also said that the President has found Mendoza to be very well qualified to fill the top position at the DOTC.

“General Mendoza has a good track record as PNP chief. He has seen through important reforms in the PNP and he has shown his skills as a manager. And I guess these are the things that, and of course his accomplishment as PNP chief, have figured greatly in the President’s decision,” Afable said.

Afable also said that the re-appointment of Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Heherson Alvarez still “holds up to this time.”

Palace: Abu Sayyaf has no new hostages

Malacañang today categorically denied reports that the Abu Sayyaf bandits led by Abu Sabaya had taken new hostages in the vicinity of Sirawai in Zamboanga del Norte.

In his press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang, Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. said he had checked with the Southern Command of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) in Zamboanga City and with Camp Aguinaldo and reports about new hostages taken by any group are negative.

“There are no such hostages that are now being held by any armed group in Mindanao,” Afable said.

Afable also debunked the reported claim of a certain Ustadz Shariff Julabbi that the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) is now training some 50,000 new guerrillas as a preparatory move to retake Camp Abubakar, MILF’s erstwhile main headquarters in Central Mindanao.

According to Afable, the report has been strongly denied by Al Haj Murad, MILF vice chairman for military affairs, in a conversation this afternoon with Secretary Norberto Gonzales, presidential adviser for special concerns.

Gonzales has been doing back-channeling efforts with the MILF to put in place confidence-building measures in the former conflict areas in Mindanao.

Quoting Gonzales, Afable said that Murad would be issuing an official MILF statement denying the report.

Afable said that Julabbi, who was reportedly the source of the report, is not involved in the negotiations with the MILF either in the formal negotiations or through the back-channeling efforts.

“So, we do not recognize Julabbi’s statement and we recognize only the statements of Mr. Murad,” Afable said.

The President's Day: July 14, 2002

14 JULY 2002

- GMA builds pro-investment climate to create more jobs
- GMA urges people to go out and vote tomorrow

GMA builds pro-investment climate to create more jobs

The state will go on bringing down the cost of doing business in the Philippines in its bid to create a better investment climate and to attract more capital in labor-intensive industries.

In her speech during the ASEAN Summit in November 2001, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo stressed the government's "line of enlightened liberalization, deregulation and privatization," as she vowed to push information and communication technology (ICT), promote reforms in the power sector, improve support infrastructures, and maintain the peace.

The focus is on her administration's thrusts to improve a flailing economy she inherited when she was proclaimed president on January 21, 2001 following a people power revolt against an ineffective government.

A year and a half going to her 2nd State of the Nation Address (SONA) on July 22, the President and her team have jumpstarted the promotion, rather than regulation, of ICT with the declaration that "technology is the foundation" of the country's economic growth

In compliance with the E-Commerce Act, the National Computer Center has launched the e-Gobyerno that placed the whole bureaucracy within easy reach, at a click of a computer key.

The ITECC e-Government Implementation Committee will present in November an e-Philippines Management Plan that will strengthen the ties between government and the private and business sectors.

Businesswise, the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) is carrying out a development plan for e-services, having profiled major ICT-enabled services like call centers, medical transcription, accounting and finance, animation, among others.

The mapping of information technology (IT) firms was completed in the financial districts of Makati City, Ortigas in Pasig City and Quezon City. Mapping work is being done in other parts of Metro Manila.

Promulgated on March 15, 2002 were guidelines for IT community access as in the case of Internet cafes, telecenters and learning centers.

The government has sponsored and joined in outsourcing meetings and missions resulting in 17 investment leads, three of which are call centers to operate this year, and conducted walking tours for foreign business groups on IT firms, schools and telecommunication companies.

It also came out with a "Showcase Hour," a program highlighting the countries IT products and services as well as contracted the Gardner Inc. to conduct a survey-research on the country's IT-enabled services.

From January to March alone, the DTI has approved nine IT projects that generated 2,977 jobs.

A similar IT plan was developed for small and medium enterprises (SME), kicking off with a service providers matchmaking fair where 10 exhibitors netted P18.256 million and launched 16 products. SME portals are also being set up.

The state will soon let telecommunications players put up high-speed networks and connectivity in eight IT hub areas, while deregulating rates that will result in healthy competition and lower connectivity costs.

In Congress, at least two bills on ICT are being worked out. One is the bill on Internet privacy and security to shield IT firms from computer fraud and abuses; the other, a bill creating the Department of ICT to address the new phenomenon of emerging technologies.

In her first SONA on July 23, 2001, President Macapagal-Arroyo looked forward to the day when the Philippines would be one of the world's center for software development and data management in this decade.

Besides ICT promotion, the government has also tasked itself to go on reforming the power sector to lower the cost of doing business in the country.

As a start, the Joint congressional Power Commission has approved the implementing rules and regulations for the Power Reform Law and the privatization plan for the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) on February 27 and March 13, 2002, respectively.

The President has also ordered a mandatory rate reduction of P0.30 per kilowatt-hour monthly on bills of electricity users starting the billing period June 26 to July 25.

She has also urged Congress to amend the Electric Power Industry Reform Act or Republic Act 9136 to give power consumers immediate relief from the high cost of purchase power adjustments, reduce the cost of electricity, and ensure a more reliable and efficient electricity system.

A legislative franchise for the National Transmission Corporation is also sought to lower the potential stranded cost and universal charges usually passed on to end-users, while enhancing the value of NAPOCOR's transmission assets and raise its privatization value.

Further, the Department of Energy has energized as many as 1,136 villages, most of them in remote areas, nationwide, as of May 31, 2002.

All this will minimize bottlenecks to productivity and reduce operating costs of businesses.

On February 3, 2002 before the Economic Club of Chicago, the Chief Executive stressed that the government would likewise "aim to expand the investment opportunities related to infrastructure required to improve the competitiveness of industries in the form of mass transport systems, roads, bridges, telecommunications and ports" by harnessing private sector support through the Build-Operate-Transfer Law.

A case in point is the ongoing implementation of two rail projects, one going north and the other south, to speedily transport people and goods to areas outside Metro Manila.

The Northrail will disperse communities towards the Subic and Clark freeport areas while the Southrail will cover the Cavite-Laguna-Batangas-Rizal-Quezon (CALABARZON) front.

Five more rail lines that can seat more than 1.3 million passengers daily are in the pipeline, expected to be completed by 2004.

These projects include the Light Rail Transit (LRT) Line 1 capacity expansion, Metro Manila strategic mass rail development, LRT Line 1 south extension, Mass Rail Transit (MRT) 3 Phase 2, and MRT 4 Phase 1.

Aside from this, the government will continue the liberalization of the airline industry.

Under this program, the President has issued on December 9, 2001 Executive Order 219 that established the domestic and international civil aviation liberalization policy.

Its implementing rules and regulations noted that any air carrier possessing a valid CPCN or TOC could be designated as an official international air carrier.

Another highlight was the provision that at least two operators on each domestic route or link should be encouraged and that domestic rates, charges and fees should be liberalized.

The country has also signed an improved air services agreement with Singapore, South Korea, Macau, Luxembourg and Qatar.

But more than promoting ICT, pushing power reforms and improving support infrastructure to attract investments and create more jobs, the Chief Executive further promised to maintain peace and order, in the workplace and in the streets.

In industries, the Department of Labor and Employment reported that it had a 94 percent conciliation and mediation success, having averted 407 notices of worker strikes and lockouts from July to December last year.

To uphold general law and order, the President issued Executive Order 21 adopting a holistic government response consisting of political, economic, psychological and security components.

This included a comprehensive program to meet head-on the twin problems of terrorism and poverty in the country.

GMA urges people to go out and vote tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has enjoined voters to go out and cast their ballots in the simultaneous barangay and youth elections tomorrow.

The President said these two important electoral exercises would revitalize democracy in the lowest, but vital, political levels of government.

She noted that the barangay council is the basic form of government that renders public service in the nation's communities.

The Sangguniang Kabataan, serves as the stepping stone of the youth in becoming responsible leaders of the country, she added.

The President said the people must not only go out and vote, but also ensure that the polls would be honest, orderly and peaceful.

“Mahalaga ang bawat boto ninyo. Sagrado sa ating demokrasya ang inyong karapatang pumili ng ating mga pinuno (Your votes are important. Your right to elect our leaders is sacred),” she said.

Earlier, she declared July 15 as a special non-working holiday to enable qualified voters to exercise their constitutional right to vote.

The President said the people should take part in the affairs of their respective communities.

mga may kinalaman sa paglaban sa kahirapan (In the village level, the officials understand your needs and concerns because they know the issues in your area. They know the residents of your communities and they render public service and implement programs, especially the anti-poverty thrust of government),” the President said.

- KOMPIL reaffirms support for gov't reform agenda
- GMA distributes relief goods in Bataan
- Bunye formally assumes post of press secretary tomorrow
- GMA makes a surprise visit to Commonwealth Market to check on prices of basic items

KOMPIL reaffirms support for gov't reform agenda

The civil society group Kongreso ng Mamamayang Pilipino (KOMPIL) today stressed it remains supportive of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's reform agenda, particularly those that have to do with good governance, new politics and social reform.

KOMPIL, in a statement made shortly after a dialogue with the President at the State Dining Room in Malacañang, said it "has not withdrawn support" for the government's reform agenda, contrary to speculations.

"Transparency, good governance, public accountability, social justice is the spirit of People Power 2. The challenge is to cascade these to the basic sectors and reassure a public grown weary of political strife and prevent actions of some groups that will derail the people's agenda," KOMPIL said.

During the meeting, the President assured KOMPIL members that her government has no plan to recruit Ronaldo Puno and Jimmy Policarpio, into her administration.

With regards to the choice of the next foreign affairs secretary, KOMPIL acknowledged the President's prerogative to decide on who would be the next DFA secretary even as they expressed their objections to the appointment of Sen. Blas Ople to the post.

"We put the matter to rest even as we remain vigilant as certain quarters will surely continue their attempts to try and inflict these persons, and others of the same probity, on the public once again," KOMPIL added.

Among those who attended the dialogue with the President were members of the KOMPIL Council of Leaders and Convenors Chito Gascon, Karen Tanada, Miguel Perez-Rubio, Jeannete Dumo, Evelyn Kilayko, Bobbit Librojo, dan Songco, Eero Brillantes, Teddy Lopez, and Melita Cruz.

On the government side, those present were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman, Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council Secretary Michael Defensor, National Anti-Poverty Commission chair Teresita Deles, Presidential Adviser on Media and Ecclesiastical Affairs Conrado Limcaoco, Presidential Adviser Marita Jimenez and former Presidential Management Staff Secretary Vicky Garchitorena.

GMA distributes relief goods in Bataan

HERMOSA, Bataan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today personally distributed relief goods and other government assistance to some 5,558 families or 24,757 individuals of the 16 barangays of Hermosa affected by floods due to the intermittent monsoon rains that hit the area.

The Chief Executive distributed the goods shortly after her arrival at 1:05 p.m. at the Hermosa Elementary School here.

She was welcomed by Hermosa Mayor Efren Cruz and other local officials as well the evacuees who were extremely happy to see her set foot at the Hermosa school grounds.

Elated by the warm reception, the President shook hands with them. She then instructed Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman and Mayor Cruz to ensure that evacuees get their share of the relief goods.

Later, the President, together with Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Soliman and other local officials, joined the evacuees for lunch.

After lunch, the President inspected two of the 16 flooded areas — Barangay Almacen and Barangay Daungan.

She rode in an amphibian truck during the inspection.

Earlier, Mayor Cruz said that 16 out of 23 barangays of the town were directly affected by floods due to the continuous heavy rains spawned by storms Inday, Florita, Gloria and Hambalos.

The 16 barangays affected by the floods and rains include Almacen, Pulo, Saba, Cataning, Daungan, Burgos, Mubuco, Sto. Cristo, JRC Mandama, Balsic, Bacong, Bamban, Culis, Palihan, and A. Rivera.

The evacuees are now housed in Almacen Elementary School, Almacen Barangay Hall and Cataning Chapel.

Damage to agricultural crops and production was estimated at P17.3 million; for livestock P517,000 and fisheries P4 million in.

Hermosa is a fourth-class municipality on the northeastern part of Bataan province. It has a land area of 15,730 hectares, which represents 11.4 percent of the provincial land area.

Bunye formally assumes post of press secretary tomorrow

Former Muntinlupa Congressman Ignacio “Toting” Bunye will formally assume the post of press secretary and presidential spokesman tomorrow.

He will be officially sworn in by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in ceremonies to be held July 19 in Malacañang.

Bunye, who will take over from Acting Press Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr., will remain as presidential spokesman until October when Roberto Tiglao will reassume the post. Tiglao will also assume the post of chief of staff under the Office of the President upon his return from Japan.

Before he joined politics in 1986, Bunye had been a reporter of DZMT, the radio station of the old Manila Times, and later as reporter of the Daily Star.

A lawyer by profession, Bunye has served in various executive positions at the Ayala group of companies, including as assistant vice president of the Ayala Investment and Development Corporation and the Bank of the Philippine Islands.

When former President Corazon Aquino took over power after the downfall of former President Ferdinand Marcos in 1986, Bunye was designated officer-in-charge of the municipality of Muntinlupa.

He became the duly elected mayor of Muntinlupa from 1988 to 1995. As Muntinlupa mayor, Bunye served as chairman of the then Metropolitan Manila Authority in a concurrent capacity, from 1991-1992.

In 1995, Bunye was again reelected as mayor of Muntinlupa for his last three-year term. During his 12-year stewardship, Muntinlupa metamorphosed from a fifth-class municipality into a highly-urbanized city.

Adopting proven corporate practices that he gained from working in the private sector, Bunye streamlined operations and cut red tape, thus making Muntinlupa City a business-friendly community which is what it is today.

Toward the end of his term as mayor, Bunye laid the foundation for the establishment of the Ospital ng Muntinlupa through the acquisition of a five-hectare lot within the Filinvest Corporate City, which is also the site of the future Civic Center Complex.

Barred by law to seek a fourth consecutive term as mayor, Bunye ran for Congress in 1998 and became the first Congressman from the lone district of Muntinlupa City.

In Congress, Bunye continued to champion the cause of local governments, especially in providing them with greater fiscal autonomy.

Originally a member of the minority, Bunye became one of the fiscalizers of the 11th Congress. But with the change of leadership toward the end of the 11th Congress, he became the Senior Deputy Majority Floor Leader.

A valedictorian during his elementary and secondary education, Bunye finished both his AB in Political Science and Bachelor of Laws from the Ateneo de Manila. He had a Masters in Management from the Asian Institute of Management.

Bunye, who is a lifetime member of the National Press Club, has written a number of articles published in the Daily Star, including a four-part series entitled "War Vignettes," a first-person account of events immediately after the Tet Offensive in South Vietnam in 1968.

He also wrote a one-hour documentary entitled "The Other War," a first person account of the activities of the Philippine Civic Action Group in Tay Ninh, South Vietnam. The documentary was broadcast in 1967 by radio station DZMT.

Bunye is married to Dr. Miraflor Oca-Bunye and has three children.

GMA makes a surprise visit to Commonwealth Market to check on prices of basic items

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today made a surprise visit to the Commonwealth Market in Quezon City to ensure that concerned government agencies are conscientiously monitoring the prices of basic commodities.

The President went straight to the market from the Batasang Pambansa grounds, where the presidential helicopter landed after an unscheduled visit to Hermosa, Bataan.

Accompanied by Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte, Jr. and Market Administrator Jose Mari Hilario, the President took her time in inquiring on the prices of basic goods.

She inquired on the change of prices of vegetables from Baguio City before and after the torrential rains hit Metro Manila and Central and Southern Luzon.

Vegetable vendor Roly Mopal graciously explained to the President that the prices of vegetables from the summer capital have increased slightly last week, but have gone back to their original and lower prices.

Baguio pechay, Mopal cited, has gone back to P40 per kilo from P50 per kilo.

The President also checked on the prices of rice.

At the VMS Rice Center and Gen. Merchandise, the President inquired on the prices of the staple and was glad to hear that prices remain the same as before the rains came.

Regular rice was priced at P19/kg, P20/kg, and P21/kg while the well-milled variety stood at P23/kg.

The President also looked into the prices of fish and meat products and was glad to learn that the prices have gone back to their level before the rains started.

While the President was undertaking the inspection, shoppers and children, pleasantly surprised that the President was in their midst, milled around her, wanting to shake hands with her and greet her.

- GMA thanks people for peaceful elections
- GMA says she is glad bulk of civil society continue to support her administration
- GMA formally assumes post of foreign secretary
- GMA orders OCD-NDCC to find ways of solving perennial flooding in Metro Manila, Regions 1 and 3
- GMA stresses 8-point realities in Philippine foreign policy in meeting with DFA officials
- GMA okays return of administrative control over police to Metro Manila mayors

GMA thanks people for peaceful elections

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked the people for the peaceful Sangguniang Kabataan and Barangay elections yesterday in the country.

In a nationwide radio interview this morning, the President expressed the hope that the same peaceful and happy atmosphere will prevail when the elections postponed in other parts of the country are finally conducted.

The President congratulated all those who won in the elections and exhorted them to work hard for the welfare of the Filipino people.

She noted that the barangay represents the primary structure of government, adding that “it is a must that barangay officials should help make our Republic strong.”

The President added that the country becomes stronger and effective only if government officials and the entire bureaucracy work diligently and dutifully enough, particularly in the delivery of basic services to the people.

GMA says she is glad bulk of civil society continue to support her administration

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she is glad that majority of the groups that comprise the civil society, except for the communists, are behind her administration.

In a radio interview this morning, the President said in a strong republic, the civil society must also be vibrant and its job is to help build the nation.

“Yong kanilang swords, maging hammers, to build rather than to destroy, iyon ang kanilang trabaho(Their swords should be turned into hammers so that they can build rather than destroy, that is their function),” the President said.

After a meeting in Malacañang Monday, the mainstream civil society group, Kongreso ng Mamamayang Pilipino (KOMPIL) expressed its continued support for the President's reform agenda, particularly those that have to do with good governance, new politics and social reforms.

In a statement issued after their audience with the President, KOMPIL said that contrary to reports, it has not withdrawn its support for the government's reform agenda.

The President said that despite the expression of support by the civil society in her administration, there are still a lot of problems that have to be resolved, like peace and order, how to be competitive in the world market, and how to ensure that consumers will continue to enjoy lower electricity rates.

When asked about what the government is doing to prevent an increase in water rates, the President said that like in the power sector, the problem in the water sector is also financing.

The President said that in the same manner that her administration was able to make a headway in resolving the problem of financing of the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR), it will also be able to find a solution to the financing problem of the water sector.

GMA formally assumes post of foreign secretary

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today formally assumed, in a concurrent capacity, the post of foreign secretary that was vacated by the resignation of Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr.

As her first official function as foreign secretary, the President presided over a meeting this morning in Malacañang with officials of the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA).

The President, chief architect of the country's foreign policy, will remain as the DFA chief until such time that she can designate a replacement for Guingona.

According to the President, Guingona was still the DFA secretary until Monday, July 15, the date when his resignation takes effect, although he bade goodbye to his staff at the DFA last Friday, or three days earlier.

The President said that although the special search committee that she formed to scout for Guingona's replacement has announced that it already has a short list of nominees to the post, she has yet to receive such a short list.

She also said that she has not given a deadline for the special search committee headed by Victoria Garchitorena, former head of the Presidential Management Staff (PMS), to submit the list.

When asked if she has already made a formal offer of the DFA portfolio to opposition Senator Blas Ople, the President replied: "Not yet."

GMA orders OCD-NDCC to find ways of solving perennial flooding in Metro Manila, Regions 1 and 3

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has directed Administrator Melchor Rosales of the Office of Civil Defense (OCD), who is also executive director of the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC), to form a committee that would seek a comprehensive solution to the perennial flooding in Metro Manila, Region 1 and Region 3.

In a nationwide radio interview this morning, the Chief Executive said she issued the directive to Rosales following her surprise inspection Monday of the flooded barangays in Hermosa, Bataan, where she also distributed relief goods and other government assistance to flood victims.

The President said she will soon meet with the local officials of Metropolitan Manila to tackle its perennial problems of floods, traffic and garbage.

On the flood-prone areas in the metropolis such as Caloocan, Malabon, Navotas, and Valenzuela (Camanava), the President said, the flood problem in these places will soon be solved because of the construction of the Camanava dike which will start in October this year.

Only the other parts of Metro Manila, and some provinces of Regions 1 (Ilocos) and 3 (Central Luzon) that must be given similar solutions and planning to prevent, if not completely eliminate, the perennial flooding of these places, the President said.

During her inspection trip to the flooded barangays in Hermosa, the President said, she also directed Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon Datumanong to transfer the desiltation or dredging project from its present site at the middle of the Almacen River to the river's mouth in Barangay Almacen.

“Dapat ilipat ang desiltation (project) sa mouth of the river, hindi doon sa gitna ng ilog (There desiltation project should be transferred to the mouth of the river instead of at its present location at the middle of the river)”, she said.

Out of the 23 barangays in Hermosa, 16 were flooded as of Monday due to the continuous downpour spawned by typhoons Inday, Florita, Gloria and Hambalos.

GMA stresses 8-point realities in Philippine foreign policy in meeting with DFA officials

As her first official act as concurrent foreign secretary, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the eight-point realities in regional and international development that would shape the foreign policy of her administration.

In a press briefing this afternoon, his first as press secretary and presidential spokesman, Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said the President reiterated her 8-point foreign policy guidelines during a meeting with senior officials of the Department of Foreign Affairs held this morning in Malacañang State Dining Room.

Bunye said the President's foreign policy is essentially anchored on the realities of having to deal with the world's great powers like the United States, Japan and China.

The President, according to Bunye, is also looking forward “to touching base” with the leaders of the major European countries where the Philippines has strong cultural, economic and diplomatic ties.

Bunye said that during the meeting with DFA officials, the President also mentioned that the cornerstone of the country's foreign policy is to really strengthen the role of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) “not just in terms of economic but also in terms of other arrangements that would include security matters.”

Before the meeting, the President issued a memorandum detailing the working arrangement between Malacañang and the DFA covering administrative work while she is heading the foreign affairs portfolio, Bunye said.

In this connection, Bunye said the President has designated a coordinating official in the person of Cecille Rebong, presently the acting chief of the Presidential Protocol and Presidential Assistant on Foreign Affairs.

“So, she (Rebong) will be the coordinator between the Palace and the DFA,” Bunye said.

The President, Bunye said, also appointed Ambassador Delia Albert, a career DFA official, as foreign affairs undersecretary. Albert, former Philippine envoy to Australia, is currently the DFA assistant secretary for policy planning and coordination.

The eight realities in the regional and international environment that would guide the President's foreign policy are as follows:

1. The paramount influence of China, Japan and the United States in the security and economic evolution of East Asia;
2. The growing context of the ASEAN in global affairs;
3. The role of the international Islamic community;
4. The looming importance of inter-regional organizations;
5. The protection of the environment, natural resources and maritime territory;
6. The drive for foreign markets and foreign investments in which Europe is also a major source along with the US, Japan, China and ASEAN;
7. The importance of international tourism; and

8. The crucial role of the overseas Filipinos in the socio-economic stability.

GMA okays return of administrative control over police to Metro Manila mayors

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved a proposal of Metro Manila mayors to restore to them administrative control over Philippine National Police members in their area.

The President announced her approval of the proposal during a joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and the Regional Peace and Order Council of Metro Manila at the Centennial Hall of Manila Hotel.

She earlier met the Metro Manila mayors at the Champagne Room of the hotel before the joint forum.

She said she has instructed the PNP hierarchy to work out within two weeks the details of an Executive Order (EO) that would be the guiding law for the Metro mayors.

“I talked to (PNP Deputy Director) Gen. (Hermogenes) Ebdane about this. He has no problem in principle so he would work out an EO that will be viable.” the President told Manila Mayor Lito Atienza, who undertook the peace and order briefing at the conference as RPOC chairman.

Atienza, for his part, thanked the President for the decision and assured a better crime rate the next time the council meets again.

“As mayors in the National Capital Region, Mrs. President, we would like to be fully responsible in the maintenance of peace and order conditions in each city and municipality,” Atienza said.

He added that having better control of each and every policeman on the beat, “then we should be able to present to you in the next meeting of the RPOC a much controlled and definitely a better picture.”

During the briefing, it was reported that Metro Manila’s crime rate from January to June 2002 increased to 9,743 or 28.6 percent from last year’s figure of 7,575.

Metro Manila is made up of the cities of Manila, Malabon, Mandaluyong, Marikini, Pasig, Quezon City, Caloocan, Valenzuela, Las Piñas, Makati, Muntinlupa, Paranaque, Pasay and the municipalities of San Juan, Navotas, Pateros and Taguig.

GMA okays action on MMDA strategic plans for Metro

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has expressed support and ordered action taken on certain strategic programs presented to her and the Cabinet by the Metro Manila Development Authority yesterday.

The strategic programs were laid out by the MMDA during yesterday's 14th Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) joint meeting held at the Manila Hotel.

MMDA Chairman Bayani Fernando, co-chair of the Metro Manila RDC-RPOC, presented what he called "an honest to goodness" situation of the metropolis, and asked for presidential intervention on vital programs that need government funding and support.

The joint RDC-RPOC meeting was also an opportune time for the President to meet all the city and municipal mayors and congressional representatives of Metro Manila and be apprised of the many concerns of the residents of the metropolis.

Among the strategic programs the MMDA chairman asked the President for consideration and support include the following:

- Sustained clearing of sidewalks of all types of illegal obstruction. The President said that out of the P2.5-billion estimated annual cost of this program, 10 percent will come from the income of the local government units and the rest will be funded by the national government.
- Construction of additional bridges and completion and interconnection of missing links of secondary roads. The President instructed the Department of Public Works and Highways to see if these additional bridges can be included in the President's Bridge Program which is being implemented throughout the country.
- Review of the United Vehicular Volume Reduction Program, popularly referred to as "color coding," and adoption of other Traffic Demand Measures, and other appropriate traffic schemes in major thoroughfares like EDSA which the President approved.
- Use of the railroad transfer station system to transport garbage in Metro Manila to a waste processing site within a 150-kilometer radius of Metro Manila. The President ordered the implementation of a financing scheme that works like a corporation on this program.
- Effect the complete transfer of flood control functions and responsibilities of the DPWH to MMDA, including the major flood control projects. The President earlier directed the transfer of flood control programs from the DPWH to MMDA.
- Simplification of government transactions by agencies, like issuances of certification, permits, clearances, etc. The President gave instructions to all government agencies to make verifications and clearances required by the different government offices to be inter-agency procedures instead of requiring the public going from office to office, which contributes to commuter traffic.

The strategic programs were part of the short-, medium- and long-term plans for the metropolis which Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye described as viable and workable.

Bunye, who was also present during the RDC-RPOC meeting, had served as Officer-in-Charge, mayor and congressman of Muntinlupa, which is part of Metro Manila. He was also at one time chairman of the Metro Manila Authority, forerunner of the present MMDA.

GMA names Albert Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has announced the appointment of former Philippine Ambassador to Australia Delia Domingo-Albert as Undersecretary of the Department of Foreign Affairs.

The Chief Executive made the announcement during her meeting with officials of the Department of Foreign Affairs yesterday in Malacañang, her first since she assumed the post as Secretary of Foreign Affairs in a concurrent capacity.

Prior to her appointment, Albert was Assistant Secretary of the DFA's Office of Policy Planning and Coordination.

A career diplomat herself, Albert has represented the Philippines in various capacities in Switzerland, Romania, Hungary, the German Democratic Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany.

She recently returned from her post as Philippine Ambassador to the Commonwealth of Australia with concurrent accreditation to Nauru, Tuvalu and Vanuatu. She also served as Dean of the Diplomatic Corps in Australia in 2001.

A native of Baguio City, Albert began her career in the DFA as Assistant Secretary in the Office of the Secretary of Foreign Affairs in 1967. She passed the Foreign Affairs Service Examinations in 1973.

Before her stint as the country's Ambassador to Australia, Albert served as Director General of the ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) National Secretariat of the Philippines. As such, she participated in various ASEAN meetings including the ASEAN Summit in 1992 and the first APEC (Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation) Summit in 1993.

During the Fourth APEC Economic Leaders' Meeting in the Philippines, Albert worked as Secretary General of the Conference Secretariat for which she was commended by the Philippine Senate in its Resolution No. 9 dated November 28, 1996.

Albert was also awarded the Knights Commanders Cross of the Order of Merit with Star of the Federal Republic of Germany in 1992 in recognition of her efforts in promoting Philippine relations with Germany as well as relations between ASEAN and the European Union.

Bunye's daughter resigns as spokesperson of First Gentleman

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today said that his daughter, Atty. Patricia Bunye, has tendered her resignation as spokesperson of First Gentleman Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo effective today.

Bunye, who formally assumed the post of press secretary and concurrent presidential spokesman yesterday, made the announcement in a radio interview when asked how he would coordinate with daughter Patricia, who is also serving as spokesperson of the First Gentleman.

He pointed out that his daughter decided to tender her resignation as spokesperson of the First Gentleman to avoid criticism.

“Dahil nakikita natin, there might be siyempre – babatikusin iyan. Sasabihin bakit iyong tatay ay spokesperson ni PGMA, iyong anak ay spokesperson pa kay FG Arroyo (We can see that there might be criticisms there. The critics might say that the father is spokesperson of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo while the daughter is spokesperson of the First Gentleman Arroyo),” he said.

During his press briefing at Malacañang yesterday Bunye said that aside from his job as press secretary, he will also perform the role of presidential spokesman but only until October when Rigoberto “Bobi” Tiglao will reassume the post.

Upon his return from Japan in October, Tiglao will also assume the post of chief of staff of the President.

GMA to agencies: fast-track ODA projects in M. Manila

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered concerned government agencies to expedite all ongoing Overseas Development Assistance (ODA) projects in Metro Manila, making sure these are completed on time.

The President made the directive during Tuesday’s joint meeting of the Regional Development Council (RDC) and the Regional Peace and Order Council (RPOC) at the Centennial Hall in Manila Hotel.

Attended by the Cabinet, regional directors and private sector representatives, the meeting is the 14th RDC-RPOC for Metro Manila.

Among the ODA projects on traffic infrastructure discussed during the meeting were the Metro Manila Mass Rail Transit Development (Line 2) project, Metro Manila Light Rail Transit (Line1) Capacity Expansion Project Phase II, Metro Manila Interchange Construction IV, Metro Manila Interchange Construction V, and the Metro Manila Urban Transport Integration Project.

Except for the first two, which are having Right of Way and other issues, all the projects are on schedule.

The President also stressed that work should also be hastened on flood-control projects such as the CAMANAVA (Caloocan-Malabon-Navotas-Valenzuela) Area Flood Control, Metro Manila Flood Control Project-West of Manggahan Floodway, engineering services for the Pasig-Marikina River Channel Improvement and the Manila Second Sewerage Project. She cited the fast rate of work on the Marikina River project.

She noted delays in the implementation of environment-related projects, and said these should be avoided.

The projects included the Pasig River Environment Management and Rehabilitation Sector Development Program, Metro Manila Air Quality Improvement Sector Development Program (MMAQISDP), the MMAQISDP-Air Pollution Control Facility and the MMAQI Investment Loan.

Also taken up were the implementation of human development projects such as the Upgrading of the Eulogio Rodriguez Sr. Memorial Hospital, the Hospital Waste Treatment project, Upgrading of the Medical Equipment of the Department of Emergency Medical Services Complex and the Creation of the National Eye Referral Center.

Interregional ODA projects are the Technical Education and Skills Development Project, Expansion of Dual Education Training Project, Promotion of Ship Inspection System and Technique Project, Rural Micro-Enterprise Finance Project and the Vulnerable Groups Facility Project.

The completion of all these projects will bring about socio-economic benefits for Metro Manila’s 9.9 million people.

Metro Manila is composed of the cities of Manila, Malabon, Mandaluyong, Marikina, Pasig, Quezon, Kalookan, Valenzuela, Las Piñas, Makati, Muntinlupa, Parañaque, Pasay and the municipalities of San Juan, Navotas, Pateros and Taguig.

Gov't committed to stamp out corruption, GMA assures nation

TAGBILARAN CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the entire government machinery is committed to stamp out corruption in public offices even as she agreed with the observation of the business community that corruption indeed impedes investment flows into the country.

In her opening statement at the start of the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) for Region VII held at the Tropics Resort here, the President also called on the local government executives throughout the country to be very vigorous in the fight against crime and corruption.

The President said that she has ordered the Department of Justice (DOJ) and the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) to submit their own reports on the works they are doing in going after perpetrators of graft and corruption in government.

“I believe too, like the business community, that corruption discourages investment flow,” the President said.

The PAGC, she said, is doing its job to ensure that good governance is carried out in all levels of the bureaucracy.

With regards to the corruption involving the courts, the President stressed that this would need special attention because of the separation of powers between the executive and the judiciary as stipulated in the Constitution.

In order to fight this dilemma, the President said, the executive branch would work with the leaders of Congress to come out with law on how to fight corruption among the judges.

“I would like to ask the whole Cabinet, the whole executive branch including the local government executives to be very vigorous in this campaign against corruption, against crime, and, of course, look forward to the legislative initiatives on Congress to help us fight corruption in the judiciary,” the President said.

The President said that what the executive branch could do in the meantime is to tighten up the prosecution of cases filed against members of the bench in the DOJ as part of cleansing the judicial system.

On the peace and order problem, the Chief Executive said she will expound more on the issue during her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) this coming Monday.

To further bolster the government anti-crime campaign, the President said she has already given newly designated Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Deputy Director Gen. Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. to eliminate kidnapping in one year.

On the anti-smuggling, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said she has also instructed Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo to charge those smugglers who will be caught not just with smuggling but with economic sabotage.

“Just like in kidnapping, we are not going to resolve it crime by crime but criminal by criminal,” the President stressed.

By charging those smugglers who are in the Order of Battle with economic sabotage, the President said this means that it will be a crime that is punishable by death and as such there will also be no bail recommended for those apprehended.

GMA pushes Bohol as RP's primary tourism growth area

TAGBILARAN CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for the immediate development of Bohol's natural resources and eco-tourism spots, stressing that this would be a very potent growth sector for the future.

Speaking in fluent Bolanon and Cebuano before a large crowd at the Carlos P. Garcia Memorial Sports Complex here, the President cited Bohol as one of the country's most progressive areas as it is endowed with rich natural resources.

She noted the presence of the world-renowned Chocolate Hills, Panglao Bay and the diving spots in Balingasan, among others, plus the natural hospitality of Boholanos, as big factors in promoting Bohol as a vibrant tourist destination.

She recalled having said in her State of the Nation Address in July last year that "we will promote fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful. One of them is tourism."

"We have the competitive edge in tourism, in the natural wonders of our country and the natural warmth of our people," she said.

Tourism, she added, is one of the "two identified growth sectors of the future. The other is information and communication technology."

McKenzie Associates, who put together the country's strategic tourism plan, named the Cebu-Bohol Tourism Complex "the number one area, by far, in the Philippines" for tourism promotion and development, she said.

To provide the means to take the tourists to primary natural wonders of the country and Bohol, the President disclosed the expansion of the Tagbilaran City airport to accommodate bigger planes like the Boeing 737s.

She said the Philippine Ports Authority is also working on expanding the seaport to the tune of P100 million. "This shall be a big help to your tourism because it will facilitate the movement of tourists between Cebu and Bohol so that Cebu and Bohol will be truly one, unified tourism attraction."

She added that tourism would be made more attractive in the area with the implementation of the P2.1-billion Leyte-Bohol Power Interconnection Project Phase II "so that Bohol will not lack in electricity."

She also cited work on the P1.07-billion Bohol Circumferential Road Improvement Phase II would complement ongoing tourism efforts. Similarly, work would also be undertaken on the Panglao circumferential road and Loay tourism highway.

Meanwhile, the President stressed the imperative need to give due attention to the bulk of the poor in Bohol who are in agriculture.

"Thus, we need agricultural modernization in Bohol," she said, as she named the P2.384-billion Bohol Irrigation Project Stage II as one of the major projects being implemented to the benefit of the area's farm workers. Another project is the Talibon Reservoir Irrigation Project.

She said she had directed concerned Cabinet Secretaries to speed up the processing of documents so that tourism and agriculture projects would be carried out soonest in Bohol.

Earlier, the President cited Bohol as the site of the famous blood compact between Datu Sikatuna and Spanish General Miguel Lopez de Legaspi, which anniversary the locals are celebrating today in the Sandugo (One Blood) Festival.

National Artists Juan Luna and Carlos “Botong” Francisco vividly put on canvas the blood compact, which was to spur friendship and cooperation for peace and growth between the natives of Bohol and the Spanish colonizers.

She noted the Boholanos for being good examples for Filipinos nationwide.

She lauded the province’s leaders for their commitment to uplift the lives of the people in the area, in close cooperation with the national government.

Administrative control over police forces more effective type of control, says Palace

Press Secretary and Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye today said that the restoration to Metro Manila mayors of the administrative control over the elements of the Philippine National Police (PNP) in their areas of jurisdiction is more effective than just operational control.

In his press briefing in Malacañang, Bunye explained that what is covered by the present arrangement between the PNP and the Metro Manila mayors is only operational control which, he said, is very different from administrative control.

“Administrative control already includes the hiring and firing of policemen. In operational control, you can just deploy police forces within your municipality,” he said.

However, when it comes to reviewing the police force for possible promotion, it will be a different matter, Bunye said. “They are reporting to somebody else and they are beholden to the one who will decide on their promotions or other benefits,” Bunye said.

“So this administrative control will really make it a more effective type of control,” he added.

Bunye said that before martial law, mayors all over the country had both administrative and operational control over police forces.

Although in some cases, the police were used as private armies by some abusive local executives in those days, Bunye, however, said that there was such a thing as Philippine Constabulary (PC) control at that time.

“At that time when the Philippine Constabulary thinks that a mayor or a governor was abusing his powers, then it could place a particular police force under PC control,” Bunye recalled.

“So maybe under this set up, if administrative and operational control are reverted to Metro Manila mayors, then perhaps the National Police Commission, which has overall supervision of the police forces, could place back the police forces under NAPOLCOM control in the event that some abuses are done by the local government officials,” Bunye said.

During the 14th Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) joint meeting at the Manila Hotel yesterday, the President approved the proposal of Metro Manila mayors to restore to them administrative control over PNP forces in their respective areas.

The President directed PNP chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. to meet with the Metro Manila mayors and work out an Executive Order that would implement the restoration of administrative control over the police forces to Metro Manila mayors.

GMA seeks development of parts of Chocolate Hills

TAGBILARAN CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today signed an amendment to Proclamation 468 dated Sept. 26, 1994, declaring the land around or in between Chocolate Hills as no longer part of the national monument.

The President signed the amended proclamation midway her speech at the re-enactment of the Sandugo (blood compact) between Datu Sikatuna and Spanish navigator Miguel Lopez de Legaspi at the Carlos P. Garcia Sports Complex here.

The tracts of land surrounding and within the famous tourist spot shall be developed by the provincial government and other entities that have control over the area, the amendment said.

Presidential Management Staff Undersecretary Ricardo Saludo said the amended proclamation would ensure that the areas that have to be preserved are preserved while those that could be developed would be excluded from the national monument area and classified as inalienable and disposable by the government.

The President initially decided on the issue during the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) of Region VII which was conducted at the Tropics Resort here.

“This is what strong and resolute leadership means. You don’t wait and you just make a decision if it is for the good of the community,” Saludo said.

Another issue raised by provincial and local officials during the RDC-RPOC meeting was the purported shortage of funding for local government unit (LGU) projects.

The President immediately instructed the Department of the Interior and Local Government to help LGUs set up units that would formulate solid or good project proposals.

These proposals, Saludo said, could then be presented to local and foreign funding agencies, to generate money for the projects.

“A lot of the times, you have LGUs that have good ideas but they do not have the technical expertise to package this into project proposals,” Saludo said.

From her own experience as former Undersecretary of the Department of Trade and Industry and later as Secretary of the Department of Social Welfare and Development, the President pointed out that it really takes a unit to produce project studies.

“The moment you have good project studies, you attract funding,” she said.

Palace cites NBI for filing case on Nida Blanca slay

Malacañang today expressed confidence that the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) would finally put to rest the eight-month old murder of popular Filipino actress Nida Blanca.

In a press briefing, newly designated Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the NBI was moving in the right direction in so far as the murder case was concerned.

The NBI has this afternoon filed before the Department of Justice’s Prosecutor’s Office a case against several suspects in the Blanca slay.

“I think everybody will be happy that this 8-month old case will finally be put to rest. Of course, assuming that the National Bureau of Investigation has foolproof evidence to nail the persons who were really responsible,” Bunye said.

Actress Nida Blanca, Dorothy Jones in real life, was found dead inside her car at the parking lot of Atlanta Center building in San Juan on the morning of November 7, 2001.

Let's not allow envoy's remarks to spark RP-US diplomatic row, says Palace

Malacañang today called on some sectors not to allow the recent statement of US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone about corruption in the country to spark a diplomatic row and damage Philippine-American relations.

In his regular press briefing in Malacañang, Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye said that "we should not be very defensive and I think we should not allow the incident to escalate into a diplomatic crisis."

"As I said we should not bloat it further than what is necessary," Bunye said.

Bunye was reacting to reports that some congressional leaders and media personalities have demanded a public apology from the US envoy after he remarked in a forum that widespread corruption in the Philippines was driving away potential investors.

In her remarks at the opening of the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) of Region VII held in Tagbilaran City this morning, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo herself agreed with the observation that graft and corruption impedes the flow of foreign investments into the country.

The President, however, emphasized that the entire government machinery is committed to wipe out public corruption with the support of the local governments, Congress and the judiciary.

While Bunye admitted that there is "some truth" to the US envoy's observation, the administration is addressing this problem with resolve.

"We have to equally emphasize, we have to doubly stress that the government is doing something about this corruption problem," Bunye said.

He said that the best thing to do is to leave the matter "at that for the time being."

"Let us not be too defensive, let us not be too self-righteous about it. Let us not be on the denial mood," Bunye said.

GMA awards P167.3 M in agriculture tools, livelihood assistance in Bohol

TAGBILARAN CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the awarding of some P167.3 million worth of agricultural implements and various equipments, fishing gear and other means of livelihood for the different individual and group beneficiaries in this province.

In a ceremony during the celebration of "Sandugo" (blood compact) festival at the Carlos P. Garcia Sports Complex here, the President also handed over certificates of occupancy for 20 beneficiaries from Purok 1, Barangay Cabawn, Tagbilaran City under the "Gawad Kalinga" Build program of Couples for Christ. The said project was funded by the President's Social Fund.

Aside from the certificates of occupancy, the President also awarded emancipation patents and certificates of land ownership awards to 356 agrarian reform beneficiaries covering 506 hectares of land in the province of Bohol.

From the Department of Health, the President distributed 1,775 health cards under Plan 500 to beneficiaries in Tagbilaran City and the towns of Loon and Loay.

Other awards and benefits distributed by the President during the Sandugo celebration were the Barangay Official Eligibility (BOE) to 88 qualified officials in Bohol; certificates of completion of the Banlasan-San Isidro farm-to-market road and restoration of damaged box culvert and roadway project; certificate of completion on the construction and rehabilitation of 16 units of hand pumps; certificate of completion on the construction of a rural health unit building in Poblacion, Dagohoy, Bohol; certificate of completion of the Hinlayagan, San Isidro Road; certificate of completion of the Carmen District Hospital; financial assistance certificates under the Private Education Student Financial Assistance (PESFA) for technical education and skills development to 113 student grantees; scholarship certificates under the GMA Scholarship Program to 372 students from the towns of Dagohoy and Danao; 10 checks under the GMA Cares program amounting to P3.4 million for 10 local government units in Bohol; five units of 4-wheel 90 horsepower farm tractor with complete accessories amounting to P15 million to the province of Bohol under the Corn-Based Agri-Business System Technology (COAST) project; and fishing supplies consisting of fishing nets, ropes, straw, seaweed seedlings for the 15 members of the Alumar's Fishermen's Association and the Macaas Fishermen's Association.

To further enliven the Sandugo celebration, the DOH has put up a booth selling medicines under the "Gamot na Mabisa't Abot Kaya (GMA 50) and Parallel Drug Importation Program.

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), in coordination with Presidential Adviser for Jobs Generation Luis Lorenzo also held jobs fair at the Central Visayas School of Fisheries, Forestry, Agriculture and Technology here in Tagbilaran City.

Among those who joined the President at the Sandugo Festival were Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council Chairman Michael Defensor, Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., National Anti-Poverty Commission Chairperson Teresita Deles, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas and PNP chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr.

GMA: Metro mayors' control over police to stabilize peace and order situation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed belief that the return of administrative control over the police to Metro Manila mayors is an effective way of stabilizing the peace and order situation in the metropolis.

In a live interview this morning with the Magandang Umaga Bayan segment of Channel 2's Alas Singko y Medya, the President pointed out that the restoration will be experimental and limited to Metro Manila only.

The President said the move is in response to the complaint of Metro Manila mayors that they have not been able to contain illegal "jueteng" in their respective municipalities "because the police are not reporting to us (mayors)."

"The appeal of the Metro Manila mayors was to restore to them administrative supervision over the police to give them the opportunity to solve the peace and order problem," the President said.

The President also pointed out that issues such as peace and order, is part of the "state of the regional visits."

She said that these were the important issues discussed at the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and the Regional Peace and Order Council of Metro Manila that need to be addressed.

The President said that Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., the new PNP chief, has no objection in principle to restoring administrative control over the police to Metro Manila mayors.

Ebdane, the President said, asked for two weeks to draft an Executive Order in coordination with Metro Manila mayors giving them limited administrative control over the police.

The President also ordered Ebdane to concentrate on the kidnap-for-ransom cases, and delegate other police matters to his deputies and Metro Manila mayors.

Energy dep't says 1,513 barangays provided electricity

The Department of Energy today said 85 percent of all barangays nationwide now have electricity as a result of the intensified government program to promote rural development through electrification.

Energy Secretary Vicente Perez, Jr. said the electrification program is designed to encourage more economic activity in rural areas and create more jobs for Filipinos, which is a basic component of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's agenda to win the war against poverty within the decade.

Perez told a briefing for a media on the SONA 2001 Accomplishments at Malacañang's Heroes Hall that the energy department exceeded by four percent the target set the President Macapagal-Arroyo for the total number of barangays to be provided electricity.

From the time the President set the target during her SONA last year, a total of 1,513 barangays have been connected to electricity service. This leaves 6,536 barangays that remain to be provided electricity, he said.

It can be recalled that in her first SONA in July last year, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo unveiled the government's national agenda to win the war against poverty within the decade. Part of the national agenda to fight poverty as mentioned by the President is a balanced economic development that has a bias towards the poor and the disadvantaged

Since electricity is a vital component of economic development, the President vowed to provide electricity to four unenergized barangays everyday for one whole year.

Perez admitted that given the geographical and economic constraints, rural electrification has made snail-paced progress in the previous years.

However, he stressed that the President's strong commitment to wage war against poverty has made it clear that "we can no longer take this for granted."

"Electricity is a key component in improving the lives of our people especially our less privileged countrymen," Perez declared.

He pointed out that through the accelerated O-IIaw Electrification program, some 522 barangays were given electricity in Luzon while another 598 barangays were also lighted in the Visayas.

In the Mindanao region, Perez reported that about 393 barangays were likewise energized particularly in rural-infested areas. These are the following: Region I (20), Region II (119), Region III (30), Region IV (189), Region V (130), Region VI (176), Region VII (153), Region VIII (269), Region IX (71), Region X (71), Region XI (56), Region XII (65), Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao or ARMM (78), CARAGA Region (52), and Cordillera Administrative Region or CAR (34).

Perez also cited the economic policies and structural reforms being vigorously implemented by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration which, he said, "further strengthen efforts towards attaining complete electrification of all the barangays in the country."

He mentioned the Electric Power Industry Reform Act (EPIRA) giving the DOE the power to consolidate all efforts by government agencies such as the National Power Corporation, National Electrification Administration and the Philippine National Oil Company and the private sector in the rural electrification program.

Perez said that at present, the DOE is busy preparing the Missionary Electrification Development Plan (MEDP), which outlines the government's program in reaching out to the countryside.

He added that the MEDP also outlines capital investment, operations and generating capacity additions in existing missionary areas as well as the needed facilities to be constructed in areas not yet connected to the transmission system.

Perez also noted that while NAPOCOR assets will be sold, "it will remain as a government-owned and controlled corporation that will specifically carry out the missionary electrification program of the administration, providing electricity in the far-flung areas such as those in the mountains and in the small islands that cannot be reached by the main electricity grid."

He also said that electricity rates for residential end-users were immediately reduced by 30 centavos per kilowatt hour when EPIRA took effect in June last year.

To give immediate relief to power consumers, the President had earlier ordered NAPOCOR in May this year to reduce its Purchased Power Cost Adjustment (PPCA) and pegged it at a uniform rate of P0.40 per kilowatt hour.

Perez said the President's order has resulted to a national average reduction of P0.85 per kilowatt hour, representing about 20 percent in the consumer's electricity bills starting this month of July.

He also said that the completion of the inter-agency committee review of the 35 Independent Power Producers (IPP) contracts of NAPOCOR by end of June this year and the renegotiations of these contracts are expected to further reduce stranded costs in the near future.

According to Perez, the enactment of EPIRA also constituted new bodies that will carry out the reforms stated in the law.

The new bodies identified by Perez include – the Private Sector Assets and Liabilities Management Corp (PSALM), the company that will handle the privatization of NAPOCOR's generating and transmission assets and manage its liabilities; the National Transmission Co (Transco), the new transmission firm that will handle the transmission functions of NAPOCOR; and the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC), the quasi-judicial body that will regulate the industry to ensure customer choice and promote competition.

Gov't provides security of tenure to 338,858 families, exceeding GMA's SONA target by 113%

The Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) today said that the government had already provided security of tenure to almost 338,858 families as of end-June this year, exceeding the State of the Nation Address (SONA) target of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo by 113 percent.

In his report during the breakfast forum on SONA accomplishments held at the Malacañang's Heroes Hall, HUDCC Chairman Mike Defensor said that the housing sector surpassed its target of providing 300,000 families with housing rights.

He said that the target of 300,000 is broken down as follows: 150,000 land tenure for the urban poor; 70,000 socialized housing for the poorest of the poor; and 80,000 low-cost housing for low-salaried workers both in the private and public sectors.

Defensor admitted that the provision of the security of tenure to 183,026 urban poor families was largely achieved through the asset reform program, which involves declaring idle government lands for housing purposes, along with the Community Mortgage Program (CMP) and the National Government Center (NGC) projects.

Defensor said that more than 80,000 poorest of the poor families have already benefited from the various socialized housing programs of the National Housing Authority and the Pag-IBIG fund such as slum upgrading, sites and services, land tenurial assistance program, community loan acquisition support program, grants in aid for housing, and housing material assistance.

He also said that 72,375 households representing 90 percent of the targeted 80,000 low-salaried workers have already availed of the home lending programs of Pag-IBIG fund, Government Service Insurance System, Social Security System and Development Bank of the Philippines.

He added that another SONA related accomplishment of the housing sector includes the publication and implementation of reduction of signatures needed for the processing of housing permits is already in place and Executive Order 45 – the law that waged the “mother-of-all wars” against red tape in housing.

The EO 45 prescribes simplified requirements, procedures and timetables for issuance of housing related and imposes sanctions to agencies found not complying with it.

The Department of Agriculture, Department of Agrarian Reform, Department of Environment and Natural Resources, Department of the Interior and Local Government and the HLURB involved now in the issuance of housing permits, have all come out with their respective complying orders to EO 45.

In another related accomplishment, Defensor said that the HLURB issued 2,819 Licenses to Sell for government and private sector with regards on the housing projects and this translates to 156,252 housing units while the NGC extended P17,798.68 million in guaranty equivalent to 42,879 housing units.

Defensor expressed optimism that the housing sector will continue to be bullish as may be gleaned from the licenses to sell issued by the HLURB, and indication of the housing units made available to the public.

“While we are glad we passed with flying colors we have to strive harder to raise the bar of our performance in the next SONA,” Defensor said.

Boncodin says gov’t committed to good governance

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin today stressed that the government remains committed to carry out President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s national agenda of raising the moral standards in the bureaucracy and society in order to push socio-economic growth.

In a breakfast forum, Boncodin cited the implementation of electronic (E)-procurement, a major program on good governance.

She said all state departments have been linked to e-procurement, resulting in a system that would rid the bureaucracy of avenues for corrupt practices in the purchase of products for public use.

Also connected to e-procurement were 57 percent of sub-department offices, 91 percent of government owned and controlled corporations (GOCC) and 72 percent of state universities and colleges, she added.

Boncodin also cited moves to make the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and the Bureau of Customs (BoC) as showcases in the fight against corruption.

The BIR has filed administrative charges against erring personnel while reducing processing time on public documents.

The BoC, on the other hand, has bought an X-ray containing machine while automating its various procedures and systems.

The budget secretary disclosed that the state has continued to facilitate the fair and speedy trial of plunder cases against former President Joseph Estrada.

A Social Weather Station survey published in March showed that the Sandiganbayan has proceeded with fairness on the trial and that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration had been treating the former president fairly, she noted.

Boncodin said anti-red tape projects are also being undertaken in local government units. Different agencies have also brought down to the minimum the processing time for documents.

In high levels, the President has streamlined the executive department and had abolished 90 locally funded projects and task forces under Executive Order 72.

“We have also rationalized the compensation package of GOCC’s and government financing institutions (GFIs) that are exempted from the salary standardization law,” she said.

“We are also involved in various governance related activities, essentially working with civil society to curb graft and corruption and uphold the rule of transparency in the government,” she added.

Boncodin said the President is expected to sign soon an administrative order on corporate responsibilities of presidential appointees to the board of GOCCs and GFIs.

The Presidential Committee on Effective Governance has been reviewing the practice of gift-giving to public officials and agencies. She said civil society has been helping in the formulation of good governance policies.

Quoting President Macapagal-Arroyo, Boncodin said: “We will introduce a new culture in governance, a culture of plain talk and common sense.”

She said Cabinet secretaries would do less cluster and inter-agency committee work so that they could concentrate on running their departments; less meetings, more action; more tangible results so that we can improve peace and order and fight graft.

“Good governance is a continuing challenge to all of us and we will do this with the leadership of the President,” Boncodin said.

GSIS increases amount of emergency loan to members in calamity-hit areas

The Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) has increased the amount of emergency loan granted to members from P8,000 to P10,000 in areas hit by floods caused by monsoon rains and four successive typhoons.

In a report to Malacañang, GSIS President and General Manager Winston F. Garcia said that the GSIS board approved the P2,000 increase to provide ample financial assistance to GSIS members who have been affected by calamities such as typhoons, floods, or earthquakes.

The increase will benefit thousands of GSIS members who have been affected by typhoons Florita, Gloria, Hambalos and Inday that hit the country, particular Metro Manila and Central Luzon, during the past two weeks.

Over July 17, the GSIS board approved the grant of emergency loans to members who work or reside in Tarlac (to be processed by the Tarlac Branch Office); Malabon and Valenzuela (to be processed by the Caloocan District Office); and Province of Rizal (to be processed by the Antipolo District Office).

Garcia said that a total of P404 million has been budgeted for the purpose.

To qualify for the GSIS emergency loan, the members must:

1. be residing or working in the area declared as a calamity area duly proclaimed by a duly constituted authority and approved by the GSIS;
2. be in service and not on leave of absence without pay as of the date of application;
3. has no pending administrative or criminal case as of the date of application;
4. has no arrearage in the payment of mandatory social insurance contributions; and
5. has no arrearage in the payment of any of his GSIS loans or none of his loans with the GSIS has been declared in default.

Garcia said the emergency loan is payable in 24 months (two years) and carries a very reasonable interest rate of 10% per annum which already includes the service fee.

He said renewal of the loan shall be allowed after payment of 12 monthly installments but not earlier than the anniversary date of the previous loan.

According to Garcia, as of January this year, the GSIS has already released a total of P692 million in calamity loans to 66,489.99 members hit by typhoon Nanang.

These members are residing or working in Aklan, Capiz, Maasin, Cebu, Camiguin, Negros Occidental, City of Surigao and Surigao del Norte, Garcia said.

GMA to focus on peace and order, lower power rates in 2nd SONA, says Bunye

When President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo delivers her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) on July 22, she will be specific and more focused on effecting solutions to the country's major problems, particularly peace and order.

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, in a radio interview this morning, said the President would give due attention to peace and order concerns to further gain the confidence of foreign investors to put their money in labor-intensive but competitive industries in the country.

“Kung walang peace and order ay hindi magkakaroon ng confidence ang ating mga investors. Kung walang confidence ang ating mga investors ay hindi tayo magkakaroon ng mga bagong negosyo (Without peace and order, investors tend to shy away from the country. Without investor confidence, we will not be able to have new businesses),” he said.

Bunye said new businesses would create new jobs. Subsequently, it would open economic opportunities for the people. They would have the money to buy their basic needs.

Another topic the President would tackle in her second SONA would be the power problem, he said.

The President would spell out measures that would be undertaken by her more than 18-month old administration to lower electricity and power rates, he added.

On May 8 this year, the President has ordered the National Power Corporation to reduce its Purchased Power Cost Adjustment by P0.40 per kilowatthour.

The President's directive has resulted in a national average reduction of P0.85 per kilowatthour. Negotiations of contracts with independent power producers were expected to further bring down stranded power costs soon.

Gov't, private sector release P23M for relief, rehab of typhoon, flood victims

The government, in cooperation with the private sector, has released some P23.235 million for the relief and rehabilitation of families hard hit by typhoons and monsoon rains that lashed the country in the last two weeks.

The Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), in an update this morning, said the amount was extended to flood victims through the combined resources of the DSWD, local government units (LGUs), non-government organizations (NGOs) and government organizations (GOs).

The National Disaster Coordinating Council and its provincial and municipal chapters coordinated the relief and rehabilitation efforts.

The DSWD said the government ably extended assistance to a total of 164,881 families or 768,804 individuals.

Of this number, 12,762 families or 59,024 persons were accommodated in 277 evacuation centers set up in Metro Manila and a number of provinces in Central and Southern Luzon.

With floods subsiding in most areas, only 73 evacuation centers have remained open to help typhoon and flood victims. At least 204 have been closed.

The 73 evacuation centers, located in Regions 1 and 3, have continued to serve 2,674 families or 12,795 individuals.

However, some 80,890 families or 397,729 persons are being served outside evacuation centers.

Since the start of the heavy rains and flooding, the number of affected families totaled 440,616 or 2,059,876 individuals. Most of the victims came from 2,194 barangays in 16 provinces.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo earlier ordered the Department of Budget and Management to release an initial P300 million for relief and rehabilitation efforts in calamity-stricken areas in Metro Manila and some parts of Luzon.

The President has visited flooded areas and evacuation centers in Metro Manila and nearby Pampanga to personally assess the damage wrought by rains and typhoons.

NEDA bares continued foreign support to develop ARMM

Representatives of foreign states and development aid agencies have expressed continued support for the development of Mindanao, particularly in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) and its component Basilan province.

In a recent forum on peace and development chaired by the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), United States Ambassador Francis Ricciardone said the U.S. international livelihood program is open to the people of Mindanao.

Ricciardone, however, stressed that the U.S. would not provide development assistance to rebel returnees who tend to switch loyalties and fight against the Philippine government.

“The United States will not provide development assistance to those who will make future terrorist attacks against the Philippine government and its people,” he said.

Ricciardone added it was vital for ARMM Gov. Parouk Hussin and Basilan Gov. Wahab Akbar to help in identifying areas ready for development programs.

He cited the importance of clearly defining the channels of assistance to ensure that resources would not end up in the hands of terrorists or bandit groups.

Hussin and Akbar have assured Official Development Assistance (ODA) partners they would closely coordinate with them on peace and development efforts to ensure success.

Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said development projects in the ARMM would play an important role in the ongoing peace process between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

Ermita said the country’s application for observer status in the Organization of Islamic Conference would also depend on the effective implementation of socio-economic projects in the region.

“It will even better our chances to get observer status in the OIC,” he said.

The World Bank also expressed its support to reduce poverty and help build peace in conflict-affected areas in the ARMM through its ARMM Social Fund for Peace and Development (ASFPD) Project.

The project, worth between $40 million and $60 million, would strengthen institutional capacities and improve local governance. A possible co-financing with the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) and Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC) is being worked out.

On the other hand, the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) reported that it had so far poured in $41.2 million in assistance to Mindanao this year. Some $22.6 million went to the ARMM and $2.37 million to Basilan.

USAID activities included the Livelihood Enhancement and Peace Program, with some 13,700 former MNLF combatants as beneficiaries and another 13,000 persons availing of the program.

The United Nations-led Multi-Donor Program (UN-MDP) had assisted some 53 MNLF farmers in Calang Canas, Maluso, Basilan. The beneficiaries are in the production of cassava. The project is worth P237,000, carried out through the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

Other UN-MDP activities included community access to sports facilities from the Department of the Interior and Local Government, a seaport funded by the Congressional Development Fund; and payaw-making funded by the Children Catholic Fund Malusa Outreach.

The UN-MDP also conducted capability building and training in the area.

The Joint Task Force-510 of the U.S., which is participating in the RP-US joint Balikatan military exercises, has reported that some $1.98 million worth of humanitarian assistance projects were accomplished in Basilan.

These included the installation of water storage tanks, water treatment and catchment systems, and water wells, the upgrading of hospitals and medical clinics, and the construction of hospitals, medical clinics, three multipurpose centers, and high schools.

Aside from these, the JTF-510 reported the upgrading of some 60 kilometers of roads and the improvement of the Basilan airfield.

NEDA Deputy Director General Gilberto Llanto said the forum on peace and development was conducted to brief the diplomatic community and ODA donor-countries on the improving peace and order situation in the ARMM and Basilan.

Llanto urged them to invest their resources in programs and projects in the area.

GMA okays issuance of new E.O. to speed up interconnection among telecom firms

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has approved the issuance of a new executive order that would speed up interconnection among telecommunications companies that would result in lower rates for consumers.

The President gave the directive during Thursday's Cabinet meeting after noting that delays in interconnection among public telecommunication entities (PTEs) have resulted in high telecom charges.

She ordered Chief Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz Jr. to draft the executive order amending Executive Order No. 59 issued by former President Fidel Ramos.

EO 59 prescribed the policy guidelines for compulsory interconnection of authorized public telecommunications carriers in order to create a universally accessible and full integrated nationwide telecommunications network and thereby encourage greater private sector investment in telecommunications.

The draft EO, which was presented to the President and the Cabinet members in Thursday's Cabinet meeting, would enhance the existing policy on interconnection to ensure telecommunication services of PTEs can access the services as well as the subscribers of other PTEs at acceptable quality of service and at reasonable costs.

The new EO would emphasize the need to provide an effective and measurable time-frame to effect and implement interconnection between and among PTEs to facilitate the negotiations of interconnection agreements.

The EO would also stress the need to ensure that interconnection will not result in unfair and unreasonable pricing arrangements to the detriment of the consumers.

EO 59 was signed by former President Ramos on February 24, 1993 to strengthen competition in the telecommunications industry as well as to break the monopoly in telephone services.

Speed up national road maintenance in typhoon-hit areas, Datumanong orders

Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) Secretary Simeon A. Datumanong has ordered agency field officials to carry out immediate maintenance work on national roads damaged by monsoon rains and typhoons "Gloria" and "Hambalos" that recently hit the country.

Datumanong also directed DPWH maintenance crews to use all available equipment to clear national roads from landslides, debris and fallen trees.

He also asked field officials to thoroughly assess damages to public infrastructure, particularly bridge sub-structures, school buildings and flood control structures.

Datumanong said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has directed the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) to release P80 million in calamity funds to the DPWH for repairs of damaged infrastructure.

Priority, he said, would go to patching up potholes in Metro Manila, Manila North Road, Manila South Road and the Cagayan Valley Road, which for sometime was closed to all types of vehicles.

Meanwhile, the DPWH has vowed to extend technical help to the Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) to solve the perennial flooding in the metropolis.

This followed the formal turn-over of all functions and responsibilities for flood control projects in Metro Manila from the DPWH to the MMDA, in accordance with the instruction of President Macapagal Arroyo.

Under a memorandum of agreement signed by Datumanong and MMDA Chairman Bayani Fernando, the MMDA would also assume the functions and responsibilities and relevant programs, projects, activities, personnel, funds, equipment, records, assets and liabilities subject to the provisions of existing relevant laws.

The DPWH has identified at least two major causes of flooding in Metro Manila, namely: the overflowing of the Pasig, San Juan, Marikina and Malabon-Tullahan rivers and streams during intense rain and the insufficiency of inland drainage facilities in coping with excessive local run-offs.

Flooding has been aggravated by the indiscriminate disposal of garbage and other solid materials into the rivers, esteros, drains, and waterways.

DPWH Assistant Secretary Salvador A. Pleyto, in-charge of the operation in the National Capital Region, said encroachment on esteros and rivers by squatters, business establishments and residential buildings also affected the flow of waters.

GMA SONA to address 3 main issues affecting people

When President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo delivers her State of the Nation Address (SONA) before the joint session of Congress on Monday, July 22, she will focus on three main issues, namely peace and order, graft and corruption, and the power situation.

In a radio interview this morning, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said the President would expound on her plans and programs for the incoming years.

Specifically, the Chief Executive would stress on the government's all-out war against all forms of criminality, including smuggling, and corruption, Bunye said.

He said a big part of the President's SONA would also focus on how to address the power rate problem. In recent months, the President had ordered a reduction on the controversial Purchased Power Cost Adjustment to ease consumer burdens.

He added that the SONA would be less in "nitty-gritties," but would be concentrated more on the fundamental issues that needed immediate solutions.

"The President will explain what she will do and basically, this is the declaration of war against all forms of criminality, all forms of anomalies, including smuggling," Bunye said.

Toward the end of her SONA speech, Bunye said the President would seek the support and cooperation of lawmakers on her priority bills that included the franchise law that would assure power users throughout the country of affordable electricity.

Bunye said the President has expressed elation over the bi-partisan pledge of senators to work for the passage of vital administration bills.

Gov't committed to dismantle crime syndicates as GMA lauds PNP for big drug bust

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said her administration is committed to dismantle all organized criminal syndicates in our country, including those engaged in drug manufacture and drug trafficking.

The President reiterated her strong commitment after a surprise visit and inspection at the drug laboratory in Quezon City raided by the elements of National Capital Regional Police Office-Metro Manila Drug Enforcement Group (NCRPO-MMDEG).

During the raid, the police confiscated at least P118 million worth of high grade shabu, chemicals and paraphernalia used in manufacturing the illegal drugs. The police also arrested seven Chinese nationals and three Filipinos inside a house in No. 75 Varsity Hills, Loyola Heights, Quezon City.

In her brief remarks, the President personally congratulated Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Interior and Local Government Secretary Joey Lina, Jr., NCRPO Chief Edgardo Aglipay and Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte for their successful drug bust.

The President said that the raid in Varsity Hills drug laboratory is the latest in a series of raids made by her administration in the war against drug pushers and drug dealers.

She said that the successful raid of PNP is the clear indication that the administration has the political will to fight against the proliferation of illegal drugs in the country.

The President also said that under her leadership, the PNP has now more drug bust operations compared to the past administration.

“Nakikita na ang political will kontra sa droga. Ang pinakamaraming drug bust ay ginawa sa ating administrasyon. So congratulations, at eto na ang sinasabi nating giyera kontra sa mga drug pushers, drug dealers na kasama sa ating giyera sa mga criminal syndicates (We can now see the political will against drugs. More drug busts have been conducted under our administration. So, congratulations, and this is now the war against drug pushers, drug dealers and in our war against criminal syndicates,” the President said.

GMA okays ICC-reviewed MRT 3 extension project

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has given the go-signal for the construction of the 5.12-kilometer extension of the existing 16.9-kilometer EDSA Mass Rail Transit (MRT) 3.

The $213.99-million rail project, to be financed and carried out by Metro Rail Transit Corporation (MRTC), earlier passed the muster of the Investment Coordination Committee (ICC) of the National Economic and Development authority (NEDA).

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary and ICC co-chairman Dante Canlas recommended the approval of the MRT 3 extension project to the President during the Cabinet meeting held Thursday in Malacañang.

Canlas said the project would complete the rail transit loop by linking the Baclaran-Monumento Light Rail Transit Line 1 and the Taft-North Ave. MRT 3.

The interface would come when the MRT 3 extends from its depot site in North Ave. to Monumento, with the construction of three elevated stations at Roosevelt, Balintawak and Monumento, all along EDSA.

The extension project will be implemented under the Build-Transfer (BT) scheme under the Build-Operate-Transfer Law.

It supplements the MRT 3 Phase I solicited Build-Lease-Transfer agreement.

When adopted, the MRT 3 extension project may not need the solicitation of comparable competitive proposals and may provide to MRTC similar government support possibilities under the existing Phase I BOT agreement.

The project will involve civil works, system designs, communication system, automated fare collection system, escalators and elevators and closed-circuit television and others.

The government, under the build-lease-transfer (BLT) contract, is operating the MRT 3 on an 18-hour basis, six hours of which are peak hours.

The maximum capacity of a three-car train is about 1,182 passengers or 394 passengers per car.

The minimum design speed is pegged at 32 kilometers per hour and the maximum possible headway is about two minutes.

Gov't micro-finance program exceeds SONA target

The government has extended some P692.75 million in micro-finance credit to 312,472 women borrowers as of mid-July, surpassing the 300,000-beneficiary target set in President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July 2001.

A report on the accomplished SONA targets presented in Thursday's Cabinet meeting said the President was also successful in making microfinance a cornerstone in the fight against poverty nationwide.

The report said this success has brought the total of microfinance institutions registered with the People's Credit and Finance Corp. (PCFC) to 198.

Loans released by PCFC to active conduits reached P1.128 billion serving 298,516 clients.

In providing funds for new women borrowers, 86.46 percent of the total borrowers got financing through government financial institutions (GFIs), such as the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP), Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), Small Business and Guarantee and Finance Corp. and government-owned and controlled corporations like the Technology and Livelihood Resource Center (TLRC), National Livelihood Support Fund (NLSF) and the PCFC.

Almost fourteen percent of the total borrowers acquired financing through PCFC conduits and affiliates, the report added.

Most of the women borrowers, numbering 57,485, came from Region 4; some 49,757 from Region 3; and 34,423 from Region 6.

In her SONA, the President promised to make micro-credit available to 300,000 new women borrowers every year.

"Bawat taon, dadagdagan natin ng tatlundaang libong maralitang kababaihan ang makikinabang sa paluwagan programa ng microfinance (Every year, we will include 300,000 new women borrowers in our microfinance credit schemes)," she said.

The President also pledged to make microfinance a foundation in the fight against poverty.

“Ang ibig sabihin nito ay maliliit na paluwagan para sa maliliit na negosyo (This means that microcredit will be made available to small businesses),” she said.

Aside from building new microfinance institutions, the government, through the BSP, issued licenses to three microfinance-oriented banks.

These were the Opportunity Microfinance Bank Inc., Micro Enterprise Bank and Bangko ng Masa with branches in Rizal province and in the cities of Davao, Makati, Pasig and Quezon.

The BSP is also evaluating four more bank applications to operate in Muntinlupa City; the provinces of Bukidnon and Catanduanes; and in Cainta, Rizal.

The government likewise prepared the Microfinance Development Framework and conducted a national microfinance conference and consultation with concerned agencies to identify needs of the microfinance industry and ensure that appropriate policies are in place.

It has also drafted the implementing rules and regulations of the Peoples Development Trust Fund, which shall finance capability building and institutional strengthening of microfinance institutions.

The implementing agencies of the microfinance program include the National Anti-Poverty Commission, PCFC, Department of Finance – National Credit Council, BSP, DBP, Land Bank of the Philippines, NLSF and the TLSF.

Local pharmaceutical firms assure GMA of making quality but cheap medicines

The Association of Philippine Pharmaceutical Manufacturers, Inc. (APPMan, Inc.) today reaffirmed its commitment to support the program of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to provide ordinary Filipinos, especially the poor, with quality but affordable medicines.

APPMan reaffirmed this commitment after the simple oath-taking ceremony of its officers and members led by its president, Ernesto Bravo of the St. Martin Pharma Lab, and executive vice president Ferjenel Biron of the Pharmawealth Lab. Inc. held at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang.

The new APPMan officers took their oath of office before the President.

APPMan also said that they have been supporting the program of the President to cut by half the prices of medicines frequently being bought by the masses.

“We have been supporting this program of President Macapagal-Arroyo especially in the countryside,” Bravo said.

Silently competing with the multinationals, especially in terms of affordability and quality, Bravo said that the APPMan, Inc., an association of all-Filipino pharmaceutical manufacturing companies, has been offering prices that are 50 percent lower than the popular brand sold by multinational firms.

Dr. Biron, on the other hand, said that it has been more than 20 years that APPMan has been offering medicines, especially antibiotics and other relevant lines, with half the price or even lesser than other brands sold by multinational companies.

“We just want to reaffirm that commitment to the President now that one of her programs is to reduce the price of medicines here in the Philippines,” said Dr. Biron.

The APPMan members also expressed gladness when the President assured them that she would look into the current situation of the Filipino pharmaceutical manufacturing which has been doing its best to upgrade its manufacturing system, a requirement imposed by General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade and the World Trade Organization.

“Some of our members are already exporting their products to Asian countries and engaged in the development of herbal plants available in the Philippines,” Dr. Biron said.

He said APPMan members have continued to operate their plants because of their commitment to serve, especially the less fortunate members of society.

“But we can only continue serving to the best of our ability and to the limit of our resources only if our government will do its part to stabilize and strengthen what was already developed – a true Filipino pharmaceutical industry,” Biron added.

GMA swears in Bunye as new Press Secretary

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today formally swore into office newly appointed Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye in ceremonies in Malacañang.

Secretary Bunye officially started working as press secretary and presidential spokesman last Tuesday (July 16).

Accompanied by his wife, Dr., Miraflor Oca-Bunye, his three children, relatives and friends, Bunye took his oath at the Ceremonial Hall of the Palace.

Aside from being press secretary, Bunye will act as presidential spokesman until October when Rigoberto Tiglao will reassume the position.

Before he joined politics in 1986, Bunye had been a reporter of DZMT, the radio station of the old Manila Times, and later as reporter of the Daily Star.

A lawyer by profession, Bunye has served in various executive positions at the Ayala group of companies, including as assistant vice president of the Ayala Investment and Development Corporation and the Bank of the Philippine Islands.

When former President Corazon Aquino took over power after the downfall of former President Ferdinand Marcos in 1986, Bunye was designated officer-in-charge of the municipality of Muntinlupa.

He became the duly elected mayor of Muntinlupa from 1988 to 1995. As Muntinlupa mayor, Bunye served as chairman of the then Metropolitan Manila Authority in a concurrent capacity, from 1991-1992.

In 1995, Bunye was again reelected as mayor of Muntinlupa for his last three-year term. During his 12-year stewardship, Muntinlupa metamorphosed from a fifth-class municipality into a highly urbanized city.

Adopting proven corporate practices that he gained from working in the private sector, Bunye streamlined operations and cut red tape, thus making Muntinlupa City a business-friendly community which is what it is today.

Toward the end of his term as mayor, Bunye laid the foundation for the establishment of the Ospital ng Muntinlupa through the acquisition of a five-hectare lot within the Filinvest Corporate City, which is also the site of the future Civic Center Complex.

Barred by law to seek a fourth consecutive term as mayor, Bunye ran for Congress in 1998 and became the first Congressman from the lone district of Muntinlupa City.

In Congress, Bunye continued to champion the cause of local governments, especially in providing them with greater fiscal autonomy.

Originally a member of the minority, Bunye became one of the fiscalizers of the 11th Congress. But with the change of leadership toward the end of the 11th Congress, he became the Senior Deputy Majority Floor Leader.

A valedictorian in his elementary and secondary education, Bunye finished both his AB in Political Science and Bachelor of Laws from the Ateneo de Manila. He had a Masters in Management from the Asian Institute of Management.

Bunye, who is a lifetime member of the National Press Club, has written a number of articles published in the Daily Star, including a four-part series entitled "War Vignettes," a first-person account of events immediately after the Tet Offensive in South Vietnam in 1968.

He also wrote a one-hour documentary entitled "The Other War," a first person account of the activities of the Philippine Civic Action Group in Tay Ninh, South Vietnam. The documentary was broadcast in 1967 by radio station DZMT.

DPWH terminates contract of delayed road project

Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon A. Datumanong has ordered the termination of the contract to build the Bayugan-Awa-San Francisco (Prosperidad) Road Section of the Surigao-Davao road in Mindanao.

Datumanong said the contractor, LS Sarmiento/Conception Basic/J&P Builders, in a joint venture, was unable to meet project schedules and had been committing work slippages since the project was started more than a year ago.

The contractor then vowed to adopt a "catch-up program" that the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH)-Philippine-Japan Highway Loan (PJHL)-project management office prepared.

But a recent ocular inspection showed that the contractor did not make good in its promise.

Physical accomplishment on the 36-kilometer road project, earlier scheduled for completion in less than a year, was recorded at a dismal 37 percent.

The P486-million road project, located in Agusan del Sur, is implemented under the supervision of DPWH-PJHL-PMO.

It is funded under a loan agreement between the Philippine government and the Japan Bank for International Cooperation.

"Once the loan closing date for this project expires, the government will shoulder the remaining construction costs, so we have to execute immediate remedies in accordance with existing laws," Datumanong said.

Undersecretary Manuel M. Bonoan, in-charge of the construction operations, said the DPWH might employ the next lower bidder or the contractor undertaking the adjacent road project to complete the works for the delayed Surigao-Davao section project.

Meanwhile, DPWH-PJHL-PMO Director Danilo Trajano said the agency would carry out maintenance works on the road section, so as not to inconvenience the motoring public.

Trajano also reported the completion of the Langkilaan (Trento)-Monkayo section of the Surigao-Davao Road Project.

The project, under contract with VT Lao Construction/Grace Construction (joint venture), covers the rehabilitation of the 18.35-kilometer road with portland cement concrete pavement and asphalt concrete overlay on 6.7-meter carriageway.

DPWH Assistant Secretary Bashir D. Rasuman, in-charge of operations in Mindanao, said the overtime work during good weather facilitated the on-time completion of the project.

W.E.F. cites B.O.C. modernization in RP trade growth

The Bureau of Customs (BoC) was chosen as the first target agency from among 161 countries to avail of the World Economic Forum trade enhancement initiative.

The BoC has been rated as among those that have made progress in customs modernization.

The agency ranked number one in E-Commerce Readiness among government agencies in the country.

It is expected to assist other countries that will undergo a similar initiative as the implementation of the project starts.

A non-governmental organization, the World Economic Forum, launched the initiative, focused on the assessment and improvement of customs processes of a specific country.

This would support trade facilitation through the application of E-Government policies and practices.

Recognizing the vital role of trade and investment in economic growth, the WEF engaged stakeholders from all sectors of society, along with international groups, to support the implementation of the initiative.

During the WEF annual meeting in New York attended by Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho early this year, only 20 firms from different countries and other industry sectors were chosen to participate in the initiative.

Camacho has named BoC Commissioner Antonio M. Bernardo as the BoC representative to the WEF.

Discussions on the initiative will be conducted during the East Asia Economic Summit 2002 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia in October.

GMA asks Sen. Sotto to oversee creation of Dangerous Drugs Board

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that she had invited Senator Vicente "Tito" Sotto III to oversee the creation of the new Dangerous Drugs Board (DDB).

In a radio address, the President said Sen. Sotto "will work closely with the administration without resigning from the Senate."

She cited the senator for having painstakingly researched and worked on the passage of Republic Act (RA) 9165 or the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002, of which the latter was the primary author.

"Nakilala rin si Sen. Sotto sa kanyang masigasig na kampanya laban sa droga sa loob at labas ng Senado (Sen. Sotto was also known for his no-nonsense campaign against illegal drugs in and out of the Senate)," she said.

She said she was thankful to Sen. Sotto for accepting the challenge and responsibility.

She remained confident that the senator would "give to this task the full measure of his dedication, patriotism and professionalism."

The President also disclosed that she, in her State of the Nation Address before Congress on Monday (July 22), would tell on illegal drug syndicates, which continued to be considered threats to national security and enemies of the state.

She again lauded the members of the National Capital Regional Police Office-Metro Manila Drug Enforcement Group who recently raided a drug laboratory in Quezon City and seized some P118 million worth of high-grade shabu, chemicals and paraphernalia used in producing illegal drugs.

The police also arrested seven Chinese nationals and three Filipinos, said to be operating the laboratory, in a house at Loyola Heights, Quezon City.

In her radio address, the Chief Executive described the manufacture and trafficking of illegal drugs as a big social menace victimizing not only adults but also thousands of young Filipinos.

She said many homes have been broken and lives destroyed because of the use of and addiction to illegal drugs. Many families continue to live in fear over the threat of drug abuse by a family member.

“Ito ang dahilan kung bakit ipinasa ng Kongreso, at dalian kong pinirmahan, ang RA 9165 para buwagin ang mga sindikato ng droga, parusahan ang mga kriminal at iligtas ang mga biktima at mga magiging biktima pa ng dangerous drugs (This is the reason why Congress passed and I immediately approved RA 9165 to bust drug syndicates, punish criminals and save victims and prospective ones from dangerous drugs),” she said.

She urged the people to turn to the total implementation of RA 9165, to begin with the creation of the DDB. “This is where we need expertise and commitment,” referring to Sen. Sotto.

“I ask every Filipino who shares the grief of drug-stricken families and who shares the national outrage against dangerous drugs to help me, my administration and Sen. Sotto fight the drug empire and destroy this curse down to its very roots,” she added.

GMA cites help of Scotland Yard experts in gov’t anti-kidnap for ransoms efforts

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited two experts from the United Kingdom’s world-renowned Scotland Yard for helping members of the Philippine National Police (PNP) upgrade their knowledge on handling kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) cases.

The President personally attended the PNP seminar on hostage negotiations for KFR cases, underscoring her administration’s all-out campaign against KFR syndicates and gangs in the country.

PNP Chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane Jr. led those participating in the workshop conducted at the Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response building in Camp Crame.

Following a briefing, the President said the very restricted seminar was part of government efforts to secure help from Scotland Yard.

“Ito ay bahagi ng ginagawa natin na mas ma-enhance pa yung professionalism ng ating mga police sa pagsugpo sa mga malaking criminal syndicates na ginagraya natin ngayon (This is part of our efforts to further enhance professionalism in our police force, especially in the war against criminal syndicates we are waging),” she said.

She said the Scotland Yard experts are conducting training sessions to brief the police on how to further improve the handling of KFR cases.

In her brief visit to United Kingdom last January, the President worked out an agreement with Scotland Yard to train the PNP in curbing transnational crimes, including kidnapping.

The two governments noted that the international nature of terrorism and of organized crime required close cooperation among law enforcement agencies.

GMA cites cities in 1st L.C.P. 'Best Practices' Awards

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the importance of good governance and public service, as she led officials in citing ten cities in the 1st League of Cities of the Philippines (LCP) "Best Practices" Awards at the Century Park Sheraton Hotel.

The President was assisted by Tagaytay City Mayor and LCP president Francis Tolentino in the awarding rites.

Adjudged the top city was Island Garden City of Samal for the Samal City Mariculture Farm, a reservation area that promotes mariculture as an alternative source of livelihood for marginalized and sustenance fisher folk.

The mariculture farm is patterned from the conceptual framework of an industrial park, providing a communal mooring system for a seacage project.

Bagging the second place was Lipa City for the "Lipa City Public College: Free College Education for All," a program providing free education to poor and gifted children in college.

Placing third was Balanga City for its "Taxpayers' One-Stop Shop," a scheme providing a simplified systems and procedures in business transactions.

Earning the fourth place was the Science City of Munoz for its "Developing the Matingkis Farm-Tourism Project," a program addressing the farmers' need for irrigation water and subsequently increasing the volume of palay production by as much as 62 percent.

Fifth was Dumaguete City for the "Land for Urban Poor housing Program," a land acquisition program addressing the basic need for affordable and decent housing.

The other five cities that made up the top 10 entries were Bago City for its "Community-based Disease Surveillance System"; Batangas City's "Batangas Environmental Management Council," Palayan City's "Smile Bilis-Action Program," Sagay City's Oplan Paglilingkod," and Vigan City's Vigan Heritage Conservation Program.

Before the awarding rites, the President witnessed the launching of the LCP's Good Urban Governance Norms.

LCP vice president for Mindanao and Zamboanga City Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat and Panabo City, Davao del Norte Mayor Rey Gavina presented to the President a signed declaration of commitment for the endeavor.

Dubbed as the Manila Declaration on Good Urban Governance, the manifesto enjoined city mayors to set priorities in improving the investment climate and promoting social and economic growth in their respective areas.

The declaration also called for the commitment of every mayor to speedily respond to the barest minimum needs of their constituencies.

"I will traverse all boundaries, whether political, cultural or ethnic, geographical or communal, just so to ensure my city works for all and that all persons responsibly enjoy their right to the city," the declaration said.

Ten city mayors also presented to the President the City Action Plans for Poverty Reduction through Good Urban Governance.

Also present during the ceremonies were Cebu City Mayor and LCP National Chairman Tomas Osmeña, Lobregat and Bacolod City Mayor and LCP Vice President for Visayas Luzviminda Valdez.

GMA lauds PACER, Bulacan police for neutralizing kidnap-for-ransom gang

MARILAO, Bulacan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today commended the Philippine National Police (PNP) for their continued vigilance against crime syndicates, following the neutralization of three members of a kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gang here.

The President, who motored to this town, lauded members of the newly-created Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER) unit and policemen of the Bulacan Provincial Police Office.

The lawmen engaged elements of the Villaver kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) group along Mahogany St., Town and Country Executive Village in Barangay Abangan Norte, this town at about 1:30 p.m. today.

Three suspected members of kidnap-for-ransom gang were killed during the shootout with lawmen, a report from the PNP reaching Malacañang said.

The report said the Villaver KFR band operated under the Fajardo KFR Group, one of the top KFR groups in the PNP's target list.

The President inspected the site where the shootout occurred and conferred with PNP chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. on the all-out war the government is waging against kidnapers and other crime syndicates, to include those in illegal drugs and smuggling.

The PNP report named only two of the slain suspects as Lito Mercado and a certain Alvin, said to be the group's negotiator. The third suspect, who remained unidentified, was the driver of the group's car.

The police said they recovered the car, a Mitsubishi Lancer with plate number UDK-478; three bullets of a cal. 38, a cal. 45 automatic pistol, two cellular phones, and three hand grenades.

Initial reports from Bulacan police director Senior Superintendent Edgardo E. Acuña said the suspects were spotted by PACER intelligence operatives and the Marilao police under Superintendent George Torcuator.

The PNP report said the suspects were involved in various high-profile kidnappings including the abduction of Connie Wong y Cheng and Police Officer 1 Dionisio Burca, Jr. in October 2001; the kidnap of Mary Grace Cheng-Rosagas in June 2001; and that of Ricardo Tan in February 2002.

They were also involved in the robbery-holdup of the Rural Bank of Meycauayan, Bulacan in July 2001 and that on RAMCAR Meycauayan in the year 2000.

Shortly before motoring to Marilao, Bulacan, the President cited two experts from the United Kingdom's world-renowned Scotland Yard for helping members of the PNP upgrade their knowledge on handling KFR cases.

The President personally attended the PNP seminar on hostage negotiations for KFR cases, underscoring her administration's all-out campaign against KFR syndicates and gangs in the country.

21 JULY 2002

- Basic issues concerning Filipinos focus of GMA's 2nd SONA
- GMA reiterates government's resolve to stop kidnap-for-ransom activities nationwide

Basic issues concerning Filipinos focus of GMA's 2nd SONA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will deliver her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) tomorrow (July 22) before the joint session of Congress, which will focus on these vital issues — peace and order, graft and corruption, and the power situation.

According to Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, the President will expound on her plans and programs for the incoming years.

Bunye said that the President would give her attention to peace and order concerns to further gain the confidence of foreign investors to put their capital to labor-intensive but competitive industries in the Philippines.

“Without peace and order, investors tend to shy away from the country. And without investor confidence, we will not be able to have more businesses,” Bunye added.

Bunye said that President Macapagal-Arroyo would underscore her administration's all-out war against any form of criminality, which includes smuggling and corruption.

He pointed out that a large portion of the President's SONA would likewise center on the government's thrust on how to find a viable solution to the power rate problem.

President Macapagal-Arroyo had ordered the National Power Corporation on May 8, this year to reduce the controversial Purchased Power Cost Adjustment by P0.40 per kilowatt/hour to ease the consumer burdens.

Bunye said that the President would spell out measures to be undertaken by her government to lower electricity and power rates.

The President's directive has resulted in a national average reduction of P0.85 per kilowatt/hour. Negotiations of contracts with independent power producers are expected to further bring down stranded power costs soon.

Bunye emphasized that the SONA would be less in “nitty-gritties” but would concentrate more on the fundamental issues which need immediate solutions.

He said that “President Macapagal-Arroyo would explain what she would do and basically, this is a declaration of war against all forms of criminality and all forms of anomalies, including smuggling.”

Toward the end of her address, Bunye said that the President would seek the support and cooperation of lawmakers on her administration's priority bills, which include the franchise law that will assure power consumers nationwide of affordable electricity.

In other related developments:

- President Macapagal-Arroyo has returned the administrative control over the police to Metro Manila Mayors as an effective way of stabilizing the peace and order situation in the metropolis. She pointed out that the restoration would be experimented and limited to Metro Manila only

- The Department of Energy reported that 85 percent of all barangays nationwide now have electricity as a result of the intensified government program to promote rural development through electrification.
- The Department of Budget and Management stressed that the government remains committed to carry out President Macapagal-Arroyo's national agenda of raising the moral standards in the bureaucracy and society so as to push socio-economic programs.
- The Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council reported that the government had already provided security of tenure to almost 338,858 families as of end-June this year, exceeding the SONA target of President Macapagal-Arroyo by 113 percent.
- The Philippine National Police pursues its war against crime syndicates following the neutralization of three members of a kidnap for ransom group in Marilao, Bulacan.
- The PNP confiscated at least P118 million worth of high-grade shabu chemicals and paraphernalia used in manufacturing illegal drugs during a raid at No. 75 Varsity Hills, Loyola Heights, Quezon City.

GMA reiterates government's resolve to stop kidnap-for-ransom activities nationwide

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reiterated her administration's commitment to stop, once and for all, the incidence of kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) activities nationwide, as she lauded the Philippine National Police (PNP) for neutralizing the Fajardo KFR Group.

The President commended PNP Chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, who recently vowed to eliminate KFR groups in a year, for the arrest of three members of the Fajardo KFR Group and the killing of three others in a shootout in Marilao, Bulacan Saturday (July 20) afternoon.

Stabilizing peace and order conditions in the country to promote a healthy business climate, attract more foreign investments and create more jobs for the people is one of the vital issues the President is expected to sound off in her second State of the Nation Address on Monday (July 22).

In Malacañang, Ebdane this morning presented to the President three arrested members of the Villaver KFR gang, a unit of the Fajardo KFR Group.

A PNP report identified the three as Florante Concepcion, Joven Mercado and Leo Vigildo.

The report said that Concepcion and Mercado gave up to police after getting death threats from the Fajardo KFR Group leaders. Vigildo was arrested in manhunt operations launched by the newly-created Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (8PACER) team.

Mercado is the brother of Lito Mercado who was killed in the shootout with lawmen in Marilao.

The police report said that the three suspects were involved in the abduction and killing of kidnap victim Connie Wong in December last year. They were also tagged in the kidnap of Mary Grace Cheng-Rosagas in June 2001.

A sub-group leader, Rolando Villaver, was arrested on December 22 last year, the report added.

Ebdane said that the KFR groups nationwide have started feeling the heat of the President's iron-fist policy against criminality, to include KFR activities, manufacturing and trafficking of illegal drugs, and smuggling.

He said that the PNP identified at least 21 active KFR groups operating nationwide.

Just recently, the PNP also scored in its anti-drug efforts with the seizure of some P118 million worth of shabu and illegal drug manufacturing paraphernalia in a raid on a drug laboratory in Quezon City. Arrests were also made following the raid.

President Macapagal-Arroyo Saturday commended the PNP for its continued vigilance against crime syndicates, following the neutralization of three members of the Villaver KFR gang in Marilao.

She motored to the town after receiving reports that the PACER unit and policemen of the Bulacan Provincial Police Office engaged KFR members in a shootout along Mahogany street, Town and Country Executive Village in Barangay Abangan Norte in Marilao.

The PNP report named only two of the slain suspects as Lito Mercado and a certain Alvin, said to be the group's negotiator. The third suspect, who remained unidentified, was the driver of the group's car.

GMA vows to further reduce cost of electricity

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today vowed to further reduce the cost of electricity as she stressed that cheaper power would result in a more competitive economy and thus attract both local and foreign investments.

In her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon before a joint session of Congress, the President said she was elated to learn that electricity bills of consumers for the month of July have gone down because of the reduced purchased power adjustment (PPA) that she has ordered the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) to implement.

She said that when she first became president, the Philippines had the second most expensive power rate in Asia but now we have gone down to number 6.

According to the President, this was the result of the comprehensive 10-point program that her administration has put in place to reduce power costs.

The President said that after studying the results of the review on the contracts of independent power producers (IPP), some concrete moves would be undertaken by the government to further ease the burden of our people.

She said that soon the Philippines will have the first-ever wholesale electricity spot market in Asia but without the pitfalls of the spot market in California.

Through this scheme, the consumers, especially the larger ones, will be able to choose their electricity suppliers.

The President also called on the NAPOCOR and the Manila Electric Company (MERALCO) to stop bickering and instead work together to give price incentives to large users so that excess power can be utilized.

She said price incentives to large users of electricity would further spur economic activity and thus create jobs for our people.

GMA asks Congress to pass anti-terrorism bill, other measures

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the two houses of Congress to immediately pass the anti-terrorism bill and other measures aimed at spurring the economy and empowering Filipinos working or residing abroad.

In her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon before a joint session of Congress at the Batasan Pambansa, the President said the anti-terrorism bill would strengthen the country's legal armory in the war against terrorism.

She said that if passed into law, the anti-terrorism bill would plug the loopholes by which crimes spread and democracy is undermined under the protection of the laws.

The President said that she would hold more meetings with the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) to push for more social, economic and political reforms.

She specifically cited the need for a law that would make farmlands acceptable as loan collaterals to remove a big deterrent to investments in agriculture.

Other measures that the President asked the House of Representatives and the Senate to pass include the following:

- Special Purpose Vehicle Act to encourage asset management companies to put back into productive circulation assets now tied up in problematic loans;
- Absentee voting to give overseas Filipino workers the right to vote, consistent with the provisions of the Constitution, but with all the safeguards;
- Dual citizenship to give Filipinos abroad equal respect and recognition, consistent with our national honor; and
- The Transco Franchise Bill to make our electric power sector more efficient and competitive.

GMA to take direct hand in all-out war against terror, criminality

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today vowed to take "a direct hand in the war against the enemies of the Republic."

"This is how I did it with the Abu Sayyaf ... This is how I will do it with the criminal gangs," the President said, as she resolved "to build a strong Republic by breaking the back of terrorism and criminality."

In her second State of the Nation (SONA) Address before the joint session of Congress at the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City, the President outlined the state's sterling performance in assuring peace and security in the homeland.

She cited the gallant soldiers who rescued American missionary Gracia Burnham from the hands of the notorious kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) band and terrorist Abu Sayyaf and who killed Abu Sayyaf spokesman Aldam Tilao a.k.a. Abu Sabaya in a sea encounter last June.

This year, Camp Abubakar, the main lair and training site of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), had been transformed into an "authentic community of new hopes and dreams" where the Philippine tricolor flies and where Filipino soldiers protect conflict-affected civilians who have returned to their homes.

Just recently, the President and United States Ambassador Francis Ricciardone visited Camp Abubakar, which she renamed Camp Datu Duma Sinsuat, to launch the Iranun Development Project for the people in the 10,000-hectare former rebel camp that borders the towns of Barira, Buldon and Matanog, all in Maguindanao.

The President, in her speech, saluted the men and women of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) who continued to be "at the forefront of our Republic's efforts to fight terror and enforce peace."

Last Sunday, "we captured the mastermind of the General Santos bombings that killed and maimed 80 persons a few months ago," she disclosed. The captured terrorist is considered as a top bomber.

She also noted ongoing efforts, “energized by the invaluable initiative of Speaker Jose de Venecia,” to seal a peace pact with the MILF, as well as to continue the road to peace signed by the Philippine government and the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) in 1996.

Going farther, she said the government had “gained powerful allies (from around the world) in the domestic war against terrorism, because of its decisive action after September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks in the US.

“The President of the Philippines was the first head of government to emphasize the interconnection between the war against terrorism and the war against poverty. Nations, large and small, now embrace this interconnection,” she said.

“We shall enhance our strategic relationship with the US through continuing training exercises to sharpen the Filipino soldiers’ capability to move and communicate to fix and finish off their targets,” she added.

The no-nonsense, all-out war against criminal syndicates, which remained direct threats to national security, had also gained ground with all the weapons of the country’s democratic arsenal brought to bear on them.

She had ordered the AFP and the PNP to treat criminal syndicates “as what they are, direct threats to national security,” and wage a no-compromise war against these social menaces.

“Within a month, we shall organize the New Dangerous Drugs Board and the Philippines Drug Enforcement Agency which Congress has just created,” she said.

With the drug menace elevated to the level of a national security problem, the President further ordered the AFP “to field military resources for intelligence and to field soldiers in drug raids in support of civilian law enforcement.”

She called on the newly elected barangay officials “to take an active role in this war, to be the frontliners in this fight in your communities.”

“Criminals are criminals, whether of the common kind or the kind that kill in the name of political advocacies. They will feel the full brunt of the arsenal of democracy. Freedom, too, is entitled to self-defense,” she said.

“I have given very clear orders to spare nothing in hunting down kidnapers,” she added.

The Chief Executive said major KFR groups have been neutralized, with police and military operations claiming 170 kidnapers, either killed in various encounters or arrested.

But she pointed out that she wanted smashed the 21 remaining KFR syndicates, to include the two biggest – the Bucala and Fajardo groups.

She earlier dared the PNP to eliminate kidnappings within a year, a challenge that PNP Chief Deputy Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. readily accepted.

Just last Saturday, the newly-created PNP Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (PACER) unit killed three members of the Villaver KFR group, a sub-group of the Fajardo KFR gang in an encounter in Marilao, Bulacan.

Last Sunday, Ebdane presented to the President in Malacañang another three Fajardo group members tagged as suspects in a string of kidnapping and robbery-holdup cases in Bulacan.

More than anything else, the President urged the PNP “to start with the cleansing of their own ranks” of rascals who disgrace the uniform.

But she stressed that there were more heroes than rascals within the PNP – heroes who “scorned to be bribed” and seized almost P5 billion worth of illegal drugs and equipment in various raids in the provinces of Quezon, Batangas and Zambales, among others.

This included last Friday’s raid on a drug laboratory in Quezon City that netted for the PNP shabu and drug paraphernalia worth some P118 million

“We cannot afford to lose (in the war against terror and criminality). Even a stalemate will be a defeat. For what is at stake is our country as a viable proposition in the world economy. And we must be viable if we are to win the most fundamental war, the war against poverty,” The President pointed out.

“The right to work in peace is as basic as the right to life and liberty, and when both are in danger, their preservation by all lawful means becomes not just a higher right but an overriding duty. And that duty I will discharge,” she vowed.

GMA cites accomplishments that exceeded targets set in first SONA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today spelled out the tangible results of her administration particularly in the delivery of basic services to the Filipino people which she enunciated in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July 2001.

In her second SONA delivered this afternoon before the joint session of Congress at the Batasan Pambansa in Quezon City, the Chief Executive said that her administration has exceeded the desired targets despite the turbulent state of domestic and global affairs.

For example, the President said a total of 250,000 hectares of land have been distributed by the government compared to the administration’s target of a 200,000 hectares for land reform.

The President also said that with the P20 billion earmarked for the country’s agricultural modernization, a total of P24 billion was spent for the project by her administration.

On her promise to provide security of land tenure to 150,000 urban families nationwide, the President said that a total of 180,000 urban poor households were provided with shelter security.

At the same time, she declared that a total of 150,000 housing units were provided for workers and the very poor.

She noted that some 1,500 rolling stores have been deployed to sell rice at P14 per kilo and other basic commodities from the 1,000 rolling stores she promised for deployment.

The President likewise stressed that cheap medicines not only for the poor but for all the citizenry are now available in all the pharmacy of government hospitals as well as in all outlets of the United Laboratories or Unilab.

She expressed sadness over the fact that except for Unilab, the wider distribution network of commercial drug stores – under pressure from the multinational drug companies – will not sell cheaper medicines.

The President stressed that her administration is in the process of studying punitive measures to correct this unfair, unjust, and heartless situation being inflicted by other commercial drug stores to the Filipino people particularly the poor.

On health insurance, the President said that a total of 4 million urban poor families have been enrolled or insured under the National Health Insurance Program or NHIP.

The President also said that the first year target of a three-year program to construct 1,612 schoolbuildings in barangays unserved by nearby classrooms, was met – 555 school houses were completed or are due to be completed from the government side while 450 from the private sector.

Aside from this, the President also mentioned the 285 school buildings amounting to P100 million which was allocated by Senate President Franklin Drilon for the project.

The President said that for the past year, her administration was able to procure 54 million textbooks for all grade and year levels in five core subjects for 16 million public school students for the current school year.

On her promise to make mathematics a primary concern in all schools in the country, the President underscored the need to increase the number of hours for teaching mathematics.

On the need to increase the number of teachers in schools, the President said a total of 15,000 school teachers have been employed to teach.

On her target to provide emergency employment for 20,000 out-of-school-youth, the President said that a total of 30,000 OSYs have been provided jobs.

On the three poor children from Payatas, namely Jayson, Erwin, and Jomar, the President said they were given scholarships by her government their respective families were given livelihood assistance.

She added that some 400 scholarships were likewise given to the poor children of Payatas and the problems of the residents in the area on land and housing have been attended to.

Drug menace a national security problem, not just a police matter – says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said her administration is determined to win the war against drug trafficking as she announced that the drug menace is now a national security problem and not just a police matter.

In her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon before a joint session of Congress at the Batasan Pambansa, the President said there will be no compromise and no quarters given in the war with the drug trade.

“Drug lords will be treated as enemies of the state,” the President said.

The President thus ordered the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to field military resources for intelligence and soldiers for operations in support of the Philippine National Police (PNP) and other civilian law enforcement agencies.

According to the President, this year alone the PNP was able to confiscate almost P5 billion worth of illegal drugs and laboratory equipment.

Last Sunday, the President invited Senator Vicente “Tito” Sotto III to oversee the creation of the new Dangerous Drugs Board (DDB), as she cited the senator for having painstakingly researched and worked on the passage of Republic Act (RA) 9165 or the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002, of which the latter was the primary author.

The President also lauded the members of the National Capital Regional Police Office-Metro Manila Drug Enforcement Group who recently raided a drug laboratory in Quezon City and seized some P118 million worth of high-grade shabu, chemicals and paraphernalia used in producing illegal drugs.

The police also arrested seven Chinese nationals and three Filipinos, said to be operating the laboratory, in a house at Loyola Heights, Quezon City.

The Chief Executive described the manufacture and trafficking of illegal drugs as a big social menace victimizing not only adults but also thousands of young Filipinos.

She said many homes have been broken and lives destroyed because of the use of and addiction to illegal drugs. Many families continue to live in fear over the threat of drug abuse by a family member.

“I ask every Filipino who shares the grief of drug-stricken families and who shares the national outrage against dangerous drugs to help me, my administration and Sen. Sotto fight the drug empire and destroy this curse down to its very roots,” she added.

GMA vows to lead country towards strong republic

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said her administration’s efforts to build a strong Republic have been difficult in the last 18 months since she was sworn in as the country’s Chief Executive.

“It has been 18 months of putting out small fires and soothing hurt feelings, while taking what I hope have been giant steps forward in the economy,” the President said in her 48-minute second State of the Nation Address (SONA) before the joint session of Congress this afternoon.

The President’s SONA was interrupted 75 times by applause from those who filled the halls of the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City.

“But now the time has come. We must devote ourselves entirely to taking more of those giant steps towards the achievement of the strong Republic. I will lead our country towards the strong Republic,” she vowed.

The Chief Executive noted the two essential features that mark out a strong Republic.

“The first is independence from class and sectoral interests so that it stands for the interests of the people rather than of a powerful minority. The second is the capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to execute good policy and deliver essential services —the things that only governments can do,” she said.

The two features would result in good policies and empowered institutions and would propel faster economic development and social reforms, she added.

“A strong Republic takes care of the people and takes care of their future. Thus, a strong Republic is the bedrock of the victory we seek over poverty within the decade,” she said.

The President recalled that during the past 18 months, “our efforts to build the strong Republic have been difficult, with both domestic and global conditions extremely harsh.”

She said that at home, the poor were pitted against the rich to further inflame the nation’s social divisions. Abroad, the contracting economies of the country’s main trading partners were further aggravated by the tensions generated by the global war against terrorism.

Meanwhile, a shocking corporate scandal after another severely eroded public faith in the most promising system for conducting economic activity — the free market.

The Chief Executive said these were the large long-term crises of social justice and the capitalist system itself, whose resolution awaited events well beyond one small nation’s ability to influence in the short term.

But she noted that the immediate crises have been resolved by the tangible results obtained in the delivery of government services, particularly to the country's poor; the resolution of problems brought about by terrorism and criminality; and the successful efforts to bring down the cost of electricity nationwide.

"For a country to be as good as it can get, many of the right decisions are tough decisions. I have made some of the toughest. And I will make even more tough decisions in the year to come," she said.

"Because the easy way out may postpone the pain but will prolong the problem. But the tough decisions which are the right decisions, because they serve the people, are the source of our hope for the future," she added.

The President urged the people: "Stay with me. Samahan ninyo ako. Itayo natin ang matatag at malakas na Republika (See me through. Let us build a firm and strong Republic)."

Big-time smugglers to be charged with economic sabotage, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that big-time smugglers will now be charged not just with smuggling but with economic sabotage, a non-bailable capital offense.

In her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon before a joint session of Congress at the Batasan Pambansa, the President said she has instructed the Customs Commissioner not just to seize smuggled goods but to arrest big-time smugglers.

The President described tax evasion as a "white-collar crime" and the government's response should also be white collar, like systems improvement, audit, and prosecution.

"But smuggling is something else. It is done by hoodlums and criminal gangs," the President said.

The President said that she will also invoke the rule of command responsibility in the campaign against rampant smuggling.

"You have seen political will in the harsh interpretation of command responsibility with regard to illegal gambling. That draconian application was a dress rehearsal for endorsing command responsibility in the even more difficult challenges of kidnapping, drug-dealing and smuggling," the President said, referring to the relief of seven ranking police officials found ineffective in the campaign against 'jueteng' in their areas of jurisdiction.

According to the President in the year 2000, despite all reports of rampant smuggling, only P16 million worth of smuggled goods were confiscated.

But last year, because of political will, the President said her administration seized P1.2 billion worth of smuggled goods, including more than a million bags of smuggled rice, as compared to much less than P100,000 worth the year before.

R.P. back in international economic map, GMA says

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today proudly proclaimed that the "Philippines is back on the map," internationally.

"We are the third best performing economy in Asia and the best in Southeast Asia," the President said in her Second State of the Nation Address before the joint session of Congress at the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City.

The speech was interrupted at least 75 times by applause.

She said: “As a result of our decisive action after (the) September 11 terrorist attacks in the United States), the Philippines is now a recognized player in world affairs.”

She noted that “the President of the Philippines was the first head of government to emphasize the interconnection between the war against terrorism and the war against poverty. Nations large and small now embrace this interconnection.”

“We have gained powerful allies in our domestic war against terrorism. I am certain that our increased international visibility will continue generating capital inflows for the Philippines,” she said.

The President pointed out that it was imperative for the country to restore macroeconomic stability and win back investor confidence.

She said the “linchpin was to control our fiscal deficit. If EDSA 2 had not happened, the government would simply have gone bankrupt with a deficit of P245 billion.”

“But we controlled it, brought it down to P147 billion and against all odds, turned our international credit rating from risky to stable..” she added.

“It was hard work, here and abroad, to rekindle global interest in our country, but we did it,” she said.

She also took note of efforts to adopt strong administrative measures, including fighting smuggling and graft and corruption. These measures would “enable us to close the gap in our revenue targets.”

Recent basic macroeconomic signs showed that things were under control. Inflation is at a low, driven down by stable food prices and by declining power costs.

“Nang ako ay naging Pangulo, ang presyo ng galunggong ay otsenta pesos ang kilo. Noong isang linggo, nakabili ako sa palengke ng sesenta pesos lamang. Ang presyo rin ng bigas na binibili ng mahihirap ay nananatiling P16 ang kilo sa palengke, gaya pa rin nang isang taon (When I became President, galunggong was P80 a kilo. Last week, I bought a kilo of galunggong at P70. The price of a kilo of rice remained at P16, similar to that of last year),” she said.

Interest rates are also at a low, and the peso is stable. From P56 to the dollar, the foreign exchange rate is a little over P50.

“Where we have fallen short of achieving what we intended, it has not been from misdirection or a lack of trying. After all, it has really been only one year and a half,” the President said.

“In any event, I promise to work even harder if that is possible, and do even better because I believe that there is always room for improvement. I cannot grow taller but I can always get better,” she added.

She disclosed that her working agenda for the coming year would focus on creating and improving job opportunities.

“Citizens with rewarding jobs paying decent wages constitute not just a stone in the edifice but the very foundation of a strong Republic,” she stressed.

“We need investments to generate jobs. To draw in investments, we will address certain problems in the short term: katiwalian (corruption), peace and order, and the cost of power,” she said.

“Bilang Pangulo, tinatanggap ko ang pahayag ng mga negosyante na dapat sugpuin ang katiwalian sa bansa (As your President, I recognize the need to deal with corruption, as asked by businessmen),” she added.

She recalled that before she became President, the country had the second most expensive power rates in Asia.

“Now, we have gone down to 6th. This is first fruit of a comprehensive ten-point plan we have put in place to reduce power costs,” she said.

With cheaper power would come a more competitive economy, and more investors, the President noted.

“We know where we are going and how to get there; we are planting the milestones along the way to a strong Republic and a prosperous country,” she said.

GMA’s second SONA praised by gov’t leaders

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today earned commendations from various leaders of the country when she clearly spelled out in her Second State of the Nation Address (SONA) the need to build a strong Republic as well as address two important issues – peace and order and power rates.

The President’s SONA was interrupted 75 times by applause from the jampack crowd at the session hall of the House of Representatives in Quezon City which included top government officials, members of the diplomatic corps and various representatives of the private sector.

In an interview with reporters, Senate President Franklin Drilon said the theme of building a strong Republic is good and will be most welcome to many sectors of the society.

Senate President Pro Tempore Manuel Villar said the President’s second SONA is far more specific than last year’s address, focusing more on the fight against criminality and the lowering of electricity rates.

“It’s a good challenge and I think we have a clearer picture of what we will have to do this time around,” Villar said.

For his part, Sen. Renato Cayetano stressed that the President’s campaign against criminality can be achieved with the cooperation of all sectors, including both houses of Congress.

“I am very happy for that because I understand the problem of law and order that is the very foundation of the stability of the Republic,” he said.

Cayetano said he is happy to hear the President’s SONA, saying that “it went beyond motherhood statements with so many details.”

“It was not only a statement of principles but a statement of what should be done, specially in the area of peace and order, judicial reform and, of course, lowering of electricity rates,” Cayetano said.

Meanwhile, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. expressed confidence that the Philippine National Police (PNP) will be able to meet its one-year ultimatum to dismantle kidnap-for-ransom syndicates.

“We also learned from our experience last year and we have already identified the kidnap-for-ransom syndicates and their modus operandi,” Lina said.

On the power rates issue, Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez said he will immediately meet with the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) and MERALCO representatives in compliance to the President's call for them to settle their differences and find ways to provide a program that would increase the power consumption and further reduce the price of electricity.

"This is the homework given to me by the President and I will call Napocor and Meralco to a meeting so that we can brainstorm and look for a way to comply with the President's SONA target," Perez said.

GMA distributes gov't assistance to Metro Manilans

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today distributed livelihood assistance, certificates of awards, PhilHealth cards as well as certificates of scholarship and other government assistance to qualified indigent beneficiaries of the various programs and projects of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration in various parts of Metro Manila.

The Chief Executive, assisted by Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Metropolitan Manila Development Authority Chairman Bayani Fernando, and Manila City Mayor Lito Atienza, personally handed out the different forms of government assistance during ceremonies held this morning at the Quirino Grandstand at the Luneta.

From the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), the President distributed loan checks for P100,000 each to the following recipients under the livelihood program of the Overseas Filipino Workers: Renerio Sarusal, Daniel Layno, and Giovanni Solidum.

She also awarded certificates of scholarship from KALAHÍ (Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan) areas around the National Capital Region under the Petron Tulong-Aral Project (or the Petron Send-A-Child to School Program) to 1,000 Elementary School students as follows:

Caloocan 132, Las Pinas 129, Malabon City 35, Mandaluyong City 95, Manila 166, Navotas 29, Pasay City 37, Paranaque 48, Pateros 93, Quezon City 118, Taguig 51, and Valenzuela 67.

The Petron Tulong-Aral Project is aimed at sending 1,000 children to public elementary schools every year in support of the poverty alleviation program of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. It offers educational scholarship to school children which includes uniforms, books, school supplies, school projects and daily meal allowance. Its beneficiaries are children belonging to KALAHÍ areas.

The President likewise distributed the following from the National Housing Authority:

- certificates of award to 48 Kapitbahayan Project Awardees from leasehold of 25 years to ownership (recipient: 48 Kapitbahayan leases from Navotas);
- certificates of award for Mandaluyong Medium-Rise Housing Project Awardees (awardees: local government unit employees and bonafide residents of Mandaluyong City);
- certificates of award for 129 resettlement affected by the CAMANAVA (Caloocan-Malabon-Navotas-Valenzuela) Flood Control Project to halfway houses located in Vitas, Tondo, Manila;
- certificate of award for Kasiglahan Village (awardees: relocatees from Pasig River and along Makati area);
- certificates of award to the awardees of TBC Medium Rise Housing Project (awardees: formal beneficiaries from Quezon City)
- titles to various beneficiaries of Pasay, Paranaque and Las Piñas Slum Upgrading Project; and
- titles to various beneficiaries of the Bagong Silang Resettlement Project in Bagong Silang, Caloocan.

From the National Home Mortgage Finance Corporation, the President presented the take-out payment check to the landowners of the following Community Mortgage Program: Resurreccion Ville Homeowners Association Inc. (landowner: Ligaya Bigalang-Awa); and Presidential Pigeon Homewoners Association Inc. (landowner: Cresencia Masiclat Lansang).

A total of 54,800 health cards from the Philippine Health Insurance Corporation were also presented to indigent beneficiaries in the National Capital Region broken down as follows: Manila 20,000, Caloocan 23,000, Muntinlupa 5,000, Quezon Cigtly 5,000, Pasay City 1,500, Las Piñas 100, Taguig 100, and Marikina 100.

4.5 urban poor enrolled under PhilHealth insurance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the most effective and most successful program of her 18-month-old administration is the enrollment of some 4.5-million urban poor beneficiaries under the PhilHealth insurance, exceeding the original target of 500,000 she set during her first State of the Nation Address last year.

In brief remarks after presenting various forms of government assistance to the urban poor of Metropolitan Manila during ceremonies held at the Quirino Grandstand at the Luneta, the President said that not only were the targets she set in her first SONA met. Some of them, including the PhilHealth insurance for the urban poor, were even exceeded, she said.

“Ang pinakamabisa, pinaka-successful na programa para sa mga mahihirap ay walang iba kung hindi iyong ating health insurance para sa mahihirap (The most effective, and most successful program of our government for the poor is none other than our health insurance),” she said.

The President recalled that in her first SONA, she had said that the most difficult situation that poor Filipinos will encounter in their lives is when they get sick — due to the high price of medicines, high doctor fees, and high hospitalization costs.

She noted that as far as the affluent, the well-off and even employees and workers are concerned, they have no problems when they get sick because their medical bills are shouldered by their respective private insurance companies.

What concerns her most, the President said, are those who are unemployed, the self-employed and the urban poor themselves.

It was for this reason, she said, why she pledged to give health insurance cards to 500,000 deserving indigent members of society during her first SONA last year.

After a year, the President said, the administration, instead of providing health cards to the targeted 500,000, was able to enroll a total of 4.5 million indigent residents in the urban areas all over the country.

The President underscored the advantages of having health insurance cards.

For instance, when a health insurance card holder or any member of the family gets sick, all he or she has to do is go to a government hospital and present the said card.

“Libre lahat. Libre ang doctor, libre ang operasyon at pati gamut ay libre basta’t dala ng parmasya ng hospital. Kaya wala na kayong babayaran basta’t national government hospital ang pupuntahan (Everything is free. The doctor’s fee, the cost of any operation, even the medicines in the government hospital pharmacy are free. You don’t have to pay for anything if you go to a national government hospital),” she explained.

The President said that health cards can also be used in private hospitals. For tertiary hospitals, the government will contribute at least P16,000 while for secondary hospitals, only P11,000 will be contributed by the government to a health card holder.

According to the President, one has to pay only P100 a month or P1,200 a year to be a health insurance member.

No return to dictatorship in building of strong Republic, Palace assures nation

Malacañang today said that contrary to the fears expressed by some sectors, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would not resort to extra-constitutional means in waging a total war against all forms of criminality and corruption in order to build a strong Republic.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said definitely there will be no return to the dictatorship of the Marcos era.

Bunye said that if one would look closely at the President's second State of the Nation Address (SONA), she emphasized that in the total war against criminality and terrorism she will use "all the weapons in our democratic arsenal."

"In other words, the action that will be taken by the strong Republic will all be within the democratic framework," Bunye said.

In her SONA, the President declared that wiping out all forms of terrorism and criminality would lay the foundation of a "strong Republic."

"I am determined to build a strong Republic by breaking the back of terrorism and criminality," the President said.

Bunye also said the President would leave it to the two houses of Congress to decide on which anti-terrorism bill would be adopted.

He said that the general request of the President, as she stated in her SONA, is for Congress to really work on an anti-terrorism bill.

North co-op lauds GMA programs to win war against poverty

A cooperative in Northern Luzon has expressed gratitude to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for the administration's programs to "win the war against poverty."

In a letter to the President, the Claveria Agri-based Multi-Purpose Cooperative, Inc. based in Claveria, Cagayan thanked the President for initiatives of the government to win the war against poverty within the decade.

Cooperative General Manager Petra Martinez said that their cooperative has been proud in making significant progress in alleviating the plight of the poor because of the close cooperation between them and other local and national agencies, particularly with the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR).

Martinez said the initiatives of the department, including the issuance of land patents, delineation of municipal waters (through Department Administrative Order (DAO) 17 and the community livelihood assistance programs, were vital instruments in the administration's war against poverty.

"The land patents allow the small-scale farmers, entrepreneurs and other beneficiaries to peacefully develop their land and use the same instrument as collateral to borrow much needed capital from cooperatives or other banking institutions to increase their scale of production," Martinez said.

Martinez further said the cooperative acknowledges the government efforts to actively disseminate to the people the importance of conserving and guarding our coastal and marine resources so “that we continue to have environment-friendly and sustainable livelihood.”

Department Administrative Order 17 likewise prohibits commercial fishing within 15 kilometers from the shoreline, increasing fish yield and lowering the cost of the “poor man’s” protein source.

The membership of the Claveria Agri-based Multi-Purpose Cooperative, Inc. has increased from an original 450 in 1987 to 10,000, covering three municipalities in Cagayan.

Its capital started with less than P500,000 and, as of December 2001, has increased to P212 million in assets.

The cooperative won twice in the Gawad Pitak Award for “Pinakatatanging Kooperatiba,” the first agri-based cooperative to have done so in the eight-year history of the award.

GMA elated over positive reaction to her SONA — Palace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was elated by the positive reactions to her second State of the Nation Address (SONA), especially those coming from the business community, Malacañang said today.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that based on the comments aired in broadcast outlets and published in newspapers, more people reacted positively to the President’s SONA.

“If you are the one delivering the speech, you would certainly be elated, especially if you are interrupted 77 times in the course of 55 minutes,” Bunye said.

But Bunye also acknowledged that some sectors, especially those from the political opposition, have criticized the President’s speech.

The President, according to Bunye, expected to hear negative comments from these groups.

“But the President is more comforted by the fact that there are more people who approved of the SONA,” Bunye said.

On a related topic, Bunye took exception to the comments of opposition Sen. Edgardo Angara that the administration is engaged in a “politics of piracy” when Sen. Robert Jaworski switched over to the administration side.

Bunye said Senator Angara did not raise the issue of piracy when then administration Sen. John Osmeña moved over to the opposition, thus triggering an impasse in the Senate.

“Now that Jaworski has transferred to the administration coalition, they’re calling it piracy,” Bunye said.

GMA holds teleconference with RP envoys abroad on new SONA aspirations

A day after delivering her State of the Nation Address (SONA), President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo conferred with 13 heads of Philippine missions abroad to apprise them on how they could aid in accomplishing the aspirations in her second SONA.

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said the 45-minute teleconference, held at the State Dining Room in Malacañang, touched on, among other things, how to further attract Chinese tourists and how to work out the trade irritants of Philippine products such as with Australia and other countries.

Bunye said that while the government is prepared to waive the processing of visas to Chinese tourists, “we’ll have to work out a way by which only the bonafide tourists come in.”

He noted the President’s observation that more and more Chinese nationals figure in the drug trade.

Bunye said the President also encouraged the Philippine ambassadors to take advantage of the available technology such as the Philippine government web sites “so that they can explain to their respective host countries the various policies of the government, as well as our interpretation of ongoing events.”

The envoys who took part in the teleconference were Ambassadors Josue Villa (Beijing, China), Willy Gaa (Canberra, Australia), Rafael Seguis (Jakarta, Indonesia), Ernesto Llamas Jr. (Singapore), Domingo Siazon Jr. (Tokyo, Japan), Clemencio Montessa (Brussels, Belgium), Joseph Bernardo (Madrid, Spain), Hector Villaroel (Paris, France), Albert del Rosario (Washington, United States), Justo Orros (Mexico, Mexico), Bahnarim Guinomla (Riyadh, Saudia Arabia), Samuel Ramel (Geneva, Switzerland) and Edsel Custodio (World Trade Organization).

Bunye said the President also issued orders to Ambassador Gaa to work out the trade irritants with the Australian government “as far as our products are concerned,” referring to the entry problems experienced by Philippine mangoes.

In the case of United States, the President wanted the Philippines to supply a bigger share of the canned tuna market, Bunye said.

Bunye added that the President also gave notice to the envoys of the government efforts in passing the absentee voting bill, on the continuous efforts for the welfare of overseas Filipinos, global terrorism, developments in the Organization of the Islamic Conference, ASEAN-Europe Meeting (ASEAM), and APEC.

Bunye noted that the President received a report from Ambassador Siazon that the Japan External Trade Organization will be coming out with a positive report on the Philippine economy.

In the course of the teleconference, the President also revealed several appointments she made, including that of Ambassador to Malaysia Jose Brillantes as Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs and Ambassador Rowena Sanchez as coordinator between Malacañang and the DFA.

GMA buys a kilo of galunggong at P60

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today went to the Commonwealth market in Quezon City to buy a kilo of fresh medium-sized galunggong at P60 a kilo.

The President went to the market to personally see for herself if the price of fresh galunggong, which she mentioned in State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday, is still selling at P60 a kilo. Her detractors say that one can buy the fish at P60 per kilo, but it is already bilasa (stale).

The President found out by going around the fish section of the market that indeed galunggong has an average price of P50 a kilo. Its smaller kind can be had at P40 a kilo and its medium and bigger size can be bought at P50 to P60.

The President stopped at one fish stand and bought a kilo of galunggong at P60. She even saw to it that the fish is fresh by inspecting its gills.

The President, who arrived at the market at around 9:10 this morning, went around the different sections of the market – fruit, fish and meat – and noted that their prices are stable.

The vendors replied that the prices are same as those of last week, when the President visited the Commonwealth Market at the height of the monsoon rains.

With the President were Quezon City Mayor Feliciano “Sonny” Belmonte, Jr. and Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDC) Chairman Michael Defensor.

War against terrorism pushing targets up against the wall, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today the Philippines' contributions to the global campaign against terrorism continues to bear fruit as the Armed Forces chief of staff and Philippine National Police chief presented to her two suspects involved in the April 21, 2002 bombing at the Fitmart Mall in General Santos City.

“Our war against terrorism is pushing our targets up against the wall,” the President said in a statement issued during the presentation in Malacañang of Abdulbasit Usman, the principal suspect, and Moamar Timbao Esmael, the identified bomb carrier in the General Santos bombing.

The two suspects were brought before the President by AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu and the PNP Chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr.

The President added, however, that “the war (against terrorism) does not end with these two arrests.”

While she congratulated “our men and women in uniform” for the “good work,” the President exhorted the AFP and PNP officers and personnel involved in the nationwide campaign against terrorism: “I ask for more of what you have already accomplished.”

The President said the General Santos terrorist bombers sought to “undermine our Republic, but we fought back.”

She indicated that there will be no letup in the campaign against terrorism.

“No compromise, no quarter given... We will not be cowed, we will hunt them down and bring them to justice,” the President said, reiterating her vow made during her second State of the Nation Address last Monday to take a “direct hand in the war against the enemies of the Republic.”

The President said the united effort of the police and soldiers continues to deliver the much-needed security and peace that every Filipino looks for.

“We build our strong Republic every day with hard work and commitment to secure the peace,” the President said.

For his part, General Cimatú said

BSP reports RP lending rates among lowest in Asia

The Philippines has one of the lowest lending rates in the Asian region, thus bolstering expectations of stronger domestic economic activity.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last Monday cited the country’s interest rates that “are also at a low” during her second State of the Nation Address before the joint session of Congress at the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City.

The President said this was one of the major factors that has put the Philippines back on the international map. “We are the third best performing economy in Asia and the best in Southeast Asia,” she said.

Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) estimates as of July 15 showed that the country’s real lending rate, or lending rate adjusted for inflation, of 4.95 percent was the third lowest in a sample of 10 Asian countries.

This came after South Korea and Japan, which had real rates of 4.1 percent and 3.0 percent, respectively.

By contrast, the highest rates were recorded for Hong Kong at 8.2 percent and Taiwan at 7.8 percent, a result partly of negative inflation rates.

By country, the real lending rates are: Hong Kong, 8.23 percent; Taiwan, 7.84 percent; India, 6.80 percent; Thailand, 6.80 percent; Indonesia, 6.53 percent; Singapore, 5.70 percent; Malaysia, 4.98 percent; Philippines, 4.95 percent; South Korea, 4.10 percent and Japan, 3.00 percent.

The data reflected the current low-interest rate environment in the Philippines resulting from ample liquidity conditions following the substantial monetary easing undertaken by the BSP over the past year.

BSP Governor Rafael B. Buena Ventura said this implied relatively lower cost of capital for business, which should augur well for economic activity in the near term.

Together with the benign outlook for inflation, the level of real interest rates is expected to continue and provide a supportive macroeconomic environment that would encourage stronger domestic consumption and investment activity over the coming months.

Such a prospect bodes well for the government's Gross National Product growth targets of 4.5 to 5.0 percent and 5.5 to 6.0 percent for 2002 and 2003, respectively.

Go out and vote, Mikey Arroyo urges all voters in Pampanga

LUBAO, Pampanga — Presidential son and Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel "Mikey" Arroyo called on all registered voters of Pampanga and all members of the Sangguniang Kabataan to go out and vote on Sunday.

The young Arroyo made the calls as he hailed Commission on Elections Chairman Benjamin Abalos Sr. and the Comelec for setting the elections of barangay officials and SK officers in Pampanga on Sunday.

"We should all go out and vote whoever we want to vote as barangay or SK chairman or councilman on Sunday. This is our right and the right of every citizen in a democracy. We should exercise this right and exercise it judiciously," Arroyo said.

Arroyo said that the barangay and the SK are important cogs in the Philippine democracy, being the smallest political units of the country.

"The barangay is the best expression of people power because through the barangay, especially in elections like those on Sunday, we are free to support the officials who we think are doing good for the community and we are also free to boot out the bad eggs in our community," Arroyo said.

"We should learn and appreciate our duties and rights in the barangay democracy so we will have a better town, city, province and country," he added.

Arroyo, a graduate of the Ateneo de Manila University and the University of California in Berkeley, reminded the people in the barangays that "they get the barangay government that they deserve, so they should vote wisely in the barangay elections."

"Your decision on Sunday is a decision you will live with for several years and maybe in a lifetime. So let's all vote wisely. Let's make the elections peaceful, orderly and honest," Arroyo said.

The young Arroyo, his mother, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, and other members of the family will vote in their hometown of Lubao on Sunday.

The barangay elections in Pampanga and many parts of the country set last July 15 were postponed due to the heavy rains that flooded many towns of Pampanga and other provinces.

President Macapagal-Arroyo, assisted by Pampanga Gov. Manuel Lapid, Vice Gov. Arroyo and other national and provincial officials, distributed relief goods during the floods.

The President, at the same time, called for a review of the dike and flood control system in the province to avoid big floods in the future.

Earlier, upon representation of Vice Governor Arroyo, the President released more than P600 million for flood control and dike systems for Pampanga.

GMA to limit appointment of political envoys

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that under her administration, political ambassadors should constitute only one-third of all Filipino envoys assigned abroad and the rest would be come from the career service.

In her regular luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps held at Malacañang's State Dining Room, the President said that her "self-imposed guideline" is in compliance with the provisions of the Foreign Service Act that her late father, President Diosdado Macapagal, had authored.

The President disclosed this foreign policy guideline when she pointed out that the replacement of Ambassador to Malaysia Jose Brillantes would come from the roster of career ambassadors at the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA).

"At least we are going to replace a political ambassador with a career ambassador," the President said.

Before joining the foreign service, Brillantes was an official of the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), at one time even serving as acting DOLE secretary.

Brillantes served as labor attaché to Ottawa, Washington, D.C. and Bonn. He also became a DOLE undersecretary for employment promotion and manpower development from August 1992 to May 1995. He was also DOLE assistant secretary for regional operations and assistant secretary for legislative affairs from August 1991 to August 1992.

The President, who is also the concurrent foreign secretary, explained that his appointment of Ambassador Brillantes as DFA undersecretary for overseas Filipinos was independent of her choice of a permanent foreign secretary.

The Chief Executive said she appointed Brillantes to the position because of the latter's labor background and because he has been doing a very good job with the overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in Malaysia.

"He should be able to do that for the OFWs all over the world," the President said.

The President also said that she would like the DFA to work for the dignified treatment of OFWs while abroad and when they return home.

"Like I don't want them to be coming back home in a charter flight just because they are deported Filipinos. Let them come back in regular commercial flights. And a few at a time," the President said.

DOF, DTI, NEDA working jointly to make fiscal incentives system promote RP as investment size

The Department of Finance (DoF) has been in a continuing discussions with the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) on how to reconfigure the country's fiscal incentives system to make the Philippines more competitive and attractive to foreign investments.

In a statement, the DoF said the objective in the review of the fiscal incentives system is to make the system clear and simple to administer, harmonious, time-bound, and performance-based.

The DoF said that at present, there are many tax incentives laws that extend diverse types of tax breaks, and a number of tax incentives administering agencies.

"Thus, streamlining of procedures, harmonizing the tax perks, and identifying promotable activities where the country has high comparative advantage are the objectives of the ongoing rationalization efforts," the DoF said.

The DoF also categorically denied that it was the source of news reports that said tax incentives cost the government about P187 billion in 2001.

Although tax incentives such as income tax holidays and import duty exemptions imply fiscal costs, the DoF said it recognizes the vital role of tax incentives to promote the country as an investment site.

For instance, the preferential tax treatment, one form of incentives offered at the country's special economic zones, has contributed to the exports' annual growth of 26.22 percent from 1996 to 2001, the DoF said.

The DoF said that this kind of incentive has also resulted in an annual increase in employment of 14.40 percent for the same period.

GMA congratulates VRB, PNP, PSG for confiscation of 2-million pirated CDs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the Videogram Regulatory Board (VRB), the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the Presidential Security Group (PSG) for their success in confiscating about 2 million pieces of pirated compact discs (CDs) in various parts of the country.

The President motored to Camp Crame at around 1:30 p.m. to witness the destruction of truckloads of video compact discs (VCDs) and digital video discs (DVDs) confiscated in a series of raids conducted by the combined government operatives.

In an interview with reporters, the President said the confiscation of the pirated CDs is part of the government effort to curb criminality and maintain law and order nationwide.

"The movie and recording industry has long been suffering because of this (piracy)," she said.

In a brief ceremony at the parade ground of Camp Crame, the truckloads of pirated CDs were crushed by three bulldozers in full view of the President and other government officials led by newly-installed VRB Chairman Ramon "Bong" Revilla, Jr.

In his speech during the ceremony, Revilla emphasized that the proliferation of pirated CDs has affected more than 200,000 workers from the film and music industry.

Since assuming office last July 1, Revilla, with the help of the men and women from the PNP-Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) and the PSG raided about 50 establishments suspected of peddling the hot items in Metro Manila and elsewhere in the country.

While forming a comprehensive program for preventive education and information dissemination against piracy, Revilla stressed that the operation against those peddling the illegal merchandise will continue.

"In the past two weeks alone, we have accumulated almost three million units of optical discs," he said.

On its first day of operation alone, the combined team of the VRB, PNP and the PSG has seized some 1.7 million pieces of CDs with an estimated street value of P85 million.

Among those who attended the ceremony were PNP chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., Philippine Association of Recording Industry (PARI) president Danny Olivarez, PNP-CIDG chief Director Nestorio Gualberto and PSG chief Brig. Gen. Hermogenes Esperon.

From Camp Crame, President Macapagal-Arroyo proceeded to the St. Luke's Hospital in Quezon City where she visited the policemen who were wounded during the rally outside the Batasan Complex last Monday.

The President personally awarded the medal of excellence to Police Officer 1 Gerardo Rodriguez and four other policemen from the Central Police District and congratulated them for their "very heroic act."

GMA hails launching of UNDP 2002 Human Development Report in RP

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) for the main launching the 2002 Human Development Report in the Philippines, saying it is a recognition of the Philippines' emphasis on human development and the country's pioneering adoption of the human development index as an official measure of the Filipino people's welfare.

In her speech at the Global Launch of the 2002 Human Development Report this morning at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall, the Chief Executive cited the presence of Djibril Diallo, director for Communications Office of the Office of the UNDP Administrator in New York, who informed her that the global launch of the 2002 Human Development Report is being held simultaneously in 70 countries all over the world.

The President also recognized the attendance of UNDP Administrator Mark Malloch Brown and East Timor Foreign Minister Ramos Horta, the father of East Timor Independence, who have contributed much to the struggle for human freedom and democracy.

"Only in one country do we have the head of the UNDP presiding over the launching. This is the main launching of the Human Development Report in the Philippines," she said.

She told the UNDP officials and government officials attending the launching ceremonies of her administration's efforts to build a strong Republic, which she enunciated in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22 before the joint session of Congress.

One of the essential features of a strong Republic, the President said, is that it stands for the interest of the people rather than the powerful minority.

The President noted that a Republic must be so, in fact, in reality and as what the Human Development Reports stresses especially in the difference it makes for the better in the lives of citizens.

According to the President, her experience in governance during the last year and a half "tells me that my country needs a strong Republic to guarantee human development."

She stressed that a strong Republic involves a painstaking process of strengthening institutions and communities, a process that advances only on a broad platform of shared ethical values, a firm consensus to serve common interest and a common vision of a national future.

The President said that the idea that people should be at the center of development took root mainly through to the advocacy of the United Nations and its member states.

She congratulated the UNDP under the leadership of Mark Mallock Brown for giving flesh to this advocacy in the Human Development Report.

The President recalled that the last time she saw Brown was when they were both in Washington, D.C. when she was still the vice president.

The President also paid tribute to East Timor and its people which was represented by its foreign minister, "who knows the Philippines very well."

She said she concurred with Minister Horta who once said that democracy and human rights are not inventions of the West. "We wholeheartedly agree, the Philippines established its first Republic more than a hundred years ago, the first in Asia in 1898, before the Americans occupied our country," the President said.

GMA lauds PNP, AFP for arrest of 3 suspected drug dealers, seizure of P1.7M in cocaine, shabu

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) for the arrest of three suspected drug peddlers and the seizure of some P1.7 million worth of cocaine and methamphetamine hydrochloride or “shabu” during a joint operation in Barangay Bantilan, Infanta, Quezon.

In a brief ceremony at the parade ground of Camp Crame, Philippine National Police chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. presented to the President the three suspects who were identified as Radil Ramos, Belen Ortaliza and retired Philippine Army Staff Sergeant Mariano Ortaliza.

“Let there be no safe haven for the kidnapers, the drug traffickers or the terrorists,” the President said in a statement to mediamen.

Among those recovered during the drug bust were eight pieces of heat-sealed plastic packets of yellowish powdery substance suspected to be high-grade cocaine with an estimated street value of P1.5 million and 42 plastic packets of white crystalline substance believed to be shabu with estimated value of P130,000.

The Chief Executive said both the police and soldiers are working together to stamp out all criminals who undermine the strong Republic that her administration is building.

She emphasized that the government’s priority in the all-out war against criminality are the kidnapers and drug traffickers.

“We are waging the war against drug traffickers without let-up,” she said.

The President recalled that last October 13, the Quezon province police operatives seized 500 kilos of shabu, which she described as the “biggest drug haul in history.”

Since July 4 when Ebdane took the reins of the PNP leadership, she said the police have arrested 21 kidnapers and killed three others during separate encounters.

GMA restated no interference policy on congressional affairs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she has been consistent in her policy of not interfering in the internal affairs of the Senate as she stressed that she had nothing to do with the decision of Sen. Robert Jaworski to join the administration coalition.

In a luncheon with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said she talked to Jaworski only on the day that the senator made the announcement of his decision to bolt from the opposition and move to the administration party in the Senate.

“We talked because he has told me he would make the announcement, but we did not talk before that,” the President said.

Before that, the President said Senator Ramon Revilla, Jaworski’s father-in-law, called her up to say that the latter would like to see her before he makes the announcement.

The President said that movements of members in the Senate are largely the result of their own efforts.

But the President admitted that if the senators need her help and if they ask for her support as President, or as president of the coalition or as chairman of the party, she will help. “That is my obligation,” the President said.

The President also confirmed that Jaworski has received a warning that he will be subjected to black propaganda if he moves over to the administration party.

“If he moves over, they are going to do a black propaganda on him, and they are doing it,” the President said.

The President said that Senator Jaworski was threatened, but despite the warning from his former camp, he still moved to the other side “for country and family.”

The President also said that Senator Vicente Sotto III does not have to resign from the Senate when he chairs the Legislative-Executive Advisory Council (LEDAC) oversight committee for the Dangerous Drugs Board.

The President said he will ask Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., her co-chairmen in the LEDAC, to create this LEDAC oversight committee as part of a stepped up campaign against illegal drug trade.

“So it is not an executive position,” the President said.

GMA cites UNDP 2002 Human Development Report’s stress on good governance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the 2002 Human Development Report (HDR) commissioned by the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) for giving due importance to the expanding role of civil society in deepening democracy.

This is very relevant to the Philippines, both as a nation and as a Republic, the President said in a speech at the Global Launch of the 2002 HDR at Malacañang’s Ceremonial Hall this morning.

But she said that amid globalization and the information revolution, people have been asking if wealth had been created and why poverty and inequality continued to pervade.

She added that advocates of free markets should put in place innovative and democratic political institutions “to allay apprehensions that globalization sets back social progress and deepens human misery.”

She stressed that institutions for governance should fight illiteracy, disease, hunger and injustice.

The President agreed with United Nations Secretary General Koffi Anan who was quoted in the report as saying that “good governance is, perhaps, the single most important factor in eradicating poverty and promoting development.”

“I agree with Secretary General Koffi Anan,” she said, adding that good governance should rest on three pillars: a sound moral foundation to guide the leadership at all levels, a philosophy of transparency in all government actions, and an ethics of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

She pointed out that the third pillar “is one of the essential features of strong Republic” that she enunciated in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) before the joint session of Congress last July 22, 2002.

The strong Republic “must have effective institutions to protect the weak,” she said in her SONA.

In her speech, the Chief Executive also commended the HDR for coming up with an updated scorecard on the progress of countries in meeting the millennium development goals of poverty reduction.

“It is a good way of keeping track of our shared obligations, not only as governments but as nations,” she declared.

She gladly told UNDP officials and other development advocates that the Philippines was on track with its millennium development goals.

“Based on the established trend, we would be able to meet by 2015 the goals of, among others, cutting into half the proportion of people without access to safe drinking water, achieve universal primary education, achieve gender equality in primary schools and reduce under-five mortality by two-thirds,” she said.

She disclosed that she told Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas that these were good indicators that “we must monitor in order to ensure that we stay on track in fighting poverty.”

She also vowed to work with her Cabinet to develop policies and programs that would enable the Philippines to catch up with the goals of reducing the number of people suffering from hunger.

The President said her administration’s national ambition is to win the battle against poverty with the decade, “even earlier than the projection of the HDR 2015.”

She also thanked the HDR for “providing us with the meaningful objectives that together spell victory against poverty.”

President Macapagal-Arroyo recalled the Philippine Development Report (PDR) 2002 that was launched two weeks ago with the theme “Work and Well-Being.”

Combined, the PDR and HDR themes would highlight the implications of politics and governance on jobs, poverty and human development. “They partner well with a strong Republic,” she said.

The President expressed the hope that her administration would ably maintain its increasing human development index in the coming years.

“This, we hope to achieve with the help of the UNDP and the international development assistance community. UNDP is a trusted partner, and we look forward to continued cooperation in peace and development,” she said.

The President called on the development assistance community not only to invest in the growth of the markets but also in the growth of democracy.

“At the same time, our common commitment to deepen democracy at the national levels should be mirrored in the practices of governance at the global level,” she said.

She added that the Doha Round under the World Trade Organization must respond to the clamor of developing member countries for expanded market access stressing that this would empower developing countries to build strong Republics.

She urged the leaders of the developed world and the various agencies responsible for promoting international peace, freedom and prosperity to be exemplars and leaders.

“We must all move forward and seek to help one another, build our strong Republics in our own nations so that we can strengthen the weak among us and make them all equally strong. Hopefully before 2015,” she said.

SWS takes issue with results of survey on Filipinos' 'hopelessness' in the country

The respected Social Weather Stations (SWS) has taken issue with the results of a survey recently conducted by Pulse Asia, Inc. which reportedly showed that 31 percent of the respondents in the ABC class was hopeless and that they would migrate to another country if given the chance.

In a letter to Malacañang, Mahar Mangahas, SWS president, said that the question answerable by "agree" or "disagree" is double-barreled and tends to cause ambiguity in interpretation.

The question used by Pulse Asia in its survey was: "There is no hope for this country. If possible, I would migrate to another country."

The Pulse Asia survey, conducted in March and April, also found that one out of five Filipinos, or 19 percent, wanted to leave the country.

According to Mangahas, one cannot tell if an "agree" answer means that the respondent feels there is no hope for the country (whether or not it is cause to migrate), or if it means that the respondent would want to migrate to another country for any other reason.

Mangahas said that 11 survey trials of this item, designed by a former consultant of the SWS, showed little variation in results over time.

Using the same question, the SWS survey conducted in March 2002 showed that 16 percent of the respondents agree, meaning having a feeling of "hopelessness," which is identical with the 16 percent that agreed in the question in a survey conducted in July 1993, the second year of the Ramos administration.

Significantly, the percentage of those who had the feeling of "hopelessness" in this country had declined in March 2002 (16 percent) from the 26 percent in July 2001.

Because of the tendency of respondents to interpret the question in different manners, the SWS had discontinued to use the question-design, Mangahas said.

BSP notes steady 6.9% growth in domestic liquidity

The country's domestic liquidity has grown steadily by 6.9 percent year-on-year to reach P1.57 trillion as of end-May 2002, a slight improvement from the 6.6-percent growth as of end-April 2002.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) said the steady growth in domestic liquidity could be attributed partly to the increase in net foreign assets (NFA) of the monetary system, arising from the decline in foreign exchange liabilities of financial institutions — partly due to the appreciation of the peso against the US dollar.

The BSP said the preference of banks for peso deposits to foreign currency deposits helped reduce the foreign currency liabilities of the monetary system.

The steady growth in May was also supported by significant increases in public sector credits that offset the decline in private sector lending.

The BSP said public sector credits grew by 2.8 percent during the same period while credits to the private sector as of end-May 2002 dropped by 3.7 percent from the level a year ago.

Commercial bank (KB) loans, in particular, registered an annual decline of 1.8 percent to reach P1.41 trillion in May 2002, an improvement from the 2.2 percent year-on-year decline in the previous month.

The bulk of KBs' outstanding loans continued to flow to the productive sectors of the economy: manufacturing; financial institutions; real estate and business services; and wholesale and retail trade, which comprise a combined share of nearly two-thirds of total KB loans.

The decline in private sector credits and KB loans, in particular, could be traced mainly to the relatively low demand for bank credit by firms despite recent signs of improvement in economic activity due to the presence of spare capacity in the manufacturing sector.

The average capacity utilization in April 2002 stood at 75.3 percent, slightly lower than the March 2002 level of 75.9 percent.

Further, banks' lending activity has been constrained by the need for banks to contain any possible build-up in their non-performing loans (NPLs), which stood at 18.4 percent in May 2002, up from 18.2 percent in April 2002.

Domestic liquidity growth, however, is expected to gain some strength in the months ahead given signs of improved economic activity, which would enhance greater demand for liquidity.

Among others, the volume of production and value of production index of manufacturing rose by 17.0 percent and 14.9 percent, respectively, a welcome reversal from the annual declines registered in March 2002.

Merchandise exports registered a 2.7-percent cumulative increase in May 2002, up from the 0.4 percent year-on-year cumulative increase in the previous month.

Meanwhile, demand for electricity has been on the uptrend since April 2002. Meralco's energy sales rose annually by 4.0 percent in May 2002 from 2.9 percent year-on-year increase in the previous month.

Going forward, the BSP said it would remain watchful of the evolving economic and financial developments to ensure that an appropriate level of domestic liquidity is made available while containing any possible build-up in price pressures.

This is in line with the objective of maintaining price stability consistent with the economy's growth objectives.

Last Monday, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo cited gains in the economy.

In her second State of the Nation Address, the President said “the basic macro signs indicate that things are under control. Inflation is at a low, driven down by stable food prices and now by declining power costs.”

“Interest rates are also at a low, and our peso is stable. From P56 to the dollar, it is now a little over P50,” she added.

The President also stressed that this had put the country back on the international map. “We are the third best performing economy in Asia and the best in Southeast Asia,” she said.

GMA acts to assure Tanjay residents of clean, safe, cheap water supply

TANJAY CITY, Negros Oriental – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) to transfer the management of the water supply here to the city government unit in order to provide clean, safe and cheap water to the people.

In her speech during the Second Tanjay Cityhood Anniversary celebration at the Osmeña Park here, the President said DPWH Secretary Simeon Datumanong assured her of the immediate transfer of the Tanjay Water District (TWD) from the Local Water Utilities Administration (LWUA) to the control of the city government.

Upon hearing the President’s directive, the huge crowd gathered here that included top provincial and local officials of Negros Oriental province gave the Chief Executive a thunderous applause.

Tanjay City Mayor Baltazar Salma earlier wrote the President requesting for her approval on the dissolution of TWD.

“Madam President, the dissolution of the TWD will result in clean, safe and cheap water supply for the people of Tanjay, your great gift ‘Para sa Pamilyang Pilipino, Malinis at Murang Tubig,’” Baltazar said in his letter.

The present sources of TWD are surface water from the Monagoto River and ground water through deepwell and springs.

According to Baltazar, the said sources show some failure when heavy rains pour in the vicinity of the Mangoto River and interruptions to the service are frequently experienced.

The Tanjay mayor also noted the presence of horseshoe worms, sediments and mud have become common occurrences after every service interruptions.

Aside from poor service and increasing water rates, Baltazar informed the President that TWD is also beset with P30 million in unpaid loans to LWUA.

Despite the increase in water rates, Mayor Baltazar argued that no major project was done to solve the present technical problem due to the need for a bigger fund estimated to be around P80 million to build a treatment plant.

Prior to her speech, the President rode a jeep for a 100-meter inaugural drive-thru of the Dumaguete North Road Project here in Tanjay.

The concreting of the road was started in year 2000 and was completed today in time for the Tanjay town fiesta.

Those who joined the President here were Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza, Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Negros Oriental Go. George Arnaiz, and Rep. Emilio Macias (Second District – Negros Oriental).

Traders cite GMA’s all-out war against terrorists, criminals

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — Businessmen here today cited President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's tenacity in going after syndicated criminals and terrorists who have, for some time, eroded investor confidence in this bustling southern city.

Manuel Yaphucon, acting chairman of the General Santos City Chamber of Commerce and Industry, said business and investment climate here had greatly improved since the neutralization of a terrorist band tagged as responsible in the burning of two malls and the bombing of another here early this year.

But Yaphucon sought continued vigilance by the police and military to sustain the healthy business climate.

Owners of the burned shopping malls earlier said they planned to put up bigger shopping centers in the city by December.

The Koronadal Commercial Corp., owners of KCC Mall, said they looked forward to building a four-story mall almost at the same site where the fire-raided mall once stood.

Yaphucon said many businessmen here hailed the recent arrest of two of those believed responsible in the bombing of the Fitmart Department Store last April 21.

At least 15 people were killed and over 60 hurt during the bombing.

The two suspects, identified as Abdulbasit Usman and Moamar Esmael, were presented Wednesday to President Macapagal-Arroyo in Malacañang.

In her State of the Nation Address last Monday, the President announced the arrest of Usman, a bomb expert, by elements of the Central Mindanao Regional Police Office.

Months ago, other suspects behind the blasts here and in nearby Tacurong City were arrested and formally charged in court.

Yaphucon also cited the move of the Department of Trade and Industry and the Asian Institute of Management to qualify General Santos City as the most competitive mid-size city in the entire country.

The conferment, the DTI and AIM said, was based on a study involving 30 Philippine cities. The title showed that the city has all the positive factors investors look for in a place, City Mayor Pedro Acharon said.

"There's no stopping the city's journey to progress," Acharon said.

GenSan, Sarangani people await GMA on Friday

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is set to join the townspeople of Malungon in Sarangani Province celebrate their 33rd foundation anniversary tomorrow.

The President, expected to arrive here at 9 a.m., will first lead officials in burning some 30,000 fully-grown marijuana plants and seedlings worth about P60 million at the Philippine National Police Camp Fermin Lira in the city proper.

Following the burning, the President will proceed to Malungon, some 50 kilometers northeast from this city. It was in a part of Malungon, bordering Kiblawan town in Davao del Sur, where the bulk of the marijuana plants were uprooted and seized in a raid last Tuesday.

The people of Malungon, officials said, expect the President to extol the significance of the uprooting and seizure of the illegal plants in the government's no-nonsense campaign to rid the country of the social menace brought about by drug abuse and addiction.

In her State of the Nation Address last Monday, the President called on the people to support the all-out war against syndicated criminals, particularly those involved in drugs, smuggling and kidnappings.

Malungon Mayor Teody Padernilla cited the people's cooperation in dealing with the marijuana plantation owner and his cohorts, who have been identified by the National Bureau of Investigation raiding team.

The President is also expected to award and distribute a number of socio-economic programs and projects for the people of Malungon and the other six towns of Sarangani, as well as for those in the Central Mindanao region.

From Malungon, the President will return here to confer with local government officials and private sector leaders

Local officials and the people eagerly await the coming of the President who earlier visited the city on February 27, when she graced the 63rd foundation anniversary of settlements in the Cotabato area.

The landing of the first batch of 62 settlers on the shores of Sarangani Bay occurred in 1939.

The President is expected to spend the evening in nearby Alabel town, the provincial capital of Sarangani province.

The next morning, on Saturday, she will proceed to Marawi City to attend a traditional Islamic wedding of the children of two of the city's respected clans.

Laguna Lake fishers pledge support to GMA

The Alyansa ng mga Mamamayan at Magdaragat sa Lawa ng Laguna, Inc. has pledged its full and unequivocal support to the 18-month-old administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In a letter of support to the President, Alyansa national president Ka Pabling Marquez said that since the inception of the Laguna Lake Development Authority (LLDA) which was created under Republic Act 4850 coordination between the small fishermen and the LLDA has never been fully established.

Marquez pointed out that it is only under the administration of President Macapagal-Arroyo that Executive Order No. 75 has been issued and signed on March 4, 2002.

Through Executive Order No. 75, Marquez said, the President appointed three representatives from the small fishermen of the Laguna Lake to sit in the Board of Directors of the LLDA as advisors.

Because of this, Marquez said "we are extending our profound thanks and in the name of the officers and men of Alyansa we pledge our full support to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo."

GMA inspects modern Negros Oriental Provincial Hospital

DUMAGUETE CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today inspected the Negros Oriental Provincial Hospital (NOPH), one of the most modern provincial hospitals in the country equipped with multimillion-peso state of the art medical equipment.

The President arrived here at the Dumaguete Airport at around 9:30 a.m. and then motored to the NOPH together with Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza, Negros Oriental Gov. George Arnaiz, Rep. Emilio Macias II (Second District- Negros Oriental) and Dumaguete City Mayor Agustin Perdices.

While touring the hospital facilities, the President took time to exchange pleasantries with patients as well as with nurses, doctors and other staff of the NOPH. Some even posed for photographs with her.

Provincial Health Officer and NOPH chief Dr. Ely Villapando briefed the President during her visit tour to the different facilities of the hospital like the laboratory, the radiology section, dialysis center, women's health section and the emergency room.

Located in the heart of this city, the NOPH boasts of a facility that is not usually found in provincial hospitals – a Diagnostic Center equipped with P53-million modern medical equipment such as dialysis facility, ct scan, mammography, mobile x-ray and a clinical blood analyzer, automated microbial detection system, coulter hematology analyzer, refrigerated centrifuge separator, and many others.

The acquisition of the equipment and other improvements on the hospital were made through a P45-million loan as well as donations from private individuals and non-government organizations.

Thus, NGOs and the private sector have been tapped as members of the governing boards of the NOPH and its satellite hospitals.

NOPH has a capacity of 250 beds, 77 percent of which are service beds and 23 percent pay beds and medicare.

Its service area covers the entire province of Negros Oriental, some parts of Negros Occidental, southern Cebu, Siquijor and Northern Mindanao.

As a tertiary hospital, it undertakes a comprehensive health care system covering the curative, preventive, promotive and rehabilitative aspects of health care.

The said hospital came into being as a consequence of two factors– the empowering opportunity created by the Local Government Code of 1991 which turned over the pursuit of health care from the national to the local government units; and the determined effort made by the provincial government of Negros Oriental to undertake and prioritize health care as one of its major thrust.

Palace sees no hitch in Ople's confirmation at CA

Malacañang today said that it is optimistic that newly appointed Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople will not have any difficulty in his confirmation before the Commission on Appointments (CA).

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that prior to the appointment of Ople to the foreign affairs portfolio, all the senators who are members of influential CA have expressed their approval to the senator's assumption of the top DFA post.

“You know all the senators who are members of CA have a very high regard for Senator Ople. So it will be fair to assume that he would not have any difficulty as far as his confirmation is concerned,” Bunye said during his regular press briefing at Malacañang this afternoon.

Bunye said that there is still no date as to when Ople would officially assume his new post but “it will be in the immediate future.” “So that (we) will give him enough leeway to wind down his affair at the Senate,” he added.

“Knowing Senator Ople, I'm sure he meant really to patch things up and to resolve the differences between all the parties and to keep the institutions of government moving forward,” Bunye said.

With regards to the Mutual Logistic Support Agreement (MLSA), Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is not in a hurry to tackle the matter because she has not even seen the first draft of the MLSA.

GMA leads distribution of CLOA's, livelihood assistance to Negros Oriental residents

TANJAY CITY, Negros Oriental – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the distribution of 30 certificates of land ownership awards (CLOAs) to 224 beneficiaries covering a total of 230 hectares in this city and in the municipalities of Mabinay, Pamplona and Bais.

In a ceremony marking Tanjay's second cityhood anniversary celebration held at the Osmeña Park here, the President also presided over the mass oath-taking of newly elected barangay officials and Sangguniang Kabataan members from the second congressional district of Negros Oriental.

The Chief Executive awarded three units of hand tractors worth P195,000 to the two congressional districts and the provincial government of Negros Oriental, and 600 seedlings of fruit trees in support of the agricultural modernization program in the province.

The President also handed over checks totaling more than P130,000 for various livelihood and micro-finance projects in Tanjay City and Sibulan municipality.

She likewise awarded more than P1.5 million worth of certificates of scholarship to 108 beneficiaries in Negros Oriental under the Private Education Student Financing Assistance (PESFA) of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

Another 68 scholarship certificates worth about P1 million from the TESDA scholarship program were also turned over to the province of Negros Oriental under Gov. George Arnaiz.

The said scholarship program is being funded by the Asian Development Bank (ADB).

Prior to the awarding ceremony, the President was feted with a five-minute "Sinulog" presentation in celebration of Tanjay City's "fiesta."

From Tanjay, the President flew to the municipality of Guihulngan, some 200 kilometers away from this city, for the unveiling of the P31-million Bulado Roll-on/Roll-off Port Development Project.

The said project is part of the P43-million Bulado, Guihulngan-Tangil, Dumanjug, Cebu Port Development Project.

President Macapagal-Arroyo is here on an overnight visit and will fly tomorrow to General Santos City before proceeding to Sarangani and Marawi City on Saturday.

Gov't to respect civil liberties despite suspension of maximum tolerance policy

Malacañang today said that the government does not intend to curb civil liberties in the wake of the announcement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that henceforth law enforcement authorities would stop adopting the "maximum tolerance" policy.

In his regular press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that the government would continue to respect freedom of speech and freedom of peaceful assembly as enshrined in the Constitution.

"But if the rallyists overstep this freedom, then the police will certainly have to come in," Bunye said.

Definitely, according to Bunye, the government would not tolerate police brutality. But he said in the violence that erupted at the rally at the Batasan Pambansa during the President's SONA, it was the demonstrators beating up the policemen, Bunye said.

He said if one would go by the number of people hurt during the demonstrations, there were more policemen hurt than demonstrators.

"So, the President will not tolerate this kind of situation. And since maximum tolerance is not a law, but just a policy, for the time being, this is being suspended," Bunye said.

In a luncheon with the members of Malacañang Press Corps Wednesday, the President said "maximum tolerance is not required by law but is just a policy."

In demonstrations in the future, if the rallyists violate the law, then charges would be filed against them, the President said.

RP would insist on having jurisdiction on Abu Sayyaf leaders — Palace

Malacañang today said that as a matter of procedure, the Philippine government would insist on having jurisdiction over the trial of Abu Sayyaf terrorists.

However, in his regular press briefing this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that if the Abu Sayyaf terrorists are caught outside of our jurisdiction or within American territory, then it would be another matter.

"In which case, they (US) can try the Abu Sayyaf," Bunye said.

Bunye was reacting to reports that the US State Department has indicted five top leaders of the Abu Sayyaf for kidnapping spree that led to the death of two American nationals.

The US federal indictments identified the five as Khadaffy Abubakar Janjalani, Isnilon Totoni Hapilon, Aldam Tilao, Jainal Antel Sali, and Hamsiraji Marusi Sali.

He said that if the Abu Sayyaf leaders would be caught in the Philippines, then "we will insist on trying them based on our laws."

Earlier, Justice Undersecretary Manuel Teehankee said that the US indictments are without prejudice to the primary jurisdiction of Philippine courts over the arrested Abu Sayyaf leaders.

Opposition's contra-SONA exaggerated — Palace

Malacañang today said that the counter State of the Nation Address (SONA) of the opposition delivered Wednesday by Sen. Edgardo Angara in the Senate is exaggerated.

In his regular press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said although the contra-SONA of the opposition is a traditional practice, Angara has exaggerated in his presentation of the present situation in the country.

"I don't think the situation is really that bad. There have certainly been improvements as far as the economy is concerned," Bunye said.

He said that the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has notched tangible achievements in education, health, price stability, and also in reducing the cost of electricity.

“All of these tend to improve the plight of the common people. So, I would like to believe that the opposition SONA is really exaggerated,” Bunye said.

Bunye also took exception to the allegations of the opposition camp that the government has been remiss in curbing rice smuggling.

He said that in her SONA, the President herself pointed out that more than P1.2 billion worth of smuggled rice has been confiscated, which is several times over the confiscated rice during the previous administration.

In her SONA, the President also ordered the Bureau of Customs not just to seize smuggled goods but to arrest big-time smugglers and charge them with plunder or economic sabotage, a non-bailable crime.

GMA to release P10 M for Bulado Port development

GUIHULNGAN, Negros Oriental — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday (July 25) announced that she would infuse an additional P10 million for the further development of the Bulado Port here.

The President's announcement was made during the unveiling of the marker of the Bulado Roll-On/Roll-Off Port Development Project in this municipality.

She cited the importance of the port which could serve as the central prime mover to economic development in the area and in the entire province of Negros Oriental.

The President flew here by helicopter after attending the second cityhood anniversary celebration of Tanjay.

Upon her arrival here, she was met by Rep. Jacinto Paras (First District, Negros Oriental), Guihulngan Mayor Ceasar Macalua and other local officials.

The Bulado Port, which was used by the Americans as a temporary docking area during World War II, has a natural depth and is located in a cove.

It was also used by a mining company as port of call to transport phosphate to other destinations.

The Region VII Roll-On/Roll-Off Development Project covers the construction of roll-on/roll-off landing and reinforced concrete piers at the Guihulngan Port here in Negros Oriental and the Tangil Port in Cebu.

The component has been completed as of July 2002 while the Dumanjug component is still to be completed.

GMA pushes for aggressive natural population plan

DUMAGUETE CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night said that her administration is pushing an "aggressive natural population plan" in an effort to address the growing population in the country.

In an informal dinner meeting with local mediemen here, the President said that the target of her administration is to bring up the use of the natural method by 20 percent through an aggressive education plan for couples.

Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit said that it is important to get in touch couples and educate them, "so that they may know essentially what might be good for them."

Dayrit said the natural method campaign would begin with the so-called "fertility awareness."

"It's getting couple to understand the whole concept when they are fertile," Dayrit said.

According to surveys, Dayrit pointed out, only 13 percent of couples at any one time know when they are fertile.

“We are trying to balance it by increasing the campaign for natural and push for aggressive fertility awareness education and make all the other methods available as well,” he said.

At present, Dayrit said the contraceptive prevalence rate is 49 percent, where 30 percent use modern artificial methods that include condoms, pills, IUDs and injectables.

On the other hand, 18 percent are reportedly using the traditional method, which Dayrit said, “are not reliable.”

“When you say reliable, you look at the failure rate, and the failure rate for pills is about one percent, for condom it is about five percent, and the natural method is between two and five percent,” he said.

The traditional method includes withdrawal and rhythm, which are not even recommended by the experts.

“If you look at it from the point of view of reliable methods, only 30 percent use the reliable, which they call the modern contraceptive method,” Dayrit said.

However, he stressed that if one will look at it from that perspective, 70 percent use unreliable methods or no methods at all.

“With that reasoning, you can think that the natural method could make inroads in this big 70 percent,” Dayrit explained.

GMA leads burning of marijuana plants, seedlings

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led officials in burning part of some 20,000 fully-grown marijuana plants and seedlings uprooted in a 60-hectare plantation bounding Sarangani Province, Davao del Sur and South Cotabato.

“Ituloy ang laban sa krimen at bawal na gamut (On with the war against criminality and illegal drugs),” the President said in a brief statement during the burning of four stacks of some 5,000 fully-grown marijuana plants immediately upon her arrival here this morning.

The President lauded National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) agents who early this week raided and destroyed the plantation located in the mountains of Malungon, Sarangani Province, Kiblawan, Davao del Sur, and parts of South Cotabato.

Among those who assisted the President in burning the illegal plants in the Philippine National Police (PNP) Camp Fermin Lira were Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu, Philippine Air Force Chief Lt. Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon Datumanong, Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus Dureza, South Cotabato Gov. Daisy Fuentes and General Santos City Mayor Pedro Acharon, Jr.

An earlier report said Philippine Air Force personnel and militiamen backed up the NBI agents during the raid.

No one was arrested in the raid, but NBI district head Boye Mama said the plantation owner and his cohorts have been identified.

Bilaan tribesmen in the area said people from the lowland have been exploiting the locals into planting marijuana that the former buy later.

Investigators have been looking into reports that marijuana from Mindanao is being smuggled into Indonesia and other neighboring countries, which use the plant for medicinal purposes.

The President arrived here at about 9:20 a.m. and went directly to the marijuana burning site near the airport.

PNP Region 12 bags KFR gang leader in shootout

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's tenacious campaign against kidnap and terror groups scored another victory with the neutralization of a notorious kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gang leader after a brief shootout in Isulan, Sultan Kudarat last Thursday (July 25) on the eve of the President's second visit here.

The President arrived at the General Santos Airport at about 9:00 this morning. Her first visit was last February 27 when she graced the city's foundation anniversary rites.

During her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday, the President stressed: "Criminal syndicates will be treated as what they are, direct threats to national security."

A report from the Philippine National Police Central Mindanao Regional Special Operations Group named the KFR gang leader as Tungko Abdulrahman, alias Commander Tropical. Abdulrahman was tagged as the leader of the Abu Sufia KFR group that abducted a Korean national and a local businessman in February this year.

Police Superintendent Willie Danggane, Region 12 police chief, said they have also taken in for questioning three people suspected to be Abdulrahman's men.

Danggane, also the director of the Sarangani Police Office, said they recovered from Abdulrahman a .45 caliber pistol, bullets and a cellular phone that listed phone numbers linking the Abu Sufia with the terrorist Abu Sayyaf.

Abdulrahman was said to have formed the Abu Sufia, a breakaway faction of the Pentagon KFR gang led by Tahir Alonto and Faisal Marohombsar. Danggane said Abdulrahman started the shootout. "This would have not happened to him had he given himself up peacefully."

The police were trying to effect an arrest warrant against Abdulrahman, who was facing formal charges in court for kidnapping and serious illegal detention in connection with the abduction of Korean national Jae Kwoon Yon and local hotelier Carlos Belonio.

Danggane also headed the police group that nabbed suspected bombers Abdulbassit Usman and Muammar Esmael who were presented to President Macapagal-Arroyo on Wednesday.

Superintendent Efren Alcuizar, head of the Region 12 police Anti-Narcotics Unit, said they traced Abdulrahman's whereabouts following a tip-off.

Abdulrahman was also involved in supplying drugs to dealers here and in Sultan Kudarat.

Alcuizar said his group and that of Danggane's trailed Abdulrahman to Isulan.

GMA administers oath to newly-elected barangay, youth officials of Saranggani

MALUNGON, Sarangani Province — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today swore into office some 500 newly-elected barangay and Sangguniang Kabataang officials in simple mass oath-taking rites held at the Malungon Gymnasium.

The President exhorted the barangay and village youth officials to give their share in maintaining law and order in their respective areas.

She earlier made this call during her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday.

The President sought full civilian support to the government's all-out war against criminality and terrorism, which, she said, is needed to rid the country of poverty within the decade.

"I ask the newly-elected barangay captains to take an active role in this war, to be the frontliners in this fight in your communities," the President said.

The Philippine Information Agency (PIA) based in General Santos City said those who the President swore into office came from Sarangani's seven towns.

The PIA said barangay and youth officials from this town came in full force. The barangay captains from the other towns represented their respective organizations in the ceremonies.

The mass oath-taking was held before the President's speech during the program.

GMA won't extend Cimatú's term as AFP Chief of Staff

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she could not extend the tour of duty of Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatú "beyond the first extension because of military tradition."

In an interview following the burning of some 5,000 fully-grown marijuana plants at a grass clearing at the General Santos City Airport here, the President lauded Cimatú for his achievements.

She said Cimatú, on his second month in service as AFP Chief of Staff, ably "broke the back of the Abu Sayyaf," a notorious terrorist kidnap-for-ransom group in Mindanao.

That was the continuation of his work when he was still as a division commander, the President noted.

"Even if it is sad to say, I cannot extend him beyond the first extension because of military tradition," the President said.

But she said Cimatú's work as AFP Chief of Staff had been "very, very fruitful and memorable and historic."

The President even compared Cimatú with Pope John XXIII, who became the successor to St. Peter's throne for only five years, was able to bring about the ecumenical movement in the Church.

GMA exhorts people of Malungon to keep up war against terrorism, criminality, poverty

MALUNGON, Sarangani Province — President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo today graced the 33rd foundation day anniversary celebrations in Malungon town, Sarangani Province where she sounded out anew her administration's call for a more vigorous campaign against terrorism, criminality and poverty.

In a speech delivered in fluent Cebuano at the Malungon gymnasium, the President cited the need to attain peace in the country as a means to achieve growth and progress.

But she said peace should be obtained through means that are constitutional, within territorial integrity and sovereignty and with due respect to the country's multi-ethnic characteristic.

She said that the future of “our strong Republic” depended so much on peace and stability in the homeland.

Echoing what she said in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday, she said “let us build a strong Republic.”

In her SONA, the President stressed that “at stake in this war (against terrorism, criminality and poverty) is the very life of society, the very possibility of basic rights and liberties, which have been under attack for too long.”

“The right to work in peace is as basic as the right to life and liberty, and when both are in danger their preservation by all lawful means becomes not just a higher right but an overriding duty. And that duty I will discharge,” she added.

The President also urged the officials and people of Malungon to keep up their spirit of cooperation and support to government efforts against criminal and terrorist elements.

The same exhortation was made before more than 500 newly-elected barangay officials in Sarangani Province who earlier took their oaths of office before the President.

The Chief Executive likewise called for measures to eliminate the threat of drug abuse and addiction in Malungon and other parts of Southern Philippines.

She cited the uprooting and seizure by agents of the National Bureau of Investigation, elements of the Philippine Air Force and militiamen of some 20,000 fully-grown marijuana plants being cultivated by unscrupulous persons in a 60-hectare plantation along the boundaries of Sarangani Province, Davao del Sur and South Cotabato.

The President said Malungon should be considered as a vital part of the Davao-General Santos growth corridor, having a big agricultural land area and a big population with an 84.4 percent literacy rate.

With its agriculture-based economy, Malungon, created by virtue of Republic Act 5522, also boasts of an 88.03 percent employment rate.

Good governance is most important factor in eradicating poverty — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that good governance is the single most important factor in eradicating poverty and promoting development in the country

In her speech at the recent launching in Malacañang of the 2002 Human Development Report (HDR) of the United Nations Development Program (UNDP), the President said she also agreed with UN Secretary General Koffi Anan that good governance rests on three pillars: a sound moral foundation to guide the leadership at all levels, a philosophy of transparency in all government actions, and an ethics of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

The President pointed out that the third pillar “is one of the essential features of strong Republic” that she enunciated in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) before the joint session of Congress last July 22.

The strong Republic “must have effective institutions to protect the weak,” the President said in her SONA.

She said that amid globalization and the information revolution, people have kept on asking why poverty and inequality continue to prevail in developing countries like the Philippines.

The President said that advocates of the free market should put in place innovative and democratic political institutions “to allay apprehensions that globalization sets back social progress and deepens human misery.”

She stressed that institutions for governance should fight illiteracy, disease, hunger and injustice.

In her speech, the Chief Executive also commended the HDR for coming up with an updated scorecard on the progress of countries in meeting the millennium development goals of poverty reduction.

“It is a good way of keeping track of our shared obligations, not only as governments but as nations,” she declared.

She told UNDP officials and other development advocates that the Philippines is on track with its millennium development goals.

“Based on the established trend, we would be able to meet by 2015 the goals of, among others, cutting into half the proportion of people without access to safe drinking water, achieve universal primary education, achieve gender equality in primary schools and reduce under-five mortality by two-thirds,” she said.

The President also vowed to work with her Cabinet to develop policies and programs that would enable the Philippines to catch up with the goals of reducing the number of people suffering from hunger.

The President said her administration's national ambition is to win the battle against poverty with the decade, "even earlier than the projection of the HDR in 2015."

She also thanked the HDR for "providing us with the meaningful objectives that together could spell victory against poverty."

The President called on the development assistance community not only to invest in the growth of the markets but also in the growth of democracy.

"At the same time, our common commitment to deepen democracy at the national levels should be mirrored in the practices of governance at the global level," she said.

She added that the Doha Round under the World Trade Organization must respond to the clamor of developing member countries for expanded market access stressing that this would empower developing countries to build strong Republics.

The President urged the leaders of the developed world and the various agencies responsible for promoting international peace, freedom and prosperity to be exemplars and leaders.

"We must all move forward and seek to help one another, build our strong Republics in our own nations so that we can strengthen the weak among us and make them all equally strong. Hopefully before 2015," she said.

Gov't gaining headway in war against terrorism — Palace

Malacañang today said that the war against terrorism and criminality that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had pledged to wage in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) is gaining headway.

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that recent apprehensions made through the combined efforts of the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) have proved that the President's vow to have "a direct hand in the war against the enemies of the state" is bearing fruit.

"I am determined to build a strong Republic by breaking the back of terrorism and criminality," the President said in her SONA.

For example, Bunye said, on Thursday, or on the eve of the visit of the President to General Santos City, a notorious kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gang leader in Mindanao was killed after a brief shootout in Isulan, Sultan Kudarat.

Bunye said that the PNP Central Mindanao Regional Special Operations Group has identified the KFR gang leader as Tungko Abdulrahman, alias Commander Tropical.

Abdulrahman was tagged as the leader of the Abu Sufia KFR group that abducted a Korean national and a local businessman in February this year, Bunye said.

According to Police Superintendent Willie Dangane, Region 12 police chief, they have also taken in for questioning three people suspected to be Abdulrahman's men.

Bunye said Abu Sufia KFR is a breakaway faction of the Pentagon KFR gang led by Tahir Alonto and Faisal Marohombsar.

Abdulrahman, Bunye said, was facing formal charges in court for kidnapping and serious illegal detention in connection with the abduction of Korean national Jae Kwoon Yon and local hotelier Carlos Belonio.

Danggane also headed the police group that nabbed suspected General Santos City bombers Abdulbassit Usman and Muammar Esmael who were presented to the President in Malacañang last Wednesday.

The two suspects were brought to Malacañang by AFP Chief Gen. Roy Cimatu and PNP chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane.

Bunye said that because of these recent arrests of Mindanao terrorists, businessmen and local officials of General Santos City have lauded the President for her tenacity in going after syndicated criminals and terrorists who have, for some time, eroded investor confidence in the bustling southern city.

Manuel Yaphucon, acting chairman of the General Santos City Chamber of Commerce and Industry, said business and investment climate in General Santos City had greatly improved since the neutralization of a terrorist band tagged as responsible in the burning of two malls and the bombing of another in the city early this year.

Yaphucon said many businessmen in General Santos City hailed the arrest of two of those believed responsible in the bombing of the Fitmart Department Store last April 21. At least 15 people were killed and over 60 hurt during the bombing.

Bunye said that earlier, police authorities have also arrested other suspects behind the blasts in Cotabato City and in nearby Tacurong City and they have already been formally charged in court.

Fight against drug trade is stepped up — Palace

After President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has declared that the drug menace is no longer just a police matter but a national security problem, government law enforcement authorities, including those from the military, have stepped up their campaign against drug trafficking and manufacturing throughout the county, Malacañang said today.

In her second State of the National Address (SONA), the President said that henceforth, drug lords will be treated as enemies of the state.

“In this war with the drug trade, there will be no compromise and no quarter, not for fear or favor,” the President stressed.

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that to show that she meant business, the President herself last Friday led officials in burning part of some 20,000 fully-grown marijuana plants and seedlings uprooted in a 60-hectare plantation bounding Sarangani Province, Davao del Sur and South Cotabato.

“Ituloy ang laban sa krimen at bawal na gamut (On with the war against criminality and illegal drugs),” the President said in a brief statement during the burning of four stacks of some 5,000 fully-grown marijuana plants immediately upon her arrival at General Santos City airport Friday morning.

Bunye said that the confiscation and the burning of marijuana leaves were the result of joint efforts of police and military authorities who raided and destroyed the plantation located in the mountains of Malungon, Sarangani Province, Kiblawan, Davao del Sur, and parts of South Cotabato.

In fact, Bunye said, an earlier report has said that Philippine Air Force personnel and militiamen backed up the NBI agents who have participated in the raid.

No one has yet been arrested in the raid, but the National Bureau of Investigation, the lead agency, has identified the plantation owner and his cohorts, Bunye said.

On Wednesday, or just two days after her SONA, the President was presented with three suspected drug peddlers who were apprehended with some P1.7 million worth of cocaine and methamphetamine hydrochloride or “shabu” during a joint operation made by the police and the military in Barangay Bantilan, Infanta, Quezon.

In a brief ceremony at the parade ground of Camp Crame, PNP chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. presented to the President the three suspects identified as Radil Ramos, Belen Ortaliza and retired Philippine Army Staff Sergeant Mariano Ortaliza.

Just two days before her SONA, on July 20, the President also personally inspected the shabu worth about P118 million during a raid conducted by the police in a drug laboratory in Quezon City.

Last October 13, Quezon province police operatives have also seized 500 kilos of shabu, which the President described in her SONA as the “biggest drug haul in history.”

Bunye said that joint operations by the PNP and the military against drug traffickers are in compliance with the President’s directive not to allow any safe haven to kidnappers, drug traffickers and terrorists.

In her SONA, the Chief Executive has called on both the police and soldiers to work together to stamp out all criminals who undermine the strong Republic that her administration is building.

Gov’t can’t afford to be wishy-washy in building a strong Republic — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that her administration cannot afford to go “wishy-washy” but will do whatever is right for the good of the country in line with her policy of building a strong Republic as she vowed in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday.

The President stressed this point during an informal dinner with Region VII-based mediemen in Dumaguete City on Thursday (July 25).

“Nobody will ever be completely happy with whatever I do. I just have to do what I think is right for our country,” the President said.

In introducing reforms under a strong Republic, the President noted the need to file charges against any erring member of the judiciary that include government prosecutors.

She said building a strong republic includes strengthening of the institutions and how to make the government not captive to vested interests and pressure groups.

“Why do I need a strong Republic? Because you can have beautiful programs to create jobs. But you can’t totally succeed unless you have strong institutions and unless you have a government that does not cower under the pressure of pressure groups,” the President told reporters.

In her SONA, the President said for a country to be as good as it can get, many of the right decisions are tough decisions.

“I have made some of the toughest and I will make even more tough decisions in the years to come because the easy way out may postpone the pain but only prolong the problem,” the President said in her SONA.

A Republic, according to her, “is like as shield that needs a strong arm to hold it up” and a “roof and walls that need to be constructed.”

“A Republic is an edifice towards the building of which each must give the finest stone within their ability to shape. In the end, this stone is the only thing by which one will be remembered,” the President said.

U.S. to keep preferential treatment of RP tuna, says GMA

MARAWI CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the intense campaign undertaken by her administration to protect the country’s tuna industry and keep its preferential treatment in the United States market has paid off.

In her remarks at the 3rd National Conference of the Ulama League of the Philippines held at Barangay Matampay here, the President said that she was informed this morning by Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo that the US Congress did not pass a bill that would allow duty-free entry of tuna from the countries that constitute the Andes mountain ranges in Latin America.

“Our fears that we will lose our preferential treatment for tuna in the US market has been put to rest,” the President said.

According to the President, it was important for her administration to keep the preferential treatment of the tuna exports to the US since the industry is the lifeblood of Muslims, Christian and Lumads in Mindanao.

The President said that she has written directly to US President George W. Bush to help in maintaining the preferential treatment for Philippine tuna in the American market.

She said she was glad to learn that instead of removing this advantage through the passage of a legislation that would allow the duty-free entry of tuna from South America, the US government has even increased its financial assistance to the Philippines by an additional $70 million.

The President said the bulk of this new American financial package will go to Mindanao.

It can be recalled that in late May this year, the President expressed her appreciation to American Senators Ted Stevens and Daniel Inouye for protecting the Philippine share of the canned tuna market in the United States.

The senators, during a courtesy call in Malacañang, assured the President that they would exert efforts in convincing members of both houses of the US Congress to maintain the present duties on the South American Andean tuna.

Several bills seeking to make Andean tuna duty free were pending in the US Congress.

If these bills will be passed in the US Congress, these will be very prejudicial to our canned tuna from Mindanao, the President then said.

In a letter to the US Congress, the two senators said one of their major concerns is the Philippines, particularly Mindanao “where the notorious Abu Sayyaf is kidnapping innocent people, seeking ransom and wreaking havoc through bombings and murders.”

Mindanao’s major employer is the canned tuna industry, the two senators added.

“The Andean trade preference expansion, which will be before us in a few days in its current form, will do extreme harm to the tuna industry in Mindanao,” the senators’ letter said.

The two US senators said the proposed duty-free treatment of canned tuna from the Andean region would put the canneries in Mindanao out of business.

“If the major employer in the area is not able to maintain economic stability which has tenuously existed for several years and declares bankruptcy, most experts predict that the chaos in Mindanao will become monumental,” Senators Stevens and Inouye said.

GMA stresses 3 components of her administration’s quest for peace in Mindanao

MARAWI CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today emphasized the three main components of her administration’s quest for peace in Mindanao: one, that peace and development should go hand in hand; two, that peace should be pursued with due consideration to constitutionality, national sovereignty, and territorial integrity; and three, that Filipinos should recognize that we have a multi-ethnic society.

In her speech before the 3rd National Congress of the Ulamas League of the Philippines here, the President noted that peace could not be sustained without development while development without peace will not flourish.

The President said “there is no sense to buy peace by dividing the country’s property and territory.”

According to the President, Filipinos should realize that Philippine society is a multi-ethnic one which should be founded on social justice for all.

The President said Filipinos respond to many names such as Maranao, Maguindanao, Tausug, Ilocano, Cebuano, Tagalog, and mestizo. “This is a wondrous testimony to our rich and varied heritage as a nation,” she said.

The President said that while she seeks peace, she would like to emphasize that there is no room for terrorism and inhuman brutality.

“We must condemn and address decisively these two acts,” the President said as she noted the relevance of the conference theme which was “Islam: Its Contribution to Peace in the Philippines.”

The President said there is no better time than now to emphasize that Islam, like the other great religions of the world, is founded on peace. “Islam is a religion of peace and forgiveness,” the President said.

As a child, the President said, she was exposed to various races and religious practices, adding that she has Muslim lineage, as well as Cebuano, Ilocano and Iliganon.

“My impressions at that early age shape my attitudes as President now which are based on understanding, tolerance, and strong faith in the goodness of the Almighty. This is the same attitude from which my presidency has pursued its policy of peace,” the President said.

Gov’t has fully implemented peace pact with MNLF — GMA

MARAWI CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the government has fully implemented the provisions of the peace agreement that it signed in 1996 with the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

In her speech at the 3rd National Conference of the Ulamas League of the Philippines, the President noted that Republic Act 9054 has enabled the conduct of the plebiscite that defined the areas that would comprise the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

Five provinces: Lanao del Sur, Maguindanao, Tawi-tawi, Sulu and Basilan, and the Islamic city of Marawi now constitute the ARMM as a result of that plebiscite held in November last year, the President said.

Also elected during that plebiscite was ARMM Governor Parouk Hussin and Vice Governor Mahid Mutilan.

“The 1996 peace agreement is being fully implemented, funds are being spent for development and not dissipated in curious lifestyles,” the President said.

The President also noted that the MNLF forces are now almost completely integrated into the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP).

The last batch of 500 MNLF forces for integration in the AFP, and 250 for integration into the PNP are now undergoing processing and training, she related.

The ARMM now has its regional security force of almost 1,500 integrees to keep the peace in the autonomous region.

The President said she issued specific instructions that all development rehabilitation efforts in conflict-affected areas at the ARMM will be spearheaded by or synchronized with the ARMM government.

Meanwhile, efforts in the non-ARMM areas affected by the conflict will be synchronized by the Southern Philippines Development Authority (SPDA) in tandem with concerned national agencies and local government units (LGUs).

“With peace now prevailing in Central Mindanao, our projects here can resume at a faster pace,” the President said.

Last Friday, the President ceremoniously turned on the main switch of a house in Barangay Barimbingan, signifying the electrification of 21 barangays and eight municipalities around Lake Lanao.

“They have been waiting for this since the time of Adam and Eve,” the President said, referring the long-delayed electrification of the barangays and towns.

She also said her administration acknowledges the contributions of Muslim brothers, putting their talents to good use, citing as example Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon Datumanong.

GMA: Gov't hunting down Pentagon, Abu Sayyaf members because they are terrorists, criminals

MARAWI CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday stressed that the government is hunting down members of the Pentagon Gang and the Abu Sayyaf not because they are Muslims but because they are terrorists and criminals.

At the same, the President called on the Ulama or Muslim scholars and professionals to take an active part in the war against criminality and poverty in Mindanao.

In her speech before the Third National Conference of the Ulama Leagues of the Philippines here, the President said the Pentagon Gang and the Abu Sayyaf are two groups that are masquerading as champions of Islam.

“They are not champions of Islam. They are traitors to the tenets of Islam which is a religion of peace and forgiveness,” she said.

The President stressed that the administration is not waging a religious war but would want to promote religious understanding.

“Criminals are criminals whether they are Muslims, Christians or pagans,” the President said.

In her call on the Ulama to participate in keeping the peace and order in Mindanao, the President said the Ulama could take part in the war against criminality.

The President noted that the Ulama are also the key to solving poverty and the low development index in Muslim areas.

“Let's develop a culture of peace rather war, unite rather than divide, stay united for peace and development in the attainment of a strong Republic,” she said.

The President earlier attended the traditional Maranao wedding of Dr, Camid Jun Dumarpa, son of Congresswoman Faysah Maniri-Racman Dumarpa, to Fayda “Fay” Gandamra, daughter of Department of Transportation and Communication Secretary Salikh Dumarpa of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao.

In short remarks after the wedding, the President said the wedding marks anew the partnership of the national government and the ARMM government.

She said: “Hindi lamang sila ang kinakasal. Si Congresswoman Dumarpa ay kasama sa national government dahil congresswoman. Si Secretary Gandamra ay kasama ng Autonomous Region dahil DOTC Secretary ng autonomous region. Kaya itong araw na ito kinakasal muli yung national government at autonomous region ng Muslim Mindanao. Alam ko na si congresswoman kasama ang ibang congressman na narito ay susuporta dahil silang lahat ay ninong at ninang sa kasal na ito. Sila ay susuporta na maging matatag nitong pagkagabay sa trabaho ng national government at Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao. Alam ko rin na yung ating mga officials of ARMM ay tutulong din sa national government na magkaisa at ng ating patakaran para maging matatag ang ating Republika ng Pilipinas.”

GMA orders special prosecutor to handle atrocities, massacre cases against Abu Sayyaf

LUBAO, Pampanga — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Department of Justice (DOJ) to designate a special prosecutor to handle the charges against the Abu Sayyaf members who were responsible for the series of atrocities as well as in the massacre of about 20 families in Basilan last September.

During a luncheon meeting with local mediemen at the Plate and Platters Restaurant in Guagua, Pampanga, the President phoned Justice Undersecretary Manuel Teehankee and ordered him to assign a special prosecutor to handle the said case.

“I want a specific prosecutor to make sure that it moves fast and be given preferential attention,” the President said.

In her telephone conversation with Teehankee, the President asked the justice undersecretary to appoint Prosecutor Leo Dacera, who used to head the Witness Protection Program of the DOJ, to handle the case.

According to the President, Dacera will be working with the prosecutors in Zamboanga where the cases against the Abu Sayyaf are filed.

At the same time, the President called on the other victims of the atrocities of the Abu Sayyaf bandits to come out and file the necessary charges against the terrorist group.

On the issue of the American soldier who allegedly shot and wounded a suspected Abu Sayyaf member, the President said she has already instructed Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes to look into the said allegation.

“To go to the process of looking into it, Angie Reyes will take care of that,” the President said even as she challenged certain groups to also look into the atrocities committed by the Abu Sayyaf bandits.

“Why are they not looking on the violations of the Abu Sayyaf? That’s why I’m bringing out these atrocities that they have been doing,” she said.

GMA votes in Lubao barangay elections

LUBAO, Pampanga — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cast her vote in the barangay elections here in her home province, 13 days after the electoral exercise here was deferred by the Commission on Elections (Comelec) due to the flooding caused by the series of storms that hit the country.

The President, who arrived here at around 11:15 a.m., went straight to Precinct 1A of the Lubao East Elementary School at Barangay San Nicolas where she cast her vote for the election of barangay chairman and kagawads here.

She was listed as No. 84 in the roster of voters in the said precinct with voter’s identification number 25046663.

From the voting precinct, the President, together with her party, motored to the Plate and Platters Restaurant along the San Fernando-Olongapo Road in the municipality of Guagua for lunch.

Before reaching the restaurant, the President made a brief stop at a fruit stand along the highway in Guagua where she bought a kilo of ‘lanzones’ to the surprise of the lady fruit vendor and a handful of buyers.

At the Plate and Platters, the President, together with First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, treated her party and several local mediamen with delicious “Kapampangan” foods such as fried “pugo,” crispy pork rind (chicharon), chicken stew, fried pork and sautéed banana heart.

Among those who joined the President for luncheon were Pampanga Gov. Manuel “Lito” Lapid, Lubao Mayor Dennis Pineda, Region IV Philippine National Police (PNP) Director Reynaldo Berroya, PNP Provincial Commander Sr. Supt. Arturo Cacdac, and Philippine Army 7th Infantry Brigade Commander Major Gen. Alberto Braganza.

GMA to ask Powell for more humane, dignified treatment of deportees

GUAGUA, Pampanga — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she will personally take up with United States Secretary of State Collin Powell the “humane and dignified treatment” of overstaying Filipinos when the latter visits the Philippines early next month.

“I don’t want a ConAir type of deportation. They should be brought a few at a time through a commercial flight, and not a chartered flight with people handcuffed. I don’t think that’s the right way to treat Filipinos. I’m gonna take that one up” the President told reporters during a luncheon at a local restaurant here.

She was referring to the deportation of about 60 Filipinos who were arrested in the United States and sent back to the Philippines in a chartered airline.

ConAir was in reference to a recent movie starring Nicolas Cage and John Cusack where a group of the most dangerous and notorious prisoners in the US are transferred to a super-maximum security prison aboard a jail-like chartered plane.

It was reported that the Filipino deportees were handcuffed during the flight from the United States to the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport in Clark, Pampanga.

The President said she has already informed the United States government that she wants to discuss that issue with Secretary Powell during their meeting.

“I have already sent word because they asked me what would I want to take up. I want to take that one up, I said,” the President stressed.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also said she will asked Powell to convey her thanks to US President George W. Bush for ensuring the access of Philippine canned tuna to the United States as well as for the additional US$70 million additional support to the Philippines.

The President said she has written directly to Bush to help in maintaining the preferential treatment for Philippine tuna in the American market.

Yesterday, the President said the country’s fears that it will lose its preferential treatment for tuna in the US has been put to rest following the non-passage of a bill that would have allowed the duty-free entry of tuna from the Andes countries in Latin America.

She pointed out that it is important for her administration that the preferential treatment of the tuna exports to the US be maintained since the industry is the lifeblood of Muslims, Christians and Lumads in Mindanao.

No basing rights for U.S. in proposed MLSA, says Palace

Malacañang today assured the nation that the proposed Mutual Logistics Support Agreement (MLSA) would not allow permanent basing rights to the United States in the Philippines as feared by some sectors.

In an interview, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the MLSA is basically a document that would spell out accounting procedures on all military equipment and facilities that the US would bring into the country during training exercises.

He said that without proper accounting procedure, which is required by the US government, the Americans would be forced to bring the equipment back to the US instead of donating them to the Philippine military.

According to Bunye, the MLSA is based on existing pacts, like the RP-US Mutual Defense Treaty (MDT) and the Visiting Forces Agreement (VFA).

Bunye also said that incoming Foreign Secretary Blas F. Ople and Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes would make a full briefing on the provisions of the MLSA at the Senate.

He also said that the MLSA is not a treaty but only an executive agreement and, therefore, is not subject to ratification by the Philippine Senate.

In a related issue, Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has already instructed Secretary Reyes to conduct an investigation on the alleged involvement of an American soldier in the shooting of an Abu Sayyaf member in Basilan.

But Bunye lamented that some groups are quick to point out so-called abuses committed by the military and the American forces participating in the Balikatan exercises in Basilan but slow in reacting to atrocities committed by the Abu Sayyaf bandits.

“Bakit kapag yong Abu Sayyaf ang nakakapugot ng ulo, nakapatay ng tao, ay hindi sila ganoon kasigasig (Why is it that when the Abu Sayyaf beheads or kills innocent civilians or soldiers, they are not that aggressive,” Bunye said.

Yesterday in Lubao, Pampanga, the President herself ordered the Department of Justice to immediately file criminal charges against the Abu Sayyaf in Basilan for committing “rampant, very, very clear human right violations.”

The President said that reports relayed to her by Brig. Gen. Hermogenes Esperon, then commander of the Army's 103rd Brigade, said that in September last year, the Abu Sayyaf were engaged in beheading men, raping women in Balobo, Lamitan and Isabela in Basilan.

GMA says strong republic to uphold people's constitutional rights

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the government would uphold the constitutional rights of the people “with the full force of a strong Republic,” as she lashed at critics who claimed “we are engaged in human rights violations.”

The President made this promise as she received in Malacañang this morning victims of Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) atrocities committed last year.

The President received six of the victims, namely Glicería Ramirez, Lydia Ybañez, Hermie Revillas, Fernando Romeo, Ruel Abellon and Faizal Binasing.

The husbands of Ramirez and Ybañez were beheaded by the ASG.

The six are residents of Barangay Tairan, Lantawan and Barangay Balobo, Lamitan, all in Basilan province, the terrorist kidnap-for-ransom ASG separately raided in 2001.

She also promised swift justice for the ASG victims, as she said the government would continue its relentless fight against terrorists and criminals.

“One of the things we have had to undergo when we bear down strongly on terrorism and crime is the criticism, the allegation that we are engaged in human rights violations,” the President stressed.

But she told her critics: “We will not validate your propaganda by engaging in human rights violations.” She also noted that “many of you commit human rights violations yourselves.”

She warned that the government “shall not relent in the fight against terrorists and criminals hiding behind the veil of human rights advocacies or other seemingly deceptively legitimate political advocacies.”

The President asked her critics: “Why don’t you yourselves interview these victims of the Abu Sayyaf and see and listen for yourselves what it means to be a victim of the worst form of brutality and inhuman treatment?”

She recounted the ASG raid on the Golden Harvest farm in Barangay Tairan, Lantawan on June 11, 2001 when the ASG burned down 10 houses and the community chapel, abducted 15 men, beheaded two of their hostages and made the others slaves until the latter were rescued by the military in separate encounters from October to December that same year.

She also retold the story of 34 men, women and children the ASG, disguised as soldiers, took hostage from Sitio Baquinao, Barangay Balobo, Lamitan on August 2, 2001.

After forcing the victims to walk to neighboring Barangay Larbeco, the ASG beheaded nine of the 10 male hostages and shot and killed the last male hostage upon reaching Barangay Buhe Lange. Eleven of the hostages later escaped from their captors.

On August 5, 2001, the ASG released the remaining hostages, unable to get any ransom from the latter’s poor families and after feeling the pressure of a military pursuit, search and rescue operation, but not after raping some of the women hostages.

GMA vows swift justice for Abu Sayyaf victims

“We shall redeem your pain; we shall redeem your loss.”

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today echoed this vow before victims of Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) atrocities committed last year.

She also promised swift justice for the ASG victims, as she said the government would continue its relentless fight against terrorists and criminals.

The President received in Malacañang this morning six of the victims namely Gliceria Ramirez, Lydia Ybañez, Hermie Revillas, Fernando Romeo, Ruel Abellon and Faizal Binasing.

The six are residents of Barangay Tairan, Lantawan and Barangay Balobo, Lamitan, all in Basilan province, the terrorist kidnap-for-ransom ASG separately raided in 2001.

The President recounted the ASG raid on the Golden Harvest farm in Barangay Tairan, Lantawan on June 11, 2001 when the ASG burned down 10 houses and the community chapel, abducted 15 men, beheaded two of their hostages and made the others slaves until the latter were rescued by the military in separate encounters from October to December that same year.

She also retold the story of 34 men, women and children the ASG, disguised as soldiers, took hostage from Sitio Baquinao, Barangay Balobo, Lamitan on August 2, 2001.

After forcing the victims to walk to neighboring Barangay Larbeco, the ASG beheaded nine of the 10 male hostages and shot and killed the last male hostage upon reaching Barangay Buhe Lange. Eleven of the hostages later escaped from their captors.

On August 5, 2001, the ASG released the remaining hostages, unable to get any ransom from the latter's poor families and after feeling the pressure of a military pursuit, search and rescue operation, but not after raping some of the women hostages.

The President lauded Presidential Security Group head Brig. Gen. Hermogenes Esperon Jr., who headed the Lamitan rescue operation. Esperon was then the brigade commander in Basilan.

"This senseless massacre of Balobo and Tairan residents is only two of the so many ruthless and barbaric acts of terrorism perpetrated by the ASG showing total disregard for the human rights of the victims and abuses on women's chastity, honor and dignity," she said.

"This is a war (against terrorism and criminality) we will wage in behalf and with the rage of all the victims – those whose businesses were ruined by extortion, those held down in poverty by fear, those whose lives were snuffed out by addiction, and those taken hostage and killed," she added.

She said she had asked Southern Command chief Lt. Gen. Ernesto Carolina to bring to Malacañang those who suffered the Abu Sayyaf's brutality and inhuman treatment "so I could see them personally, empathize with them and help them."

She stressed that since she delivered her State of the Nation Address a week ago, she had been presenting criminals and felons caught in a renewed war against crime and terrorism. "But I think we must also take time to think about the victims in this war," she stressed.

Before the ASG victims, the President declared: "We shall not be deterred in the fight to the finish against the Abu Sayyaf."

She said the rights of the victims were of paramount importance, as she assigned more prosecutors to pursue the cases against captured ASG members and those who were still at-large.

Among those assigned were Fiscals Ricardo Cabaron and Peter Medalla and State Prosecutor Leo Dacera.

“I have asked the prosecutors in Region IX (Western Mindanao), as well as the prosecutors in the National Capital Region, to give me an update on the cases,” she said, pledging swift justice for the ASG victims.

GMA announces pricing incentive to cut power rates for big power users

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced a joint program agreed upon by the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) and the Manila Electric Company (MERALCO) to implement a pricing incentive that would reduce by about 25 percent the power rates for large industrial customers in the country.

In a meeting with various stakeholders in Malacañang, the President presented the program dubbed as Special Program to Enhance Electricity Demand (SPEED), a pricing incentive aimed at stimulating electricity demand and optimizing utilization of the existing power plants by offering discounts on the incremental consumption of power above the current base load (CBL).

With SPEED, the President said this will cut the price of electricity to P2.30 per kilowatt (kWh) from the present P3.10 for NAPOCOR industrial customers and P2.80 per kWh from the present P3.72 per kWh for MERALCO industrial customers.

“This administration is committed to reduce in the cost of doing business so that our industries can become competitive,” the President said.

She stressed that her administration wants to build a strong Republic by making a bureaucracy that is very strong and that can help in solving the country’s problem.

The adoption of SPEED is in response to the President’s directive in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22 “to work together to give price incentives to large users so that excess power can be utilized, economic activity can be encouraged, and jobs can be created.”

The pricing program will have to be approved by the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC).

In the same meeting, the President said a special task force will be created to implement the pricing incentive as well as to intensify its marketing.

The President noted that only one week ago, she asked NAPOCOR and MERALCO to get together to look for ways to give price incentives to the large users of electricity so that the latter can increase their demand and thus spur economic activity and generate employment.

Citing her pronouncement during her SONA, the President said her administration did not invent the Power Purchase Adjustment (PPA).

“We inherited this power problem. But as you can see, we don’t use our time pinning blame. We use our energy looking for solutions,” the President said.

On cross subsidies as in the case of the Visayas which is being subsidized by Luzon, the President saw the need to make the electricity system in that area more efficient so that they can reduce their cost before the removal can be implemented.

“What we are doing there is precisely the reform of the electric cooperatives which is our big, big source of the very high power rates in the Visayas,” she said.

On the other hand, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez said the Department of Energy (DOE) and the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) hope to replicate and expand the coverage of the program to other industries nationwide by talking to other distribution utilities such as the Davao Light and Power Co. (DALIGHT).

Perez said SPEED will be implemented in phases. The first phase will allow some 219 large industrial customers with a minimum of 1,000 Kwh monthly demand and above to avail themselves of the program starting September.

The second phase, he added, will allow another 437 industrial customers with a minimum of 500 kWh monthly demand to be included by October this year.

He said MERALCO and NAPOCOR will give fixed discount of 92-centavos and 80-centavos per kwh respectively for a minimum period of one month or a maximum of 24 months.

For his part, DTI Secretary Manuel Roxas II said the implementation of the pricing incentives is “another milestone in the administration’s resolve to lower the cost of power.”

“We know for a fact that high power cost has been one of the issues raised by the private sector with regard to their high operating cost,” Roxas said in a statement released to the media.

B.S.P. reports $1.891-B B.O.P. surplus from January-April

The country’s balance of payments (BOP) from January to April yielded a surplus of $1.891 billion, a reversal from the $755-million deficit recorded in the same period last year.

Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) Governor Rafael B. Buenaventura said the BOP surplus was brought about by the continued surplus in the current account and the strengthening of the capital and financial account.

Buenaventura said the current account surplus widened by 79.7 percent to $2.484 billion from the level registered in the period under review. This was attributed to the higher net inflow in income account, reduced net outflow in the services account and sustained surplus in the goods account.

In the goods account, exports rebounded in April, after more than a year of continued decline, with a year-on-year growth of 23.2 percent. This brought total exports for the first four months of 2002 to $10.577 billion or an increase of 0.6 percent compared to last year’s level.

Contributing to the turnaround was the robust growth in exports of machinery and transport equipment, processed food and beverages, and sugar and products, exports of which continued to surpass their performance last year.

More importantly, exports of electronics turned in an impressive year-on-year growth of 29.9 percent in April after fourteen consecutive months of contractions, bringing down the cumulative decline in electronics exports to 2.4 percent.

The stronger export performance reflected the increased demand from Asian markets particularly Taiwan, China, Korea, Malaysia and Hong Kong. Demand from these markets helped offset lower exports to the U.S. and Japan, the country’s traditional export destinations.

Meanwhile, imports of goods grew three months in a row beginning February after seven successive months of slump, climbing to a high of 18.8 percent in April. Imports for January to April reached $9.890 billion, up 3.0 percent from the level a year ago.

Imports of capital goods and raw materials and intermediate goods, particularly materials and accessories for the manufacture of electrical equipment, expanded by 8.8 percent and 5.6 percent, respectively, following inventory build-up by producers and manufacturers in anticipation of greater production demand ahead.

Higher remittances from overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) continued to be the main factor behind the more than twofold increase in the income account to $1.962 billion in January to April.

Remittances from OFWs, which comprised about 90 percent of gross income receipts, expanded by 45.3 percent to $2.827 billion during the review period. The growth in remittances reflected in part the 4.4-percent increase in the number of newly deployed OFWs during the first four months.

The trade-in-services for the first four months of 2002 registered a net outflow of $315 million, 47.5 percent lower than the net outflow recorded in the comparable period in 2001.

The narrowing of the deficit was traced mainly to lower net payment of transportation services and of miscellaneous business, professional and technical services that contracted by 39.2 percent and 65.0 percent, respectively, from the comparable levels last year.

Higher net receipts from travel services, which accelerated by 8.0 percent to $325 million also contributed to bring down the net service outflow during the period in review.

Prospects for the country's tourism industry remained positive following the on-going promotion efforts of the government to attract tourists and the relatively improving peace and order situation in the South.

The net outflow of the capital and financial account for the period in review was down to only $506 million from $2.311 billion in January to April 2001.

This developed following higher net direct investments inflows and the reversal of the portfolio investment account to a net inflow from a net outflow last year.

From a net outflow of $884 million in January to April 2001, portfolio investments for the first four months of 2002 reversed to a net inflow of $1.691 billion due to increased non-residents' investments in resident-issued foreign denominated debt securities, particularly government-issued medium-term bonds.

Meanwhile, non-residents' investments in equity securities were highest in April 2002 at $175 million, bringing the cumulative portfolio investments in equity securities to $297 million.

This level was more than twice that posted last year, reflecting renewed investor confidence in the local equities market.

Meanwhile, net inflows of direct investments nearly doubled to $1.504 billion compared to $808 million posted in the comparable period last year.

Behind this was the remarkable increase in non-residents' investments in equity capital and higher intercompany loans extended by parent companies to their local subsidiaries.

Non-residents' direct equity investments expanded by almost six times to $672 million during the first four months of 2002.

The bulk of the investments represented the $557 million worth of shares in a local brewery company purchased by a Japanese firm in March 2002.

The rest were directed to other manufacturing companies, services industries, and financial institutions.

Further, intercompany loans to local subsidiaries by their parent companies rose by 26.5 percent to $711 million.

The net outflow in the other investment account went up by 65.4 percent to $3.696 billion in the first four months of 2002 due mainly to the higher net deposits abroad by resident banks' to cover their clients' import payments and to diversify their portfolio.

As of end-April 2002, the BSP's Gross International Reserves reached $17.1 billion, up by 9.2 percent from the level in end-December 2001.

At this level, reserves were adequate to cover 5.5 months worth of imports of goods and payment of services and income.

Using other reserve coverage measures, the level of reserves was 3.2 times the level of the country's short-term external debt based on original maturity or alternatively, 1.5 times the amount of short-term external debt based on residual maturity.

24,000 jobs expected in call centers – DOLE

The country's growing call center industry is expected to generate some 24,000 jobs for skilled workers in the next two years, a report of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) showed.

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) said the TESDA report indicated that the training of more skilled workers in the government-supported power and telecommunications grid would ensure the industry's expansion in the Philippines.

Labor Undersecretary Manuel Imson, citing the TESDA's Labor Market Intelligence Report (LMIR), said the availability of highly-skilled Filipino workers fluent in English had continued boosting the country's bid to become the global "call center capital" and a major international e-services hub.

Earlier, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo stressed the country's vital role as a center of quality, world-class information and communications technology (ICT) services.

The President pointed to ICT as the "strategic tool that would propel the Philippines to its proper niche in the global village in the 21st century."

TESDA Director General Dante Liban earlier vowed to step up the agency's efforts in strengthening the country's human resource, especially in "priority" industries.

He said the TESDA "should now take a bigger leap" in ensuring workers' employability.

Released by the TESDA's Planning Office, the LMIR described the call center business as the country's "latest sunshine industry."

It noted the "vast growth potential and bright job prospects" in the field, as the Philippines has so far filled up only 10,000 "seats."

The TESDA said round-the-clock call center operations are handled by "seats" composed of two or three personnel – or customer service representatives – who manage telephone lines in work shifts.

"Customer services" handle client queries and complaints and provide solutions through telemarketing, computer product help desks, financial services, and assistance in transport and freight, insurance, hotels, and information technology.

Government experts have predicted that the country, with its English-speaking workforce and capacity to provide premium, multilingual, and multimedia services in wide-ranging ICT applications, could clinch the "call center capital of the world" status in this decade.

Citing Department of Trade and Industry projections, the LMIR also expected local call center revenues to increase from US$173 million to US$864 million in 2004, following the industry's growth by more than 200 percent from 2000 to 2001.

Efforts to push the industry and its employment opportunities, the LMIR added, were being fast-tracked, especially with the creation of an ICT corridor linking Metro Manila with the rest of the country.

There are 16 industry players comprising the Call Center Association of the Philippines, the LMIR said.

It specified that this year alone, at least four foreign call center companies have announced plans to establish offshore operations in the Philippines, which would generate some 2,000 jobs.

The giant Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company has also announced a $5.5-million investment in a 500-seat venture with Parlance Systems, Inc. and in other industry agreements.

The Reese Brothers in the US also bared plans to invest in a call center project at the Subic Bay Freeport Zone, which would open an additional 2,000 jobs.

The LMIR, however, cautioned that the country must continue to improve its infrastructure and labor competencies to attract more call center and other ICT investments.

To ensure quality, the TESDA has developed call center competency standards in linkage with the Contact Federation Philippines.

The TESDA said these standards – covering customer service representatives (Level 1), telesales or telemarketing officers (Level 3), and team leaders (Level 4) — have been readied for industry validation.

GMA swears in Ople as Foreign Affairs Secretary

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today swore into office former Senator Blas F. Ople as Secretary of Foreign Affairs in ceremonies at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall.

The Chief Executive, who assumed the position of Foreign Affairs Secretary in a concurrent capacity last July 16, relinquished her post following the oath-taking this morning of Ople, whom she appointed as Secretary of Foreign Affairs last July 23, 2002.

Ople, 75, replaced Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. who resigned earlier.

A native of Hagonoy, Bulacan, Ople was elected senator for a six-year term in 1992. He was re-elected in May 1998 for a second and final term.

Ople was chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations from 1992 until his appointment as DFA Secretary.

As chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Ople steered to approval some 37 international and bilateral treaties that have opened more links between the Philippines and the rest of the world particularly in trade, investments, employment, cultural exchanges, workers protection and the environment.

He successfully sponsored a resolution in 1999 on the ratification of the RP-US Visiting Forces Agreement which is an instrument that strengthened Philippine-US security alliance.

Together with then-Senator Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Ople sponsored the ratification of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade Uruguay Round creating the World Trade Organization.

Ople was also author of one version of the Overseas Voting Bill, a provision he authored in the 1987 Constitution, and has introduced a bill reforming the Philippine Foreign Service and the Department of Foreign Affairs.

Among the other many achievements of Ople during his stint as senator include the following: authored a bill updating the Philippine Immigration Act of 1940; strongly supported a new partnership with the United States based on sovereign equality and mutual respect; supported special efforts to link the Philippines to the economic dynamism of East Asia, especially the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

In September 1967, Ople was appointed Minister of Labor and Employment by the late President Ferdinand Marcos. He held the position from 1967-1971 and then from 1972 to early 1986.

Aside from Ople, President Macapagal-Arroyo also administered the oath of office to Silvestre Afable as Head of the Presidential Management Staff with a Cabinet rank; Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. as Officer-in-Charge-Chairman of the Dangerous Drugs Board; Miguel Coronel as executive director of the Dangerous

Drug Board; Anselmo Avenido, Jr, as Director General of the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency; Efren Fernandez, as Deputy Director General for Operations of the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency; and former Congressman Dante Liban as Director General of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA);

The President also swore in Police Deputy Director General Reynaldo Velasco and Police Deputy Director General Edgar Aglipay who were promoted to three-star rank.

Low income LGU's to benefit from studies worth P3-M

The National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) has completed 11 feasibility studies and capability building programs worth P3.07 million leading to the implementation of various livelihood and development projects for low-income local government units (LGUs).

The studies included the Pre-Feasibility Study (Pre-FS) on the ylang-ylang oil livelihood project in Anao, Tarlac; Pre-FS on the rehabilitation and improvement of water system and administration in Llanera, Nueva Ecija; capability building on project development for selected 4th to 6th class LGUs in Region VII;

Pre-FS on the Magdiwang mountaineering facilities project in Magdiwang, Romblon; FS on the Guian nature tourism destination in Guian, Samar; FS on jackfruit, banana, seaweed, lapu-lapu production in Region VIII; FS on the municipal waterworks improvement/expansion projects for six towns in Region X; and FS on the establishment of municipal grains center in Sta. Josefa, Agusan del Sur.

The completed studies were funded under the Project Development and Monitoring Fund (PDMF), the NEDA said in a report to Malacañang.

The PDMF has targeted 4th to 6th-class LGUs for project studies, master planning and capacity building programs for project development, monitoring and evaluation.

NEDA's regional offices under Deputy Director-General Augusto Santos administered the fund and would provide technical help to the LGUs.

Santos said the LGU of Anao, Tarlac saw the potential to develop an industry from ylang-ylang trees, which teem in the area. Some communities have been producing herbal oils and products out of it, but needed to boost their marketing and production capacities.

In Llanera, Nueva Ecija, the pre-feasibility study was conducted to explore ways to rehabilitate its water system, while the LGU of Magdiwang in Romblon made a survey to develop its mountaineering facilities.

The feasibility studies in Eastern Visayas were endorsed in 1999 by the Regional Development Council as part of its efforts to provide livelihood windows for 4th to 6th class municipalities in the region.

The FS on the Guian nature tourism destination was consistent with the region's objective to harness its potentials as an adventure destination of the world.

The project originally covered Sulangan alone, but was eventually expanded to include the entire town of Guian. Sulangan and its nearby islands in Guian, Eastern Samar have been declared a National Tourism Reserve and Protected Landscape/Seascape.

In Region X, four out of six municipalities in Bukidnon and Misamis Occidental have completed feasibility studies on the municipal waterworks improvement and expansion. These are in Pangantucan and Kadingilan in Bukidnon, and in Panaon and Sinacaban in Misamis Occidental.

Project funding came from the Financing from the Municipal Development Fund Office (MDFO). Two other towns – Dangcagan, Bukidnon and Medina, Misamis Oriental – were in the final stages of feasibility study completion.

The construction of the farm-level municipal grains center in Sta. Josefa, Agusan Sur was also underway, after a study proved the project viable. The Agencia Española de Cooperación Internacional (AECI) has agreed to finance the construction and operations of the Grain Center.

Aside from Sta. Josefa, the project covered the nearby towns of Bunawan, Trento and Veruela.

Santos said the 11 studies were the first batch of projects completed under PDMF with 31 more scheduled to be finished this year.

“Our work does not end here. To be really useful, we have to make sure these projects are actually implemented. The next step now is to source out funds. Projects must now be linked up with existing fund facilities,” Santos said.

533,318 OFW’s deployed since January, says P.O.E.A.

More than half a million Overseas Filipino Workers (OFW) were deployed worldwide as of July 21, a report of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) said.

POEA Administrator Rosalinda Baldoz said the OFW deployment reached 2,640 daily from January 1 to July 21, exceeding by 4.1 percent the 2,536 OFWs deployed daily in the same period last year.

The POEA earlier reported that increases in deployments in most OFW destinations balanced the slight decline in Hong Kong, which remained the second top OFW destination.

POEA statistics as of May showed that the number of newly hired and rehired OFWs rose in Japan, Taiwan, Singapore, the United Kingdom, and in major host countries in the Middle East.

Percentage-wise, deployment grew the highest in the following economies in the first five months of 2002 compared to last year’s figures: the United Kingdom, 48.6 percent to 7,461 from 5,021; Kuwait, 31.3 percent to 10,731 from 8,172; the United Arab Emirates, 16.8 percent to 22,187 from 18,989; Japan, 9.2 percent to 30,555 from 27,990; Singapore, 8.9 percent to 14,496 from 13,314; Taiwan, 3.9 percent to 20,815 from 20,027; and Saudi Arabia, 0.3 percent to 90,360 from 90,064.

OFW deployment in the first five months of 2002, however, declined in three other top destinations namely Brunei, by 8.4 percent to 5,774 from 6,306; Hong Kong, 6.5 percent to 54,071 from 57,826; and Italy, by 1.3 percent to 9,991 from 10,120.

Citing Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas figures, Baldoz said OFW remittances continued to push the economy, posting a 38.1-percent increase in the first quarter of 2002.

As of March 2002, remittances moved closer to the $2-billion (P100- million) level, increasing to $1.963 billion (P98 billion) from $1.422 billion recorded in the same period in 2001.

Land-based OFW remittances rose by 39.7 percent to $1.680 billion over last year’s $1.203 billion, while those of seafarers, by 29.6 percent to $283.7 million over $218.9 million.

Group expresses continued support for GMA

One of the civil society groups that came out to call for the resignation of former President Joseph Estrada has declared continuing support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her efforts to bring stability and prosperity to the nation.

The Cagayanos Advocacy for Reforms and Empowerment Inc. (CARE), in a statement, said it reiterates support for the President “lest we be included as among those civil society groups who are planning to withdraw support from the administration just because of their misplaced and unreasonable complaints.”

CARE was formerly known as Cagayanos Action for the Resignation of Erap.

The statement noted that at the height of the protest actions against Estrada, CARE members risked lives fighting for this administration.

CARE members stressed that they are glad to have been part of the movement that put the President into power. “Now, we are back to our normal, simple private lives with no demands from the President, not asking for favors or concessions because we continue to help her move our country forward through these difficult times,” the statement said.

CARE noted that the Council of Philippine Affairs (COPA), Bayan and other groups are “just too demanding, selfish and mayabang.”

It said that for as long as the President continues to do what is right for the country then COPA and Bayan and those “noisy” civil society groups will just be a minority. “Their noise will not matter because there are more Filipinos who are tired of all the rattling and bickering,” the statement said.

“We just want to help the President and we pray that everybody would help in these times of crises...our hope for this government lies in our observation that the President is gaining more momentum in her work. She is very serious and dedicated to serve the Filipino people,” it added.

E-procurement system now implemented in all departments, Cabinet told

All departments and department level entities have implemented the government electronic procurement system, or e-procurement, in line with the directive of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to reduce red tape and eliminate graft and corruption in state offices.

In a report to the Cabinet meeting held in Malacañang this morning, the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) said 57 percent of government entities lower than departments, 91 percent of government-owned and controlled corporations (GOCCs) and 72 percent of state universities and colleges have also adopted the e-procurement system.

The DBM said that it has also conducted a study, in collaboration with the Development Academy of the Philippines, on how to further streamline the delivery of six “critical” government services.

These include passport applications, issuance of business permits, retirement processing, veterans claims processing, application for licensure, examination and registration as professionals, and issuance of decrees of land registration.

According to the DBM, the study resulted in the reduction in the number of signatories in some transactions and the elimination of some unnecessary documentary requirements.

As part of its anti-graft campaign, the Department of Education (DepEd) said that it has implemented a “checkless payroll” for some 54,000 teaching and non-teaching employees.

Through this system, the DepEd said it was able to do away with the delays in paying the salaries of its personnel as well as illegal and unauthorized deductions.

The Department of Justice (DoJ) has amended the Rules of Court to further simplify and speed up the disposition of cases.

Under its anti-red tape and anti-graft program, the DoJ has also recommended to the Supreme Court that cases filed with Regional Trial Courts (RTCs) should be decided within one year and for the Bureau of Corrections to carry out the death penalty within six months from finality of high court decision.

At the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), a team has been constituted to institute reforms in labor adjudication processes of DOLE agencies with quasi-judicial and regulatory functions.

The Department of National Defense, on the other hand, reported to the Cabinet that it had reduced the processing of various DND clearances from 7-10 days to 5-7 days.

The DND also reported that the Philippine Veteran Affairs Office (PVAO) has eliminated its backlog of 43,540 claims for payment of pensions, of which 10,635 were approved and 32,905 were disapproved.

At the Department of Agriculture, a task force on smuggling was created to monitor all reports of smuggling of agriculture goods and commodities. It has also ordered the use of government ports for rice imports to ensure effective monitoring and control.

The Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG) has the following targets by June 2003:

- streamlining of simplified civil application systems in remaining 76 cities, 33 capital towns, four growth center municipalities and 1,278 other municipalities;
- installation of one-stop-shop processing centers in the remaining 48 cities, 27 capital towns, 23 growth center municipalities and 1,270 other municipalities; and
- establishment of customer complain desks in the remaining 69 cities, 27 capital towns, 24 growth center municipalities and 1,277 other municipalities.

Palace to propose P800.7-billion budget for FY 2003

Malacañang announced today that the national government will submit a budget proposal of P800.7 billion for fiscal year 2003, P20 billion more than the approved budget for FY 2002.

Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin said that the proposed 2003 General Appropriations Act will be submitted to the House of Representatives in the second week of August, at least one week before the deadline provided by the Constitution.

According to Boncodin, the budget proposal will be supported by revenues of P640.6 billion, of which P465.6 billion will come from the Bureau of Internal Revenue, P106.8 billion from the Bureau of Customs, and the balance from other agencies.

Boncodin said the budget deficit for 2003 is expected to be limited to 3.2 percent of the gross domestic product (GDP), which is lower than the targeted level of 3.3 percent of the GDP this year.

Meanwhile, the Development Budget Coordination Committee (DBCC) has affirmed its commitment to the P130 billion deficit target (2.3 percent of GDP) this year. For FY 2003, the deficit-to-GDP ratio of 3.2 percent will mean a P138-billion deficit.

Boncodin said that next year's budget will support the call of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to build a strong Republic.

Hence, the budget allocation will conform with the priorities laid down in the President in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA), particularly in eliminating graft and corruption, ensuring peace and order and the provision of basic public services in the education, health and social sectors, Boncodin said.

"The budget will continue to focus on the President's priority program in agriculture and agrarian reform, tourism, poverty reduction and law enforcement," Boncodin said.

She said that the details of the budget proposal would be made available to media and other interested parties as soon as the budget documents are ready.

Gov't seeks to stay within P130-B budget deficit target

The government hopes to meet its targeted budget deficit of P130 billion for this year.

If the deficit goes beyond the target, it will be so small that it may as well go unnoticed.

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin said today the government remained committed to keep itself within this year's budget deficit ceiling.

"Gagawin namin ang nararapat para ma-attain 'yun (We will do what must be done to attain it)," she said in a radio interview this morning.

Boncodin said she was confident the state's revenue earning agencies like the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and the Bureau of Customs (BoC) would likewise meet their target collections.

She said that during Tuesday's Cabinet meeting, BIR and Customs officials reported strides in their collections.

"Noong June at saka July, inaasahan namin na iyong kanilang shortfall ay lumiliit na (We expect a significant decrease in their shortfall in the June and July collections)," she added.

Further, the government's expenditures have normalized, she said, stressing that there was a big chance of recovery before the end of the year.

Boncodin also disclosed that the budget deficit for the year 2003 was pegged at P138 billion, or only 2.5 percent higher than this year's level.

"Our budget is getting bigger. We shall be proposing to Congress a budget of P800.7 billion next year. But this would only be 2.5 percent higher than the 2002 budget," she said.

The proposed budget, she stressed, would be spent on a comprehensive program that would promote investments in a strong Republic, "akmang-akma sa SONA (which is very relevant to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's second State of the Nation Address)."

The fight against graft and corruption in the bureaucracy would not need a big amount of money since it is regulatory in nature. But stabilizing peace and instituting order – through the police, military and judiciary — to promote investments would need funds, she said.

“We have allocated funds to recruit an additional 5,000 policemen, jail guards and firemen in the effort to bring about peace and order nationwide,” she added.

Another focus of next year’s budget is agricultural modernization. Boncodin disclosed.

She noted that under the law, the budget for agricultural modernization should not go below P20 billion yearly. Allocated for this purpose was a budget of P18.7 billion while the Land Bank of the Philippines would put in some P5 billion for credit

The government is also projecting economic growth at 9 percent in 2003, she added.

The sale of government shares in the Malampaya oil fields would help offset the budget deficit, Boncodin said.

“We have not entered this possibility in the main estimate, as the sale is still in the works,” she said.

GMA leads ground-breaking rites for Honda transmission plant in Laguna

BIÑAN, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led government officials and Honda Motor Company executives in ground-breaking rites for the P1-billion state-of-the-art transmission plant of the Japanese firm which is expected to begin operations in October 2003.

The President, assisted by Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II and Honda Senior Managing Director Katsuro Suzuki and other local officials of Laguna, first lowered the time capsule and officially led the ground breaking to start off the construction of Honda’s new transmission plant in ceremonies held this morning at the Laguna Technopark here.

The plant is a fulfillment of Honda’s commitment to expand its operations in the Philippines which was committed by the company to President Macapagal-Arroyo during her visit to Japan in May this year.

Suzuki, who welcomed the President upon her arrival at the company transmission site, said today’s ground-breaking ceremony marks the second phase of the project which is to supply transmissions to Honda’s global network.

He said transmission units from the Laguna factory will be exported to Honda factories in North America, Europe and Asia.

“Honda is initially investing 2 billion Japanese Yen to produce some 140,000 transmission units a year, and generate over 200 new employment opportunities,” Suzuki said.

When fully operational, Suzuki stressed that the transmission plant will generate US$65-million exports annually and additional jobs for highly skilled Filipino technicians.

The transmission project in Laguna, according to Suzuki, represents Honda’s commitment to “the long-term development of Philippine automotive industry.”

He pointed out that the Philippines under the stewardship of President Macapagal-Arroyo is an important part of his company’s “Made by Global Honda” Program “to optimize our global procurement and product supply by efficiently utilizing our factories around the world.”

Before the ground-breaking ceremony, the President was briefed by Honda Cars (Phil.) president Kenji Otaka on Honda Motors’ investments in the Philippines.

On the way to the ground-breaking area, the President inspected the various transmission units and other Honda products.

Ilocanos in U.S. voice support for GMA war on corruption, criminality, poverty

A large group of Ilocanos based in the different cities in the United States has expressed its support to the efforts of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to rid the country of graft and corruption, fight criminality and alleviate poverty.

This information was relayed by Rep. Roque Ablan, Jr. (First Dist.- Ilocos Norte) who just returned this week from a successful meeting with the leaders of the Ilocano National Association (INA) in the United States, which covers cities like Honolulu, Los Angeles, Las Vegas, San Francisco, San Diego, Washington, D.C., and New York.

According to Ablan, the INA, through its overall chairman Dr. Carlos Manlapaz, believes that Filipinos should unite to support the program of the President as stated in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22.

“We now have a sincere leader to pursue solutions to our country’s reputation,” Manlapaz was quoted as saying.

The INA executive also expressed the association members’ appreciation to the inspiring SONA of the President, saying that the country might have had good presidents in the past “but she has excelled because of her political will which is the one that really counts.”

“Let’s not judge her now, judge her later and give her a chance to prove that she is right,” Manlapaz said.

In a statement, Ablan cited President Macapagal-Arroyo for being the first President among many nations in the world to exert efforts to fight crime and terrorism in the aftermath of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in the United States.

During his trip to the United States, Ablan urged all Filipino expatriates there to get their act together and support the President.

GMA bares P205-M tax diversion scam, orders arrest, filing of raps against suspects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced “a major breakthrough in our campaign against graft and corruption.”

The President made the announcement at the National Bureau of Investigation.

She added that the BIR, working closely with the Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP), had just uncovered a massive tax diversion scam reaching P205 million under which payments to the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) were diverted to private accounts.

This was uncovered in the course of the BIR’s investigation of corporations that seemed to have stopped filing taxes and LBP’s ongoing review of large deposits and withdrawals in compliance with Republic Act No. 9160, otherwise known as the Anti-Money Laundering Act of 2001.

The corporations that the BIR investigated issued checks for payments to the bureau. As proof of tax payment, they presented receipts issued to them by the LBP. However, upon scrutiny by the BIR, the receipts were found to be falsified.

“I have directed Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to conduct a full-blown investigation of this scam, towards the early arrest of the suspects and the filing of plunder charges in court,” the President said.

She added that hold-departure orders shall be issued against the suspects as they are identified.

“The Republic will seek the maximum penalty against these economic saboteurs,” the President stressed, adding that “We will leave no stone unturned in this investigation.”

The President said LBP officials who did not report the huge transactions related to the scam will be investigated for violations of the Anti-Money Laundering Law.

She said that she had given instructions to LBP president Margarito Teves to undertake a thorough assessment to preclude a repetition of the scam and similar anomalies

The NBI reported that from January 2001 to June this year, about P205 million in check payments to the BIR were fraudulently diverted to four accounts held by fictitious persons at the LBP Binangonan Branch.

The President said that on her instructions, the NBI this morning filed charges for violations of the Anti-Money Laundering Law against Artemio San Juan, LBP branch manager in Binangonan.

“Mr. San Juan failed to disclose a report to top management and subsequently to the Anti-Money Laundering Council deposit transactions of these accounts whose amount exceeded P4 million per transaction or a series of transactions exceeding P4 million,” the President said.

She pointed out that under the Anti-Money Laundering Law, P4-million transactions have to be reported to the Anti-Money Laundering Council.

But in 17 instances, more than P4 million were deposited and San Juan did not report any of these, she said.

Last night, the NBI invited San Juan for questioning. And after investigation and gathering of evidence against him, he was placed under arrest.

The NBI today filed before the Chief State Prosecutors Office a 17-count violation of the Anti-Money Laundering Law against San Juan.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said San Juan will be held accountable for failure to report these big transactions, which is a violation of the Anti-Money Laundering Law as well as other unlawful acts that may be uncovered in the course of the investigation which is taking place.

The President said that further investigations will be conducted on the possibility of the existence of plunder or other violations by San Juan and other unknown personalities.

The President said that hold-departure orders will be issued against the suspects once they are identified.

At this juncture, the President introduced San Juan to the media.

“We will follow the paper trail from the BIR and the LBP to the last account in the hands of private individuals. No one will get away with stealing the money of the people. They will all face the harshest punishment under the law,” the President vowed.

“As I said in my State of the Nation Address (SONA), tax-evasion is a white-collar crime and the response is a white-collar response—systems improvement, audit, prosecution. But the punishment is blue collar, kalaboso (imprisonment),” the President reiterated.

The President stressed that “this will be an unrelenting effort of our strong Philippine Republic.”

She added that the tax collection system will be cleaned up as a primary institution of good governance.

“We will stamp out corruption and fraud in the bureaucracy. And we will call upon the business sector and the general public to support us in this campaign,” she said.

The President revealed that she would go to the BIR tomorrow because of another set of scam the bureau has also uncovered and that “we will be running after. And this is with respect to an under declaration of the Value-Added Tax (VAT) by at least 300 firms accounting for as much as P4 billion.”

“So you can see what we are doing. The tip of the iceberg is Mr. San Juan and the message we want to send is, we mean business,” the President said.

Upon arrival at the NBI the President was welcomed by Justice Secretary Perez, NBI Director Reynaldo Wycoco, and Land Bank president Teves.

Thereafter, they proceeded to Director Wycoco’s office, where they briefed the President.

Chief State Prosecutor Jovencito Zuño and Land Bank vice president Helen Pico were also in the briefing panel.

GMA presents Nigerian man arrested for cocaine trafficking

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented to the media a suspected Nigerian drug pusher who was arrested for the illegal importation of less than 700 grams of high-grade cocaine with a street value of about P7 million.

In a statement read at the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) headquarters in Manila, the President identified the suspect as Goswill Emenike, a.k.a. “Willy,” single, 29 years old and a resident of No. 16-A Queens Road, Project 8, Quezon City. The suspect is said to be a physical therapy graduate from St. Jude College in Manila.

The President said the arrest of the Nigerian national and the confiscation of cocaine is the first case that will be tried under the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002 or Republic Act 9165 which was passed under her administration.

“This is the first successful drug controlled delivery operation done in the Philippines and the first of its kind to be tried under the new drug law,” the President said.

The operation was a combined effort of the NBI, the Bureau of Customs under Commissioner Antonio Bernardo and the National Drug Law Enforcement and Prevention Coordinating Center (NDEPCC).

Last July 19, a United Parcel Service express parcel (overnight bag) bound for the Philippines was seized by the United States Customs at the Miami (Florida) International Airport.

It was revealed that the cocaine was packed in a brown plastic packet concealed inside the false bottom and cover of an overnight kit and was transported thru the UPS. The said package originated from Cochabamba, Bolivia.

On July 27, 2002, the US Drug Enforcement Administration requested the NBI, the BOC, and the NDEPCC to conduct a drug controlled delivery operation on the seized package to determine who were involved in the cocaine importation.

Later, the US Customs sent the cocaine package to the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) via Continental Air Micronesia and the package was received by the BOC which turned it over to US-DEA representative in Manila and to the NBI for a joint drug controlled delivery operation.

On July 29, 2002, the combined authorities, including two NBI men who posed as driver and delivery man of the UPS, went to the said address of the suspect and delivered the package consigned to a certain "Jorge Nmadu" and care of a person by the name of "Willy."

It was revealed that suspect Emenike personally received the package by presenting to the undercover agents his identification card.

The suspect was then placed under arrest and seized from him the overnight bag which contained the cocaine.

Emenike is now detained at the NBI Detention Center.

GMA signs EO reorganizing BIR

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has reorganized the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) to make it a taxpayer-focused organization so that it can meet its targets in revenue collection urgently needed to finance and sustain the government's vital economic programs.

In a luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps today, the President said she has signed a still unnumbered Executive Order to reinforce the BIR's tax administration and collection capabilities.

"There is going to be large taxpayers unit, a small taxpayers unit, tax-exempt taxpayers unit and another unit for government corporations," the President said.

The President, who will be attending the BIR foundation anniversary tomorrow, said that the reorganization of the revenue collection agency starts tomorrow, August 1.

A special feature of the EO is the creation of an operations group which is composed of the following services, each of which will be headed by an Assistant Commissioner:

1. The Large Taxpayers Service, which is composed of two divisions, namely: Banks, Insurance and Service Sectors Division, and Manufacturing, Industry and Agricultural Sectors Division;
2. The Excise Taxpayers Service, which will be composed of five divisions, namely: Alcohol, Wine and Liquor Sector Division; Tobacco, Cigar and Cigarette Sector Division; Petroleum, Mineral and Miscellaneous Sector Division; Data Reconciliation and Analysis Division, and Field Operations Division;
3. The Non-Large Taxpayers Service which shall be composed of three divisions; Banks, Insurance and Service Division; Manufacturing, Industry and Agricultural Sectors Division and Emerging Industries/Business Sector Division;
4. The Individual Taxpayers Service which is composed of three divisions – Compensation Earners Division, Mixed Income Earners Division, and Professionals, Self-Employed, Estates and Thrusts Division;
5. The Government and Tax-Exempt Entities Service will be composed of three divisions – Government Agencies Division, Tax-Exempt Entities Division, and Special Taxpayers Division.
6. The National Investigation Service;
7. The Regional Offices, which shall be directly under the supervision of the Deputy Commissioner for Operations but shall executive and implement the policies and programs formulated and prescribed by the Non-Large Taxpayers Service, Individual Taxpayers Service and the Government and Tax-Exempt Entities Service for the enforcement of the Internal Revenue Laws of the Philippines.

Each regional offices will be headed by a regional director.

GMA wants 300 firms prosecuted for under declared VAT

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to help the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) speed up the filing of cases against some 300 companies that under declared their value added taxes (VAT) that robbed the government of some P5 billion.

The President also asked Perez to complement the number of lawyers to attend on the cases so that their prosecution could proceed in haste.

“I asked Nani (Perez) to give (BIR chief Rene Bañez) 12 (lawyers). The 12 already went today and they have started working, and tomorrow (Thursday), I want to see the results of their work,” she said during the regular luncheon meeting with the Malacañang Press Corps at the State Dining Room.

She said she would attend the Ateneo Law School homecoming to seek help and “get volunteers for the 300 cases.”

“I’ll also get some of the lawyers who volunteered when I was Vice President, those who were helping to handle the cases against child abuse and exploitation of women. I’ll ask them to help ... to volunteer for this one,” she added.

The President said a branch manager could already be charged with VAT under declaration, adding that she had told the BIR to file the charges “right away.”

“We’ll see who is involved. We have to have (a group) like the Sycip, Gorres and Velayo (SGV) financial forensic to do the paper trail,” she said.

“I don’t want to pass judgment. But what I did say was that the bureaucracy does not run like a corporation. We have to strengthen the institution and bring in that ethic of effective implementation,” she added.

“I want fast action,” she stressed, adding that making the BIR as a showcase of good governance “is a continuing effort.”

She had asked (Press Secretary Ignacio) Toting (Bunye) to keep bringing out the reports about fighting corruption. Marami (There are plenty),” she said.

She also lauded BIR Commissioner Bañez for improvements in tax collections and for reaching his targets. “That was why we got upgraded from negative to stable,” she said.

Marohombsar can’t set demands for surrender, Palace says

Malacañang today reiterated its earlier stand that fugitive Pentagon kidnap gang leader Faisal Marohombsar should not set demands for his surrender to the authorities.

“The stand of the President has always been clear that Marohombsar cannot make these demands. So, if he wants to surrender to General Braganza, that’s up to him,” Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said today in his regular press briefing.

Bunye also said that henceforth, it would be Maj. Gen. Alberto Braganza, commander of the Army’s 7th Infantry Division, who will announce developments in the surrender feelers of Marohombsar.

Braganza, former senior military aide of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, has said that he was able to talk to Marohombsar by telephone Monday.

According to Braganza, Marohombsar has expressed his willingness to surrender, adding that he was giving the fugitive bandit leader to give himself up either today or tomorrow.

In debunking reports of a news blackout on Marohombsar, Bunye said that it was General Braganza himself who requested that any announcement about the fugitive's surrender should come from him so as not to derail the operations.

“So, that's what we are following,” Bunye said.

Top officials to brief Congress on MLSA, Palace assures critics

A three-man panel composed of Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople and Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes will present separate briefings to the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives as soon as they finished the final draft of the Mutual Logistics Support Agreement (MLSA).

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said the MLSA draft has not been finalized yet.

“The reason why they are not releasing the draft yet, to tell you the truth, the draft has not yet been finalized,” Bunye told reporters.

Under the updated draft dated last July 26, the Press Secretary said several provisions have been revised drastically to incorporate the suggestions made by Vice President and former Foreign Affairs Secretary Teofisto Guingona.

Bunye said the latest draft was also discussed in a meeting yesterday at the Palace attended by Ople, Perez, Reyes and other Cabinet officials.

In that meeting, he said even Education Secretary Raul Roco had some fine points to add to make the MLSA more acceptable.

Bunye expressed the hope that the final draft will be acceptable to the initial critics of the MLSA.

According to Bunye, there are several key provisions which, if incorporated, will address the objections raised by even the harshest critics of the MLSA.

He said under the agreement, there is a provision that will address the basing rights, prohibiting the construction and establishment of US military base facility or permanent structure.

Another provision, he said, is that storage units and ports shall at all times remain under the control and supervision of the host country.

Bunye stressed that under the draft agreement, the MLSA will be only for the period of five years and can be terminated upon six months notice by either party.

As proposed, the agreement will be signed by Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) Chief of Staff Roy Cimatu and the Commander in Chief of the US Pacific Forces (CINCPAC), Admiral Thomas Fargo.

The MLSA, Bunye said, is not peculiar to the Philippines since it is also being used in 51 other countries, including big powers such as Canada, Britain and Germany.

“It's not something extraordinary as far as MLSA agreements are concerned,” he pointed out.

As soon as the final draft is completed, Bunye said a copy will be immediately sent to the counterpart panel in the United States.

He further explained that the MLSA, being an executive agreement, can be signed by other officials of the government.

“It is the same agreement being signed in other countries wherein the chief of staff signed their agreements,” he said.

GMA to discuss with Metro Mayors proposed control over police

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she will meet again with the mayors of Metro Manila to discuss proposals on returning to them the administrative control over members of the Philippine National Police (PNP).

“If the Executive Order is not yet there, then we will sit down and draw it up together,” the President said during her regular luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps.

The President said she wanted to give the Metro Manila Mayors, who are deputies of the National Police Commission, the power to hire, fire and discipline the police, subject to appeal.

“Because right now, their only power is to recommend the hiring, firing or disciplining,” the President said. But under the Executive Order that is being drafted, the mayors can “do this but subject to appeal.”

The President announced her approval of the proposal during the joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and the Regional Peace and Order Council of Metro Manila at the Manila Hotel on July 16.

The President then instructed PNP Chief Hermogenes Ebdane Jr. to work out within two weeks the details of an Executive Order that would be the guiding directive for the Metro Manila Mayors.

GMA cites Judge for bravery in convicting kidnap-for-ransom suspects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated Pasay City Regional Trial Court Branch 116 Judge Eleuterio Guerrero for convicting the kidnapers of Fritzie So who was abducted for ransom on November 12, 2000.

Judge Guerrero found accused Roberto Yap Obeles, Johnny Bautista, and Jerry Morales guilty beyond reasonable doubt for kidnapping Ms. So and sentenced them to die by lethal injection.

The Chief Executive said that "brave judges" such as Judge Guerrero "who convict kidnapers and others who commit heinous crimes should be encouraged."

The President said there had been accusations by some sectors that "we only have pictures of arrests but do we ever have convictions?"

"So I want to go there to congratulate the judge," the President said. She said she will also congratulate and encourage at least two people of Justice Secretary Hernando Perez who helped in the prosecution of the case.

Saying there is no monetary reward for judges and prosecutors for doing their job in the war against heinous crimes, the President said "I guess the most that we can do is put them in the front page and thank them for a job well done."

This was the first kidnap-for-ransom case in which the accused were meted the death penalty after the President declared an all-out war against crime and terrorism in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22.

Ople appointment to DFA post gets positive response from the public

The appointment of former Senator Blas F. Ople as foreign affairs secretary has elicited a positive response from the public despite strong objections by some civil society groups.

A survey conducted by HB & A Research International Inc. from July 26 to 29, 2002 showed that 51 percent of the respondents said they agreed with the appointment of Senator Ople as foreign secretary despite objections raised by some members of the civil society.

The survey result showed that only a fourth, or 23 percent, disagreed with Ople's appointment, while 26 percent were undecided.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo appointed Ople as foreign affairs secretary on July 23. He was sworn in to his new post on July 30.

She personally chose Ople to handle the DFA after the resignation of Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. because of his outstanding achievements as a senator, particularly in the field of foreign policy relations.

A native of Hagonoy, Bulacan, Ople was elected senator for a six-year term in 1992. He was re-elected in May 1998 for a second and final term.

Prior to his appointment, Ople was chairman of the Senate committee on foreign relations from 1992 to 2002.

As chairman of the foreign relations committee, Ople steered to approval some 37 international and bilateral treaties that have opened more links between the Philippines and the rest of the world, particularly in trade, investments, employment, cultural exchanges, workers protection and the environment.

Ople successfully sponsored a resolution in 1999 ratifying the RP-US Visiting Forces Agreement, an instrument that has strengthened Philippine-US security alliance.

GMA ratings rise in Metro Manila, says HB&A survey

A few days after President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo delivered her State of the Nation Address (SONA) centering on the idea of building a strong republic, the President's satisfaction rating rose significantly and her approval rating marked a directional increase, compared to a month ago in a public opinion survey conducted by HB&A Research International.

The President's satisfaction and approval ratings were measured in a HB&A study made from July 26 to 29 and from June 22 to 25. Both studies covered 300 respondents in 17 cities and towns in Metro Manila. Both had a margin of error of +/- 5.7 percentage points.

Last week's study showed that 48 percent of the respondents were "nasisiyahan (satisfied)" with the President's performance, as against 40 percent in the June study, or an increase of +8 percentage points. Dissatisfaction dropped to 29 percent in the July study from 32 percent in June.

The 8-percentage points increase in the satisfaction rating and the 3- percentage points decrease in the dissatisfaction rating resulted in a significant and meaningful +11 points increase in the net margin of satisfaction, from +8 in the June to +19 in the July study.

The President's "sumasang-ayon (approval)" rating also increased to 53 percent in July from 50 percent in June.

The study further showed a significant decrease in the number of respondents who said they did not approve (hindi sumasang-ayon) of the way the President handled her job, registering 29 percent in July as against 38 percent in June.

As a result, the net margin of approval rose by 12 percentage points to +23 in July from +12 in June.

The HB&A study said the two popularity rating indicators – satisfaction and approval – could not be compared to one another since questions asked were different. The study suggested the need to track and compare each rating over a period of time. But the same indicators could provide comparative perspective to survey results obtained by other agencies.

In the June study and consistent with the approval and satisfaction ratings, 42 percent of the respondents said they "liked her" when asked how they felt towards Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo as a person, not as President.

However, compared with the disapproval or dissatisfaction ratings, only 11 percent of the respondents said they "disliked" Mrs. Macapagal Arroyo.

The HB&A study explained that when the respondents rated the President, they looked at performance where many variables interplayed. But when asked about feelings, they expressed deep sentiments, particularly those who showed dislike.

About 37 percent said they “didn’t know” or “can’t say” if they liked her or not, indicating a large group still did not feel “connected enough” to even give a net feeling towards the President as a person.

In the July study, when the level of unqualified trust or confidence towards the President was measured, 37 percent of the respondents expressed a certain level of trust while 23 percent said they did not trust her.

With both positive and negative scores posting comparatively lower figures than approval or satisfaction ratings, the percentage of those who could not respond was a high 40 percent, consistent with the June study result on feelings toward the President as a person.

Other findings in the July survey showed that:

Metro Manila residents did not seem aware of the SONA, considering there was adequate tri-media coverage. Only 45 percent said they were aware of the SONA, versus 55 percent who said they were not. Outside Metro Manila, the awareness level may even be lower considering lower media penetration.

Despite relatively good performance ratings for the President, there was still a need to address the level of hope especially in so far as the prospect for an improved economy was concerned. Only about 25 percent said they expected conditions to improve in the next 12 months while 15 percent said they expected conditions to worsen. A high 59 percent said they were on a wait-and see stance.

Despite strong objections from some sectors of civil society, especially in the Metro Manila area where such sentiments were highlighted by tri-media, 51 percent said they “agreed with the appointment (of Sen. Blas Ople as Foreign Affairs Secretary) while 26 percent went undecided.

As regard proposals to transfer police administrative control and supervision from the National Police Commission to the respective Metro Manila mayors, only 38 percent agreed while 43 percent disagreed, with 19 percent saying they didn’t know.

When asked if they wanted to “scrap the color coding scheme” in Metro Manila, 43 percent agreed while 47 percent said otherwise. Only 10% had no opinion, most probably because they were not directly affected as users of public transportation.

Finally, in response to the suggestion to use the military in the fight against illegal drugs, a high 59% agreed. For reasons not probed in the survey, 28% disagreed while 13% were undecided.

HB&A said it would track and report, at least on a monthly basis, the sentiments of Metro Manila residents covering current social, political and economic issues. Its next report would be issued in August.

HB&A — incorporated in 1997 by lawyer Eduardo delos Angeles, Jose Sandejas and Antonio Abaya and counting Jose Pardo and Henry Ligot among its founding members – conducts regular market researches for its clients, among which are the country’s top 1,000 corporations.

HB&A also does market development researches for foundations and non-government institutions, as well as opinion surveys as part of its public service.

Metro Manilans give thumbs up to GMA’s order for military to join anti-drug campaign

Majority of the residents in Metro Manila agreed with the decision of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to use the military in the stepped-up campaign against the manufacture and trafficking of illegal drugs.

A survey conducted from July 26-29, or just four days after the President delivered her second State of the Nation Address (SONA), showed that 59 percent agreed with her decision to use the resources and manpower of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) in the anti-drug campaign.

The survey was conducted by the prestigious HB&A Research International among 300 respondents, picked at random from the 17 cities and municipalities in Metro Manila.

The research firm said that their survey had a margin of error of +/- 5.7 percentage points.

Thirty four percent among the respondents “strongly agreed” to the President’s decision, while 25 percent “somewhat agreed.”

The survey also showed that only 28 percent of the respondents said that they disagreed with the decision, while 13 percent was undecided.

In her SONA, the President announced that she has ordered the AFP to field military intelligence units and soldiers in drug raids in support of civilian law enforcement units.

The President said that henceforth, the drug menace is now a national security problem instead of just a police matter.

She said that drug lords will now be treated as enemies of the state.

“In this war with the drug trade there will be no compromise and no quarter, not for fear or favor,” the President said in her SONA.

GMA warns erring firms: pay right taxes or face full force of law

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today warned company owners to pay the correct tax or face the full force of the law.

“Kaya kung alam ninyo na kayo ay nandadaya, bago kayo maabutan ng batas, amyendahan na ninyo ang inyong VAT declaration o magbayad na kayo ng tamang buwis (If you know that you are cheating, correct your value added tax – VAT — declaration and pay the right taxes before the long arms of the law catches up with you),” the President said.

The President aired the warning during a visit at the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) head office in Quezon City where she was given an update on the agency’s bid to speed up the prosecution of some 300 companies who have under declared their VAT.

She said the government had “uncovered tax cheating of P400 million, but still counting, because this only covered three of the 19 revenue regions.”

She directed the BIR to file cases against the tax cheats, using the full force of the law without fear or favor, as she stressed during her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22.

“Without fear, especially on the part of BIR Commissioner Rene Bañez, because you can see that there is this move to malign his integrity,” the President told members of the media in a press briefing.

She disclosed that the BIR had filed collection and criminal cases against the Southland Security and the Coffel Air Industries today. She said the government should collect its money and send the perpetrators to jail.

Next week, five more cases would be filed. By the end of August, all 300 companies found to have under declared their VAT, at an average of 63 percent, would be charged.

She added that the BIR has closed down two firms because of tax cheating. Closed were the Susana Martin Bulacan and the New San Agustin Oil Manufacturing in Malabon.

Susana Mart, however, amended its VAT and has reopened. Instead of the erroneous VAT declaration of only P200,000, the firm is now paying some P1 million. This is because of law enforcement, she said.

The President had earlier directed Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to assign 12 lawyers from the Office of the Corporate Counsel to help the BIR's in-house lawyers in prosecuting the 300 cases.

She also said that she would seek lawyer-volunteers from among the alumni of the Ateneo Law School to help in the cases.

She commended VAT Task Force Head Deputy BIR Commissioner Lita Aguirre for her technology-based audit, saying the audit of the 300 firms was done not on location but right in the BIR's computer center in Quezon City.

She also acknowledged the Philippine Institute for Development Studies under the National Economic and Development Authority for facilitating the development of innovative benchmarking system for the VAT.

Together with the VAT Management System developed by the Department of Finance, the system of identifying firms to be audited has been made easier, the President said.

Governors' league declare full support for MLSA

Stressing that the administration needs all the cooperation and support necessary to build the foundations of a strong republic, the League of Provinces of the Philippines (LPP), the association of governors around the nation, today declared full support for the Mutual Logistics Support Agreement (MLSA), the imminent agreement between the Philippines and the United States.

In adopting resolution No 2002-23 in a meeting in Davao City, the LPP noted that the MLSA is in consonance with the RP-US Mutual Defense Treaty (MDT) of 1951, the Visiting Forces Agreement (VFA) of 1999 and the United Nations Charter.

“Relevant resolutions pursuant thereto, thus requires no ratification by the Senate,” the LPP said.

The LPP further noted that the MLSA can contribute immensely to our efforts to modernize the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

It would “thereby enable our government to promptly and efficiently respond to internal and external threats to our stability, peace and security.”

The resolution was approved by LPP Secretary General and Bulacan Governor Josefina de la Cruz and attested by the national president and Davao del Norte Gov. Rodolfo del Rosario.

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye earlier said the MLSA would not allow permanent basing rights to the US in the Philippines as feared by some sectors.

He also stressed that the MLSA is based on existing pacts, like the RP-US MDT and the VFA.

He also said that the MLSA is not a treaty but only an executive agreement and, therefore, is not subject to ratification by the Philippine Senate.

Bunye has assured that Foreign Secretary Blas F. Ople and Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes would make a full briefing on the provisions of the MLSA at the Senate.

GMA to receive U.S. State Secretary on Saturday

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will receive United States Secretary of State Colin Powell in Malacañang on Saturday as the latter concludes his eight-nation Asian tour to strengthen the global coalition against terrorism.

In a press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye today said Powell, who is scheduled to arrive in Manila Friday evening, would briefly meet with the President and Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople.

Bunye said Powell would also hold a press briefing right after his meeting with President Macapagal-Arroyo.

In their meeting, the President and Secretary Powell are expected to discuss the continuing cooperation between the Philippines and the US on the fight against global terrorism as an offshoot of the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks in the United States.

In a speech last month before the Asia Society in New York City, Powell expressed elation over the Philippine-US cooperation against terrorism.

“I am proud, so proud, that American forces are helping to train and equip their Philippine Army counterparts to combat groups such as the Abu Sayyaf, a terrorist organization which regularly kidnaps, as you know too well, civilians for ransom,” he said.

On the issue of the US role in the Asian region, Powell said the United States would continue to be the “balance wheel of security in Asia” upon which the region’s stability depends.

“There should be no doubt that America’s commitment to Asia’s security and stability is an enduring one, for Asia’s sake and for our own. We are a Pacific power. We will not yield our strategic position in Asia,” the secretary said

A retired US military leader, Powell is the first black secretary of state in US history.

The son of Jamaican immigrants, Powell was born in New York City and attended the City College of New York as a cadet in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

After serving two tours of duty in the Vietnam War (1962-1963, 1968-1969), he held a succession of important military and civilian positions, becoming national security adviser to President Ronald Reagan in 1987.

Promoted to the rank of four-star general in April 1989, Powell was named chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in August, the first black officer to hold the nation’s highest military post.

Powell played a pivotal role in planning and executing the invasion of Panama in 1989 and the Persian Gulf War (1991).

He retired from the military in September 1993.

Bangko Sentral keeps policy rates steady

The Monetary Board (MB) of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) today kept the key policy rates unchanged at 7 percent for the overnight borrowing or RRP rate and 9.25 percent for the overnight lending or RP rate.

The BSP's policy rates have been on an even keel since March 15, a report reaching Malacañang said.

Based on the assessment of a comprehensive set of information bearing on the inflation outlook, the MB believed that inflation would continue to be generally benign in the near term due mainly to positive supply-side factors.

These factors included expectations of adequate food supply, recent moderation in oil prices and the broad stability in the exchange rate as well as continued softness in demand conditions, although there were signs of improving economic activity.

But the Board said that while the near-term risks to inflation have diminished, inflationary headwinds could still surface over the policy horizon.

These pressures could be in the form of uncertainties concerning the full impact of the El Niño weather phenomenon on agricultural output, a possible uptrend in world oil prices and the adjustments in power and water rates and their expected second-round effects on the prices of other commodities and on wages.

The MB also pointed out that the stimulus from the external sector could not be as strong as earlier anticipated, given the uncertainty about the timing and pace of the economic upturn in the United States and other major economies.

Based on these considerations, the Board viewed that monetary policy should continue to focus on ensuring conditions to strengthen domestic demand.

This involved keeping policy rates steady to foster a low market interest rate environment, one that remained supportive of the economy's growth objective while ensuring that price pressures would be well contained.

GMA not focusing sight on 2004 but specific goals, says Palace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is not concentrating her sights on the 2004 presidential elections but is carrying on specific programs to attract more investments, fight crimes and eradicate poverty within the decade.

"Ang kanyang pinagtutuunan ng pansin ay hindi muna yung elections ng 2004 (Her administration is not focusing on the 2004 elections)," Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said in an interview.

Bunye also noted that in the reported IBON survey, which reportedly showed the President trailing behind other personalities if elections were held today, 27 percent of those surveyed was undecided.

“In my opinion, the elections are still far, and second, we are seeing that not everyone is giving his opinion as to whether they would vote for one particular candidate or not,” Bunye said.

Bunye cited the President’s improved satisfaction in another independent survey as indicative of the real sentiment of the people.

A few days after the President’s State of the Nation’s Address, her satisfaction rating rose significantly and her approval rating marked a directional increase, compared to a month ago in a public opinion survey conducted by HB&A Research International, Bunye said.

The HB&A study showed that 48 percent of the respondents were “nasisiyahan (satisfied)” with the President’s performance, as against 40 percent in the June study, or an increase of +8 percentage points. Dissatisfaction dropped to 29 percent in the July study from 32 percent in June.

“Yun ay magandang indikasyon na unang una, sa SONA, pinakita ng ating Pangulo, ito yung aking nagawa at ito yung aking gagawin. Diyan nag-react itong mga tao (This is a good indication that the President was able to convey in her SONA the programs that she had accomplished and what she intends to do. This is where the people reacted positively),” Bunye said.

The President’s satisfaction and approval ratings were measured in a HB&A study made from July 26 to 29 and from June 22 to 25. Both studies covered 300 respondents in 17 cities and towns in Metro Manila. Both had a margin of error of +/- 5.7 percentage points.

GMA to employers; avoid driver-kidnapper, use gov’t background check systems

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged employers to be extra careful in hiring family drivers who could later turn out to be a member of a kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gang.

The President called on people to avail themselves of government services that verify if the person to be hired has criminal records. This included police and barangay clearances.

She also disclosed government moves to make employers avail themselves of National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) clearances on-line.

She said she would ask Justice Secretary Hernando Perez if the NBI on-line services have been put in place.

“I urge everyone to use this means as a first line of defense against hiring potential threats to your family safety,” she said during the presentation of four KFR suspects said to have been involved in the abduction of 15-year-old Kathleen Pacquing last July 23.

The Pacquing’s family driver, Nelson Pilar, was one of the suspects presented. Pacquing was freed on July 30. Police arrested Pilar and three others on Thursday (August 1) in their lair in Imus, Cavite.

A report from the Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER) unit named the three other suspects as Joseph Randy Mendoza, 32; Maria Victoria Acuatín, 38; and Joselito Mortega, 31. Still at large is Joselito Diaz.

The PACER report said Pilar admitted to have provided information on the victim’s movements.

Most of the suspects have been earlier charged with various crimes to include homicide and rape, the report added.

The President lauded the joint elements of PACER, National Capital Regional Police Office (NCRPO) and Imus Police Station for their quick action.

The police “is working double time hunting down the 21 target KFR groups,” she said, adding that the police have also been solving current cases while rescuing Kidnap victims and arresting their kidnappers.

“Every arrest and every rescue brings us closer to our goal. There will be no rest until kidnappers get the justice they deserve,” she stressed.

Philippine National Police Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane Jr. presented the four suspects to the President and Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr.

The President said this was not the first time that a family driver has been involved in a KFR incident.

She recalled that Florante Concepcion, arrested by the PACER unit last July, was part of the group that abducted his employer, Mary Grace Cheng Rosagas, in June.

Concepcion was also presented to the President in Malacañang last July 21, a day before she delivered her State of the Nation Address (SONA) that focused on the government’s tenacious fight against criminality.

Meanwhile, the Chief Executive handed over the reward money worth some P853,000 to a friend of a police informant for the latter’s contribution to the successful police bust of a shabu laboratory in Varsity Hills in Quezon City last July 18.

During the operation, the NCRPO Metro Manila Drug Enforcement Group under Police Senior Superintendent Nicasio Radomal seized 44.9 kilos of shabu, 50.67 kilos of epidrine and equipment for making shabu. Also arrested during the bust were seven Chinese nationals.

NEDA says P102-M Caraga food improvement sufficiency program under way

The Philippine and Spanish governments have signed a memorandum of agreement (MOA) to improve food sufficiency, specifically rice and fish, in the CARAGA region.

The National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) signed for the Philippine government while the Agencia Espanola de Cooperacion Internacional (AECI) represented the Spanish government.

A NEDA report said the MOA provided a program worth some P102 million expected to benefit the people in four towns, namely, Jabaonga in Agusan del Norte; Prosperidad and Sta. Josefa in Agusan del Sur; and Tandag, Surigao del Sur.

The report said the program would be carried out in two phases.

Phase I, which covers one year, costs P42.12 million with the AECI providing P36.92 million and the municipal governments sharing P5.266 million as counterpart fund.

The MOA covers only Phase I which has four components: the putting up of three farm level grains center (FLGC) and of 24 small warehouses in the identified towns; provision of facilities for Tandag fishport; strengthening of people’s organization and setting up of a project management office.

The FLGCs will be equipped with mechanical dryers, rice mills, moisture meters, hauling trucks and other equipment needed for packaging and handling milled rice.

The small warehouses will be provided with a flatbed mechanical dryer. The FLGC component includes the provision of operating capital for partner-cooperatives.

For the Tandag fishport, only the preparation of a feasibility study and detailed engineering for the port facilities will be undertaken. But with the implementation of Phase II, an ice plant and cold storage and a market center building for the fish port will be built.

Phase II, to be implemented in two years, costs P59.73 million with P40.13 from the AECI and the rest, to be shouldered by the respective municipal governments.

Implementing agencies of the program are the NEDA-Caraga Region and the four municipalities.

Palace looking for Desierto's successor

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is looking for a person with integrity and competence to replace outgoing Ombudsman Aniano Desierto.

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye today said that as far as the President was concerned, the recommendation of Judicial Bar Council (JBC) would be respected.

“Naniniwala siya sa kakayanan ng JBC na mag-submit ng mga pangalan ng mga tao na talagang may sapat na qualification (The President believes in the ability of the JBC to recommend persons who qualify),” Bunye said during his regular press briefing.

He said he still had no idea who the potential candidates were for the position Desierto would vacate. Desierto's term ends today.

He added that the JBC, headed by Chief Justice Hilario Davide, Jr., would be releasing only the list of candidates until the position has been formally vacated.

Besides Davide, the JBC is composed of two Supreme Court justices and representatives from the Senate, the House of Representatives and the Department of Justice.

GMA presents to media 3 suspected dollars forgers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented to the media at the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) headquarters three suspected counterfeiters and thousands of pieces of fake United States currency and bank notes totaling quadrillions of dollars which were confiscated during separate operations in Manila and Quezon City.

In a statement, the President identified the arrested suspects as Rustico Cabillar, 46, a resident of Sarmiento, Novaliches, Quezon City; Marnelli Pepino, 22, also of Novaliches, Quezon City; and Jose Rogando of Tondo, Manila.

The President said the seizure of the counterfeit money is so far the biggest made by government authorities.

The suspects were arrested during joint operations of the NBI and the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP).

Investigation report showed that the suspects tried to sell several pieces of $100 bills to NBI informants at the cheap price of P600 each.

Yesterday, the combined NBI-BSP operatives caught suspect Rogando in the act of receiving marked money after the latter handed over 150 pieces of fake US dollar bills to a government agent posing as a buyer in Sta. Cruz, Manila.

During investigation, Rogando pointed to Cabillar as the source of the fake US bills.

Seized from the suspects were numerous US Federal Reserve notes, Wells Fargo bank certificates, thousands of fake $100 bills, transparencies, printing equipment and other paraphernalia that include computer and several compact discs.

The suspects, who are currently detained at the NBI Detention Center, were charged with violation of Article 168 of the Revised Penal Code.

GMA, Powell to meet tomorrow in Malacañang

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will bat for a more humane treatment of Filipino deportees from the US, greater access of Philippine tuna in the US market and the lifting of a negative travel advisory on the Philippines when she meets United States Secretary of State Colin Powell tomorrow, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said today.

On the eighth and last leg of his Asian tour, Powell is due to arrive in Manila this evening fresh from signing a pact in Brunei with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) aimed at making the region more responsive to future terrorist threats.

Bunye said the President is expected to meet with Powell around 9 a.m. in Malacañang.

The President is also expected to likewise raise the invitation for President George W. Bush to visit the Philippines in the near future, Bunye said.

Bunye said the President would also take up the plight of Filipino World War II veterans in her meeting with the US official.

The Mutual Logistics Support Agreement (MLSA) is not expected to be taken up as it is not included in the talking points between the Philippine and US sides, Bunye said.

“Definitely, the President announced that they will not be discussing the MLSA and we have indications also from the other side that Secretary Powell will not bring that up,” Bunye said.

Bunye said the President’s meeting with Powell would be “a very brief five-minute meeting.”

The two would move on to a small-group meeting followed by an expanded meeting with other government officials.

Around 10:30 a.m., Secretary Powell and Foreign Secretary Blas Ople will hold a joint press conference at the Heroes Hall.

Under the US-ASEAN agreement, the US will raise its technical and logistical aid to ASEAN “to prevent, disrupt and combat” international terrorism.

The Philippines is the last stop for Powell who has already visited India, Pakistan, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Brunei and Indonesia.

In Powell's speech last month before the Asia Society in New York City, he expressed elation over the Philippine-US cooperation against terrorism.

"I am proud, so proud, that American forces are helping to train and equip their Philippine Army counterparts to combat groups such as the Abu Sayyaf, a terrorist organization which regularly kidnaps, as you know too well, civilians for ransom," he said.

On the issue of the US role in the Asian region, Powell said the United States would continue to be the "balance wheel of security in Asia" upon which the region's stability depends.

"There should be no doubt that America's commitment to Asia's security and stability is an enduring one, for Asia's sake and for our own. We are a Pacific power. We will not yield our strategic position in Asia," the secretary said

A retired US military officer, Powell is the first black secretary of state in US history.

The son of Jamaican immigrants, Powell was born in New York City and attended the City College of New York where he was a cadet in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

After serving two tours of duty in the Vietnam War (1962-1963, 1968-1969), Powell held a succession of important military and civilian positions, becoming national security adviser to President Ronald Reagan in 1987.

Powell played a pivotal role in planning and executing the invasion of Panama in 1989 and the Persian Gulf War (1991).

He retired from the military in September 1993.

East Asia, ASPAC banking officials note growth prospects, resiliency of regional economies

Ranking officials of 11 central banks and monetary authorities in the East Asia and Asia-Pacific region have noted the resiliency of regional economies in view of the substantial progress reached in economic, corporate and financial restructuring.

But the governors agreed that the regional economies needed to sustain ongoing efforts to strengthen their respective financial sectors in the face of uncertainties and risks that continue to test the durability of the international financial system.

These uncertainties and risks included the Brazilian debt problem and the corporate accounting scandals in the US.

The governors met in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia last July 27 for the Executives' Meeting of the East Asia and Pacific Central Banks (EMEAP), the seventh since its inaugural meeting in Tokyo in July 1996.

The EMEAP meetings were intended to strengthen cooperation among EMEAP members on central banking operations and policy issues.

The Kuala Lumpur meeting was attended by the governors and managing directors of the Reserve Bank of Australia; People's Bank of China; Hong Kong Monetary Authority; Bank Indonesia (Deputy Governor); Bank of Japan; Bank of Korea; Bank Negara Malaysia; Reserve Bank of New Zealand (Acting Governor); Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP); Monetary Authority of Singapore; and the Bank of Thailand.

During the meeting, the governors discussed regional and global economic and financial developments.

They cited the potential for further increases in intra-ASEAN trade and its impact on the growth prospects of the EMEAP economies.

They likewise affirmed the role of the EMEAP in continuing its focus on the core business of central banks and monetary authorities that are of immediate relevance to the region.

As such, EMEAP vowed to go on initiating practical, high-quality policy-oriented research projects on economic and financial developments and issues, as it continues to strengthen policy dialogues with other international bodies like the International Monetary Fund.

Gov't to raise Filipino women's status, welfare

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is committed to improve the status and welfare of women by creating policies and programs directed to promote the latter's active participation in national development.

At the same time, the President seeks to provide more jobs and productivity improvement opportunities for women, said Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas during the 1st National Conference on Building Partnerships for Sustainable Gender and Development conducted recently by the Ugnayan ng Kababaihan sa Pulitika (UKP).

Canlas said the government has been exerting effort to integrate women's concerns in its plans and programs over the years.

He said a manual on formulating gender-responsive development plans had been developed to identify the strategic intervention points and necessary procedures to put together gender concerns in growth planning in the regional levels.

"This manual offers useful guides to government agencies integrating gender concerns in their respective planning activities," he added.

Canlas said gender concerns have been properly addressed in the Medium Term Philippine Development Plan 2001-2004.

The plan served as the blueprint under which all government programs, projects and activities of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration would be based.

He said that in the area of public investment programming, the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), which he also heads has prioritized programs and projects promoting the participation of women in national development.

Canlas assured the UKP that the government would allocate at least five percent of the General Appropriations Act to gender and development concerns.

"There are on-going efforts directed at assessing the current policy with the aim of creating meaningful impact on women's status and welfare," Canlas said.

To promote gender and development in the bureaucracy, he said the National Commission on the Role of Filipino Women continued to implement the Institutional Strengthening Project to empower the capabilities of oversight, implementing, statistical, and sub-national agencies.

He said there were also a number of programs to address violence against women's lack of economic empowerment such as the National Family Violence Prevention Program and the Productivity Skills and Capability Building Program.

Canlas highlighted the government's success in eliminating constitutional, legal, administrative, cultural, behavioral, social and economic obstacles to women's full participation in sustainable development and public life.

According to Canlas, the impact of women's involvement in multi-stakeholder partnerships was quite evident at the community level in areas such as health, education and natural resources management and protection.

Just recently, the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) Human Development (HD) Report 2002 showed that the Philippines topped East Asia and the Pacific and ranked 35th in the world on initiating gender empowerment measures.

This confirmed the Macapagal-Arroyo administration's resolve to improve women's status and welfare, Canlas said.

The UNDP HD Report also indicated that the country's gender-related development index of 0.751 has placed it at No. 63 in the world.

GMA stresses on building healthier nation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today echoed her resolve to build a healthier nation free from poverty that threatened to breed diseases and spawn social menaces such as criminality and terrorism within the decade.

In a radio message aired nationwide, the President stressed the importance of a physically fit community of people.

"Tulad ng pagkain, tahanan at edukasyon, ang kalusugan ay pangunahin nating pangangailangan. Ito ang puhunan ng ating buhay, kaya't kailangan itong pangalagaan (Like food, a home and education, we regard health as a basic need. We draw our livelihood from being healthy; thus, we have to care for our health)," she said.

This was the reason why the government had embarked on a priority health program that aimed to benefit the country's poor communities.

As early as last year, the President vowed to have at least 500,000 members of the urban poor registered with the National Health Insurance Program (NHIP), as stated in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) last year.

In her second SONA last July 22, she reported that the target had been met, even exceeded, as more than four million people have been registered with the NHIP.

She said beneficiaries of the PhilHealth GMA ID card being given under the NHIP could avail themselves of free or subsidized government health services.

She added that the people could also buy half-priced selected but branded medicines in at least 70 government-run hospitals and in National Food Authority rolling stores, where rice continued to sell at P14 a kilo, deployed nationwide.

In her radio message, the President also reiterated her concern over homeless Filipinos, as she reported that some 180,000 families have been provided ownership of the lots where their homes stand.

The number, she said, was over and above the targeted 150,000 beneficiary-households of the government's housing program.

Similarly, SONA targets were also achieved in the fields of education, job generation, agricultural modernization and micro-finance, among others.

"Sana ay madama ng ating mga mamamayan ang katapatan ng pamahalaan na tugunan ang kanilang mga pangangailangan (I hope the people feel the government's sincerity in meeting their needs)," she said.

But more importantly, the President said: "Nangingibabaw pa rin ang aking hangaring masugpo ang kahirapan sa loob ng dekadang ito at mawakasan ang krimen at terorismo upang ang ating mga pamilya ay mamuhay nang tahimik at mapayapa (To eliminate poverty within the decade and end the threat of criminality and terrorism so that our families may live in peace remain top among my intentions)."

She said the full force of government would defend democracy and safeguard national peace and security.

“Hindi rin natin titigilan ang paglaban sa katiwalian at iba pang hamon sa katatagan ng ating Republikang Pilipinas (We will not stop fighting corruption and other threats to our strong Philippine Republic),” she added.

She asked the people to remain firm and not to be swayed by the black propaganda and deception of those who malign the government’s good intentions, particularly relating to giving justice to those who became victims of criminals and terrorists.

She recalled that the country weathered through a number of internal and global problems last year. “Pero marami pa tayong dapat gawin (But we still have a lot to do),” she said.

“Kailangan ko ang tulong ninyo upang patuloy tayong magtagumpay sa mga hamong hinaharap natin ngayon at haharapin pa sa mga darating na araw (I need your help so that we can continue to win over challenges we face today and those we will meet in the coming days),” she appealed.

R.P.- U.S. talks very productive, reinvigorate ties in common desire to bring peace, progress to world

The two small group and expanded meetings today between Philippine and American officials led by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and visiting United States Secretary of State Colin Powell were very productive, reinvigorating RP-US relationship in a common desire to bring peace and progress to the world.

This was the assessment made by Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople in his opening statement during a press conference that followed the two meetings in Malacañang this morning.

“The challenge now is to bring the momentum generated by our strengthened security and defense cooperation to bear on other aspects of our relationships,” Ople said in briefing media representatives on the talks between the President and Powell, who is in Manila on the last leg of a swing through Asia.

Ople said the talks – first in the main living room of Malacañang between a small group of six led by the President and Powell and then in the main office of the President between a larger group of Philippine and American officials – took more than an hour and covered a “wide range of issues of direct interest and importance to both our countries.”

“The talks were in the nature of free and open discussions among old friends on ways to further improve our relationship and how best to face current and future challenges as strategic partners,” Ople said.

There were no discussions on the Mutual Logistics Support Agreement, Ople added.

Ople said the President raised several issues with Secretary Powell, including trade, financing, development cooperation and tourism issues.

The President also expressed appreciation to the US for its efforts and contribution towards the success of the strategic partnership between the Philippines and the US, Ople said.

“The global war against terrorism, the partnership between our two countries in this war, and regional and global efforts versus terrorism were also discussed,” Ople added.

The Foreign Secretary said the President cited in particular the central role played by Secretary Powell in the successful adoption last August 1 in Brunei of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations-US joint declaration on cooperation to combat international terrorism.

The President also pointed to the successful conclusion of Balikatan 02-1, Ople said, adding that “there were many valuable lessons learned by both our militaries that can add much value to future training exercises between our two countries.”

The President also raised issues relating to Filipino World War II veterans and to Filipinos in the US, Ople said.

Powell vows enduring U.S. partnership, support to RP

The Philippines “can count on America’s enduring partnership and support.”

United States Secretary of State Colin Powell stressed this today in a press conference with the media at the Heroes Hall of Malacañang, as he capped his overnight visit to the Philippines, the eighth and last leg of his Asian tour.

“It is very fitting that Manila is the capstone of my visit to Southeast Asia, because the alliance between the United States and the Philippines has been a bulwark of freedom and stability in the Asian-Pacific Region,” Powell said.

He recalled that 60 years ago, Filipino and American soldiers fought side by side in the Battle of Bataan. “Today, we stand shoulder to shoulder again in the fight against terrorism,” he said.

He noted that U.S. President George W. Bush, in November last year, had expressed his heartfelt appreciation to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for the latter’s “principled and courageous stand against terror.”

“We applaud the Philippines’ role in forging the May 2002 trilateral cooperation agreement with Indonesia and Malaysia,” he added. Powell also visited Kuala Lumpur last July 29 and Jakarta on August 2.

Under what was dubbed as an agreement on information exchange and establishment of communication procedures, the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia would cooperate in preventing the use by anyone of their land-air-sea territories for committing or furthering terrorism, money laundering, smuggling, piracy or robbery at sea, hijacking, illegal entry, drug trafficking, marine pollution and illicit arms trafficking.

The agreement was signed by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., for the Philippines, Foreign Minister N. Hassan Wirajuda of Indonesia and Foreign Minister Datuk Seri Syed Hamid Albar of Malaysia last May 7, during President Macapagal-Arroyo’s visit to Kuala Lumpur.

“As Filipinos know only too well, terrorism threatens every country and every continent. The United States is impressed by the Philippine army successes against the Abu Sayyaf terrorist group,” said Powell.

He said the gains made in the fight against terrorism in the Philippines have “significantly reduced the Abu Sayyaf’s operationability, even as we mourn Abu Sayyaf’s victims.”

He also lauded the Filipino soldiers who have died in the fight against the Abu Sayyaf and in the effort to secure the safe release of hostages. “We honor their bravery and their sacrifice.”

The US State Secretary said his country “is proud that our armed forces are helping to train and equip their Philippine Army counterparts to combat terrorism in the Philippines.”

But while the RP-US joint Balikatan military exercises successfully ended last July 31, he said that “our excellent cooperation with the Philippines will continue on the civilian as well as military side.”

A case in point is the US’ ongoing development assistance program in the country. “We are devoting over $100 million this year on such areas as law enforcement, judiciary, the role of law and education. All of these support President Arroyo’s war on poverty,” he said.

“We also remain strongly committed to our development programs to foster lasting peace in Mindanao,” he added, stressing support for American investments in the Philippines and President Macapagal-Arroyo’s efforts to build a strong republic.

This, he said, would “set the stage for economic activity that can really make a difference in Mindanao and elsewhere in the country.”

Earlier, Powell said he was very pleased to be back in the Philippines. As a young captain during the Vietnam War, Powell been in Subic and Clark, where American naval and air bases used to operate.

Powell also said he had a successful conversation with President Macapagal-Arroyo. They reviewed at least four issues that existed “between our two countries.”

GMA, Powell discuss R.P. -U.S. concerns

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today received United States Secretary of State Colin Powell in Malacañang, and both officials conferred on a wide range of issues of direct interest and importance to the two countries.

Powell, on the eighth and last leg of his Asian tour, called on the President at the Palace’s Main Living Room along with US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone around 9:00 a.m. Foreign Secretary Blas Ople and Philippine Ambassador to Washington Albert del Rosario were also present.

During the meeting, Powell told the President that the Philippines remained the “highlight” of his Asian tour as he noted the country’s active participation in the global coalition against terrorism.

The President, meanwhile, cited Powell’s recent signing in Brunei of an agreement with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations that would make the region more responsive to future terrorist threats.

Powell said President George W. Bush personally conveyed his gratefulness for President Macapagal-Arroyo’s support on the war against terror.

Meanwhile, the President raised the issue of Philippine tuna exports to the US, saying she hoped that moves in the US favoring “pouched tuna” would not affect the preferential treatment for canned tuna from the Philippines.

She said thousands of workers in the tuna industry in Mindanao have been battling for the access of Philippine canned tuna in the US market.

The President also pitched for the more humane treatment of Filipino deportees from the US, saying, “There’s a lot of sensitivity here.”

She said that in the future, she hoped that US authorities would not use handcuffs on deportees, to which Powell said: “We are very mindful of your concern.”

Powell again thanked the President for the support of the Philippines and her leadership in the fight against terrorism.

The President, meanwhile, noted that the people of Basilan were very grateful to the US forces for the security that they brought into the area and the infrastructure that they built.

After the meeting at the Main Living Room, the President, Powell and the other officials moved on to the Music Room where the President was briefly introduced to members of the U.S. delegation.

The two proceeded to her office to preside over an expanded meeting, accompanied by eight officials on each side.

During the meeting, the President raised the possible lifting of a negative travel advisory on the Philippines, noting her efforts to curb criminality. “We’ve been bearing fruits on a daily basis,” the President said.

She noted that because of the successes, China has lifted its own negative travel advisory on the country.

The President noted that next year is “Visit Philippines Year,” of which one of the government programs is to invite Americans to the country to commemorate the Leyte Landing.

Powell said that once he gets back to the US, he would immediately undertake a review of all travel advisories.

“My bias is to lift travel advisories... I want people to travel. I want Americans to travel to the Philippines,” Powell said.

Among other concerns the President discussed with Powell were the toxic waste in the former US military facilities, possible delisting of the Philippines from the Financial Action Task Force on the anti-money laundering list, the issues of the Amerasians in the country and the possible recruitment of Filipinos in the US Navy, issues on air services and independent power producers (IPP) and the World War II veteran benefits

Powell then briefed the President on the US Millennium Challenge Account, a mechanism that provided development assistance to countries committed to democracy and on how the Philippines could take advantage of its benefits.

Aside from this, the US government is giving the Philippines a total of $155 million worth of military and development assistance this year.

Afterwards, the President reiterated her invitation for President Bush to visit the Philippines, to which Powell replied that he “will certainly encourage that” and that he “would look at his schedule next year.”

Powell said he felt quite at home in the Philippines, relating that he was cheered by the people upon embarking from the car at the Manila Peninsula, where he stayed for the night.

“This is not a typical experience for me,” he said.

Powell cites gains in global war against terrorism

United States Secretary of State Colin Powell today rated the war against global terrorism as “doing well.”

Powell also cited President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for “taking bold, strong stances for democracy,” as he noted the positive contributions of the Philippines in the fight against terror, saying the country has been in the forefront of leadership in Southeast Asia with respect to that war.

In a press conference with the media at the Malacañang Heroes Hall, Powell said the Taliban, which had been harboring the Al-Qaeda terrorist group of Osama Bin Laden, had been destroyed and the Al-Qaeda “is on the run.”

“(The Al-Qaeda terrorists) are hiding. (But) there is still a danger to the world and we are going to continue to rout them out,” Powell stressed.

He said US President George W. Bush made it clear from the very beginning that “this is a campaign that will not be concluded for a few months or even a year. It is going to take a long time.”

In an interview with the Far Eastern Economic Review last July 29, Powell said the US has “demonstrated to all the nations in Southeast Asia that terror is a threat to all of us.”

“It may come in the form of Al Qaeda, and learning more and more about Al Qaeda and how they are in so many of these countries or how they are trying to get themselves imbedded in these countries having been displaced in Afghanistan,” he said in the interview.

“And there are many other terrorist groups. It is not something that is unique to America. What is common in all these terrorist organizations is the need for the entire international community to respond,” he added.

Powell stressed the need to link with America’s friends and allies in law enforcement, intelligence and response efforts, noting the leadership role the US had to play.

To get the terrorists, “we have to connect our intelligence systems, connect our law enforcement systems, look at the financial transactions that these terrorists groups use to sustain themselves,” he said.

He cited the political declaration that he and representatives of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations signed in Brunei last August 1.

The declaration focused on such issues as exchanging information, exchanging intelligence, building the capacity to do this in a more effective way and strengthening our bilateral ties.

The declaration, he said, was further evidence that everybody recognized the danger of terrorism, understood the importance of working together in fighting the threat to global security.

“I am very pleased about the level of cooperation we are receiving and I think we are making progress,” he added.

“People are being picked up around the world. A number of nations in Southeast Asia have made important apprehensions in recent weeks,” he noted.

The US official also noted the importance of the Philippines for “making a positive contribution on the global war against terrorism.”

He lauded the signing of a trilateral agreement between the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia signed on May 7 this year in Kuala Lumpur during the visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to Malaysia.

He also took time to cite the other day’s signing of the ASEAN plus US Declaration in Brunei and what had been done with respect to the RP-US joint Balikatan military exercises and going after the terrorist Abu Sayyaf.

“The Philippines has been in the forefront of leadership in Southeast Asia with respect to the global war against terrorism,” he stressed.

“I found support throughout Southeast Asia for this campaign because there is not a nation in Southeast Asia who has not, at one time or another or today, been under the threat of terrorism,” he said.

“And the message that I want to give to all of them, and especially to the Philippines, is that the United States is united with you. But we see it is more than just war against terrorism, more than just military to military, but a broader relationship that also focuses on economic development, development assistance, trade, poverty elimination, educational activity, everything we can do to strengthen democracy throughout Southeast Asia, and especially to help leaders like President Arroyo who are taking bold, strong stances for democracy. We want to be seen and stand alongside her and leaders like her,” Powell said.

U.S. providing $155M in military, development assistance to Philippines this year, says Powell

The United States government is providing a total of $155 million worth of military and development assistance to the Philippines this year, United States Secretary of State Colin Powell today announced.

In a joint press conference with Foreign Secretary Blas Ople at the Heroes' Hall in Malacañang, Powell said the $100 million worth of assistance is aimed at supporting improvement efforts on areas such as law enforcement, judiciary, the rule of law and education.

The $55 million intended for the campaign against terrorism, meanwhile, is still being worked out. "We are now working out the arrangements as to how that money will be spent and what accounts will be provided," he said.

Powell said the significant thing is that the amount of support the US is providing the Philippines—both in terms of military support and in terms of development assistance—is being significantly increased. "We hope that will remain the case for several years to come," Powell said.

Powell also reported that the Philippines is a leading candidate to the Millennium Challenge Account, a mechanism that provides development assistance to countries committed to democracy.

"I am quite sure that the Philippines will be a front candidate for support under the Millennium Challenge Account and that would be a couple of years in the future," Powell said.

Meanwhile, Powell emphasized that the Mutual Logistics Service Agreement is essentially an administrative arrangement between the two parties.

"It is usually negotiated and dealt with at the fairly middle-level management level within our Department of Defense. It doesn't usually come to this level of attention or interest," Powell said.

Powell assures dignified treatment for deportees

United States Secretary of State Colin Powell today recognized as a "sensitive issue for the Filipino people" the undignified treatment American authorities made on Filipinos who were recently deported from the US.

Powell, in a press briefing following a meeting with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and some Cabinet members in Malacañang, said he would return to the US with "a message for my colleagues" and the department concerned with deportation to do their jobs in a way that is dignified.

Earlier, President Macapagal-Arroyo told the visiting American official that deported Filipinos should not be "handcuffed," as what happened to deportees from the US on board a chartered flight.

"I will let them know that even though we must follow our own laws with respect to deportation, and deportation must occur, we have to do it in a way that is dignified and is sensitive to the feelings of the people being deported," Powell said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also asked Powell to see if he could work out the grant of amnesty to overstaying Filipinos, particularly if amnesty has been granted to people of other nationalities.

Nothing mysterious about MLSA, says Powell

United States Secretary of State Colin Powell today clarified that the Mutual Logistics Support Agreement (MLSA) is "essentially" an administrative servicing arrangement between the Philippines and the United States and that there was nothing "mysterious about it."

In a press briefing and during talks with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in Malacañang, Secretary Powell said the MLSA was “usually negotiated by middle level management within our Department of Defense and does not usually come to this level of attention and interest.”

But he said he was aware that the MLSA was “a matter of great interest in the Philippines.”

He hoped that once the contents and benefits of the MLSA have been explained thoroughly by the US defense department and the Philippines’ armed forces, “the Filipinos people will understand that there is nothing mysterious about it.”

“It is not an effort to ensure ourselves in any way into the Philippines that would be troubling anyone. It doesn’t deal with that at all,” he said.

“It is strictly a set of arrangements between the two sides for logistical support and accountability,” he added.

In a later media briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said there were several provisions in the MLSA, which if incorporated, would address the objections of even its harshest critics.

Bunye said the agreement contained a provision that would address the basing rights, prohibition of construction and establishment of US military base facilities or permanent structures.

He said the MLSA also provided that storage units and ports should at all times remain under the control and supervision of the host country.

GMA cites PNP quick response, citizen cooperation in arrest of highway-robbery-gang

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded Philippine National Police (PNP) officials for the arrest of three uniformed scalawags, including a police superintendent, and two civilians for highway robbery, extortion and carnapping.

“I believe this is the highest ranking police officer that we arrested and it shows the strong resolve of our PNP leadership headed by Gen. (Hermogenes) Ebdane to clean up the ranks,” the President said in a statement.

Ebdane presented to the President and to media suspects Police Superintendent Virgilio Jose, chief of the General Service Office of the PNP-Maritime Group; Senior Police Officer 1 Gonzalo Gultiano; Police Officer 1 Sergio Bendoy and civilian assets Gaudencio Espibon and Marlu Amora.

The President said the war against crime “does not distinguish between citizens and police,” adding that the uniform was not a protective shield against justice and the law.

She cited citizen cooperation and trust in the police that led to the rescue of six victims of a highway-robbery the suspects staged in Barangay Talaba, Cavite last August 2.

Lenny Prior, a relative of one of the victims, reported the incident to the Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (PACER) unit that responded and arrested the suspects.

“When citizens report crime, the police do solve them with speed and efficiency,” she said.

She said this was a solid example of how responsible citizenship could help win the streets and keep every family safe.

With police and people in close cooperation, there are better chances for criminals to get the justice they deserve, she added.

Ebdane, in a report, said the victims — Ernesto Aringay, Rosalinda Garcia, Virginia Calipco, Rosque Prior, Arlene dela Cruz and Rodolfo Saspa — were on their way to San Andres Bukid, Manila to attend a birthday party.

On the road, the victim's vehicle was blocked by a red Toyota Corolla car. Three armed men introduced themselves as police officers, took the six victims at gunpoint, commandeered their vehicle and divested them of their personal belongings including jewelry worth P30,000, five cellular phones and P5,000 in cash.

A demand of P100,000 was also made in exchange for the victims' freedom.

While negotiations were ongoing, Ebdane said the victims were held in separate groups, one in Mandaluyong City and the other in Quezon City.

PACER operatives rescued Aringay and Garcia while in the custody of P/Supt. Jose.

The four other victims were rescued near Hotel Rembrandt, Quezon City.

Confiscated from the suspects were their car with plate number USL-990, P35,000 in cash, several firearms, cellular phones and the personal belongings of the victims.

Powell to review negative travel advisory on RP

United States Secretary of State Colin Powell today said he would undertake a review of travel advisories around the world following a request of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, in their meeting today, to lift the negative advisory on the Philippines.

Powell made the commitment during an expanded meeting with the President at her office in Malacañang. Powell earlier had a separate meeting at the Main Living Room with the President along with U.S. Ambassador to Manila Francis Ricciardone and Foreign Secretary Blas Ople.

"I will review the status of travel advisories and see what we can judge," Powell told the President.

He said he had a bias for lifting travel advisories. "My bias is to lift travel advisories... I want people to travel. I want Americans to travel to the Philippines," he said.

During the meeting, the President raised the possibility of lifting the negative travel advisory on the Philippines.

She cited government efforts to curb criminality. "We've been bearing fruits on a daily basis," she added.

The President said that in recognition of her administration's campaign against criminality, China has lifted its own negative travel advisory on the Philippines.

The President noted that next year is "Visit Philippines Year." One of the program's highlights is to invite Americans to the country to commemorate the Leyte Landing.

GMA cites role of Aglipayan Church in building nation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the significant role of the Iglesia Filipina Independiente (IFI) or the Aglipayan Church in the country's struggle against foreign invaders and for its contribution in building a strong Republic.

In the President's speech during the IFI's Centennial Celebration at the Quirino Grandstand in Luneta, Manila, she noted that 100 years ago, the Aglipayan Church was in the forefront of defending the country's independence from foreign hands and was also responsible in initiating the nation's first labor movement.

"Your establishment of the labor movement has expressed not only our independence from foreign rulers but also against the oppression of powerful Filipinos," she said.

Aside from its vast contribution to the country's history, the President said the IFI, through its founder, the late Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, left behind many of its members and relatives who continued to contribute a lot to nation building as well as in maintaining peace and order.

She cited in particular Philippine National Police (PNP) Deputy Director Edgardo Aglipay, a descendant of the IFI founder, who formerly served as PNP director in Region III and later as chief of the National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO).

The President thanked Gen. Aglipay for his contribution to her administration and in the maintenance of peace and order in the country.

In order to build strong institutions for a strong Philippine Republic that will represent the people rather than a few vested interests, the Chief executive said "the Filipino people must wage a moral revolution from the top through leadership by example."

"Only moral strength can be the invincible foundation of good governance and only good governance can serve as the pathway to peace, justice and the conquest of poverty," she said.

When she assumed the presidency in January last year, the President said she was committed to the achievement of good governance based on three pillars that included a moral foundation to guide leadership at all levels, the assurance of transparency in all government actions and the principle of good governance as an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

President Macapagal-Arroyo expressed her belief that good governance is the right path to achieve peace, justice, and alleviate poverty in the country.

According to her, one way to defeat graft and corruption is to reduce red tape in various government agencies and institutions.

In the span of one year, she said red tape had been reduced in 12 departments and 19 agencies of the government, noting that in securing housing permits, the signatures needed had been reduced from 188 to 45.

At the latter part of her speech, the President thanked the officers and members of the Aglipayan Church for being good citizens of the Republic.

"Thank you for being an inspiration to us in government and for making us worthy of being your rightful representatives," she said.

Gov't hits hard on robbery-holdup gang up north

The government has scored another victory in the fight against criminality with the arrest of members of the Sagada-Kalinga group, one of the most notorious holdup gangs operating in the provinces of the Cordillera Autonomous Region, Benguet, Pangasinan and La Union.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. and Philippine National Police (PNP) Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. today presented to media 12 members of the Sagada-Kalinga group, including two provincial police officers.

Cordillera Police Regional Office Director George Aliño and Police Regional Police Office I Director Arturo Lomibao were also present during the presentation.

Presented were suspects John Malidom, Jr., Heralde Bag-ay, Romeo Binoloc, Alex Uvido, Jonathan Fokan, Nelson Bag-ay, Peter Bocalen, Gilbert Balunsat, Edmundo Boswal, David Pucalan, Aslo Ambonoc and Junel Balutoc.

In short remarks, the President told the PNP officials that the Filipino people are grateful "for your hard work."

But she pointed out that there were more criminal syndicates still out to victimize communities. "We await more arrest in the days to come," she said.

She lauded Ebdane and the men and women of the PNP for their success in going after and eliminating criminal gangs and syndicates.

She personally congratulated the members of the Cordillera Police Regional Office (CPRO), the PRO I, PACER, Benguet Provincial Police Office, and the Binalonan, Pugo and Tuba police stations.

"I encourage them, and I hope the people will also encourage them, to keep doing the good job that they are doing," she added.

The President ordered Ebdane to publish the picture of another Sagada-Kalinga group leader.

She also said disclosed the full implementation of a reward system for the capture of criminal gang and syndicate members.

She said the government gave a reward of P5 million to the informant who pointed to Abu Sabaya, the spokesman of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf.

The other day, she also gave an P853,144.99 reward to the informant who effected the multimillion-peso shabu bust in Varsity Hills, Quezon City.

A report from the PNP Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER) unit said the Sagada-Kalinga group had been involved in a series of robbery-holdups of restaurants, passenger buses and even pawnshops in the Benguet-La Union areas.

The group was also tagged in at least five bank robberies in Pangasinan and La Union.

Records showed that PACER elements tracked and arrested the gang members following the robbery of Salting Restaurant along Marcos Highway in Barangay Baloy Sur, Tuba, Benguet last July 30.

The gang took an aggregate P120,000 in cash and valuables from the restaurant and from passengers of a bus parked in front of the restaurant.

GMA plays hands-on role in anti-criminality drive

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will continue to play a "hands-on" role insofar as the government's campaign to rid the country of criminals and terrorists is concerned.

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today stressed this, as he noted serious efforts being made by the military and the police along the lines of preserving the peace and maintaining order nationwide.

In a radio interview, Bunye said it was the President's style to be on top of the peace and order campaign.

"Gusto niyang ipakita na talagang seryoso siya sa kanyang binitiwang pangako sa State of the Nation Address na isa sa pangunahing pagbibigyang pansin ay 'yung anti-criminality campaign (The President wants to show that she is serious in carrying out an effective anti-criminality campaign, as she announced in her July 2002 SONA)," he said.

The campaign includes all forms of smuggling, which is not an ordinary crime, but economic sabotage, he added.

The President has placed great emphasis on weeding out syndicates involved in smuggling, he said.

As this developed, the Bureau of Customs (BoC) is set to file today criminal charges against four persons involved in smuggling some 35,000 bags of rice at the Port of Tabaco in Albay on September 23 last year.

A report reaching Malacañang said smuggling charges under Section 3601 of the Tariff and Customs Code and falsification under Article 171 of the Revised Penal Code would be filed against Antonio Chua Jr., Carlos Carillo, Pierre Toundjis and Yushawu Awudu, a Ghanian national.

GMA announces filing of criminal charges against 4 suspected rice smuggler

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that the Bureau of Customs is filing criminal charges against four individuals suspected of smuggling 35,000 bags of rice in the port of Tabaco, Albay.

The Chief Executive made the announcement at the Department of Justice (DOJ) in the presence of Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo, Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, Philippine National Police chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane and other officials.

In a complaint-affidavit executed by Clemente P. Heraldo and Leonito A. Santiago, chief and special investigator respectively of the Bureau of Customs, the following were charged with smuggling and falsification of public documents: Antonio Chua, Jr. of Tabaco, Albay; Carlos Carillo, also of Tabaco, Albay; Pierre "Peter" N. Toundjis, president of El Greco Ship Manning and Management Corporation; and Yushawu Awuda, a Ghanian national and ship captain of the vessel “M/V Neptune Breeze.”

The President also ordered Secretary Perez to file charges against Judge Arnulfo Cabredo for issuing a temporary restraining order (TRO) that prevented the Bureau of Customs from detaining the rice shipment.

She likewise asked the DOJ to file charges against other erring judges, particularly those involved in criminal activities such as the one in Subic in Zambales, and in Pasig.

Records of the Bureau of the Customs showed that on Sept. 23, 2001, a vessel, the “M/V Criston,” loaded with 35,000 sacks of suspected smuggled rice, docked at the port of Tabaco.

On the same date, the Deputy Collector of the said port issued a warrant of seizure and detention against the vessel and its cargo of 35,000 bags of rice.

However, before the Bureau of Customs could actually take custody of the said rice shipment, Judge Arnulfo B. Cabredo of the Regional Trial Court of Tabaco, Albay, upon petition of the consignees, Antonio Chua and Carlos Carillo, issued a temporary restraining order (TRO) restraining the Bureau of Customs from detaining the shipment.

On Nov. 7, 2001, at the height of typhoon “Nanang,” and despite the existence of a warrant of seizure and detention, the vessel “M/V Criston” left without proper clearances from the said port.

Records also showed that on Nov. 17, 2001, a vessel bearing the name “M/V Neptune Breeze” was spotted at the port of Mariveles, Bataan. Acting on the request of the Bureau of Customs, the Philippine Coast Guard apprehended and detained the vessel at the said port on the ground that the “M/V Neptune Breeze” was the same vessel “M/V Criston” that escaped from the port of Tabaco on Nov. 7, 2001.

As a result, a seizure case was instituted at the Port of Manila, to determine the persons liable for the unlawful act. During the proceedings, El Greco Ship Manning and Management Corporation, through its president, Peter Toundjis, appeared and presented itself as the operator of the “M/V Neptune Breeze.”

During the hearing of the seizure case, the Bureau of Customs established that the rice cargo of the “M/V Criston” was brought to the port of Tabaco without the necessary import documents.

The documents presented, the BOC said, were all spurious, making it appear that the rice cargo was locally sourced and not imported.

According to the BOC, Chua and Carillo, being the consignees of the shipment, are responsible for the unlawful importation of rice.

On the other hand, the culpability of Toundjis, president of El Greco, is apparent from his act of presenting a spurious fixture note embodying a purported contract between the “M/V Neptune Breeze” and Orica Explosives to make it appear that the vessel “M/V Neptune Breeze” is not the “M/V Criston.”

The captain of the vessel “M/V Criston,” Yushawu Awuda, was also recommended to be criminally charged because of his act of presenting spurious documents to mislead the proper authorities in determining the port of origin of the shipment.

It was also revealed during the hearing that from the physical examination and inspection of the vessels and macro etching of the engines of both vessels by the PNP, that “M/V Criston” and “M/V Neptune Breeze” are one and the same.

GMA calls on barangay officials to rally behind administration war against criminality

STA. CRUZ, Laguna—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the country’s barangay officials to rally behind her administration’s stepped-up war against all forms of criminality.

In her speech at the mass oath taking of newly elected barangay officials of Laguna, the President said that in the fight against criminality, she would be depending not only on the military and the police but also on the local executives, particularly the barangay officials.

“Kaya ako narito hindi lamang para batiin kayo at gawin ang inyong panunumpa, kung hindi na rin para i-recruit na nga kayo dito sa ating giyera kontra sa katiwalian, kontra sa kriminalidad (That is why I am here not only to administer your oaths but also to recruit you in our battle against corruption, against criminality),” the President said.

The President said that the war against poverty cannot be won for as long as there is rampant corruption and criminality in our society.

The President also stressed the underlying theme of her State of the Nation Address (SONA), which is an all-out war against criminality.

During the occasion, the President also announced that she had signed an executive order providing death benefits to all barangay officials.

But the President added that she hoped the barangay officials would not avail themselves of the death benefits because she wanted them to live for a long time.

According to the President, she had cited in her second SONA two prerequisites in the building of a strong republic.

One of these prerequisites, the President said, is that the people should not be used as an instrument of the powerful but of the poor.

The second prerequisite, the President said, is that the bureaucracy or the institutions should be stable enough so that we can move forward and attain our objectives.

GMA welcomes back 27 NPA rebel returnees in Laguna

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed back to the folds of the law 27 former members of the communist New People’s Army (NPA), who she said should start a new life under a Strong Republic.

In a speech during the mass oath-taking of newly-elected barangay officials at the San Luis gymnasium in Sta. Cruz, Laguna, the President said her government intended to eliminate poverty within the decade to stop people from believing in twisted ideologies and seeking refuge in mountains and hills.

She said the government has been seriously involved in an all-out no-nonsense war against criminality and terrorism. “Basta’t terorista, ginigiyera natin ‘yun (We will wage war against terrorists),” she added.

She noted that poverty could have driven people to go to the hills and believe in philosophies meant to destroy democratic institutions.

But “wini-welcome naman natin kung sila ay bumabalik (we welcome those who return to government),” she said.

The President said the rebel returnees would be given enough funds to start with a livelihood project. She led officials in awarding livelihood checks to the rebel returnees.

She also asked Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. to brief Laguna's newly-elected village leaders on how to dissuade people from joining rebel movements.

She urged the barangay leaders to practice good governance and bring themselves and their services to the heart of their villages.

She said the Gabay ng Mamamayan Action (GMA) Centers could play a vital role in the speedy delivery of social services.

GMA lauds PNP, DOJ, VRB for arrest of several crime suspects in Metro Manila

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Philippine National Police (PNP), the Department of Justice (DOJ) and the Videogram Regulatory Board (VRB) for the arrest of several suspected criminals operating in Metro Manila.

The President also extolled the concerned citizens who gave the police and law enforcement agencies vital information that led to the arrest of these suspects under the National Capital Regional Police Office's (NCRPO) Magic Eye Program which encourages the public to report not only criminals but also abusive policemen.

"The partnership between the police and the citizenry is the strongest defense we have against criminals. Working together against crime, we build our strong Republic," the Chief Executive said as she presented to the media this morning at the DOJ five members of the Honda robbery-holdup gang and two big-time suspected carnappers as well as other criminal suspects operating in the Binondo area in Manila.

"You can see that with every arrest, we show how strong our resolve is to put every criminal behind bars. And with every arrest, we see how citizen cooperation contributes to positive police action," the President stressed.

The President announced that over the weekend the PNP-NCRPO arrested five members of the Honda robbery-holdup gang linked to at least 45 heists on jewelry shops and restaurants in the metropolis.

According to the President, the information leading to the arrest of the five Honda gang members came from a concerned citizen.

The arrested members of the Honda gang were identified as Reynante Salvacion, alias "Rene," 23, a high school student of No. 611 San Nicolas St., Barangay San Nicolas, Gaudalupe, Makati City; Gino Mahinay, alias "Dodong," 32, a taxi driver, of No. 6 Ferdinand St., Vista Verde, Cainta, Rizal; Emerito Lague, alias "Bong," 34, a seaman, of Pre Fad Guadalupe, Makati City; Dexter Saren, alias "Dex," 29, a seaman, of No. 19 Rose St., Kingstown, Caloocan City; and Jay Canlas, alias "Jon-Jon," of Blumentritt St., Sta. Cruz, Manila.

The NCRPO composite team pounced on the suspects at around 1:10 a.m. at the Mina Balay Bar and Grill Restaurant along V. V. Soliven St., Barangay San Isidro, Cainta, Rizal after a tip-off from a concerned citizen.

According to PNP officials, the tipster learned about the NCRPO "Magic Eye" program and tipped off the robbers to the police. The suspects reportedly met at the restaurant after committing a robbery.

Police operatives seized four .38 caliber revolvers and a black bag containing eight car license plates (WRT-639; USW-149; WKP-145; UJH-685; WAR-753; UFY-585; UKV-824; and WJZ-753), assorted pieces of jewelry, two M-16 armalite rifles, a maroon ballcap, two bonnets, several tools consisting of pliers, screwdrivers, and wrenches, a cash box with vouchers of Macro International, and ammunition. Also seized were a maroon Honda Civic (UJD-796), a green Revo (WTB-823), and a Nissan taxi (PXX-189).

The five Honda gang members are detained at the San Juan Station Investigation Division pending the filing of several counts of robbery in band against them.

The President also presented to the media two suspected members of big-time carnappers “who were caught in the act of sniffing shabu.”

She pointed out that the two suspects, identified as Victor John Ignacio, alias “Kokoy” and “VJ,” 27, jobless of No. 421 Mayfair St., Montevista Subdivision, Barangay Sto. Nino, Cainta, Rizal; and Raymundo Bautista, 25, jobless, of No. 463 Tenement, Taguig, Metro Manila, carnapped at least 20 cars since 1999.

Police operations conducted by the teams, armed with a warrant of arrest for carnapping (Criminal case nos. 00-1417 and 00-1418) issued by Makati City Regional Trial Court Branch 66 Judge Ricardo Rosario against Ignacio, pounced on the suspects at around 9:10 p.m. Saturday in Barangay Sto. Nino, Cainta, Rizal. The operatives arrested Ignacio and Bautista while they were engaged in a shabu session.

The President lauded the efforts of newly-appointed Senior Superintendent Pedro Bulaong, Western Police District Director, for arresting criminals operating in the Binondo area, including the holdup- robbery at the Bank of the Philippine Islands (BPI) in the area.

She also mentioned the operations conducted by VRB chairman Ramon “Bong” Revilla, Jr. on fake cassette disks (CD).

Revilla, according to the President, is now concentrating the VRB’s efforts on the manufacturers of the fake CDs.

She announced that Revilla is giving rewards to individuals who can give information to the VRB on manufacturers of fake CDs. Rewards will range from P250,000, P500,000 and P1 million depending on how big the fake CD manufacturers are.

July inflation dips to 2.6%; lowest since February

The country’s inflation rate further dropped to 2.6 percent in July, bringing the average inflation rate since January to 3.4 percent.

A report from the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) reaching Malacañang said this was the lowest inflation rate recorded since February.

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas said this positive development could lead to lower than the 4.5 to 5.5 percent target inflation for the year.

“Based on the average inflation rate so far this year, the average inflation for 2002 is most likely to hit 3.2 to 3.5 percent barring further unexpected shocks,” Canlas said.

Citing statistics of the National Statistics Office (NSO), NEDA said the month-on-month inflation was stable at 0.2 percent in July, mainly due to the 3.9-percent drop in electric bills associated with the cut in purchased power adjustment (PPA) costs.

Domestic fuel retail prices also declined by P0.36 per liter, bringing down fuel prices by 0.3 percent.

But food prices slightly rose by 0.6 percent from the previous month as monsoon rains hit the country and led to disruptions in market supply.

The report said prices of rice went up 0.9 percent; eggs, 0.1 percent; fish, 0.6 percent; fruits and vegetables, 2.3 percent, and miscellaneous food items, 0.1 percent.

However, meat prices went down by 0.3 percent; corn, 0.1 percent; and dairy products, 0.1 percent. This bucked the downtrend.

The report also noted that the reductions in electricity bills brought down inflation in the National Capital Region and in areas outside Metro Manila.

In Metro Manila, inflation decelerated to 2.9 percent in July 2002. The average electricity bill dropped by 6.1 percent in July from the level a month ago.

In areas outside Metro Manila, year-on-year inflation was lower at 2.5 percent in July. Electricity bills in these areas also dropped at the average rate of 2.0 percent from the previous month.

Secretary Canlas said the benign inflation rate is expected to further stabilize treasury bill rates.

“This will in turn generate interest savings for the national government, thus improving the chance to meet the deficit target for the year,” he said.

The favorable inflation report came at the heels of the 12.3 percent rise of exports in June.

GMA launches Gabay ng Mamamayan Action Center

STA. CRUZ, Laguna – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today officially led the nationwide launching of the Gabay ng Mamamayan Action (GMA) Center which will be established in all barangays in the country to provide the people with direct access to information and referral systems, particularly on basic services, from the national government.

In her speech before some 10,500 newly-elected barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan officials held at the San Luis Sports Complex here, the President announced that the GMA Center will focus on direct government help in the barangay level.

The President also said the GMA Center would provide information and assistance on investment and job placement, livelihood, peace and order, health and sanitation and social welfare services, infrastructure, sports development and disaster preparedness.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. said the establishment of the GMA Center is the acknowledgement of the barangay’s significant role and in support of the SONA targets of the President and the Department of the Interior and Local Government.

He said the GMA Center project is expected to bring the government’s programs and services closer to the grassroot level.

The GMA Center shall have as members the Barangay Council, the Barangay Secretary and Treasurer, and other lay community leaders who will man the center as Action Officers for every major concern. The Punong Barangay shall be the head of the center.

The President also administered the oath of office to some 10,500 newly-elected Barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan officials from 28 towns and two cities (Calamba and San Pablo) in Laguna.

The President admitted that aside from personally inducting and congratulating them, she went to Laguna barangay and SK officials to get their support in the fight against graft and corruption, criminality and poverty in the local level.

GMA opens Laguna's new San Cristobal Bridge

CALAMBA, Laguna – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today opened to vehicular traffic the newly renovated San Cristobal Bridge along the Manila South Road here.

Prior to her arrival, the President together — with Laguna Governor Teresita Lazaro, Vice Governor Dan Fernandez, Calamba City Mayor Severino Lajara and Laguna 2nd District Representative Joaquin Chipeco, Jr. — received a briefing on the construction of the P53.5-million bridge by Public Works and Highways Undersecretary Teodoro Encarnacion.

After the project briefing, the President rode in a mini-truck for the inaugural drive-thru at the 73-linear meter four-lane bridge. She was assisted by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Encarnacion, Governor Lazaro, Mayor Lajara and Chipeco.

Because of typhoons Reming and Senyang in November 1999, the bridge was damaged. Its substructures sustained massive erosion and scouring on the foundation.

The Department of Public Works and Highways ordered the permanent closure of the bridge and opted for its immediate replacement.

The old bridge was a two-lane structure built in 1948. It served as a major connection between Manila and Laguna, linking several provinces such as Batangas, Quezon and the Bicol Region.

The bridge was also a vital link to the municipalities of San Pablo, Binan, Sta. Rosa, Cabuyao, and Calamba, all in Laguna.

NEDA-ICC okays 7 infra projects worth P28.7B

The interagency Cabinet-level Investment Coordination Committee (ICC) of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) has approved seven infrastructure projects worth P28.7 billion.

The projects are expected to further perk up socio-economic activity in major agri-industrial parts of the country, as they seek to improve living conditions of beneficiary-communities.

A NEDA report reaching Malacañang said the lion's share of the approved funding went to the construction of the Agno River Integrated Irrigation Project.

The P10.8-billion Agno River irrigation project aims to water some 70,800 hectares all year round.

It is also expected to increase the production of paddy rice and diversified crops in the service area that will make farming a highly competitive and profitable business in Pangasinan and Tarlac.

Further, the project is also expected to raise per capita income, upgrade the living standards of the people and create job opportunities in the Ilocos and Central Luzon regions.

The Agno River project scope includes the repair of the San Roque diversion weir and intake; construction of the re-regulating pond with a capacity of 4.6 million cubic meters; construction of a canal at the right bank of the Agno River to supply service areas of the Agno River Irrigation System; and the construction of siphon across Agno River that will link the main canal of the lower Agno River Irrigation System.

The government of Japan, under its 26th Yen Loan Package, will fund the project.

Another project, the P5.38-billion Laguindingan Airport Development Project, involves the construction of a new international-standard airport at Laguindingan.

This will replace the Lumbia Airport in Cagayan de Oro and the Balo-i Airpot in Iligan City.

Funding will come from the Korean Economic Development Cooperation Fund.

The NEDA-ICC said three road projects of the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) worth an aggregate P4.79 billion were likewise approved under Japan's 26th Yen Loan Package.

These are the Palawan South road project; Mabini circumferential road project; and the upgrading of the inter-urban highway system project Phase I.

The P1.07-billion Palawan South road project aims to ensure a road network linking less developed communities to the mainstream of socio-economic development.

It involves the rehabilitation of 178.56 kilometers through asphalt concrete improvement and overlay, including the widening of the existing road from five meters to 6.10 meters with the provision of gravel shoulders on both sides.

The project also includes the construction of a 48-linear meter reinforced concrete deck girder at the Tagbarungis Bridge in the Puerto Princesa-Inapsan-Aborlan section.

The P316.3-million Tourism Roads: Mabini circumferential road project aims to link 11 barangays in the town of Mabini, serving as the main access of the interior villages to alternative markets in the town centers while assuring farmers of higher returns from their agricultural produce, and propelling development in the potential agricultural lands within the road influence area.

It involves the construction of 19.62 kilometers of 200-millimeter thick Portland cement concrete roadway and the replacement of one-overflow and three-ford bridges to reinforced concrete deck girder and pre-stressed concrete deck girder totaling 121.1 linear meters.

The upgrading of the inter-urban highway system with the construction of three bypasses along the Sta. Rita-San Jose section is worth P3.37 billion.

It involves the construction of a two-lane, 6.6-kilometer bypass road in Plaridel and a 2,020-linear meter interchange. It also includes the construction of a two-lane 11.3-kilometer bypass road in Cabanatuan, a 1,125-linear meter reinforced concrete deck girder bridge (Pampanga River Bridge), and eight other reinforced concrete deck girder bridges.

The project aims to mitigate serious traffic congestion and support socioeconomic development within the region.

Also approved was the P4.52-billion Pasig-Marikina river channel improvement project, Phase I.

The project intends to alleviate the living and sanitary conditions in Metro Manila due to massive flooding caused by the overflowing of the Pasig-Marikina River which results in severe damage to lives, properties and infrastructure.

The project will lessen the overflowing of the Pasig River at times of heavy discharge by raising the river's conveyance capacity through riverbank elevations.

Under the project, some 18.2 kilometers of parapet wall and 17.6 kilometers of revetment walls will be erected, while the dredging and excavation of some 7,000 cubic meters of riverbed deposits are made from Delpan Bridge to Napindin Channel.

The works include the repair of about ten kilometers of damaged stretches of river walls to prevent erosion and collapse of riverbanks.

Lastly, the Valenzuela-Obando-Meycauayan area drainage system improvement and related works project, worth P3.24 billion, aims to mitigate flood damages in the area.

The project provides structural and non-structural facilities to effect the reduction of flood related damages in Malabon, Navotas as well as Obando and Meycauayan in Bulacan.

Floods in these areas have worsened, aggravated by high tides in Manila Bay, inundating low-lying parts and affecting some 400,000 people.

Both the Marikina-Pasig and Valenzuela-Obando-Meycauayan flood control projects will be financed under Japan's 26th Yen Loan Package.

Bunye congratulates AFP arnis team for winning 5 gold, 3 silver medals in int'l tourney

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio "Toting" Bunye yesterday expressed his support to the sports of arnis, a highly sophisticated fighting style that originated in the Philippines.

Bunye at the same time congratulated the members of the General Headquarters team of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) who called on him after winning no less than five gold medals and three silvers in the Qualifying Rounds of the Cebu International Arnis Tournament.

The said international arnis competition was held in Dumanjug and Ayala Center in Cebu City on July 19-25, 2002.

Among those who paid a courtesy visit on Bunye were gold medal winners Sgt. Christian Millan, Sgt. Rogelio Rentuma, Cpl. Regie Sanchez, Cpl. Jose Renante Ibanez and Joan Talledo; and silver medalists T/Sgt. Elmer Garlan, Randy Dano and Jeffrey Agustin.

They were accompanied by Col. Jerry Albano (Philippine Army) and Capt. Marciano Jesus Guevarra (Philippine Air Force) from the Special Services Office of the AFP-GHQ.

The GHQ team is composed of nine military personnel and three dependents. Five of the team members enter the world championship tournament after winning in the qualifying round.

Aside from gold and silver medals, the two other members of the GHQ team also won bronze medals. They are S/Sgt. Antonio Capatoy and Sgt. Danilo Talledo.

Aside from the Philippines, the other countries that competed in the Cebu International Arnis Championship Tournament were the United States, New Zealand, Germany, Australia and other member-countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nation (ASEAN).

Arnis is of Philippine origin. When the country was invaded by the Spanish, the invaders required guns to subdue their fierce opponents. The deadly fighting skills of Filipino warriors nearly overwhelmed them, and they dubbed the native stick style "escrima" (skirmish).

Escrima was subsequently outlawed, but the techniques did not disappear. They were preserved in secret, sometimes under the very noses of the conquerors in the form of dances or mock battles staged in religious plays known as "moro-moro."

These plays featured Filipinos, sometimes costumed as Spanish soldiers wearing arnis, the harnesses worn during medieval times for armor. The blade fighting forms and footwork were identical to those used in escrima. The word arnis soon became corrupted to arnis, and the name stuck.

Historically, arnis incorporated three related methods: "espada y daga" (sword and dagger), which employs a long blade and a short dagger; solo "baston" (single stick); and "sinawali" (to weave), which uses two sticks of equal length, twirled in "weaving" fashion for blocking and striking (the term derives from sinawali, the bamboo matting woven in the Philippines).

GMA extends condolences, orders full assistance to relatives of 2 Filipinas in Israel bombing

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has conveyed her condolences and deepest sympathies to the families of the two Filipina care-givers who were among those killed in a Palestinian suicide bombing in northern Israel last Sunday.

The President also ordered concerned government agencies to extend all possible assistance to the families of Adelina Cunanan of Minalin, Pampanga, and Rebecca Ruga of Bansud, Oriental Mindoro.

The two Filipina overseas workers were among the nine people who died when the bus they were riding exploded in northern Israel.

In today's meeting of the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC), Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople said he had conveyed the President's expression of sympathy and condolences to the victims' relatives in the Philippines.

Ople also told the LEDAC members that in his recent telephone conversation with Philippine Ambassador to Israel Marciano Paynor, Jr., the envoy told him that the two Filipina victims were positively identified by the Tel Aviv forensic and police authorities.

Secretary Ople said arrangements are now being made to ship the remains of Cunanan and Ruga to Manila as soon as possible.

"Perhaps this weekend, all the procedural requirements will be made so that the bodies will be sent to Manila," Ople said.

Ople said he was also assured by Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas that benefits to which the survivors of the victims are entitled under the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) are now being worked out.

He said these benefits would include insurance and burial expenses.

Ople also reported to the President that the Israeli government will bear the cost of transporting the remains to the Philippines.

According to Ople, as soon as the bodies arrive at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport, OWWA will take care of all costs, including the expenses of transporting the remains to Pampanga and Oriental Mindoro.

He also said that because both Cunanan and Ruga are documented workers, and therefore covered by the Institute of National Insurance of Israel, the families of the victims will be entitled to full insurance benefits from the Israeli institution.

GMA calls on Congress to speed up passage of priority bills

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the leaders of both houses of Congress to speed up the enactment urgent administration measures, particularly bills included in the common legislative agenda.

The Chief Executive issued this call to Senate President Franklin Drilon and House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. and other legislators during the 90th Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) Meeting held this morning at Malacañang's State Dining Room.

The President said she purposely did not include many bills in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) because "I didn't want to impose so much on Congress."

"I had already about 16 or so priority measures in the last Congress and we only added two, the Transco franchise bill and the Anti-Terrorism bill," she said, adding that if she had asked for so many bills "then it will be harder to prioritize because we have so many priorities."

During her second State of the Nation Address last July 22, the President underscored the urgency of enacting six legislative measures, namely, the Anti-Terrorism Act, legislative franchise for Transmission Corporation (Transco), Special Purpose Asset Vehicle (SPAV), Absentee Voting Law, Citizenship Retention Law, and farmland as loan collateral bill.

Briefing the President and LEDAC members on the status of the administration bills, Secretary Gabriel Claudio, Presidential Legislative Adviser and head of the Presidential Legislative Liaison Office (PLLO), said that four of the six legislative measures enunciated by the President in her SONA are part of the current LEDAC common legislative agenda.

These are SPAV Law, Absentee Voting Law, Citizenship Retention Law, and farmland as loan collateral bill.

Claudio also said the following three administration measures are now in the advance stages of the legislative mill:

- SPAV Law – approved on third reading in the House; recalled from the floor and remanded to the committee in the Senate;
- Absentee Voting Law – is in the period of amendments in the House; to be re-opened for the period of interpellation in the Senate to accommodate further clarificatory questions; and
- Citizenship Retention Law – awaiting floor sponsorship in the Senate, and is already in the period of interpellation in the House.

According to Claudio, the three measures set to make considerable headway this week are the following:

- Transco franchise bill — can finally be tackled on the floor any time soon since it has been reported out of the House committee even before Congressional adjournment in June. The said franchise bill must originate exclusively from the House, hence the Senate will have to await the House-approved version.
- The proposed bill giving small farmland collateral value may be wrapping up committee-level consideration this week. The House appropriations committee has scheduled a hearing tomorrow (Wednesday) relative to the guarantee clause of the substitute bill prepared by the House agrarian reform committee. Senate bill pending in committee.
- Anti-Terrorism Bill – is a bit delayed upon request by certain House members for more time in order to address human rights issues at committee level. Senate versions also pending in committee.

Claudio said that consideration of the anti-terrorism bill provide an opportunity to incorporate provisions against terrorism financing and pertinent amendments to Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA).

“This measure will therefore be our strongest response against global terrorism and will make the AMLA conform to international standards as recommended by Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Governor Rafael Buenaventura in his memorandum to the President,” Claudio said.

Claudio also reported that to date, four measures included in the “wish list” have recently been entered into the statute books and thus would bring the number of laws enacted under the present Congress to nine. These are the following:

- Anti-Money Laundering Act (RA 9160),
- Rent Reform Act of 2002 (RA 9161),
- General Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (RA 9162),
- National Service Training Program (RA 9163),
- Synchronized Barangay and SK Elections (RA 9164),
- Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002 (RA 9165),
- AFP Salary Increase (RA 9166),
- Film Development Incentives Act (RA 9167), and
- Plant Variety Protection Act (RA 9168).

Claudio noted that of the remaining bills in the common legislative agenda, two are pending in the bicameral conference committee, the Free Patents Law and Eid'l Fitr National Holiday; three were approved on third reading in either chamber, Magna Carta for Barangay Business Enterprises, SPAV Bill, and Securitization Bill; one approved on second reading in either chamber, Housing and Urban Development Bill; and five are pending in plenary in either chamber – including the Removal of the Documentary Stamps Tax, Railways Modernization Act, and Amendments to the Civil Service Code.

He also said that only five measures have not taken off the committee level such as – the Indexation of Sin Taxes, Amendments to the PDIC Charter, Corporate Recovery Act, Massive Reforestation Program and Electoral Reforms.

GMA convenes LEDAC on administration bills

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today convened the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) in Malacañang and asked the leaders of Congress to fast track the enactment of priority bills she mentioned in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22.

The President, who is the chairman of LEDAC, also discussed with the members of the LEDAC the proposed national budget for 2003, whose theme is “Investing in a Strong Republic.”

During the discussions on the budget for next year, the subject of the early retirement of government workers and proposed amendments to the Anti-Money Laundering Law were also discussed.

The Executive department briefed the lawmakers and other members of LEDAC on the Mutual Logistics and Support Agreement.

Saying “it is still a work in progress,” Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes said the revised MLSA is now in the hands of the United States government for review.

The President agreed to the proposal of Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. that the LEDAC meeting be held at least once a month.

The President said “let us make it a date then, every first Tuesday of the month,” to hasten action on administration bills. The last time the LEDAC met was on December 6, 2002. LEDAC was formed to coordinate the efforts of the legislative and executive departments of the government in policy making.

Among the legislators who attended the fourth LEDAC meeting under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration were Senate President Franklin Drilon, Senate President Pro Tempore Manuel Villar, Senate Majority Leader Loren Legarda and Senators Rodolfo Biazon, Aquilino Pimentel, Jr. and Robert Barbers; Speaker de Venecia, House Majority Leader Neptali Gonzales II, and Reps. Jose Ma. Salceda, Rolando Andaya, Jr., Raul Gonzales, Oscar Moreno, and Gerry Salapuddin.

From the Executive Branch, those present were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Heherson Alvarez, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Governor Rafael Buenaventura, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye and Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable, Jr. and LeDAC Private Sector Representative Guillermo Luz.

GMA did not categorically tag Ramirez as suspect in multimillion-peso tax fraud, says NBI

The National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) today clarified that, contrary to reports, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has not positively tagged the lady cashier of the Binangonan (Rizal) branch of the Land Bank of the Philippines (Landbank) as a suspect in the multimillion-peso fraud involving officials of the Landbank and the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).

In a letter to Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, NBI Director Reynaldo Wycoco said that while he was interviewing Acsa Ramirez, the Landbank Binangonan branch cashier, the President passed by the NBI to inquire on the progress of the investigation into the largescale tax diversion fraud.

“Consequently, she (the President) decided to meet Ramirez but the President did not categorically announce whether Ramirez was a suspect or not,” Wycoco said.

Wycoco said that Ramirez, who has been cashier of the Binangonan branch since April 2002, was invited by the NBI to shed light on certain matters relevant to the ongoing investigation of the tax fraud.

The Department of Justice has charged Artemio San Juan, the Binangonan Landbank branch manager, with 17 counts of violation of the Anti-Money Laundering Act.

According to Wycoco, San Juan has faulted Ramirez for the opening of the Bonsalagen Account “because her reporting to the management of the suspicious P27-billion check deposit was merely an afterthought of her signing (approval) of the check’s clearing.”

The discovery of the Bonsalagen account triggered the special audit that resulted in the discovery of the multimillion-peso fraud at the Landbank Binangonan branch.

San Juan has claimed that Ramirez also had a hand in the approval of the opening of the account, Wycoco said.

Ramirez was already the cashier of the Landbank Binangonan branch when majority of the multimillion-peso deposits were made on four fraudulent accounts, Wycoco said.

Wycoco said that Ramirez was allowed to go home after her first interview last August 1 but was requested to return on August 4 for polygraph examination but Ramirez has never returned.

Buenaventura calls on LEDAC to adopt changes in anti-money laundering act

Governor Rafael Buenaventura of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) today urged the members of the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) to address at least two concerns in the Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA) of 2001 so that the Philippines would be stricken out from the list of non-cooperative countries and territories (NCCT) in the Financial Action Task Force (FATF).

At the fourth LEDAC meeting under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration, Buenaventura said that the remaining weaknesses of AMLA, or Republic Act No. 9160, have significantly impaired the effectiveness of the anti-money laundering system in the Philippines.

He said there is a need to expand the definition of “covered transactions” in the AMLA to include any suspicious transactions regardless of the threshold amount.

Buenaventura also said that the AMLA or the BSP must be clothed with the authority to inquire into suspicious deposits without the need for a court order.

In this connection, Buenaventura, as chairman of the Anti-Money Laundering Council (AMLC), urgently proposed the following amendments to AMLA:

- lower the threshold amount from P4 million to P500,000 for covered transactions;

- the reporting of suspicious transactions to AMLC regardless of the amount involved; and
- the grant of authority to AMLC and the BSP to inquire into or examine, even without court order, deposits or investments related to any money laundering offense, unlawful activity or other violations of the AMLA.

Buenaventura expressed the belief that the proposed amendments to the AMLA would effectively address the major concerns of the FATF and would pave the way for the removal of the Philippines from the NCCT list.

Buenaventura, however, told the LEDAC members that the FATF did acknowledge that the Philippines has made substantial progress since the passage of the AMLA.

“That’s the reason why no sanctions have been imposed on us, and they are giving us time,” Buenaventura said.

“They also recognized that we are a democracy and it is not something that we can easily adopt and therefore leaves a lot of discussions, particularly in the legislature,” Buenaventura said.

In his press briefing later this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye stressed the need to lower the threshold amount from P4 million to P500,000, saying that in other countries the benchmark is only $10,000.

“So, the proposal is any amount involving P500,000 must be automatically reported to the Anti-Money Laundering Council,” Bunye said.

According to Bunye, the members of both the House of Representatives and the Senate must now discuss these proposals.

He also said that for as long as the Philippines is moving toward this direction, the government has nothing to worry.

“But we have to be able to come up with some concrete results to be able to avoid being continuously listed among the non-cooperative countries,” Bunye said.

GMA orders filing of raps against 3 DPWH directors on P139-M vehicle repair anomaly

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the filing of appropriate charges against three bureau directors and 38 employees of the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) for their alleged involvement in the more than P139-million vehicle repair anomaly.

The President, who motored to the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) office in Quezon City, also ordered the suspension of the three officials beginning today.

"These bureau directors must be at the top of the list of respondents and they must be suspended or put under preventive suspension," the President said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo likewise asked Government Corporate Counsel Amado Valdez to be in charge of the prosecution against the three DPWH officials.

She expressed the hope that her order would serve as strong signal to others who would think that they could get away with wrongdoings even if they are Presidential appointees.

According to her, the DPWH is made up of good men and women she do not want the majority, who are good, to be tarnished by the few who are bad, adding that "the higher they go, the harder they fall."

"They have to think twice and they have to behave," the President said.

A report obtained from the DPWH identified the three bureau directors as Emily Tanquintic, Director III, Controllershship and Finance Management; Bert Paborito, Director III, Administrative and Manpower; and Florendo Arias, Director III, Bureau of Equipment.

Last January 9, DPWH Secretary Simeon Datumanong created a committee to investigate reports about the alleged anomaly in vehicle repairs.

On June 23, 2002, the committee chaired by lawyer Lorenzo Sulaik, disclosed the involvement of 41 employees of the department, reaching up to the level of bureau directors.

These employees, according to the report, are assigned with the Bureau of Equipment, Controllershship and Financial Management Service and Administrative and Manpower Management Services.

As of June 2002, the cost of repairs under question was more than P139 million.

Since those higher officials are presidential appointees, the DPWH report said their cases were referred to the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC).

People happy over reduced electric bills

Financial relief and a lot of savings. These are but two of the most important things many residents of Metro Manila and nearby provinces now enjoy with plunging power rates.

“I used to budget P1,700 from my measly income to pay my monthly power bill. Last June and July, I was relieved to find out that my electric bills went down to P1,200 and P1,000, respectively,” says Myrna Rodriguez, a government employee who lives in Kamuning, Quezon City.

“I could use the savings for more important things like more food on our table, small home repairs, new clothes for the children or a first-aid kit,” echoes Francis Apoderado of Sta. Cruz, Manila whose P2,000 electric bill in June went down by over P500 in July.

Rodriguez and Apoderado are but only two of the many persons who are glad the government has taken a fearless stand in cutting down the costs of power.

Baby Cayaba, a newshen, exclaims: “Thanks to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, everyone’s future is becoming brighter.”

Cayaba narrates that she and husband Cris could not believe their eyes when they saw their July power bill. “It was all of P1,080. In June, it was P1,800 and in May, P2,500.”

A Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) report shows that the year-on-year inflation in July 2002 has slowed down to 2.6 percent from 3.0 percent in June 2002.

Inflation is the increase in the volume of money or credit relative to available goods resulting in a substantial and continuing rise in the general price level.

The BSP says the continuous drop in the inflation rate is mainly due to the 3.9-percent dip in electric bills associated with the cut in purchased power adjustment (PPA) costs.

The report notes that the power rate reductions has brought down inflation in the National Capital Region and in areas outside Metro Manila.

In Metro Manila, inflation decelerated to 2.9 percent in July 2002. The average electricity bill went down by 6.1 percent in July from the level a month ago.

In areas outside Metro Manila, year-on-year inflation was lower at 2.5 percent in July. Electricity bills in these areas also dropped at the average rate of 2.0 percent from the previous month.

Virginia Aquino of Taytay, Rizal and Lolita Narcasi of General Mariano Alvarez in Cavite share a common observation. Both are in the “untiring” business of dipping their hands on money matters in so far as looking after their families is concerned.

Aquino and Narcasi look forward to increasing their assets, perhaps a washing machine, a small refrigerator or a colored 14-inch television to grace their humble homes. Of course, they will use their power bill “savings.”

Maximo Agustin of Pulilan, Bulacan, with his “extra money,” hopes to buy a few pieces of aluminum roofing and plywood “to make his house more livable.” Agustin’s power bill went down to P700 in July from over P1,000 in May.

Aquino, Narcasi and Agustin are from outside Metro Manila. But they are within reach of President Macapagal-Arroyo’s bid to provide the people, particularly the urban poor, more ways to enjoy the benefits of a productive life and a secure environment.

A report from the Department of Energy shows that an additional 1,513 barangays nationwide have been provided electricity as of mid-July.

Energy Secretary Vicente Perez, Jr. says the electrification program is designed to encourage more economic activity in rural areas and create more jobs for Filipinos, a basic component of President Macapagal-Arroyo's agenda to win the war against poverty within the decade.

Since electricity is a vital component of economic development, the President has vowed, in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July 2001, to "light up" four unenergized barangays daily for a year.

Perez says the accelerated O-Ilaw Electrification program has provided power to 522 barangays in Luzon, 598 barangays in the Visayas and 393 barangays in Mindanao.

In her second SONA delivered before the joint session of Congress last July 22, the President has stressed that the people's electric bills have been "a pet concern for the moment. I think about it all the time."

She has stressed that the Philippines used to have the second most expensive power rates in Asia. "Now we have gone down to 6th ... the first fruit of a comprehensive ten-point plan we have put in place to reduce power costs."

"With cheaper power will come a more competitive economy, and more investors," she has said, hinting that this will further lead to more jobs and a better life for Filipinos.

GMA personally condoles with Cunanan's family

MINALIN, Pampanga – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today motored to Barangay San Francisco in this town to personally condole and sympathize with the family of Adelina Cunanan, one of the two Filipina caregivers who died in a Palestinian bomb attack in northern Israel last Sunday.

The President informed Pablo and Ines Lagunilla, parents of Cunanan, that she would not be able to visit the family when the remains of victim arrive this Friday. She said she will be in Virac, Catanduanes on that day.

The President, who transferred to one of her escort vehicles when she reached the town proper, braved the floods and rough road in going to a chapel in Barangay San Francisco, which is near the house of Cunanan's parent.

In the barangay chapel, which was flooded, the President talked to the family of Cunanan and assured them that all possible assistance from concerned government agencies will be extended to them.

The President personally handed her cash assistance of P50,000 to Ines Lagunilla, the mother of Cunanan.

The President also informed the bereaved parents that since Cunanan is a documented worker, she is covered by the Institute of National Insurance of Israel. The family of the Cunanan will be entitled to full insurance benefits from the Israeli institution.

The President was accompanied by his son, Vice Governor Juan Miguel M. Arroyo of Pampanga.

GMA stresses need to ensure democracy in RP

CLARK SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE, Mabalacat, Pampanga—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed that democracy in the Philippines should be ensured so that investments, that would provide jobs to Filipinos, will keep on coming to the country.

In her remarks at the special meeting of the Regional Peace and Order Council (RPOC) of Region 3 held here, the President said the meeting was very timely in the wake of the call by exiled communist leader Jose Maria Sison for the New People's Army (NPA) to launch attacks against the government.

During the meeting, the President was presented with the insurgency problem in Central Luzon.

After being informed that some new barangay officials in Region 3 are communists, the President ordered concerned government agencies to find out the reasons why they won in the last barangay elections.

The President congratulated the people of Pampanga, her home province, for not electing any communists in the July 15 barangay polls.

Most of the communists who won in the barangay elections are in Tarlac, some in Bataan, Bulacan, and Aurora.

Press statement of Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye

We are commenting on a matter that is still developing.

Mrs. Acsa Ramirez was presented to the President last August 2, as someone under investigation by the NBI in connection with money laundering case at LBP branch at Binangonan.

As of this time, Mrs. Ramirez has not yet been charged nor has she been cleared by the NBI.

The President has ordered the NBI to expedite its investigation and let the evidence settle this controversy.

Mrs. Ramirez should be cleared or charged, as soon as possible, as the evidence warrants.

Kimberly-Clark not moving out, Malacañang assured

Malacañang was assured today by Kimberly-Clark Corporation that it is not pulling out of the country, contrary to some media reports that claim that it has actually moved out or decided not to move its regional headquarters to the Philippines.

Kimberly-Clark (K-C) Corp. vice president and legal counsel Thomas D. Brown Jr., assured Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye during a courtesy call at Malacañang of continued interest in the country.

"Media reports have recently suggested that Kimberly-Clark Corp. was moving or had actually moved out of the Philippines, or has decided not to move its regional headquarters to the Philippines. These reports are inaccurate," Brown said.

Brown stressed that Kimberly-Clark has no plans to stop servicing such a large and important market as the Philippines, where its brands have been consumer favorites for decades.

"As well, Kimberly-Clark's Asia-Pacific regional headquarters had been located in Thailand for nearly ten years and there are no plans to relocate it," he added.

Brown noted that Kimberly-Clark Corporation's regional investment decisions, including the company's acquisition last year of locally-owned shares in K-C Philippines, Inc., are always made based on objective business factors.

These objective business factors, Brown said, have "form the basis for Kimberly-Clark's well-known investment initiatives over the past ten years to acquire 100 percent ownership of its operations in Asia-Pacific, as most recently demonstrated by the Corporation acquiring the locally-owned shares of its affiliated companies in Taiwan, Vietnam, Philippines and, in June of this year, Australia and New Zealand."

He also noted that Kimberly-Clark "has always adhered to a strong code of ethics in business dealings."

He said K-C strongly supports President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's work and actions to develop and enhance a stable, ethical and transparent business and governmental community in the Philippines.

Bunye thanked Brown for the clarification.

He assured Brown of unceasing efforts from the President and the administration to make the Philippines a competitive market.

Settling in the Philippines nearly 40 years ago, Kimberly Clark has been providing Filipinos with personal care, tissue and health care brands such as Kleenex, Scott, Joy, Huggies, Kimbies, Kotex and Newtex. It is also a major producer of premium business, correspondence and technical papers.

The company has manufacturing operations in 42 countries and its products are sold in more than 150 countries. It employs more than 64, 000 workers world-wide and registers $14-billion sales annually.

GMA cites Land Bank's role in gov't land reform program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the Land Bank of the Philippines for making it possible for the government to surpass its target on land distribution even if the national budget for land reform was a pittance.

In her message at the 39th anniversary celebration and awarding ceremony of Land Bank held in Malacañang this morning, the President also congratulated the Land Bank for beginning to return to its original mandate to finance land reform as provided in the Land Reform Code of 1963.

During her speech, the President cited two essential features that marks a strong Republic – independence from class and sectoral interest and the capacity represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy to execute good policy and deliver essential services that only governments can do.

“The Land Bank contributes to both essentials of a strong Philippine Republic. By financing land reform, the Land Bank stands for the interest of the people, especially the masses of the small farmers, rather than of a powerful minority in the landlord class,” the President said.

She recalled that her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, once said that the date August 8 was the happiest day in his life because it was during that day in 1963 when he signed the Land Reform Code that eventually created the Land Bank.

“It was the happiest day in his life because one of his main purpose as President was to have land reform in the country,” the President said.

The President recalled that in signing the law, her father had said: “Let the signing be recorded in our annals as an act of emancipation of the toiling farmer from slavery to death, poverty and misery and of his dignification of a human being and as citizen.”

After 39 years, however, the President said land reform remains to be accomplished.

“I feel privileged and blessed that I can pick up from where he (President Macapagal) left and carry on his battles,” the President said.

The President pointed out that the more than 100,000 hectares distributed by the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) and the more than 150,000 hectares distributed by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) were higher than the targets that were set in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) in July last year.

This, she said, was achieved under a budget inherited by the previous administration which could only cover 70,000 hectares of compensable land.

The President said it was accomplished by the DAR through the help of the Land Bank of the Philippines.

The Chief Executive narrated that her father believed from his own sad childhood experience that to achieve prosperity that could be shared by all, it was imperative to release the impoverished tenant from his bondage to the soil.

Her father, the President added, considered it an irony that the Philippines had the best agricultural school in Los Baños – the International Rice Research Institute, which was created during his watch.

At that time, other countries were producing 100 cavans per hectare of rice while the Philippines was only producing 27 cavans, the President noted.

She said that in the mind of her father, the main reason was the lack of interest on the part of the tenants in acquiring advanced rice technology “simply because they did not benefit from any increase in productivity.”

On the same occasion, the President outlined her father’s program of government which, she said, is still relevant in this new millennium as it was 40 years ago, adding that this is now being reflected in her own platform of government.

“According to my father, the task of the nation is to fight poverty. We must be concerned with the plight of the common man as an imperative of justice,” she stressed.

The President saw the need to bridge the wide gap between the poor man and the man of wealth, not by pulling down the rich to the level of the poor but by raising the poor towards the more abundant life.

To achieve the goal of addressing poverty, she said her father’s program, like hers, had four components: the adoption of an economic philosophy of free enterprise by the private sector; a concrete program of economic and social development for the guidance of the nation; land reform by making feasible agro-industrial growth and to make prosperity available to the greater number, and to improve moral standards in government and society.

GMA presents awards to top cooperatives

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented awards to the 12 winning cooperatives of the country in the annual Gawad sa Pinakatanging Kooperatiba sponsored by the Land Bank of the Philippines.

The President also congratulated Land Bank on its 39th anniversary celebration during the ceremony held at Malacañang’s Ceremonial Hall this morning.

During the program, President confessed to Land Bank officials and employees, including the delegation of participating cooperatives, that the reason why she decided to celebrate today the Annual Gawad sa Pinakatanging Kooperatiba.

The President admitted that August 8 is the day when her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, signed the Land Reform Code which also created the Land Bank. The Land Reform Code was signed by President Macapagal on August 8, 1963.

“Pinakamasayang araw ito sa kanyang buhay dahil para sa kanya ang pinakapakay niya sa pagiging Presidente ay magkaroon ng reporma sa lupa sa ating bansa (This was the happiest moment in his life because his objective as President was to have land reform in our country),” the President said.

The President also recalled that when her father assumed the presidency, he took inspiration from the revolution of a plebeian, Andres Bonifacio, and said he regarded the task of the presidency as an unfinished and peaceful revolution.

“Since the revolution was launched by Bonifacio, a man of the masses, it can be assumed that he would have freed the people not only from foreign rule but also from exploitation by their own countrymen,” she said.

The President, together with Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Land Bank president and chief executive officer Gary Teves and Senator Rodolfo Biazon, chairman of the board of judges, conferred the awards to the winning cooperatives under the agri-based and non agri-based categories.

Winners under the agri-based category are:

1st place – Tayabas Community Multi-Purpose Cooperative of Tayabas, Quezon which won P500,000 worth of fixed assets and a study tour to the Bavarian Cooperative sector in Bavaria, Germany courtesy of the Hans Seidell Foundation.

2nd place – Diffun Credit and Development Cooperative of Diffun, Quirino which received P400,000 in the form of fixed assets;

3rd place – Philippine Army Finance Center Producers Integrated Cooperative of Fort Bonifacio, Makati City which got P100,000 in the form of fixed assets;

4th place – Five Star Savings Credit Cooperative of Gamu, Isabela which was awarded P75,000 in the form of fixed assets;

5th place – Gubat St. Anthony Credit Cooperative of Gubat, Sorsogon which was awarded P50,000 in the form of fixed assets;

The awardees under the non agri-based category were:

1st place – Barangka Credit Cooperative of Barangka, Marikina City which got P300,000 worth of fixed assets;

2nd place – NV Alay Kapwa Multi-Purpose Cooperative of Solano, Nueva Vizcaya which got P200,000 worth of fixed assets;

3rd place – Philippine Army Finance Center Producers Integrated Cooperative of Fort Bonfiacio, Makati City which awarded P100,000 fixed assets;

4th place – Five Star Savings Credit Cooperative of Gamu, Isabela which got P75,000 fixed assets;

5th place – Gubat St. Anthony Credit Cooperative of Gubat, Sorsogon which won P50,000 in the form of fixed assets.

For the Cooperative Rural Bank category, the Co-op Bank of Bohol was adjudged as the most outstanding, bringing home the P200,000 cash prize while the second place went to the First Isabela Co-op Bank which received P100,000 in cash prize.

The Gawad Pitak is Land Bank's annual search for the country's most outstanding cooperatives. It aims to recognize the exemplary performance of bank-assisted cooperatives, honor their achievements and inspire other fledging cooperatives.

GMA thanks volunteer lawyers for offering free legal services to government

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked some 70 topnotch volunteer lawyers, who are graduates of reputable law schools, for offering their free legal services in the prosecution of some 300 tax cases and in helping fight corruption in the government.

In her extemporaneous remarks during a meeting with the volunteer lawyers in Malacañang, the President said the free legal services would contribute to the building of a strong Republic, which she had pledged in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA).

The President said that the services of the volunteer lawyers would be of great help in going after corrupt officials in such agencies as the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR), the Bureau of Customs (BoC), and the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH).

“Sa tatlo na yan, BIR, Customs at DPWH, pinakamabibigat na mga ahensiya sa ating paglaban kontra sa katiwalian (Our fight against corruption is centered in these three agencies),” the President said.

The President said that the Office of the Government Corporate Counsel (OGCC) would supervise the work of the volunteer lawyers.

She said that on Wednesday, she had ordered the OGCC to file appropriate charges against three bureau directors and 38 employees of the DPWH for their alleged involvement in the P139- million vehicle repair anomaly in the department.

The President said that because of the lack of government lawyers, the OGCC could not possibly prosecute the 300 cases of under-declaration of the value-added tax (VAT) filed by the BIR against certain individuals and firms.

Aside from the tax cases, the government is now also stepping up its fight against smuggling in different parts of the country.

She said that one problem encountered by government prosecutors in the fight against smuggling is the penchant of some judges to issue a temporary restraining order (TRO).

“Kaya pag ganoon ang kalaban, talagang kailangan ng mahigpit ang ating mga abogado, matitino at magagaling (So, with this adversary, we need lawyers who are upright, talented and willing to sacrifice),” the President said.

Boncodin says revenue goals can be met

Government projections on revenues that can be raised are not that really hard to meet.

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin today stressed this, as she explained that an inter-agency committee made the revenue collection targets with due bases.

In a radio interview, Boncodin said “kung titingnan mo ‘yang mga indicators ... hindi naman suntok sa buwan ang targeting (if we look at indicators, our targets are achievable).”

She said the inter-agency group preparing the revenue targets is led by the Department of Finance (DOF). The group’s output is then studied for approval by the Development Budget Coordination Committee among whose members are the DOF, Department of the Budget and Management, National Economic and Development Authority, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas and the Office of the President.

She added that the country’s tax structure and the experiences of other countries are two of the bases for setting revenue targets. She called next year’s revenue targets as “overly optimistic.”

“We have not changed procedures in determining revenue goals. Yet, there were many times when revenue collection agencies met and even exceeded targets,” she noted.

But Boncodin said collection shortfalls could also be attributed to problems haunting collection agencies like the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and the Bureau of Customs (BoC).

She pointed to tax evasion and under declaration, among other things, as major causes of income shortfalls.

“This is why Commissioner Rene Bañez is working doubly hard, seeking to correct the anomaly,” she said.

The BIR and BoC are implementing steps to achieve revenue targets. Admitting low collections in the first semester of 2002, she said the government is working on how to do away with shortfalls from this time until the end of the year.

Looking into tax under declarations was one of the measures the agencies has been carrying out, she added.

Bañez, for one, has a BIR transformation program that “we fully support,” Boncodin said. The agency has focused on areas where it could get bigger revenues.

The BIR has asked the DBM’s help in hiring lawyers, through the Department of Justice, to prosecute erring members of the private sector that could afford top-notch legal counsels.

With sustained legal help, there are assurances that the BIR would reach their collection targets.

GMA congratulates Land Bank for achievements

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today personally thanked the Land Bank of the Philippines for its continued support in financing the Land Reform Code of 1963.

She also congratulated the Land Bank for making it possible to surpass the government’s target for land distribution even if the national budget for land reform was a pittance.

The President also extended her gratitude to LBP president and chief executive officer Gary Teves for the turnover of the P250-million cash dividend and P500-million stock certificates.

President Arroyo handed over the check and stock certificates to National Treasurer Sergio Edeza.

The Land Bank declared to the national government a total of P780 million in cash and stock dividends for its 2001 net income.

Cash dividends declared for last year’s net income amounted to P280 million where P54 million was remitted to the government in August last year as advance remittance.

The check of the remaining P226-million cash dividend and P500-million stock certificate were handed over to the President by Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho and Teves.

For the eight-year period from 1994 to 2001, Land Bank has declared total dividends of P10.1 billion to the national government.

Land Bank does not receive budget allocations to finance its countryside development activities. Instead, it uses the profits generated from its commercial banking operations to sustain its developmental initiatives in the rural areas such as the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP), credit assistance to farmers and fisher folk cooperatives and institutional-building support for the cooperatives.

The P780-million dividends are in addition to the P300 million in CARP operating expenses which were absorbed by the bank in 2001.

Justice, fair play assured in Land Bank cases

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured that justice and fair play would prevail in the ongoing investigation of the money laundering case at the Land Bank of the Philippines branch in Binangonan, Rizal.

“Let us not have an extended run on this issue. We must move on with speedy and impartial justice,” the President said in her speech during the 39th anniversary celebration of the Land Bank of the Philippines in Malacañang.

The President said she has ordered the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) to determine once and for all, whether Land Bank cashier Acza Ramirez is culpable for violation of the anti-money laundering law.

“If she is culpable, I ordered the NBI to file charges immediately. And if she is innocent, I ordered the NBI to immediately clear her as well,” she said.

Ramirez was one of the two cashiers in the Land Bank branch in Binangonan during whose term 17 questionable transactions had been uncovered.

At the same time, the President expressed determination to get at the root of the tax diversion case which, she said, involved three related felonies – plunder due to the tax diversion of P200 million, conspiracy for tax evasion and money laundering.

By getting to the root of the cases as soon as possible, the Chief Executive expressed her trust that the good name of Land Bank as an institution can be cleared and name of the majority of professionals in the said agency can be unburdened of the weight caused by the discovery of the anomaly.

The President said she felt sad that the anomaly came at a time when Land Bank was riding high on its sterling achievements.

“It is unfortunate mainly because such hopefully rare and isolated case of misconduct and criminality tend to smear the name and majority of the upright, professional and dedicated workers of the bank as well as the good name and prestige of the institution as a whole,” she said.

Palace adopts non-exclusive policy for media

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today announced he would adopt of the policy of non-exclusivity in giving relevant information.

“All information will be freely given to everybody,” Bunye said, stressing that he would not give any special preference to any particular media group or reporter.

In his regular press briefing in Malacañang, Bunye said all questions would only be answered at the Briefing Room or during a tele-conference on Saturdays and Sundays.

He, however, said that he would only entertain interviews in his office if there are at least two media representatives representing other members of the Malacañang Press Corps. “So it’s not exclusive,” he said.

“We do not want to be perceived as playing favorite to one particular group,” he said.

Bunye added he did not consider radio interviews as exclusive, saying that once the information is aired, it becomes available to the public.

He expressed the hope that the policy of non-exclusivity would be fair to everybody.

“Our policy is to give timely, accurate and relevant information, and we would like to preserve the arrangement in Malacañang,” Bunye said.

Gov’t scores anew; GMA presents ex-cop leader of KFR gang, 7 kidnap suspects

The government scored another victory against kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gangs as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented at the Philippine National Police headquarters in Quezon City seven members of the Bucala KFR group and a former policeman suspected of leading the Durano KFR group.

At the same time, the President said she would continue to make the rounds of law-enforcement agencies and present criminals before the public.

“As for the controversy about showing criminals before the public, well, debate is free in a democratic society but let me declare that I will continue to make the rounds of law-enforcement agencies and present criminals before the public,” she said.

The President said she would “teach the lesson by humiliation if necessary” and follow it up with speedy prosecution.

“This will not abate until we have shown a clear manifestation in our seriousness and sincerity in this campaign,” she added.

She also said that she would not relent in her crusade for a morally upright and lawful society. “On the ground, I am happy to hear that a lot of feedback, that results of police action, are being talked about, being noticed by our citizenry. More and more information against criminals is being given to the police, and that is why more arrests are being done every day,” she said.

The seven members of the sub-group Lucido-Espillore gang under the Bucala KFR group were arrested last August 6 near the Manila Memorial Park Garden in Dasmarinas, Cavite by joint elements of the Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER), Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Cavite Provincial Police Office (PPO).

The suspects— namely Eufemio Lucido, Pedro Motas, Primitivo Panganiban, Agapito Motas, Alberto Olfato, Reynaldo Maligalig, Pio Purificacion— were caught by PACER operatives on board two vehicles, a jeep with and a Mitsubishi Lancer.

Monitoring of their activities indicated that the suspects were on their way to conduct another kidnap attempt.

Confiscated from the group were several high-powered firearms, cell phones and handcuffs.

Meanwhile, joint operations of PACER, Aviation Security Group and Police Region Office 7 led to the arrest today of former PO3 Engelberto Durano alias Kevin Durano alias Kevin Lopez at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport while he was about to board an aircraft bound for Bacolod.

The President congratulated Police Director Avelino Razon, who until recently was Regional Director for Region 7 and who knows this case very well, for leading the arresting team.

Durano, one of those listed in the PNP Order of Battle Watchlist, is the leader of the Durano KFR group.

The President said that in both cases, close coordination and good interoperability between units brought about these major accomplishments.

“These events are not happening by accident. These are the results of coordination, teamwork and concerted action by our law enforcement agencies and the military under the unified command concept.

The President said the two sets of arrests show that “we are moving forward both in our interdiction as well as prevention mode.”

“This means our intelligent resources are paying off and that we are on the right track. We will not this let the gangs get away. In fact, we are trying to get them while they are still planning out their moves. We know who they are and we will get them. I would like to assure the people that their faith in law and justice shall be redeemed,” she said.

GMA orders Napocor to solve power problem of Catanduanes town

BARAS, Catanduanes—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo assured local residents of this remote town that she would do whatever is possible and within her power to help them solve their problems, particularly in their power needs.

In her remarks during a visit to this town, which is celebrating its annual town fiesta, the President said because of the frequent power failure in the town, she has ordered the National Power Corporation (Napocor) to lease two generators to the municipality to solve their power problem.

The President told the town folk that her order for Napocor to bring the generators to this town was made a few days before her actual visit.

The generators, the President said, are now on their way to the town by land and would start operating on Tuesday, August 13.

“Ibabalita ko ang mga ginawa namin nitong mga nakaraang araw para ipaghanda itong ginhawa ninyo sa problema sa koryente (I would like to let you know what we have done during the past few days so that we can bring to you some good news about your power problem),” the President said to the cheers of the town folk.

The President said that she was glad to have visited the town because only by being here that she learned about the problems of the townspeople.

“Salamat nagkaroon ako ng pagkakataon makapunta rito. Salamat na lamang at nalaman ko ang pinakamatinding problema ninyo. Iyan ang ating ginagawa (I am grateful for the opportunity to visit your town. I am grateful that I have learned about your problems. And that is what we are addressing now),” the President said.

Early in her speech, the President recalled that only her late father, President Diosdado Macapagal, has visited the town, which is noted for its abaca fiber and marine products.

The President assured officials of this town that the national government would continue to support for their projects, particularly in agriculture and fishery.

GMA orders P3-M allocation for Catanduanes farm-to-market roads

BARAS, Catanduanes – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the allocation of some P3 million for the construction and improvement of farm-to-market roads in Catanduanes province.

In a speech before Baras officials and thousands of residents at the town plaza here, the President noted that Catanduanes, particularly the town of Baras, should get the necessary attention in so far as agricultural modernization was concerned.

She directed Bicol's agriculture regional director Fe Di Laysa, this year's outstanding agriculturist, to see to it that the farm-to-market roads are fast-tracked to complement other infrastructure supportive of agri-fishery development and trade in the area.

The Chief Executive flew here this morning to join the townsfolk in celebrating the Baras fiesta tomorrow (August 10) and to oversee the government's programs in the area.

In her speech, she recalled that in her recent State of the Nation Address, she exhorted local officials to help the administration build a stronger republic; and Catanduanes, a small province with a small Internal Revenue Allotment, could use only P20 million for infrastructure.

"Kaya kailangan ko sila, hindi lamang sa imprastruktura na kailangan ay tulong-tulong tayo dahil kulang, ngunit para na ring matiyak ang seguridad at kaligtasan ng mga mamamayan laban sa kriminalidad at terorismo (I need the help of local officials, not only to build more infrastructure facilities here, but also to ensure that the people are secured and safe from the threats of criminality and terrorism)," she said.

The President noted local government efforts in boosting crop and fishery production in Baras and Catanduanes.

Baras is also known for its abaca fiber industry that has penetrated high fashion, particularly in sinamay shirt making.

"Ito ay naayon sa ating programa, iyong modernisasyon ng agrikultura at pangangisda (All these correspond to the national government's agri-fishery modernization program)," the President said.

She added that programs on developing the area's cottage industry and tourism potentials should also be undertaken to spur livelihood and more socio-economic opportunities for the people.

"Asahan ninyo na ang inyong mga proyekto na nasa ilalim nito ay bibigyan ko ng lubos na suporta (Be assured that all your projects falling under the agricultural modernization program will get my full support)," she said.

The President also announced the distribution of 100 packages to poor residents of Baras, her gift to them for tomorrow's town fiesta.

She also handed out 1,068 health cards to beneficiaries in Catanduanes, as she congratulated Governor Leandro Verceles Jr. for taking all the effort to pay some P5 million for the health insurance coverage of his poor constituents.

She said she considered Catanduanes as number one per capita on health insurance coverage in the Bicol region and number two or three in the whole Philippines.

The President, accompanied by Energy Secretary Vicente Perez Jr., arrived here at about 10:10 a.m. Upon her arrival, she was met and welcomed by Baras Mayor Jose Tevez and Gov. Verceles.

GMA orders police to protect poor, not just rich and influential, from crime

ANTIPOLO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Philippine National Police to protect the poor from crimes, not just the rich and the influential, even as she took note of the difficulties law enforcers faced in the performance of their duties.

The President motored directly to the Cogeo Police Sub-station in Antipolo after a visit to Baras, Catanduanes this morning to commend the local police for their good work in protecting the poor communities in their jurisdiction and for their continued active response to the administration's campaign against all forms of criminality.

She commended in particular the policemen who arrested one of three men who held up her manicurist, Anita Valderama, a few weeks ago of $500 and P3,000 in cash and assorted jewelry.

“I would like to commend the men for their good work, for their sacrifices, because in spite of the difficulties that they are facing, they have continued to arrest notorious holdup suspects and other criminals and prevent serious crimes from happening,” President said in her brief remarks before the policemen and residents of Cogeo at the local police station.

“We should not tolerate pocket of lawlessness in our poorer community. We must make sure that ordinary people have the mantle of law enforcement and law protection just like the more affluent areas. And this is another mandate I have placed upon the shoulders of the PNP leadership,” the President added.

The President said she was aware of the difficulties faced by the police who have to operate and perform their duties under heavy constraints, particularly in terms of mobility and lack of communication facilities.

She said she also learned the problems of the police in the area after her manicurist informed her that she was victimized by holdup men in the area a month ago.

One of the holdup suspects, Tomas Fuller y Santos, 16, a member of the Ipit Taxi Gang and resident of Sto. Domingo, Quezon City, has been arrested. He is now under the custody of the Central Police District while his two other companions are now being hunted by the police.

The police reported to the President that Fuller was arrested three days ago in Quezon City after successful follow-up operations against the Ipit Taxi Gang.

“The plight of my manicurist has reflected the plight of ordinary people victimized by criminals. I sympathize with her just as I am deeply concerned about people losing their hard-earned money to muggers,” the President said.

“We must protect the poor from crimes, not just the rich and the influential,” the President said as she ordered Philippine National Police chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane to improve and provide new facilities to the Cogeo Police Sub-Station.

The President announced that Ebdane would provide radio communications facilities and cellular phones to the Cogeo police while Antipolo City Mayor Angelito Gatlabayan also promised to provide telephone lines for them.

The Chief Executive added that the Office of the President would contribute P250,000 in cash to support the P500,000 already given by Governor Rebecca Ynarez and Mayor Gatlabayan for the construction of a new police sub-station.

Palace clarified Kimberly Clark issue

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, putting the record straight, said today that the media interpretation that Kimberly Clark, a multinational corporation, has moved out of the Philippines, is incorrect.

In his regular press briefing, Bunye clarified that what President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo referred to in her recent State of the Nation Address when she said “Kaya tuloy ang Kimberly Clark ay dinala ang kanyang Asia operations sa Thailand imbes na sa Pilipinas” were Kimberly-Clark’s new projects.

The Press Secretary said that instead of setting up new projects in the Philippines, they opted for Thailand, site of the headquarters of Kimberly-Clark’s Asia operations.

“So clearly walang kuryente na nangyari (So, clearly there was no blooper),” Bunye said.

Giving the correct interpretation, Bunye said that Kimberly Clark is a huge international organization with operations in 42 countries.

It has operations in the Philippines as well as in various parts of Southeast Asia and of the world, Bunye said.

With regional hub in Bangkok, Bunye said that as a giant corporation Kimberly Clark continues to seek avenues for expansion.

“The President did not say that Kimberly Clark Philippines moved out of the Philippines, what the President meant in her SONA was that in view of recent developments, such as perceived faulty justice system, the regional headquarters decided to divert expansion projects to Thailand,” Bunye explained.

Bunye said the President was not fed any wrong information and she is fully aware of what the real situation is as far as the Philippine plant of Kimberly Clark in San Pedro, Laguna is concerned.

“Because Kimberly Clark is located in San Pedro, Laguna, which is ten minutes from where I live, I know that the company has never left, they never ceased operations in that area and the President knows that Kimberly Clark has not moved out of that area,” Bunye said.

Gov’t can handle emergency evacuation of OFWs from Iraq if situation requires — Palace

Malacañang said today that the government is prepared for any contingency evacuation of overseas Filipino workers from Iraq in case the United States pushes through with its plan to launch a military offensive against the Saddam Hussein regime in Baghdad.

In his regular press briefing, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that at present there are only about 117 OFWs in Baghdad.

Bunye said that in the past, the Philippine government was able to handle the evacuation of even greater number of Filipinos during several international crises in Iraq.

The first time, Bunye said, the government evacuated some 40,000 Filipinos from Iraq and there were no major problems encountered.

During the term of President George Bush, the current US President’s father, some 25,000 Filipinos were also evacuated from Iraq over a period of few weeks and there were also no problems, Bunye said.

“So, I don’t think any major problem would arise if there is going to be an evacuation now,” Bunye said.

He said that if the Philippines was able to handle the previous emergency situation, then we can handle “this smaller group again.”

Gov’t to appeal Canadian court’s ruling on Pacificador extradition case — Palace

Malacañang today said that the Philippine government will file a motion for reconsideration of the decision of the Canadian court denying the government’s request for the extradition to the Philippines of Rodolfo Pacificador, one of the accused in the 1986 assassination of former Antique Governor Evelio Javier.

In his regular press briefing, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the government would have to avail itself of the appeals process in the Canadian justice system.

He said that the Philippine government has 60 days to appeal the decision of the Ontario Court of Appeals on the extradition case.

On the reported side comments of the Canadian court about the so-called slow justice in the Philippines, Bunye said this is now being addressed by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

“The Philippine government under the leadership of President Macapagal-Arroyo is doing something about it. The President’s focus now is on how to streamline operations and also to streamline the bureaucracy,” Bunye said.

The extradition proceedings against the young Pacificador began in August 1991, nine months after the Philippines and Canada signed an extradition treaty on Nov. 12, 1990.

Pacificador, son of former Antique Assemblyman Arturo Pacificador, is among the principal accused in the celebrated Javier assassination case.

Bunye also discounted the need for filing a diplomatic protest over the Canadian court’s ruling on the Pacificador case.

A diplomatic protest, Bunye said, is a mode that is taken only after certain steps. “It is not taken very casually in every adverse remark or development,” he said.

GMA condoles with family of slain Pampanga cop

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo personally condoled Friday night with the family of Police Officer 3 Oliver Benedicto who was killed in a shootout with five bus hold-uppers along the North Luzon Expressway Tuesday night (August 6).

The President made an unscheduled visit to the wake of the slain police officer at 2575 Tejeron St., Sta. Ana, Manila to personally extend her condolences and sympathies to the victim's wife, Virginia. She stayed for about 30 minutes in the slain policeman's residence.

She also handed over to Virginia her cash assistance of P50,000.

Earlier, the President ordered police authorities to conduct a massive manhunt for the killers of Benedicto who are still at large.

Benedicto, 32, who was assigned to the Pampanga police force, was heading home aboard an Aladdin Transport Bus bound for Manila when the robbers announced the holdup.

Benedicto, who was in uniform, announced that he was a police officer and immediately fired his gun, injuring three of the five robbers.

Two of the robbers, who came from behind, ganged up on Benedicto and stabbed him. He later succumbed to 14 stab wounds and a gunshot wound.

Friday was a busy day for the President, who, in the morning, visited the remote town of Baras in Catanduanes where she assured residents of her continued support for their projects, particularly in agriculture and fishery.

In the afternoon, the President motored to the COGEO Police sub-station in Antipolo City where she personally commended policemen who arrested one of the three men who held up her manicurist Anita Valderrama.

GMA changes mind, meets remains of two Pinay caregivers at the airport

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo decided Friday night to motor to the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) to be on hand when the remains of the two Filipino caregivers who were killed in a Palestinian bomb attack in Israel arrived from Tel Aviv.

Last Wednesday, August 7, the President motored to Minalin, Pampanga where she personally extended her condolences to the parents of Adelina Cunanan, one of the two Filipina victims in the bomb attack.

During her visit to Minalin, the President informed Cunanan's parents that she might not be able to be at the airport when her body would arrive because she will be visiting Baras, Catanduanes that Friday.

But the President changed her mind and decided to be at the NAIA when the remains of the two Filipina caregivers arrived to show that her administration is really concerned with the welfare of the overseas Filipino workers.

The President, who was accompanied by Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople and Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, talked with the families of Cunanan and Rebecca Ruga, the other Filipina victim in the bomb attack.

The bodies of the two victims arrived at around 7:45 p.m. on board Lufthansa Airlines.

The President handed over to the brothers of Rebecca Ruga her cash assistance of P50,000. In her visit to Minalin earlier, the President also gave P50,000 as her cash assistance to the Cunanan family.

The President has earlier ordered Ople and Sto. Tomas to extend all assistance to the families of the two victims, including transporting the remains to their respective hometowns.

Palace hoping that peace accord with NDF finalized soon

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye has said that Malacanang is hoping that the announced resumption of the peace negotiations between the government and the communists would result in the forging of a peace accord.

In his press briefing Friday, Bunye said that he shared the expression of hope of Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. that a peace agreement between the government and the National Democratic Front (NDF) would soon be sealed.

“We want to put a successful conclusion to this peace negotiation,” Bunye said.

Bunye said that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration is hoping that this negotiation “would be terminated to the satisfaction of both sides at the earliest time possible.”

He said that the continued operations of both sides are counter-productive and have distracted us from the real problem of developing our country.

Bunye said that even during the suspension of the formal talks middle of last year, lines of communications between the government and the NDF leadership in the Netherlands have remained open.

“Even when there was fighting on the ground, communication lines were open. This is known as back-channeling,” Bunye said.

Silvestre Bello, III, chief government negotiator, said Friday that talks with the NDF could resume either last week of August or middle of September.

According to Bunye, the inclusion of two officials—Silvestre Afable, head of the Presidential Management Staff, and Presidential Adviser Norberto Conzales—in the back channeling group, could speed up the peace process.

“I believe that the recent assignment of two more negotiators who have had experience in such work indicate that the government wants to speed up the resolution of this problem,” Bunye said.

GMA visits injured construction worker at PGH

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo made an unscheduled visit this morning to the Philippine General Hospital (PGH) to see for herself the condition of a construction worker who has been rescued after being buried alive for five hours during an accident that occurred early dawn at a construction site in San Beda College, along Mendiola Street in Manila.

The President went directly to the X'Ray room of the government hospital where the victim, Gerry Garcia, was being examined.

The President also talked to Gerry's mother, Mrs. Delia Garcia, and handed her the amount of P10,000 as her personal assistance for the medical needs of the patient.

According to reports, rescue workers from the Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP) had to dig through the concrete rubble to free Garcia who was trapped inside the collapsed concrete beam of the school's gymnasium that is being renovated.

Three workers were killed and two others were hospitalized after the scaffolding that suspended the beams and lumber caved in at 4:00 a.m.

Garcia was provided with an oxygen mask and dextrose to enable him to breath while rescuers worked to free his legs that were covered with cement.

"We have to move fast because the cement was drying quickly. We sprayed water on Garcia's lower body so the cement would not dry on his legs," BFP official Col. Rafael Corveta said.

As the rescue efforts entered the fifth hour, fire fighters pulled Garcia out of the hole and lifted him into a stretcher and then took him to the PGH.

GMA taps village leaders in anti-poverty drive

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will tap all the newly-elected barangay officials in the country to take an active role in the fight against poverty and the promotion of good governance in their respective areas.

In pursuit of her State of the Nation Address (SONA) to build a strong Republic, the President has tasked the Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG) to start this month a series of orientation and enhancement courses for the newly-elected and re-elected barangay officials in the recently concluded synchronized barangay polls.

DILG Secretary Jose Lina said the new set of barangay officials would undergo training under the auspices of the Barangay Governance and Development Program (BGDP) starting August 15.

Expected to join the training program are no less than 335,544 punong barangays (village officials) and kagawad (councilmen) members of the country's 41,943 barangays.

Lina said the Local Government Academy, the training arm of the department, has prepared a number of modules for the training activities of the newly-elected or re-elected barangay officials.

The orientation course, will be divided into five modules namely, Barangay and Its Environment; The Barangay Government; Managing the Administrative Challenges; Charting the Destiny of the Barangay; and Barangay Performance Management.

In the enhancement course, the barangay officials will be taught on Strategic Planning; Building Community Partnership and Networking; Budgeting and Financial Management Analysis; Resource Mobilization, Maintaining Public Safety; Basic Services Delivery; Project Management; Solid Waste Management, Leadership and Livelihood Development.

The courses are designed to address the competency gaps of barangay officials as leaders of local communities and as managers of local development.

"2002 is a critical year for us with the election of thousands of barangay officials who will need training on the various aspects of barangay administration," Lina said.

To ensure the effective conduct of the training activities, the Local Government Academy in coordination with the Philippine-Canada Local Support Program, has conducted a trainers' training for DILG regional and field officers who will serve as trainers for the barangay orientation and enhancement courses.

A DILG report said that some 437 DILG regional and field officers nationwide were trained on the new approaches and methodologies on effective barangay

People happy over reduced electric bills

More people are enjoying financial relief and a lot of savings from plunging power rates in Metro Manila and nearby provinces.

“I used to budget P1,700 from my measly income to pay my monthly power bill. Last June and July, I was relieved to find out that my electric bills went down to P1,200 and P1,000, respectively,” says Myrna Rodriguez, a government employee who lives in Kamuning, Quezon City.

“I could use the savings for more important things like more food on our table, small home repairs, new clothes for the children or a first-aid kit,” echoes Francis Apoderado of Sta. Cruz, Manila whose P2,000 electric bill in June went down by over P500 in July.

Like them, newshen Baby Cayaba is glad the government has taken a fearless stand in cutting down the costs of power.

“Thanks to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, everyone’s future is becoming brighter,” Cayaba said, narrating that she and husband Cris could not believe their eyes when they saw their July power bill. “It was all of P1,080. In June, it was P1,800 and in May, P2,500.”

A Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) report shows that the year-on-year inflation in July 2002 has slowed down to 2.6 percent from 3.0 percent in June 2002, mainly due to the 3.9-percent dip in electric bills associated with the cut in purchased power adjustment (PPA) costs.

Homemakers and domestic budget czarinas Virginia Aquino of Taytay, Rizal and Lolita Narcasi of General Mariano Alvarez in Cavite share a common observation. Both are looking forward to increasing their assets, perhaps a washing machine, a small refrigerator or a colored 14-inch television to grace their homes, since they now have power bill “savings.”

Maximo Agustin of Pulilan, Bulacan, with his “extra money,” hopes to buy a few pieces of aluminum roofing and plywood “to make his house more livable.” Agustin’s power bill went down to P700 in July from over P1,000 in May.

Metro Manilans and those in nearby provinces are within reach of President Macapagal-Arroyo’s bid to provide the urban and rural poor more ways to enjoy the benefits of a productive life and a secure environment.

A Department of Energy report shows that an additional 1,513 barangays nationwide have been provided electricity as of mid-July.

Palace yet to see U.S. declaration of CPP-NPA as foreign terrorist group

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today said Malacañang has yet to see a copy of an announcement made by the United States State Department naming the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (CPP-NPA) as a foreign terrorist group.

In a media teleconference, Bunye said he was told by Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja Jr. that the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) has not received any official transmittal from American officials on the matter.

“Maybe we should wait a little while until we get the final documents,” he said.

He said he was sure the DFA and other concerned agencies would get together, sit down, discuss, evaluate and come up with an official government position once the American announcement on the CPP-NPA comes in.

Among those he said who compose the review group included the DFA, the National Security Adviser and maybe, the defense establishment.

Since the documents have not yet arrived, "I do not think we should pre-empt the decision or whatever type of response the group would have," he added, stressing that any response would be based on existing Philippine laws.

Bunye also clarified that as per practice, a US State Department declaration of an organization as a foreign terrorist group "is limited to restricting financial contributions to the identified organizations."

"They are just prohibiting (US citizens) from contributing and otherwise extending aid to (terrorist) organizations and they will restrict entry or travel of members of the organizations in the US," he said.

He termed this as the US "exclusion phase" for terrorists.

Communication lines to communists to remain open, recruits welcome to return to fold of law – Palace

Malacañang said today the government has kept its communication lines open to the communists and is ever ready to welcome them back into the fold of the law.

In a telephone interview with Palace reporters, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that two days ago, the government even designated two additional negotiators to show its sincerity in pursuing the peace process with the Communist Party of the Philippines-National Democratic Front and the New People's Army (CPP-NPA-NDF).

He also said a withdrawal of the CPP-NDF-NPA from the peace talks would be an unfortunate turn of events, stressing that President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo's "guideline is to keep the communication lines open."

Bunye also said "it's a pity" that many of the people who have been recruited into the communist organization "are not real ideologues."

These are people you always have to be ready to welcome back, he added.

Bunye also said the redeployment of military troops from Mindanao to other parts of the country is aimed to take defensive positions in areas which are perceived to be threatened.

He explained that those troops that were previously pulled out from Luzon and the Visayas were actually assigned to Mindanao at the height of the problem on Abu Sayyaf Group in the area.

Since the Armed Forces of the Philippine (AFP) has already effectively reduced the threat level posed by the Abu Sayyaf, he said it is now felt that the government troops can be redeployed to their original assignments.

Bunye sought to clarify anew reports on the alleged "all-out war" against the communist armed groups.

"The redeployment (of troops) now will be done to areas which are so-called threatened areas," he said.

- GMA prods police to push harder, work better, do more in war against criminals, lauds citizen support
- Gov't will continue to pursue peace process with communists, says Malacañang
- Palace hopes if price of crude oil goes down, oil firms would also lower their prices

GMA cites terroristic acts of NPA, CPP's armed component

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that for as long as the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) has an armed component that engages in terroristic activities, the CPP will still be considered as among the groups that violate the country's laws.

In her extemporaneous remarks during the presentation of suspected carnappers at Camp Crame in Quezon City this morning, the President said the New People's Army (NPA), the CPP's armed component, has been engaged in atrocities and other terroristic activities, like ambushes and extortion, especially in the countryside.

But the President clarified that communism itself is not illegal per se. She said that as a senator, she was among those who pushed for the passage of Republic Act 7636, repealing the anti-subversion law (RA 1700), thus making communism legal in the Philippines.

"Ang labag sa batas ay ang armed struggle to overthrow the government, lalo na kapag gumagawa sila ng terrositic acts (What is against the law is the armed struggle whose purpose is to overthrow the government, especially if it is engaged in terroristic acts)," the President said.

The President said that there are several groups that have been identified as communist or communist-oriented, specifically citing Akbayan and Sanlakas, but these groups, according to the President, do not have armed components.

"Basta hindi sila manggulo, basta hindi sila mag-instigate ng violence sa mga rally, wala rin silang problema sa batas (For as long as they do not create trouble, for as long as they do not instigate violence in their rallies, they will not have any problem with the law)," the President said.

The President said while there is an ongoing peace negotiation between the government and the National Democratic Front (NDF), the political arm of the CPP, she hopes that the NPA would stop its terroristic operations.

"Sana yong ginagawa nilang labag sa batas, yong mga atrocities ng NPA, yong mga ambush, yong mga terrositic acts, ay inaasahan natin na mapigil (We hope that their violations of our laws, the atrocities of the NPA, their ambushes, their terroristic acts, would be stopped)," the President said.

GMA prods police to push harder, work better, do more in war against criminals, lauds citizen support

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today challenged the Philippine National Police to "push harder, work better, do more" even as she praised the PNP for the significant strikes against criminals and the citizenry for taking a more active role in the administration's all-out campaign against criminality.

"There is no rest until our streets are safe," the President said in Camp Crame where she revealed four successful strikes against carnappers in four days and the neutralization of three car theft gangs operating in Metro Manila and nearby provinces.

She also lauded the people for their support in the fight against criminality, noting that more and more citizens are now doing their duty and helping the PNP by providing vital information against criminals and suspects.

“Over the last month, the PNP has arrested kidnapers, holdup men, carnappers, drug pushers – criminals who endanger our streets and our families,” the President said.

“Our uncompromising drive against carnappers has resulted in four strikes against carnappers in as many days,” she added.

Strike No. 1: August 7 in Bulacan, a residence used as a repair and repainting center was raided. Four vehicles, chop-chop (cannibalized) car parts and carnapping paraphernalia were recovered.

Strike No. 2: August 8 in Apalit, Pampanga, the leader of the Mayor Group, Andres Palabasan, Jr., and cohort Romy Arago were arrested. Citizen information was instrumental in the operation, the President said.

Strike No. 3: August 10 in Quezon City, a stolen Isuzu Crosswind was recovered two days after it was forcibly taken from its driver, Jefferson Espino, who was murdered during the carnapping incident. The possessor of the vehicle, Jose R. Samson, is now in custody.

Strike No. 4: August 11 in Pasay City, a stolen Mitsubishi Pajero was recovered less than five hours after the carnapping was reported to the police. Two members of the notorious carnapping syndicate Mechure Group – Alvin Magpayo and Philip Andre Navarro – were arrested.

“The full force of the PNP, particularly the Traffic Management Group, is conducting operations to hunt down identified members, and provide even more efficient solutions to carnapping incidents,” the President said.

The President also said the citizens’ active participation strengthened the administration’s campaign against crime.

She said she was “happy to note that citizens who have been victimized by the suspects we have arrested and presented to the public over the last few weeks are calling up to report that they, too, have been victimized and that they want to file charges.”

These victims who come forward only strengthen our cases against these suspects who have been caught in the act, the President said.

The President said she was at first hesitant to be photographed with the crime suspects at Camp Crame “kaya lamang, sa dalawang dahilan, kailangang gawin ko ito, lalo na sa araw na ito (but for two reasons I have to agree to do so, particularly on this day).”

First of all, the PNP has good news for the people, particularly for the victims of carnapping, about the four strikes against car thieves, the President said.

Secondly, the people, particularly victims, will get a chance to see the face of the suspects and encourage them to come forward and file their own complaints against the suspects.

Gov’t will continue to pursue peace process with communists, says Malacanang

Malacañang today said the government would pursue peace and development, especially in the countryside, by keeping its doors open for negotiations with the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army-National Democratic Front (CPP-NPA-NDF).

In a press briefing, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said it is the policy of the government to keep the communication lines with the CPP-NPA-NDF open while it abhors the use of “armed struggle” as a means to attain political ends.

Bunye stressed that mere membership in the CPP or any organizations espousing communism as an ideology, is not a crime.

Even membership in other leftist groups such as Sanlakas, Akbayan and the Partidong Komunista sa Pilipinas (PKP) of former rebel Luis Taruc are likewise not prohibited under the existing laws.

The legalization of membership in communist groups, he said, came after the passage of Republic Act No. 7636, which repealed R.A. 1700 or the anti-subversion law.

R.A. 7636, which was signed by former President Fidel V. Ramos on Sept. 23, 1992, legalizes the CPP, giving it political space and allowing it to compete in the free market of ideas under a democratic society.

“What is abhorred and proscribed is the use of armed struggle to attain political ends,” Bunye said.

He pointed out that there is no distinction whether such armed struggle was being done by communists or other ideologically oriented groups.

Earlier, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, in her extemporaneous remarks during the presentation of arrested carnappers at Camp Crame in Quezon City, said that for as long as the NPA, the armed component of the CPP, continues with its terroristic activities in its aim to overthrow the government, the CPP would still be considered as among the groups that violate the country’s laws.

Bunye said that based on experience and past instances, the NPA has participated in criminal acts such as assassinations, ambushes, kidnapping, extortion, arson and destruction of public or private properties.

“What I have enumerated are punishable under existing laws, specifically under the Revised Penal Code,” he said.

“Our law enforcers are under instructions to protect our citizens against such criminal acts and activities and are urged to take the appropriate action whenever and wherever required,” Bunye said.

At present, Bunye said the proposed anti-terrorism law, which is one of the pet bills of the administration now pending in Congress, would specifically address the problem of terrorism.

He said the President cited the urgency of the said bill during her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22.

Palace hopes if price of crude oil goes down, oil firms would also lower their prices

Malacañang today said that the minimal increase in the price of oil products is dictated by world conditions but at the same time the hope that when the price of crude oil in the world market goes down, the oil companies would also adjust their prices correspondingly.

In his regular press briefing, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that the price of fuel is principally dictated by two factors.

First, Bunye said, the price of Dubai crude has gone up by some 70 centavos over the last 30 days.

Secondly, there has been a slight movement of the peso vis a vis the US dollar, with the Philippine currency losing by something like 13 centavos during the last 60 days, Bunye said.

“So, expectedly, there will be an effect on the price of oil products in the Philippines,” Bunye said.

But Bunye said the price increase is limited to certain products and does not include liquefied petroleum gas (LPG), which is being used by many households.

He reiterated that since the oil industry has been deregulated, the price of oil is really dictated by market forces.

“At siguro kung magkaroon naman ng reverse trend, kung gumanda iyong price of crude oil, dapat mabilis din ang response ng mga oil companies in adjusting the prices downward (And maybe when there is a reverse trend, if the price of crude oil decrease, then the oil companies should also lower their prices with the same speed),” Bunye said.

13 AUGUST 2002

- GMA okays increase of 2003 budget to P804 billion
- Resignation put on hold, GMA to meet with Roco, Palace says
- RP welcomes U.S. declaration that CPP-NPA is a terrorist organization

GMA okays increase of 2003 budget to P804 billion

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved the increase of the national budget for the next fiscal year from P800.7 billion to P804 billion, or an additional of P3.3 billion of the amount earlier proposed by the Department of Budget and Management (DBM).

In today's Cabinet Meeting in Malacañang, the President stressed that next year's budget should be able to lay the foundation of a strong Republic that she vowed to build in the coming year.

According to the President, the twin goals of the 2003 national budget will be to restore the country's macro-economic stability and to win back investor confidence in the economy.

She also said that next year's budget conforms to the priorities of her administration, namely to eliminate graft and corruption; ensure peace and order in the entire country; and provide basic services to the people, especially the poor.

The President said that the proposed general appropriations bill for FY 2003 would be submitted to the House of Representatives on August 21, or exactly one month after she delivered her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) at the Batasang Pambansa.

The proposed 2003 national budget has a 3.3 deficit ratio to the gross domestic product (GDP). It is P23.2 billion more than the budget for this year, which is P780.8 billion.

With the increase in next year's budget, the government has also increased its deficit target for 2003, from P138 billion to P142.1 billion. This year's deficit target still stands at P130 billion.

For the year 2003, the government projects total revenues of P640.7 billion while total expenditures are expected to reach P782.8 billion.

Revenues for next year, aimed at shoring up resources to bankroll a strong Republic, would come from the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR), P465.6 billion; Bureau of Customs, P106.8 billion; other agencies, P7.6 billion; and from non-tax sources, P60.7 billion.

Also for next year, the country's economic managers have forecast a 5.1 percent to 5.7 percent growth in the gross national product (GNP), and a 5.0 percent to 5.5 percent GDP growth.

The inflation rate for next year would average from 4.0 to 5.0, still the lowest in the region.

Resignation put on hold, GMA to meet with Roco, Palace says

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will meet with Department of Education (DepEd) Secretary Raul Roco "at the soonest possible time" in the hope of threshing out the issues involving the latter's resignation from his Cabinet post.

In a statement read before Malacañang reporters this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said it was unfortunate that the ministerial act of referring charges filed against Roco by the DepEd employees union to the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) has been “blown out of proportion as to create the false impression that Roco is being eased out.”

“The impression has no basis in truth and in fact,” Bunye said.

In the same statement, Bunye stressed that the charges against the DepEd secretary had to be referred “as a matter of routine” to the PAGC in the same manner that charges against Justice Secretary Hernando Perez and Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit were earlier referred to the anti-graft body.

According to Bunye, the President and the members of the Cabinet recognize Roco’s dedication and exemplary service.

Bunye said the President has not yet accepted Roco’s resignation.

Early this morning, Roco tendered his letter of resignation to the President through Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo where he expressed his surprise over the report that PAGC would investigate him on the basis of the graft complaint filed by the DepEd employees union.

In his letter, Roco noted that since February 14, 2001, “I have served in the Cabinet with dedication and without fanfare.”

As a result of his performance, Roco said the teacher’s welfare was enhanced and free public education for more than 17-million children guaranteed.

RP welcomes U.S. declaration that CPP-NPA is a terrorist organization

The Philippine government has formally welcomed the declaration of the United States that the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (CPP-NPA) is a foreign terrorist organization (FTO).

“The action of the US is not an interference in the internal affairs of the Philippines,” Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a statement.

Bunye said that by using the term “communist,” President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and other government officials were simply trying to identify, in clear and candid terms, the ideological orientation of a given group or persons.

“The government proscribes and abhors the use of violence and terrorism, whether to attain political or plain criminal ends, whether done by communists or other ideologically-oriented groups,” Bunye said.

According to Bunye, the CPP-NPA has engaged in terrorist acts against civilian targets such as extortion and arson; and destruction of public utilities and infrastructure, communications and power lines and transport facilities.

The CPP-NPA has also been engaged in the assassination of political leaders and innocent individuals as part of its overall objective of overthrowing the duly constituted government and the democratic system, Bunye said.

Bunye said that since there is no ceasefire between the government and the CPP-NPA, military and police operations against those who violate the laws of the land will continue.

But the government, Bunye said, will maintain open lines of communication with the leadership of the CPP-NPA “in the hope of ending their employment of violence and terrorism as a means to attain political ends, and to achieve national unity and reconciliation under the Constitution.”

He also called on other communist organizations that are not engaged in unlawful acts to condemn the violence and terrorism being perpetrated by the CPP-NPA.

The government, Bunye said, is also calling on the entire citizenry to get involved in the fight against the CPP-NPA and in upholding all government programs of free enterprise, social equity, good governance and poverty alleviation that strike at the roots of the armed conflict.

GMA scraps PAGCOR's slot machine project

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation (PAGCOR) to scrap its plan to put up slot machine arcades in public places in the entire country.

"In the light of strengthening the moral foundation of leadership, I am announcing that I am instructing the PAGCOR to abort the slot machine arcade project," the President said in her keynote speech at the launching of the Arsenio H. Lacson Foundation for Public Service held this morning at Manila Hotel.

The President said that she aborted the project despite its passage by the PAGCOR Board as part of its corporate powers.

She further recalled that she also aborted PAGCOR's plan to put up the jai alai project following its victory in the Supreme Court.

"PAGCOR says that they passed the slot machine project as part of their corporate powers, that it is well within the law. PAGCOR also won in the Supreme Court the right to up a jai alai project. But after PAGCOR won at the Supreme Court the jai alai project that was when I aborted the project," the President said.

"Therefore it is not the question of what is legal, it is a question of what is morally upright and morally sound," the President stressed.

"I think this is already two strikes of PAGCOR that I have overruled their decision. I am not saying that their decision is illegal. I am just saying that in these two times, the jai alai and the slot machine (projects), it does not quite measure up to the moral standards that we have set for governance in our administration," the President said.

PAGCOR is a government-owned and controlled corporation whose operation is governed by a franchise duly approved by Congress.

Romulo urges efficient, smooth flow of Palace papers

We want to avoid all delays. We want to cut the red tape.

These were the reasons of Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo in issuing a circular requiring well-researched and well-documented requests and issuances for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's signature.

In a radio interview, Romulo said documents intended for presidential action should have gone through complete staff work, so its flow would be smooth and efficient.

The documents included in Romulo's circular are presidential issuances and/or approval, such as executive orders, proclamations, administrative orders, memorandum orders, memorandum circulars and similar directives.

It was noted that some of these have been passed on straight to the President for her signature by some Cabinet members and heads of government agencies.

In the same interview, Romulo said the complaint against Education Secretary Raul Roco was passed on to his office and "as a matter of course, it was referred to the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC)," being the office handling and responsible for such matters.

"After the ministerial act, it's up to the PAGC to listen and read and to inquire into the complaint," he said.

The PAGC would have to go through the process of calling the complainants and listening to them and seeing whether there was basis for the complaint, he added.

Romulo said the President and other members of the Cabinet "recognize the dedicated service of Secretary Roco."

"It's unfortunate that the ministerial act of referring the charges (against Roco) to the PAGC has been misinterpreted. It's just a ministerial routine act," he pointed out.

Raise funds but don't tinker with moral fabric of Filipino people, GMA tells PAGCOR

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today told the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation (PAGCOR) to initiate fund-raising projects that would not compromise one of the hallmarks of her administration, which is to strengthen the moral fabric of the Filipino people.

"The PAGCOR must have to find other ways more acceptable to our moral standards, to the moral standards we are trying to improve," the President said during a luncheon meeting with the Malacañang Press Corps.

Earlier in her remarks at the launching of the Arsenio H. Lacson Foundation for Public Service at the Manila Hotel, the President ordered the scrapping of PAGCOR's slot machine arcades project.

When told during the luncheon that PAGCOR has already signed contracts for the slot machine project, the President said that PAGCOR should "work out the legalities there," adding that her decision to scrap the project is final.

"The slot machine project is scrapped, not modified," the President stressed.

The problem with the slot machine project, the President said, is that it will cater to the middle class, the lower middle class and the students.

The President said PAGCOR should think of high-end projects that would cater to tourists or people with money, and not to ordinary Filipinos.

"If they have to raise money, they should engage in high-end projects that cater to the rich and the famous," the President said.

The President also explained that the casino project at the reclaimed portion of the Manila Bay is only a small portion of the proposed tourism and entertainment center.

The estate, which is a property of the Public Estates Authority (PEA), will have the Nayong Pilipino, which will occupy a bigger portion, and hotels and restaurants, the President said.

She said the casino would only be a small component of proposed tourism estate.

The President also stressed that in that casino, as in other existing PAGCOR-operated casinos, rules will be strictly implemented so that they will cater only to tourists and the moneyed people.

GMA calls on friends, followers, foes to unite, help build strong Republic

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on friends, followers and foes alike to contribute in the efforts to build a strong Philippine Republic, saying she does not expect all to agree with her as president but continues to hope that everyone can unite behind commonalities.

In her keynote speech at the launching of the Arsenio H. Lacson Foundation for Public Service at the Manila Hotel, the President said once again, she is inviting everyone to unite by focusing on the vital ends — to fight poverty and terrorism, to uphold good governance and to build a strong Philippine Republic.

The President recalled that during the time of Manila Mayor Arsenio H. Lacson and his father, President Diosdado Macapagal, the Philippines was second only to Japan as an economic force in Asia.

The President said today, in recovering from last year's global slowdown, the Philippines is performing best among our Southeast Asian neighbors and third among Asian countries.

“That is why we must not lose hope but rather maintain this momentum and let us not forget, that we remain the oldest democracy in Asia, that we must demonstrate that democracy works in the Philippines in the 21st century, that a democratic state can be a strong republic and not be the stereotype of a soft state,” the President said.

“These are not just sentimental longings but inspiring challenges for us to come together and act together for the common cause. Like the great medieval cathedrals, we must patiently place one stone firmly over the other but we must also be aware that the challenge is more complex than ever,” the President said.

“All we need is to patiently rebuild together. We must also do so swiftly, consistently purposefully. Leadership must not deceive our people by false promises of an idealized life. Better lives, we can promise and work for, but it must be done with integrity and truth. We must accept the difficulties of the task and make clear the role each one of us has to play,” she added.

The President said that through the years, the Republic has unfortunately become a house divided, has not delivered enough basic services to help its poorest, has not given the promise of a bright future to its youth, has lacked the will to enforce the rule of law without fear or favor, has allowed the moral and civic values of its citizenry to wither, has fallen prey to those whose selfish ambition, vested interest or inimical ideology would tear the Republic asunder.

“This is a collective guilt that we must share, for with few exceptions, we are all part of this system,” the President said.

The Chief Executive said there are those among us who would argue that they are already working to change the system but oftentimes, their ways have been “patronizing, self-righteous, strident and self-centered.”

“On the contrary, the true journey to strengthen the Republic must be a national one, where the individual gives way to the whole,” the President said.

She said a strong republic has two essential attributes. First, that it must be autonomous of dominant classes and sectors “so that it represents the people's interest and not only a powerful minority group or some of them.”

Second, the republic must have the capacity represented through strong institutions and a strong democracy to implement its policies and deliver its service, she said.

The President said strong institutions and strong democracy build a strong Philippine Republic and provide an effective government characterized by professional and dedicated civil servants.

“Strong institutions also include a vigorous free enterprise economy where the Filipinos’ full talents are unleashed while government must remove the forces and factors that obstruct free markets,” she said.

A strong republic, she noted, must recognize that at the starting gate of competitive field, not all players have equal opportunities such as farmers with no land of their own and the youth with no access to education.

“Thus, it is government’s task to provide these tools that would help level the playing field. And that is how we can make free enterprise a strong institution,” she said.

The President also said that in a strong republic, the government cannot rely solely on the invisible hand of the market.

“At the macro level, government must at times intervene to stabilize the economy, or to steer it towards long-term growth. It must also protect its environment and natural resources from blind market forces,” she said.

She also noted that a strong republic can be autonomous of dominant classes and sectors through true democratic representations built on new politics, which requires rational electoral processes, where citizens are given the tools for informed choices and their votes are counted properly.

Another strong institution needed in a strong Philippine Republic, the President said, is a vibrant civil society. “We must find a way to finally dismantle a subculture of divisiveness and individualism and transform our families, communities and other civil societies organizations into constructive engines for national prosperity,” she said.

GMA orders DENR to take over Diwalwal mining operations

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has directed the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) to take over the Diwalwal mining operations in Mount Diwata, Monkayo, Compostela Valley province and to formulate a scheme that would “equitably” allocate the mineral resources to all the stakeholders operating in the area.

In a luncheon meeting with some members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said that her order was specifically addressed to the National Resource Development Corporation (NRDC), the DENR’s corporate arm.

The President said that since 1983, Diwalwal has been the site of subsistence small-scale mining operators without permits to labor intensive medium-scale mining operations involving thousands of miners, local entrepreneurs and service providers.

On August 12, DENR Secretary Heherson Alvarez issued an order for the stoppage of all mining and processing operations in the Diwalwal mining areas.

The order of Alvarez also called for the creation of a technical working group that would formulate a mine management plan for the sustainable utilization of mineral resources in the area.

The President also disclosed that Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, who has just been designated as Special Consultant on Public Order and Security, along with Presidential Consultant on Regional Development Paul Dominguez and Presidential Adviser on Jobs Creation Luis Lorenzo were meeting to discuss the Diwalwal problem.

The President also said that the government will construct a “tailing dam” or a tailing disposal system to control the pollution and siltation resulting from the Diwalwal mining operations.

The President said she has instructed Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin to get a “bridge financing” from the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP), which has earlier committed to help finance the government regional priority projects, to fund the construction of the tailing dam.

During the Cabinet meeting on Tuesday, Alvarez said the DENR based its orders to temporarily stop the Diwalwal mining operations because of the deteriorating peace and order in the area where shooting incidents and ambushes have resulted in more than 80 deaths.

The DENR said there were also frequent incidence of violence among rival miners groups, as well as rallies, protests and critical roads and bridges blockades and other public disturbances.

Severe siltation of the Naboc River and rice lands by mine tailings was also one of the bases of the order of stoppage, while validated mercury and cyanide contamination of the Naboc and upstream portion of Agusan River were found to be above threshold limits, the DENR said.

According to the DENR, some 18,000 residents, including some 7,000 miners were principally dependent on unsafe and illegal mining operations for livelihood.

The annual gross sales of gold estimated at P3 billion without collection of taxes by local and national governments, estimated at P100 million per year, for the last 18 years, was also cited by the DENR as one of the reasons for its order of stoppage of mining operations of Mount Diwalwal.

GMA welcomes Dutch gov’t moves to freeze CPP-NPA funds

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed moves of the government of the Netherlands to freeze the financial assets of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (CPP-NPA).

The President hoped “that it could hasten the peace talks so that the other side can think of parliamentary struggle ... using the democratic space rather than engaging in violence and terrorism.”

“That’s what communicating with them is all about; trying to make the move from a violent and terroristic mode to parliamentary,” she said.

She was referring to government efforts to resume peace negotiations with the CPP-NPA’s political arm, the National Democratic Front (NDF).

Earlier, chief government negotiator Silvestre Bello III said the peace talks might resume either in end-August or mid-September.

Bello said he had talked with NDF spokesman Luis Jalandoni about possibilities of having the talks in either Oslo, Norway or the Netherlands.

Over lunch with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said there was nothing definite yet on the date for the formal government-NDF peace negotiations.

“(The talks are) in limbo, because I have put it in a back-channeling mode,” she said, adding that among those involved in back-channeling efforts was Presidential Management Staff chief Silvestre Afable Jr.

Meanwhile, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said the move of the Dutch government to freeze CPP-NPA funds would tighten the valves of the group “insofar as their terrorist capability is concerned.”

Golez, in a press briefing in Malacañang, said “we are happy that one of the first to respond to (the call of the United States government to freeze the funds of the CPP-NPA as a foreign terrorist group) is the Netherlands government.

He said the Dutch government has also frozen funds belonging to CPP-NPA leaders, among whom are founding chairman Jose Ma. Sison and spokesman Luis Jalandoni.

“We are talking of funds that were very likely fruits of their extortion activities here in the Philippines” and from remnants of communist parties in Europe, he said.

He disclosed that the CPP-NPA had been able to collect large sums of money in the recent past.

Government estimates showed the CPP-NPA collected as much as P108 million in 1999; P93 million in 2000; and P98 million in 2001. For this year, collections could have reached P50 million, he added.

Golez said one of the communist group’s fund-raising activity was the so-called “permit to campaign” fees they asked from politicians.

The fees ranged from P500,000 to P1 million for a senator; P600,000 to P900,000 or 12 M16 Armalite rifles for a governor; P300,000 to P500,000 or eight M16 rifles for a congressman; P50,000 to P300,000 or four M16 rifles for a city mayor; P50,000 to P125,000 for a town mayor; P10,000 to P20,000 for a vice mayor; P10,000 for a board member; and P1,000 to P5,000 from a councilor.

Besides this, the CPP-NPA was noted for committing a lot of atrocities.

Golez said that this year alone, the communist group “initiated 116 liquidation (missions)” leading to the killing of 92 civilians and the wounding of 21 others.

Last year, they killed 164 people by liquidation or by summary executions.

He called the attention of cause-oriented group Bayan Muna leader Rep. Satur Ocampo who “I understand is opposed to the death penalty.”

While Ocampo showed opposition to the death penalty, “he is not opposing the death penalty policy of the CPP-NPA,” Golez stressed. “We think he is applying the double standard here.”

The National Security Adviser also lashed at the CPP-NPA for targeting vital public and private installations in their terroristic activities.

He recited a litany of communist misdeeds committed nationwide, including the burning and destruction of homes of non-supporters and of utilities and transport vehicles of those who refused to pay revolutionary taxes.

Latest SWS survey gives GMA highest satisfaction rating of 55 percent

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has obtained her highest Gross Satisfaction Rating of 55 percent and +28 Net Satisfaction in the latest survey conducted by the Social Weather Stations (SWS) covering the period August 6-9, 2002.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said the President’s latest rating in the survey conducted by the SWS was the “highest so far in presidency.”

Bunye said the previous highest since she became president was +27 percent, a survey result reflected on Nov. 3-21, 2001.

According to Bunye, the President attributed the improvement in her net satisfaction rating to the partial solution of the Purchased Power Cost Adjustment (PPCA) problem, the defeat of the Abu Sayyaf group, and the government's continuing drive against criminality.

The SWS survey, commissioned by the Crusade for Better Philippines, also found that 60.4 percent of those polled approve of the President's leadership, and that 46 percent trust her as a person.

On the leadership issue, the SWS survey revealed that 60.4 percent of the respondents approve and 19.8 percent disapprove of President Macapagal-Arroyo's leadership, giving a net leadership approval rating of +41 percent.

The President's leadership approval, according to the survey result, is relatively high in Luzon (+48), Visayas (+49) and the ABC classes (+51).

The SWS survey also showed that in 10 out of 16 problems tested, most people had favorable views of efforts being made by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration to solve the problem.

In a footnote, the SWS noted that leadership approval should not be confused with "job approval," adding that their surveys on governance over the past 17 years have consistently focused on job satisfaction rather than on job approval.

On the plurality trust in the President as a person, the SWS survey found that 46.4 percent have much trust and 23.8 percent have little trust in her as a person, implying a net trust rating of +23 percent.

It added that trust in the President is the same across socio-economic classes, which is relatively high in Balance Luzon (net +33) and Visayas (net +28).

When the survey respondents were asked what they liked about the President's second State of the Nation Address (SONA), the top 10 answers were: housing for the poor (12%), war against criminality (11%), help for the poor (11%), lower cost of electricity (8.1%), more jobs (6.5%), lower prices of goods, war against terrorism (5.4%), war against illegal drugs (4.0%), help for agriculture (3.4%), and strong Republic (3.3%).

Twenty five percent of the respondents could not recall what they liked while 15 percent said they did not like anything in the SONA.

Some 56 percent surveyed were aware of the President's second SONA. Twenty six percent of them had seen it on live in television, 17 percent had gotten news about it on TV/radio, 7 percent had heard of it from other people, 6 percent had listened to it on live radio, and 3 percent had read about it in the newspapers.

The SWS said those patterns are similar to those after the President first SONA in July 2001.

On the other hand, mixed opinions were raised with regards to the administration's claim of delivering the 2001 SONA promises: 38 percent agreed, 30 percent disagreed, and 32 percent were undecided. It added that the +8 net agreement is relatively small.

The SWS also noted that opinions were also mixed about the opposition claim that the administration did not deliver the 2001 SONA promises: 32 percent agreed, 36 percent disagreed, and 32 percent were undecided, for a relatively small net of -5 percent.

DFA welcomes creation of RP-U.S. Defense Policy Board

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) welcomed the establishment of the Philippines-United States Defense Policy Board, as agreed upon by Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and his counterpart, US Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld during their meeting in Washington last August 13.

In a statement, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople said this new bilateral policy body will complement existing defense consultative mechanisms, namely the Council of Foreign Ministers and the Mutual Defense Board, both of which are under the framework of the 1951 RP-US Mutual Defense Treaty.

Ople said both the DFA and the Department of National Defense have always believed that there is a need to establish a mechanism that could conduct a broader review of our defense and security relations, particularly in the context of the new security challenges that face both our nations and the world.

He said that it is precisely with this in mind that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and President George W. Bush agreed last November in Washington to establish "a new bilateral defense consultative mechanism" as contained in paragraph 7 of the Joint Statement between the United States and the Republic of the Philippines issued during the President's visit to Washington DC, on Nov. 20, 2001.

"When we were negotiating the joint statement, it was our understanding that the DFA as well as other relevant government agencies, would be an active participant in this bilateral defense consultative mechanism," Ople said.

Ople said he looks forward to the activation of the Philippines-United States Defense Policy Board, adding that he was confident that this Board will serve "to enhance our military and security cooperation with the United States, with the view towards building our own defense and security capabilities."

Gov't after both 'big fish,' 'small fish' in anti-graft campaign, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reiterated her administration's determination to curb graft and corruption in government by going after both the "big fish" and "small fish" who are involved in graft and corruption activities.

In an interview with reporters at the Department of Justice (DOJ) office on Taft Avenue, Manila, the President said it is only appropriate to catch the small fish first because they are the ones doing the act for the big fish.

"The big fish are not the ones who do the act; it's the small fish," the President said.

She explained that after catching the small fish, it is the job of the government to investigate further and find out who their bosses are.

"How can you catch the big fish unless you catch the small fish first and hope to persuade them to testify who are their bosses," the President stressed.

Since the start of her administration's all-out campaign against rice smugglers about three weeks ago, the President said the government has already filed charges against two "big fish" who are suspected of being involved in rice smuggling, namely Nieves Uy and Antonio Chua.

The President noted that in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22, she directed Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to take legal actions against Albay Regional Trial Court (RTC) Judge Arnulfo Cabredo for obstructing the government's efforts to crack down on the smuggling of rice in the country.

"No one is above the law, more so among those who sit in judgment for violation of law," the Chief Executive said.

She added that the Executive branch shall not stand by or wash its hands of cases where members of the bench are involved.

Aside from the judge, the President said the government is also filing a case against lawyer Marcial Lopez, former district collector of Legaspi, Albay for alleged failure to attend the hearing on a motion he filed to lift the temporary restraining order that paved the way for the denial of the said motion.

Initial findings of the Bureau of Customs showed that the documents covering the rice shipment were spurious, apparently aimed at misleading officials that the cargo was locally sourced.

Don't interfere in gov't campaign against criminality, GMA warns judges

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today warned all the judges in the country not to interfere in the government's campaign to stop the smuggling of rice to avoid being criminally charged themselves in the future.

The President issued this warning when she personally witnessed the filing of criminal charges against Albay Regional Trial Court Judge Arnulfo Cabredo and a retired Customs official at the Department of Justice Prosecutors Office for allegedly obstructing the efforts of the government to crack down on the activities of rice smuggling syndicates.

"For the other judges who are still out there, let this case be a reminder to all the other RTC judges that the Collector of Customs, by law and by jurisprudence, has exclusive jurisdiction over seizure proceedings and regular courts cannot interfere with the exercise of that jurisdiction," the President said.

The President directed Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo to present all pieces of evidence against Judge Cabredo at the DOJ.

She also instructed Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to "exhaust all means within his authority to bring Judge Cabredo before the very bar of justice he has foresworn to uphold."

Also charged with Judge Cabredo was Atty. Marcial Lopez, former District Collector of the Port of Legaspi, Albay.

The President explained that Lopez was the Customs official who tipped her off about the illegal rice shipment but did not do anything to take physical custody of the rice shipment despite the fact that as early Sept. 23, 2001, a warrant of seizure and detention had already been issued on the said shipment.

The incident happened when the President made a surprise visit to Legaspi, where she landed from her official visit in Japan.

"Atty. Lopez for obvious reasons failed to attend the hearing on a motion he filed to lift the temporary restraining order (TRO), thus paving the way for a denial of the said motion," the President explained.

“On the findings of Customs, a warrant of seizure and detention was issued against the vessel and its cargo. However, Judge Arnulfo Cabredo of the Regional Trial Court of Tabaco issued a TRO upon petition of the consignees against the warrant of the Bureau of Customs,” she added.

Because of this, the President said the rice was released to the consignees.

It may be recalled that the BOC had already filed smuggling and falsification charges against the consignees and shipmaster and the operator of the M/V Criston.

The case against the two were filed by Atty. Clemente P. Heraldo and Leonito A. Santiago, chief and special investigator, respectively, of the Bureau of Customs Internal Inquiry and Prosecution Division – Customs Intelligence and Investigation Service (IIPD-CIIS).

“I respect the separation of powers of the executive and the judiciary but as I said in the SONA, I must stand by the interest of the people in seeking legal relief against the abuses of judicial authorities,” President said.

“No one should be above the law. More so among those who sit in judgment of violations of law. The executive shall not stand by or wash its hands off cases where members of the bench are involved. I direct the DOJ to seek the proper venue and identify the proper charges by which this case can be resolved fairly and speedily,” the President said.

The President said that aside from Cabredo, the government has already filed a separate case of violation of the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act against Judges Pedro de Leon Gutierrez of Pasay City RTC Branch 119 and Rodrigo B. Lorenzo of Pasig City RTC Branch 166.

She added that aside from the three judges, the DOJ also filed an administrative and criminal cases against five prosecutors namely: Constanca Velasco of Manila Prosecutors Office for extorting P5,000 and entrapped last Nov. 8, 2001; Apolinarque Tulio of Paranaque City Prosecutors Office, who demanded P60,000 and entrapped last April 16, 2002; Romulo Gotico, assistant provincial prosecutor of Capiz for extorting P50,000 and entrapped on July 17, 2001; Victor de la Cruz, third assistant City Prosecutor of Naga City, for sexual harassment; and Oscar Corpuz of San Fernando City, La Union Prosecutors Office for gross negligence.

The President said that Corpuz was charged last August 5 for gross negligence, inefficiency and incompetence in the performance of official duties related to the kidnapping-for-ransom of Grace Rowena Tiu.

Ramirez not whistle-blower on tax scam, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today clarified that Acsa Ramirez is not the whistle-blower in the P203-million tax diversion case, for which Land Bank Binangonan branch manager Artemio San Juan was charged.

“She did not blow the whistle on the tax scam. She reported a totally separate ‘crank’ account. Some crank tried to open a P26-billion account, totally unrelated to the tax scam,” President said.

In her statement at the Department of Justice (DOJ) after witnessing the filing of criminal charges against a Regional Trial Court judge in Albay and a former District Collector of the Bureau of Customs based in Legaspi, the President said Ramirez misinterpreted the turn of events and later on claimed to media that she was the whistle-blower in the tax scam.

“So even today, I read that Acsa Ramirez blew the whistle on the tax scam. No, she blew the whistle on a totally separate crank guy who tried to open a P26-billion account,” the President said.

The President explained that she needed to clarify the issue on Ramirez because everybody was asking her on the participation of the cashier with regards to the case of San Juan.

NBI Director Reynaldo Wycoco said that based on the bank documents the Anti-Money Laundering Council gave the NBI, Ramirez failed to report 11 transactions, each worth P4 million and above, intended for three of the four fraudulent accounts that a syndicate used to divert P203 million in tax money.

The President also informed the media that the DOJ is now ready and scheduled to file a criminal case against San Juan at the proper court.

GMA orders assistance to Filipinos in Malaysia

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Philippine Embassy in Kuala Lumpur to extend all possible assistance to the Filipino overseas workers who are facing deportation from Malaysia, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said today.

Bunye, in his regular press briefing in Malacañang, said the primary concern of the President is the alleged inhumane treatment on Filipino workers although he said the government learned later that this is not true.

“The first concern of the President is the alleged inhumane treatment of the overseas workers, which we found not to be true,” Bunye said.

“The instruction is to assist, extend all possible assistance to them so that they could be repatriated at the earliest time,” he added.

Reports said close to 80,000 Filipino illegal aliens in Malaysia face arrest unless they go back to the Philippines by August 24.

Meanwhile, the Office of Migrant Affairs of the Department of Foreign Affairs has sent a team to Kuala Lumpur to help facilitate the documentation and deportation of the Filipinos in Sabah, where close to 5,000 Filipinos are awaiting deportation.

Gov't to continue contacts with NDF despite Joma's threat to withdraw from peace gab

Malacañang today said it will continue its contact with the National Democratic Front (NDF) through Luis Jalandoni notwithstanding the threat of Jose Ma. Sison to withdraw from the peace negotiations with the government.

In a press briefing, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the peace talks between the government and the NDF panels are currently on the “back-channelling mode” and the contacts can continue with Jalandoni.

“Our position is that Joma (Sison) is not the chairman of the NDF panel, he is only an adviser and the real chairman is Mr. Luis Jalandoni,” Bunye said.

Bunye said that it is up to the Dutch government to implement its freeze order on the assets of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP)

Yesterday, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo welcomed the Dutch government's freeze order, expressing the hope that it could hasten the peace process.

“We welcome it. I'd hope it could hasten the peace talks so that the other side can think of parliamentary struggle and use the democratic space rather than engaging in violence and terrorism because that is what communicating with them is all about,” the President told reporters during a luncheon in Malacañang.

The Dutch government decided to freeze the assets of the CPP and to request member-countries of the European Union to follow suit.

The Netherlands is playing host to Sison, founding chairman of the CPP, and to 29 other Filipino exiles who belong to the local communist group.

President gives moral support to kidnap victim

SAN FERNANDO CITY, La Union – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo motored to La Union early this morning to give moral support to kidnap victim Rowena “Jackie” Tiu who was scheduled to testify today during the first day of her trial at Branch 27 of the Regional Trial Court (RTC) presided over by Judge Antonio Carbonell.

“I must lend my voice to the multitude of Filipinos who cry out for justice – speedy, impartial justice,” the President said during a press briefing after having breakfast with the family of Jackie at the Capital Hardware store of the Tius on P. Burgos street here.

The President stressed that she refrained from entering the court because she does not wish to be misunderstood as interfering with the judicial process.

Jackie, who takes the witness stand today, is an example of courage, the President said.

“Others would fear doing this for fear of their lives and of their loved ones. I admire her courage and her sense of righteous indignation which will not be in vain,” the President said.

“She will be protected and so will all those who choose to stand against crime and terrorism,” the President added.

“I said we will wage this war against terrorism and crime on behalf and with the rage, of all the victims: those whose businesses were ruined by extortion, those held down in poverty by fear, those whose lives were snuffed out by addiction, and those taken hostage or killed,” the President emphasized.

“We shall redeem your pain, we shall redeem your loss. Rowena and her family are no exception,” she added.

The President reiterated what she said in her State of the Nation address last month that the ideal response to kidnapping by the law enforcers is exemplified in the case of Jackie.

The Chinese-Filipina kidnap victim was rescued in eight days, the ransom money was recovered, and her kidnappers arrested and are now in facing trial.

“Hers was the first and last kidnapping to take place in Region I (Ilocos) in my administration,” the President said.

Noting that there are other residual matters to take care of in connection with Tiu kidnapping, the President directed Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to investigate the prosecutors who were responsible for the downgrading of the charges against two of the original suspects who were named as mere accessories to the crime and who were allowed to post bail. “One was able to abscond without even being arraigned,” the President said.

“I want this issue resolved forthwith,” the President ordered Perez.

Aside from Perez, those who joined the President during the press briefing were Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Agrarian Reform Secretary and Cabinet Officer for Regional Development for Region 2 Hernani Braganza, State Chief Prosecutor Jovencio Zuño and Teresita Ang See.

Courts records identified the suspects, all Chinese nationals, as Shi Chun, alias Jacky Sy Ocampo; Zhang Ximang, alias Michael Zang; Xu You Kwang, alias Johnny Chua Co; Shi Jian Hui, alias Jack King Sy; Lim Jiang Fem, alias Jason Lim; and Wu Lim Chang, and Zhan Du, alias Wilson Zang, who is out on bail.

The suspects were detained for about seven months at the National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force in Camp Crame and later turned over to the La Union Provincial Jail to facilitate their attendance at the hearing of their case here.

The suspects, however, are now under the custody of the district jail of the Bureau of Jail Management and Penology (BJMP) in Bauang, La Union, Lina informed the President.

“I have instructed the BJMP to make sure that the suspects will not be able to escape,” Lina said.

During the past weeks, the President has been making the rounds of law enforcement agencies to expose kidnappers, drug lords, tax evaders, smugglers and grafters.

“This has paid off not only in terms of a solid outpouring of public support. This has paid off in more crimes being reported and more arrests being made,” the President said.

She said that public vigilance is being heightened and the crusade for law and order gaining grounds.

Administration against legalizing jueteng

SAN FERNANDO CITY, La Union—The administration is against the legalization of the numbers game jueteng, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. said here today.

In a press conference at the Capital Hardware at P. Burgos Street here, the President and Lina said, however, that to legalize jueteng is a congressional prerogative.

“We are against the legalization of jueteng. That’s a congressional prerogative, to file bills and tackle them. On the part of the administration, certainly it is not an administration measure,” the President said.

Lina, along with Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, accompanied President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during her visit to this city to extend moral support to kidnap victim Rowena Tiu during the first day of her trial here.

According to Lina, the feeling in the Senate is that majority of the senators are also not in favor of legalizing the numbers game.

He said that there is now a snowballing move in the Senate and the House of Representatives to increase the penalties for jueteng operators because the penalties at present “are very light.”

“Even if you arrest and arrest everyday, the gambling lords can easily bail out their collectors because the fine is only P400 to P2,000,” Lina said.

Lina narrated that in San Fernando City, a jueteng operator was arrested about three weeks ago by operatives of Philippine National Police of Region 3.

But the operator, a certain Melchor Caluaug, was able to post bail of P10,000, and in all likelihood, Lina said, he is now back in business.

“We need to ask Congress to speed up the proposal to increase the penalties for illegal gambling activities,” Lina said.

Call hot line 117 and report crime, GMA tells citizens asking how they can help government fight criminality

SAN FERNANDO CITY, La Union – If you witness a crime happening, call 117 immediately. If you hear something and have good reason to believe a crime is being committed or about to be committed, call 117.

This was the reply given by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to private citizens who have been asking how they can help the government in its drive against criminality.

“Call up 117 because many cases have been solved very quickly because of 117,” the President said, referring to the telephone hot line that enables law-enforcement agencies and public assistance groups to respond to emergency calls for any in any part of the country.

During a press briefing at the Capital Hardware store here where she had a breakfast with the family of kidnap victim Rowena “Jackie” Tiu, the President said her administration’s all-out campaign against criminality has heightened public vigilance against criminals.

She said the anti-crime campaign has paid off “in terms of solid outpouring of public support...in more crimes being reported and more arrests being made.”

Hotline 117 is a centrally managed and secured telephone central monitoring station provided by the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company and operated by qualified well-trained personnel from the Philippine National Police (PNP), Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP), Bureau of Jail Management and Penology (BJMP) and PLDT.

Telephones used by EMERGENCY HOTLINE 117 are equipped with the caller ID system to prevent prank calls and ensure quick confirmation and response to emergency calls.

During her press briefing, the President directed Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. to have “infomercials” on a series of cases that were solved because of 117.

She said that people would be made aware that they could really help by calling 117 when they see a crime or have good reasons to believe a crime is being committed or about to be committed.

The President also disclosed a report from Philippine National Police chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. that the PNP-National Capital Region arrested this morning four suspected “Kotong Cops,” policemen who are believed involved in extortion activities.

“As I said in my State of the Nation Address, we have to cleanse the PNP of the rascals that are inside and they are doing just that,” the President said.

The President also said the administration is against the legalization of “jueteng,” or illegal numbers game, as some legislators are suggesting.

GMA stresses importance of peace and order to RP’s growth, gov’t vision to wipe out poverty

SAN FERNANDO CITY, La Union—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the importance of peace and order for the country to really speed up its economic development and for the government to achieve its vision of eradicating poverty within the decade.

In a press conference held at the Capital Hardware at P. Burgos Street here, the President said based on most economic indicators—like the inflation rate, interest rates and the unemployment rate—the government is doing well.

“If you look at these indicators, it means that we are on the right track,” the President said.

She said even the business community has acknowledged that the government is “doing everything right macro-economically.”

But the President said it is not only macro-economic management that would determine the investment climate but more importantly the peace and order situation.

“That is why we are now concentrating on the peace and order campaign,” the President said.

The President, along with Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. and Philippine National Police Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, were in this city to lend moral support to kidnap victim Rowena Tiu during the first day of her trial here.

She said that she was happy that there are still good citizens like Ms. Tiu who are willing to recount their ordeals in order to bring the criminals to justice.

Statement of Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye on Secretary Raul Roco’s resignation

The President expressed her deep sadness in the loss of a good public servant.

Secretary Roco’s resignation is an unfortunate reaction to what is after all the common situation of all public servants, which is to be open to all types of public complaints and to defend one’s self in a fair investigation. His resignation is even more unfortunate as the investigation that has just been started is also an opportunity to show these charges as unfounded. We are all bound by duty to resolve complaints from the people we serve.

The President regards this as merely the end of one chapter in Secretary Roco’s service to the people. She looks forward to working with him in some other capacity in

Hope you enjoy retirement, Palace tells Joma

Malacañang shrugged its shoulders today on the reported plan of Jose Ma. Sison to retire in the Netherlands.

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, in his regular briefing at Malacañang, said he expects Sison to use the funds that he solicited from various organizations in Europe for his planned retirement.

“If Joma Sison is thinking of retirement, I hope he enjoys it and I hope he has set aside enough funds from contributions he got from organizations that he has duped,” he said.

Reports quoted Sison as planning to retire from the NDF as he said he has done too much already.

Sison, who has been out of the Philippines since 1987 along with a number of NDF members, enjoys continuous stipend from the Dutch government and receives funding from several non-government organizations in Europe.

The United States last week placed the Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm, the New People's Army, on its list of foreign terrorist organizations, making it illegal for US citizens and entities to give funding support to them.

The US government likewise ordered American banks to block assets held by Sison and his rebel groups.

Roco's resignation a big 'loss of a good public servant'

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has expressed deep sadness over the resignation of Education Secretary Raul Roco, calling it the "loss of a good public servant."

In his press briefing, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the President had an hour-long meeting with Secretary Roco at the Palace.

In a statement, Bunye said "Roco's resignation is an unfortunate reaction to what is after all the common situation of all public servants, which is to be open to all types of public complaints and to defend one's self in a fair investigation."

"His resignation is even more unfortunate as the investigation has just been started is also an opportunity to show these charges as unfounded. We are all bound by duty to resolve complaints from the people we serve," he said.

He added that the President looked forward to working with Roco again. "The President expressed her hope that the secretary would be able to work with her in some other capacity."

The Press Secretary quoted Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo as having described that the meeting between the President and Roco was very cordial.

Roco's brother Rep. Ciriaco Roco, Secretary Marita Jimenez, Presidential Adviser on Overseas Development Assistance Absorption, and former Presidential Management Staff head Secretary Vicky Garchitorea were present during the meeting.

Bunye also said "there is no word yet" on who possibly would be appointed by the President to replace Roco in the Department of Education.

He also shrugged off claims from detractors that the administration dipped its hand to ease out Roco as a likely bet in the 2004 presidential election.

"Well, that's very unfortunate because everybody seems to be thinking about 2004 when it's still far away. And the stand of the President has always been to concentrate on the work at hand. And she doesn't want to be distracted by any other activities other than to deliver on what she has promised in her SONA," he said.

Gov't, private sector ready to help sidewalk vendors

Sidewalk vendors and other small livelihood operators, classified as members of the informal sector (IS), will soon benefit from a support package government and non-government

The inter-agency Social Development Committee (SDC) of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Board has approved the creation of a sub-committee that would oversee policy matters affecting the IS.

The IS composed of about 45 percent of the country's 80-million population. It contributes 45 to 50 percent of the country's gross domestic product (GDP).

In a report to Malacañang, NEDA said this would assure that the welfare and rights of sidewalk vendors and other IS members are protected and promoted.

The sub-committee is tasked to ensure the formulation and implementation of policies and programs for the IS through the institutionalization of support from various state agencies, the civil society and social partners.

It will also recommend policies, programs and projects to the SDC; provide venues for discussion on policy and program issues and concerns; advise the SDC on strategies and other imperatives for action; and coordinate, monitor and act as oversight body in carrying out programs and policies for the sector.

NEDA said the government is undertaking programs to enable the sector to have access to social and legal protection as well as productive resources.

These include the protection of street vendors' interest thru lobbying and advocacy with relevant institutions like the Metro Manila Development Authority, the tapping of the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) and the Philippine Savings Bank to put up insurance plans linked with the Social Security System (SSS); inclusion of the IS in livelihood and skills training; and the setting up of one-stop-shop windows of information services at the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

Other programs being undertaken are the extension of occupational health and safety services; the empowerment of IS micro-enterprises and livelihood projects; and the institutionalization of data collection on IS in national and local surveys.

Policy matters affecting the IS in the regions would be handled by the Regional Development Councils, NEDA said.

The IS sub-committee will include the Department of Labor and Employment as chairman, NEDA as co-chairman, and the Department of the Interior and Local Government providing secretariat services.

Among its members are the National Anti-Poverty Commission, National Statistics Office, SSS, TESDA, DBP, Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Agriculture, Department of Agrarian Reform, Department of Social Welfare and Development, Trade Union Congress of the Philippines and the Employees Confederation of the Philippines.

DOLE report: 40,905 land jobs in Nat'l Capital Region

The Department of Labor and Employment's (DOLE) placement efforts have helped 40,905 people get jobs in the National Capital Region (NCR) from January to June this year.

More than half of the number or 28,344 were placed through the employment assistance services of the DOLE-NCR and the DOLE-supervised public employment service offices (PESO) in the region.

A DOLE report reaching Malacañang said the other 12,561 persons who landed jobs were either hired on the spot (3,611) or placed in local jobs (8,950) through various job fairs conducted during the period in review.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, in most of her visits and speaking engagements in the metropolis and in different parts of the Philippines, acknowledged the conduct of job fairs as an effective way to promote employment and open windows for economic improvement.

DOLE-NCR Director Alex E. Maraan cited the cooperation of the private sector and the PESOs in opening up and increasing job opportunities in the region.

Maranan said 17 PESOs based in local government units (LGU) and non-government organizations in Metro Manila helped potential workers and the disadvantaged to get jobs suited to their skills or in acquiring needed training through counseling sessions.

Metro Manila is composed of the cities and towns of Caloocan, Las Piñas, Makati, Malabon, Mandaluyong, Manila, Marikina, Muntinlupa, Navotas, Parañaque, Pasay, Pasig, Pateros, Quezon City, San Juan, Taguig, and Valenzuela.

Maraan said the latest NGO-based PESO, facilitated by Rep. Allan Peter Cayetano, was set up in Taguig to complement efforts of an existing LGU PESO.

Another NGO PESO in the NCR was set up by the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints in the 1990s.

GMA lauds citizens' help in anti-crime, anti-terrorist drive

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today acknowledged the growing enthusiasm and cooperation communities nationwide have shown to weed out criminal and terrorist groups and other threats to national socio-economic growth.

In a radio message aired nationwide, the President said "Ito naman talaga ang gusto nating mangyari sa ating kampanya: Ang makipagtulungan ang buong komunidad sa pagsugpo sa mga salot sa lipunan. (This was what we have always wanted to happen in our anti-crime, anti-terrorist and anti-graft campaign: That communities will help in eliminating society's menaces)."

She said many citizens have been calling up the police and telling on criminal activities in their areas, as she urged peace-loving persons to continue dialing Hotline 117 to report on crimes.

An invigorated police-community relations program, she added, has strengthened the anti-crime drive as the people have started looking at the military and police forces as their partners in law and order enforcement.

“We are restoring the faith of our people in our law enforcers, which is the most important driving force of our campaign against crime and terrorism,” the President said.

She said anti-crime advocate Tessie Ang-Sy had informed her that many big-time kidnapers wanted to give up to authorities, through Ang-Sy, because they feared that lawmen would eventually catch them.

“Maganda na ang ating set-up kontra sa mga (We have put up an effective set-up against) kidnapping syndicates,” she noted, as she lauded the police force for recovering, in a matter of hours, victims of a recent kidnapping case perpetrated by the Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom gang.

The President vowed to continue leading the drive to bring about a safer and more secured environment for the people.

She reiterated her appeal to newly-elected barangay officials to help government speedily deliver social services to their constituencies and to immediately execute anti-poverty programs.

“Kailangan ko ang inyong tulong upang ipaliwanag sa ating mga kababayan ang mga patakaran ng pamahalaan at maglinaw ng mga isyu (I need your help in explaining government policies and to clarify issues),” she said.

She added that unity and cooperation would go a long way in bringing to reality every Filipino’s dream for a better life and in building a strong republic.

GMA orders guns, explosives in Mt. Diwalwal seized

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that she had ordered the confiscation of all firearms and explosives in Mt. Diwalwal in Monkayo, Compostela Valley following recent violent incidents at the gold-rush site.

“Ipinag-utos ko na rin na kumpiskahin ang lahat ng firearms at explosives doon para matiyak ang kaligtasan ng publiko at umiral ang batas at kaayusan sa nasabing lugar (I have also ordered the confiscation of all firearms and explosives in Mt. Diwalwal to ensure the safety of the public and that law and order would prevail in the area),” the President said in an address over radio this afternoon.

The President directed Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, chairman of the Peace and Order Council of Southern Mindanao or Region 11, to oversee the seizure of the firearms and explosives.

Earlier, she had ordered the temporary cessation of mining activities in the site after violence sparked anew, aggravating an already tense situation that had stirred the area in the last 19 years.

She said that for the meantime, the government would take complete control of the area to ensure the peace.

“Ipinag-utos ko sa Department of Natural Resources at sa Department of Interior and Local Government na itigil na muna ang pagmimina habang inaayos natin ang mga problema, kabilang na ang tungkol sa environment at ang kapakanan ng small-scale miners (I have ordered DENR and the DILG to stop for the meantime the mining operations in the area while we are solving issues pertaining to the environment and the welfare of small-scale miners),” she said.

“Sa ganitong paraan lamang natin mapapangalagaan ang kapakanan ng mga taga-Mount Diwalwal at nang sa gayon ay maipagpatuloy nila ang kanilang mga gawaing pangkabuhayan nang walang sagabal (Only in this way can we protect the security of those living in Mt. Diwalwal and they can continue their livelihood without disturbance),” the President said.

She noted that the mining issue in Mt. Diwalwal has dragged on for 19 years and that many people have died from mining hazards.

Last week, many small-scale miners barricaded the Tagmanok Bridge in Mawab, Compostela Valley. They sought for an investigation of a fumigation incident in a tunnel in Mt. Diwata where a miner died of suffocation.

GMA cites moves of RP allies to freeze CPP-NPA assets

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the governments of the United States, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom for their decision to freeze CPP-NPA assets.

In a radio address this afternoon, the President also agreed with the US declaration of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army (CPP-NPA) as a foreign terrorist group.

"Maliwanag, ipinagbabawal ng ating batas ang armadong pagkilos laban sa pamahalaan, lalo na ang terorismo tulad ng ginagawa ng CPP-NPA (It is clear that our laws prohibit armed movements against government, particularly the terrorism perpetrated by the CPP-NPA)," the President said.

She said the CPP maintained an armed component – the NPA, an armed group whose primary objective is to bring down the government and the democratic system through force and violence.

She noted that the NPA had been involved in countless acts of violence, not only against soldiers but also against unarmed and innocent civilians.

They have committed crimes such as arson, extortion and the assassination of political leaders, "including (the torture and killing of) common people they happen not to fancy," she said. They have also continued to engage in the destruction of public utilities and public transport utilities, she added.

"Ang mga pagkilos na ito ay itinuturing nating acts of terrorism (We consider these as acts of terrorism)," she said.

"Hanggang mayroong armed component ang CPP, itinuturing natin silang lumalabag sa ating Saligang Batas (Until there exists an armed component of the CPP, we will consider them as violating the Constitution)," she said.

Meanwhile, Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable and Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said the reported plan of Jose Ma. Sison to retire from the National Democratic Front (NDF) had no bearing in the peace talks between the government and the NDF, the political arm of the CPP.

"Joma Sison is not a member of the NPF panel. He is only an adviser. His plans will not affect the peace talks, which are being done through back channeling," they said. Luis Jalandoni chairs the NDF panel and can speak for it officially, they added.

GMA glad over better lives of Baseco residents

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today visited the family-beneficiaries of a 500-unit government housing project at the Baseco Compound at the Port Area, Manila, seeing to it that victims of a recent big fire that hit the area have started rebuilding their lives.

"Those who became victims of the fire and lost their shelters are happier because they now have their respective houses and a community to boot with," the President said.

The temporary houses, made of bamboo and nipa, cost some P15,000 each. These were considered as temporary shelters inasmuch as the family-beneficiary have the option to later relocate to low-cost government housing projects.

“While the houses are temporary, these are much better than the previous structures here, so the residents are much happier now,” the President said.

She said the Eight Thousand Foundation, one of the private institutions assisting the government in the project, would donate 250 lavatory units for the housing area.

In response to the request of the residents, the President said there would also be a donation of materials to be used for the construction of septic tanks and a drainage system in the community.

The lavatories and bathrooms would be put up in between every two houses.

The President said the housing project has given livelihood to beneficiaries of the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) since they were the ones tapped to build the housing units.

Several Baseco residents have opted to build concrete houses with the help of the City Government of Manila which provided them with P15,000 worth of construction materials.

Among those who joined the President in the project visitation and inspection were Manila Mayor Joselito Atienza, NAPC Lead Convenor Teresita Deles, and National Housing Authority General Manager Edgardo Pamintuan.

GMA urges empowerment for barangay, youth leaders

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today gave due stress on the important role being played by barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan officials in strengthening national institutions and in building a strong Republic.

Speaking before the Barangay Orientation Session and Pledge of Commitment ceremony at the Philippine International Convention Center (PICC) in Pasay City, the President also congratulated the newly-elected officials in Metro Manila.

Metro Manila, which has more than 1,700 barangays, is composed of the cities of Manila, Caloocan, Quezon, Pasig, Marikina, Mandaluyong, Malabon, Valenzuela, Makati, Muntinlupa, Pasay, Las Piñas, Parañaque, and the municipalities of San Juan, Pateros, Navotas and Taguig.

In her speech, the President said that as proof of her recognition of the role of the barangays in the country, she had personally removed from her power the signing of travel authority for the village officials.

She said the power was now vested on the secretary of the Department of Interior and Local Government.

Since she assumed the presidency in January 2001, the President said that one of the initial steps that she took was to hasten the release of the Internal Revenue Allotment (IRA) of local government units and the different barangays in the country.

During the occasion, the Chief Executive witnessed the pledging of commitment of Metro Manila’s barangay and SK officials who vowed to pursue the President’s vision for a strong Republic.

In their pledge, the barangay officials and youth representatives also committed themselves to promote good governance and provide dedicated and sincere services to their respective communities.

Among those who graced the occasion were Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Metro Manila Development Authority Chairman Bayani Fernando, Pasay City Mayor Wenceslao Trinidad, Malabon Mayor Amado Vicencio, Manila Mayor Lito Atienza, Marikina Mayor Ma. Lourdes Fernando, Pateros Mayor Rosendo Capco, Taguig Mayor Freddie Tinga and Liga ng Mga Barangay National President James Martin Lin.

GMA cites El Shaddai's strong faith in God

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the El Shaddai – DWXI Prayer Partners Foundation on the occasion of its 18th anniversary, a feat that she described as an “anointment from God.”

In an extemporaneous speech during the anniversary celebration in Paranaque City, the President said: “If it was the handiwork of man, it will not reach 18 years. But this is truly the blessings of El Shaddai.”

The President arrived at around 12 midnight and stayed until 4:00 in the morning.

In her speech, she recalled that when she was visiting El Shaddai prayer meetings with her former classmates when she was still a senator and then as vice president, “I would always prefer to seat in front of the stage to listen attentively to Brother Mike.”

In one of those instances, one of her classmates had remarked: “Truly, this man (Velarde) is anointed.”

According to her, the doubts that evolved during the early stages of the El Shaddai Prayer Partners were merely part of the trials from God.

She recalled a story in the Bible about a woman from the Gentiles, who had strong faith in God even when she was not part of God's “chosen ones.”

“How much more the children of Yahweh El Shaddai? How much more the Philippines which used to be the only Catholic nation in Asia? But now, there is East Timor. My brothers and sisters, the more we should hope for blessings of Yahweh El Shaddai,” the President said.

She added that El Shaddai has now millions of people in its flock joining the celebration of their 18th founding anniversary.

“The hope that Velarde has given the members of the El Shaddai Prayer Partners 18 years ago is not a false hope,” she stressed.

In her speech, the President also asked the El Shaddai members to join her in praying for the good health of Pope John Paul II and to allow him to push through with his trip to the Philippines early next year.

Despite the trials confronting the country, the President urged the people not to lose their faith.

“We are all children of Yahweh El Shaddai,” the President told the huge crowd.

At the same time, she conveyed her greetings to Mr. Velarde who will celebrate his birthday on Tuesday.

Prior to her speech, the President, together with Mr. Velarde, stood as godmother and godfather, respectively to 13 couples who exchanged vows in a mass wedding ceremony officiated by Catholic Bishop Teodoro Bacani.

GMA to visit Lucena City on Monday

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will visit Lucena City on Monday (August 19) and confer with local government officials on the progress of their province.

The visit coincides with the celebration of Quezon Day in the whole of Quezon Province.

During her visit, the President is expected to unveil the marker of the Quezon Convention and Training Center in the city.

She will also lead in the awarding of the Quezon Medalya ng Karangalan (Medal of Honor) at the training center.

The President will likewise preside in the orientation of newly-elected barangay officials, as she is expected to confer with municipal and city mayors of Quezon in a working luncheon.

Barangay officials, meanwhile, are anticipated to give the President their pledge of support in ceremonies at the training center.

On Monday, people in the province will commemorate the 124th birth anniversary of President Manuel L. Quezon. He died on August 1, 1944 while battling complications from tuberculosis.

President Quezon is best remembered as having worked for the institution of a national language based on Tagalog. He was the first president of the Philippine Commonwealth and was known as the principal architect of Philippine Independence.

He was born in Baler, Tayabas (now Quezon) province, on August 19, 1878 to a schoolteacher and small landholder of Tagalog descent.

Gov't remains open to peace talks with CPP-NDF – Golez

The alleged threat of the National Democratic Front (NDF) to pull out of the peace talks with government has yet to be confirmed.

National Security Adviser Roilo Golez today said many statements have been lately attributed to the NDF, the political arm of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), but they later denied having said such.

Golez said Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita and the government peace panel headed by Silvestre Bello III were looking into the matter.

He said the government's position was very clear – that it remained open to formal negotiations or back channel arrangements.

“We have persons prepared for formal or back channel talks,” he said in the vernacular during a radio interview this morning.

“Ang hinihingi lang namin sa kanila ay matigil iyong pagpaslang ng mga inosenteng civilian at matigil iyong sinasabi nating acts of terrorism na talagang nakakasira sa kapayapaan at nakakasira sa imahen ng ating bansa (We have been asking them to stop killing innocent civilians and perpetrating acts of terrorism that destroy the peace and the country's image),” he added.

There was also an earlier appeal to the communist group not to launch attacks on vital utilities and facilities as these would affect the people.

“Sana ay huwag nilang isali ang mga non-combatants (I hope they would not include non-combatants),” he said.

Golez stressed that the issue on the reported retirement of CPP founding chairman Jose Maria Sison, who had acquired Dutch citizenship, was “internal” to the communist group.

The security adviser also pointed out that the all-out war against the New People's Army (NPA), the CPP's armed component, was a state policy as it was a government's duty to protect the people, particularly those in the countryside, and preserve their way of life.

He noted strides in the campaign against the NPA, citing military victories either in preventing NPA guerillas from spreading their influence in or in expelling NPA units from some far-flung villages.

GMA accepts Bañez' resignation with a 'sad heart'

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today accepted with a "sad heart" the resignation of Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) Commissioner Rene Bañez, citing the latter as a "staunch ally in my own advocacy of good and effective governance."

In a statement released to the media by Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye in his press briefing this afternoon, the President said Bañez has managed to plant the "seeds of significant reforms" in his short stay in office.

The President said Bañez' desire to restructure the BIR comes with very good intentions to expand the revenue base of the country.

She thanked Bañez for the "very courageous efforts" he undertook and for the milestones he was able to muster under extreme pressure from the many stakeholders of the country.

Below is the full text of the President's statement:

"I accept the resignation of BIR Commissioner Rene Bañez with a sad heart. He is a strong advocate of instituting reforms at the BIR, and a staunch ally in my own advocacy of good and effective governance.

"Commissioner Bañez' desire to restructure the BIR comes with very good intentions to expand the revenue base of the country. He also worked toward freeing the system from political pressures to ensure the long-term sustainability of our collection efforts.

"In his short stay in office, he managed to plant the seeds of significant reforms. In fact, I just signed Executive Order No. 114, which authorizes the restructuring of the BIR by January 2003 into a taxpayer-focused organization. He also made possible the completion and filing by House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. of House Bill No. 5054. Finally, he was able to institute important administrative measures that are directed toward enhancing revenue collections. These are the VAT Relief System, VAT Audit, Internal Audit, and E-filing and payment system.

The administrative measures have been responsible for the discovery of the tax diversion case involving some Land Bank employees, and the under-declaration of value-added taxes by 312 corporate and individual taxpayers to which cases are currently being filed.

Let me, therefore, thank Commissioner Bañez for the very courageous efforts he undertook during his term at the BIR. Secretary Camacho and I congratulate him for the milestones he was able to muster in so short a time and under extreme pressure from the many stakeholders of the country."

GMA cites military, civilian anti-NPA moves in Quezon

MAUBAN, Quezon – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the military's pro-active anti-terrorist stance that prevented a band of communist New People's Army (NPA) guerillas from attacking the Pagbilao Power Plant in Pagbilao, Quezon two days ago.

The President also gave credit to civilians who gave vital information to the military about the movements of the NPA.

"We have a growing number of voluntary informers who are telling us where the enemies lie," she said in a message during a visit here, after she inspected the set-up and security facilities of the Quezon Power Plant.

"I know people here abhor terrorism as much as we do. The people hate the disruption of transport, communication and power facilities that also disrupts the conduct of business and livelihood," she said.

“I commend the management (of the Quezon Power Plant), our armed forces and law enforcers and the communities for their sustained vigilance,” she added.

The President said Southern Luzon Command chief Major General Roy Kyamco informed her that government troops encountered, repelled and were pursuing an NPA band that tried to attack the Pagbilao power plant.

The rebels, who sustained a fatality and left some guns behind, were said to have fled to the Quezon reservation, a forest park in the mountains of Pagbilao.

“I am glad to know that our security plans are not static and are aimed to actively seek out terrorists across a wider swath of operations,” she said.

The President noted that Mauban itself was under NPA threat. “That is why, after the Pagbilao attack, (Defense) Secretary (Angelo) Reyes and I decided to come here to make sure that this is secured,” she said.

She echoed the military and the police forces’ preparedness “to protect public safety and security at all times.”

Further, she called on the people to “get together with the uniformed services, to work together in the effective and responsive security plan that will preclude acts of terrorism.”

“The CPP-NPA has engaged in terrorist acts against civilian targets,” she added, noting that the rebel group had engaged in extortion and arson; the destruction of public utilities; the disruption of public transport; and assassination of political leaders and ordinary citizens.

“The communists are once more showing their true color,” with fresh threats from the NPA to attack power facilities, she pointed out. The NPAs are considered enemies of the state.

The President clarified however, that there are communist groups that did not have armed elements. “We recognize them, we debate with them, but we don’t run after them,” she said.

Quezon Power Plant free from mercury emissions

MAUBAN, Quezon – International environment consultant URS has found the Quezon Power Plant (QPP) in Barangay Cagsiay I here as safe and negative of mercury emissions.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today visited the plant to check on its set-up and security facilities, following reports of a failed attempt by communist New People’s Army rebels to attack the Pagbilao power plant, also in Quezon province, two days ago.

After briefing the President on the plant, QPP officials told media that the URS did not detect any mercury emission after studying water and sediment samples from the plant’s clarifier basins, fishponds and on-site wells and from tissues of fish in the freshwater fishponds.

The officials said the URS has certified that there was no threat of mercury contamination to local residents, marine and animal life in and around the plant site.

The protection of the environment is a primary concern of the QPP, having equipped its power generation facility with complete anti-pollution control equipment such as flue gas desulfurizer that removes the sulfur dioxide from the emission.

The plant also has an electrostatic precipitator that controls particulate emissions before these are released from the 150-meter high stack.

The plant uses low sulfur Indonesian coal, unloaded in enclosed containers to prevent fugitive dust. Further, it has a central wastewater treatment installation.

Officials said Quezon Power (Philippines), Limited Co., the company operating the plant, has facilitated the reforestation of the plant site with over 100,000 indigenous trees and plants.

The company has also carried out social programs such as those on supplementary feeding, scholarships, health and sanitation, skills development and livelihood for the residents of Mauban and its environs.

GMA's cites, Quezon's legacy, says it is relevant to building of strong republic

LUCENA CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the legacy of Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Philippines during the Commonwealth period, saying that this legacy is relevant to the building of a strong Republic that she outlined in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA).

In her speech at the awarding of the Quezon Medalya ng Karangalan at the Quezon Convention and Training Center here, the President said that Quezon's leadership style and program of government are still appropriate to this day.

The awarding ceremonies were part of the nationwide celebration of Quezon's 124th birth anniversary.

The President explained one of Quezon's more famous dictums that "he who governs with his heart and not with his mind, is liable to live in injustice and to make mistakes."

She said that Quezon's dictum should be observed by all officials if they want to contribute to the building of a strong Republic.

"Dahil kung minsan ang mga tungkulin natin nakakasira ng puso, kaya kung puso ang gagamitin natin, talagang hindi uubra, kailangan ang utak natin (Because sometimes our duties could influence our hearts, and that is why if we only use our hearts, we are bound to fail; we need our brains)," the President said.

But the President also said that Quezon has cautioned that when one uses his mental prowess alone without developing "the moral qualities of his soul," he will only be using his knowledge to harm his fellow citizens.

The President said that even in the 1930s, Quezon already laid the foundations of what is now known as the agrarian reform program and shelter security for tenant farmers.

She said that Quezon signed the Philippine Rice Shared Tenancy Act on February 1933 assuring tenant farmers of their rights, including the right to own the land where their houses are built.

"Nakita ni Quezon ang importansiya sa lipunan ng problema ng reporma sa lupang inumpisahan ng kanyang programa ng panlipunang katarungan (Quezon saw the importance to society of land reform, which was the basis for his program for social justice)," the President said.

GMA cites Pagbilao barangay chief in failed NPA raid

LUCENA CITY, Quezon – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today gave her special congratulations to the barangay captain and residents of the village where the Pagbilao power plant, target of a failed terrorist attack Saturday, stood.

The President was hoping she would meet the unnamed village chief, saying "gusto ko siyang bigyan ng espesyal na congratulations dahil naagapan ang raid ng New People's Army sa Pagbilao power plant (I want to give him my special congratulations for helping prevent an NPA raid on the plant)."

In a speech during the opening of the Quezon Convention and Training Center here, the President cited the residents of Kanlurang Mabolo in Pagbilao for informing the military about the movements of the NPA terrorists.

Reports said elements of the Army's 76th Infantry Battalion on patrol engaged the NPA rebels in a firefight. The military said the rebels suffered many casualties.

The failed attack on the Pagbilao power plant was just one of the many acts of terrorism perpetrated by the NPA, the armed component of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), which recently was included in the United States' list of 34 foreign terrorist organizations.

"Nauunawaan ko ang ginawa ng Estados Unidos na pagsama sa CPP at NPA sa kanilang listahan ng terorista (I would understand why the US included the CPP-NPA in its list of world terrorists)," she said.

It was because the CPP-NPA aimed to overthrow the government and the Filipino people's democratic way of life through force, she explained.

The President also clarified that communism, the ideology, was not against the law, which was why not all communist groups in the world were considered terrorists.

She said the government would continue to talk with communist groups who used peaceful means to gain what they were fighting for.

But communist groups like the NPA who engaged in arson, extortion, assassination of political leaders and ordinary citizens, destruction of utilities and facilities would be the target of the government's campaign against terrorism, she added.

She noted that the fisherfolk of Mauban have been decrying NPA extortion activities.

Gov't to continue back-channeling efforts with NDF, says Palace

Malacañang today said that the government would continue its back-channeling efforts to forge peace with the local communists despite the reported announcement of the National Democratic Front (NDF) that it was withdrawing from the peace negotiations.

In his press briefing, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that formal talks with the NDF have been suspended last year by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo after the communist rebels assassinated two legislators.

"As we have earlier described the situation, we are still on a back-channeling mode," Bunye said.

Bunye said that the President has designated two additional negotiators—Presidential Management Staff head Silvestre Afable, Jr. and Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales—precisely to undertake these back-channeling efforts.

He also said that the government has not yet received a formal communication on the reported pullout from the talks with the government as announced by NDF chief negotiator Luis Jalandoni.

Earlier, in a radio interview, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez also said the government remains open either to formal talks or back-channel arrangements with the NDF.

"We have persons prepared for formal or back-channel talks with the NDF," Golez said.

GMA says she has adopted Quezon's management style

LUCENA CITY, Quezon—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she has adopted the management style of the late President Manuel L. Quezon which was also the management style of his late father, President Diosdado Macapagal.

In her speech here at the awarding of the Quezon Medalya ng Karangalan, the President said that her late father had worked as a young lawyer in what is now known as the Presidential Management Staff during the Commonwealth period, with Quezon as president.

The awarding ceremonies were part of the nationwide celebration of Quezon's 124th birth anniversary.

One of the best traits that her father had emulated from President Quezon was the latter's policy of delegating powers to his officials, the President said.

"Ito rin ang aking estilo, hindi lamang sa mga kasapi nga mga Gabinete kundi na rin sa mga local government executives (This is also my style, delegating powers not only to members of my Cabinet but also to local government executives)," the President said.

The President said this is only proper because local government officials are the ones who implement government programs and projects in the local level.

She said that in the future, she will hold less Cabinet meetings but would concentrate on meetings with the governors in the different development areas in the country.

GMA presents 'Medalya ng Karangalan' to 8 individuals from Quezon

LUCENA CITY — On the occasion of Quezon Day, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded the Quezon Medalya ng Karangalan (Medal of Honor) to eight individuals from Quezon province who possess the distinguished characteristics of an ideal Filipino according to the standards of the late President Manuel L. Quezon.

The President also inaugurated here the Quezon Convention Center, a modern convention center constructed with the savings of the provincial government.

The Quezon Medal of Honor awardees were Archbishop Angel Lagdameo (Spiritual Leadership), Dennis Abcede (Construction Management), Benito Brizuela (Printing Industry), retired Judge Proceso de Gala (Government Service), Salvii Casino (Broadcast Management), Richard Kristoffer Manapat (Physics Research), Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit (Public Health Management) and (posthumous) Venancio "Tata Insik" Adornado (Environmental Protection).

In her keynote speech, the President enumerated several sayings on the kind of leadership of President Quezon, which still rings true to this day.

Among these is "he who governs with his heart and not with his mind, is liable to live in injustice and mistakes." But she also noted that Quezon also said that "he who has received mental training, but has not developed the moral qualities of the soul will only use his knowledge to harm his fellow citizens."

"Ito rin ang mabuting paalaala para sa ating lahat na opisyaes ng pamahalaan na dapat gamitin natin ang ating kakayahan hindi para manira kung hindi para magtayo ng matatag na republikang Pilipinas (This is a good reminder for government officials like us to use all our abilities, not to destroy one another but build a strong Philippine republic)," she said.

Citing Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit and Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. as good examples of those who render effective public service, the President said if the two lived during the Quezon presidency, the late President would have probably got them for his Cabinet. Dayrit couldn't make it at the awarding ceremonies because of a mission in Surigao province and, instead, sent Mrs. Dayrit to receive the citation.

The President noted that she chose her Cabinet based on the same principles used by Quezon, who said their qualifications are based "purely on the strength of their proven ability and experience, particularly in the field of their respective departments and with due regard to their demonstrated loyalty to the public service."

The President also noted Quezon's policy of free enterprise, a similar feature of her administration.

The President acknowledged that Quezon said, "private business constitutes the pillars of the social structure" and that "to a large degree, the people draw their sustenance from it and the government lives on it. No statesman can fail to recognize this fact."

She said that under the policy of free enterprise, the fight against poverty could be achieved in any part of the world.

In stressing the fact that the government is concerned with the welfare of farmers, the President reported that coconut farmers would have the privilege of maximized life insurance, which would be funded by the coconut levy fund.

She said she is working on an Executive Order that would arrange for the national government, instead of the Government Service Insurance System, to give out life insurance benefits and accident disability benefits to barangay officials and farmers.

The President also revealed that she is not taking away the so-called pork barrel funds from lawmakers as Quezon has said, "the pork barrel has become an inviolate tradition among representatives."

She said that instead of scrapping the pork barrel, she would just allow the release of it bit by bit so that this would not wreck the cash flow of government funds.

The President also noted the importance of the attainment of justice in Philippine government and society, saying that if Filipinos feel that they cannot attain justice from the laws, they could obtain it through unlawful means.

"That's why I must remind you all again that Quezon said 'justice alone can maintain the stability of any country. Force cannot do it,'" she said.

GMA presents to media Central Luzon's most-wanted, suspected kidnaper

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the people to continue to cooperate more closely with law enforcers even as she presented to the media Central Luzon's most-wanted person with a P350,000 price tag on his head and a suspected member of a kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gang.

The President motored to Camp Crame in Quezon City at around 5:30 this afternoon to announce the arrest of Randy Raquino, the No. 1 most-wanted person in Region 3, and Nicomedes Gerilla, a member of the notorious Villaver KFR Gang.

"We need your cooperation to make the criminal cases stronger," the President said, addressing the people in general. "With your help, the campaign against crime becomes most effective," she said.

In her statement, the President congratulated the Philippine National Police (PNP), particularly Senior Supt. Mario San Diego of the Tarlac Police Provincial Office, and other law-enforcement units for the arrest of the two suspects.

Raquino, according to the President, is wanted for various crimes, including robbery-holdup with double homicide, the killing of a Filipino-Chinese, hijacking in Santiago, Isabela and a rape case in May 1996. There are eight warrants for his arrest. No bail was recommended in five of the cases filed against him.

Gerilla has been linked to several kidnap-for-ransom cases and was tagged as the primary negotiator of the Villaver Gang, a sub-group operating under the Fajardo Group.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said Gerilla was the primary negotiator in six kidnapping cases in 2001.

“His arrest is solid proof that manhunt operations will not stop with the arrest of one or two members of a kidnap-for-ransom gang. We will not stop until all kidnappers are behind bars,” the President said.

The President recalled that in her State of the Nation Address (SONA), she mentioned that two of the most notorious kidnapping groups are the Bocala and Fajardo groups.

Pulse Asia, SWS surveys conducted on different dates, says Palace

Malacañang today said the Pulse Asia survey that showed a slight decline of the net performance rating of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was conducted sometime in July and should not be equated with the survey conducted by the Social Weather Stations (SWS) early this month.

In a radio interview, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that like the SWS, Pulse Asia is also a credible organization. However, one should look into the inclusive dates when the two surveys were made, he added.

Bunye said that the Pulse Asia survey that showed the President's net approval rating dropping to +31 from +36 in April was undertaken in July this year.

He said that on the other hand, the SWS survey that showed the President's net satisfaction rating of 55 percent, or +27 net satisfaction rating, was conducted from August 6 to 9, 2002.

"Mas maaga yong Pulse Asia, so mahirap mong i-compare, para kang nag-compare ng apple at orange(The Pulse Asia survey was done ahead (in July) so it is difficult to make a comparison)," Bunye said.

The President has attributed her good showing at the SWS survey to three factors, namely the partial reduction of the purchased power adjustment (PPA), the defeat of the Abu Sayyaf, and the continued drive against criminality.

All these three positive developments happened in late July and were reflected in the August SWS survey, Bunye said.

Bunye also belied claims that the SWS survey was tainted because it was allegedly funded by groups close to First Gentleman lawyer Jose Miguel Arroyo.

"We kept on saying that the SWS is an independent organization and that its president, Mahar Mangahas, has a reputation that he enjoys in the community at hindi naman basta-basta pagagamit(and would not allow himself to be used by just anybody)," Bunye said.

He said that all these accusations against the First Gentleman are mere speculations. "I don't think it's fair to the First Gentleman," Bunye said.

Palace confirms plans to abolish some small agencies or merge them with existing ones

Malacañang today confirmed that there are proposals to abolish some 14 offices but these are small ones whose functions can be absorbed by some existing agencies.

In a radio interview, Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin said the abolition of these agencies has been studied thoroughly by the Presidential Committee on Effective Governance (PCEG).

Boncodin said that these agencies, with 10 or 20 employees, have functions that have become redundant because they are already being done by other offices or departments.

“Baka mas efficient kung isasama na lamang sa isang existing agency (Maybe it would be more efficient if they would just be merged with an existing agency),” Boncodin said.

Boncodin, however, clarified that all these are still being studied by the PCEG. In fact, she said, the proposed 2003 national budget to be submitted to the House of Representatives tomorrow would still include the appropriations for these 14 small agencies.

The budget secretary also said that those to be affected by the proposed abolition would be offered “generous retirement benefits.

She said that the DBM would see to it that the delay in the release of benefits for those affected by the reorganization at the Philippine National Police would not happen again.

Boncodin also said that the administration is confident that it will be able to meet its revenue targets next year to finance the proposed 2003 national budget of P804 billion.

“I am very convinced that we have a very conservative target, baka nga masyadong conservative na napakadali namang ma-attain ng ating revenue collecting agencies (our projection is very conservative that it would be very easy for our revenue collecting

Fitch ratings maintains stable rating on Philippines

Fitch Ratings has affirmed its stable rating on the Philippines, saying the fiscal deficit running up to about 3.9 percent would still be within “tolerable limits” and that the country exhibits none of the unstable debt dynamics associated with Brazil and Turkey.

In its latest evaluation made available to Malacañang and the Department of Finance, the ratings firm said the fiscal deficit would still maintain a downward trend in the deficit and the public debt/gross domestic product ratios.

Fitch noted that the Philippines had “few parallels with Brazil” given the backdrop of events in Latin America.

“The Philippines exhibits none of the unstable debt dynamics – pervasive indexation, short maturities and high real interest rates – associated with Brazil and Turkey,” Fitch said.

It went on to say that “the government’s modest demands on international capital markets, the absence of an external financing gap in 2002-03 and comfortable external liquidity should work to the Philippines’ advantage,” it added.

The ratings firm also said that on past occasions when the Philippines has been shut out of international capital markets, “it has encountered little difficulty refinancing debt in the domestic market.”

“Today’s benign inflation and interest rate environment and ample liquidity mean that the government has rarely enjoyed more favorable domestic borrowing conditions,” it said.

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho welcomed the latest stable rating, saying he would like to acknowledge the goodwill that Fitch Ratings has afforded the Macapagal-Arroyo administration amid the fiscal challenges the government is addressing.

Camacho said Fitch Ratings’ comment attests to its confidence on the Philippine Economic Plan and its progress on maintaining a stable macroeconomic environment and shepherding economic reforms.

Camacho noted that Fitch recognizes that there are time lags on revenue increases from reforms that have been implemented at the Internal Revenue and Customs bureaus to support the 2002 deficit target.

The Philippine government currently enjoys relatively stable debt dynamics, including long maturities, low interest and inflation rates as well as a stable exchange rate and comfortable external position – a result of the government’s economic performance last year and its ongoing debt management strategy.

This strategy aims to take advantage of favorable borrowing conditions to reduce debt and servicing levels, lengthen the overall maturity of the debt portfolio and pre-fund external borrowing requirements.

“Not only have we significantly pre-funded our external borrowing requirements this year but these financing costs have declined by over 200 basis points. Generating significant interest savings equates with fiscal discipline,” Camacho said.

In 2003, the government’s net financing requirements is estimated to be P136 billion, or 28 percent lower than this year’s and 56 percent of which is earmarked to be externally sourced.

The government has announced measures accelerating its collection enforcement, including the uncovering of a tax diversion scheme at the Land Bank, an executive order accelerating the prosecution of 312 firms identified for VAT under-declaration and the expansion to all taxpayers of the e-filing system recently put in place for large taxpayers.

“We are achieving some real, albeit initial, progress from our efforts to enforce revenue collections and we will continue to implement much-needed reforms to ensure a steady and sustainable improvement on this front,” Camacho said.

He added that the government has demonstrated the ability to manage our expenditures and are committed to do the same on revenues. “This is not only integral to our commitment to fiscal discipline but also to good governance,” he said.

GMA orders installation of more safeguards on power plants, transmission lines

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS) to continue to be vigilant in safeguarding vital installations in the country, particularly power plants and transmission lines

In a meeting in Malacañang with members of COCIS and some 50 representatives of power plant operators in Southern Luzon, the President directed the Department of Justice, represented by Justice Undersecretary Manuel Antonio Teehankee, to come up with an Executive Order that would make the crime of sabotaging power facilities as economic sabotage.

The EO would also provide severe penalties against offenders, the President said.

The President called the meeting after her visit to Mauban, Quezon Monday to see for herself the security arrangements made by the military and the police in protecting the power plants located in Southern Luzon that are vulnerable to terrorist attacks.

She also created a task force to be headed by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. that would come up with very specific security measures for power plants and transmission lines in different parts of the country.

In a press briefing later, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez said that there were reports that elements of the New People’s Army (NPA) would attack the Pagbilao coal-fired power plant over the weekend, particularly last Saturday.

According to Perez, reports of the planned attack on the Pagbilao power plant came in the wake of a statement made by Communist Party of the Philippine founding chairman Jose Maria Sison that the NPA would stage coordinated attacks on all fronts against the government, including the sabotage of power facilities.

“Thanks to the vigilance of civilians in the area near Pagbilao, and the help of the military and the police, the planned attack on a very critical power facility was thwarted,” Perez said.

The President reiterated that any disruption of power supply or other vital facilities are “really atrocious and desperate acts that will only aggravate the poverty and deepen the sufferings of the Filipino people.”

“And we feel that, if indeed the threat of the NPA is true, it will only incur the wrath of innocent people that will be affected by the inconvenience of power loses but also people who will suffer untold economic damages by disruptions of electricity,” Perez said.

The President urged the various sectors of the power sector community to take the necessary precautions and be ready with security measures to meet any contingencies.

The participants to the meeting included officials of some 15 power plants in Southern Luzon, with a total megawatt capacity of 6,500 megawatts, Transco transmission lines, and those from the power plants operated by the National Power Corporation.

“And as the President has said, it is best to be safe than be sorry,” Perez concluded.

GMA lauds PNP Region 1 for arrest of 5 suspected carnappers

TAYUG, Pangasinan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo flew to this town this afternoon by presidential chopper to personally congratulate the Philippine National Police (PNP) of Region 1 (Ilocos) for the arrest of five suspected carnappers who were also charged with illegal possession of firearms and prohibited drugs.

The President cited the team of Chief Inspector Ricardo Revita, group director of 107 Police Mobile Group, and Chief Inspector Manuel Landingin, chief of police of Umingan, Pangasinan. The two are under the leadership of Police Chief Superintendent Arturo Lomibao, head of Police Regional Office I.

The President said that more significantly, one of the five carnapping suspects arrested is a police officer, who was suspended last July 11, 2002 for possession of 98 grams of shabu.

“Again, our police force is sending a clear message: the fight against crime makes no distinction between the man in uniform or the man in plainclothes. A criminal once identified as one will be dealt with in no uncertain terms,” the President said.

The President said that the positive results of the joint operations of the 107 Police Mobile Group and the Umingan Police Station showed the united action of the pillars of the criminal justice system.

The barangay officials of Barangay San Leon, Umingan, Pangasinan led by Barangay Captain Pedro Hernandez and the legal advice of Tayug Regional Trial Courts Judges Oscar Uson and Judge Ulysses Botuyan, all contributed to the success of the operation, the President said.

Those arrested and presented to the media at Camp Narciso Ramos here were PO2 Elmer Ramos, Jason Javier, Eric Pacheco, Ronald Raymund Cabales and Edgardo Martinez.

Recovered from the suspects were the following: one blue Ford Lynx with plate number WRK 260 and one Toyota Corola model '92 with plate number UFL 231.

The Toyota Corolla is included in the list of stolen motor vehicles at the PNP Traffic Management Group.

Also confiscated were M-14 rifle with serial number 1243989, one caliber .30 M2 carbine with serial number 1001563, one M-16 rifle with serial number RP150700, one rifle grenade and two bullet proof vest, one bandolier with several rounds of ammunition, and several car license plates.

The President has been criss-crossing the country as the police force has made major arrests on an almost daily basis.

Just last Friday, the President was in La Union to extend moral support to Jackie Rowena Tiu during the first day of her trial, and a few hours after, the President was at the National Capital Region Police Office where four corrupt policemen were arrested after they were caught in the act of extorting money from civilians.

Yesterday, the President was at Camp Crame in Quezon City where the number one most-wanted man in Region III, Randy Raquino, and Nicodemus Gerilla, a member of the notorious Villaver kidnap for ransom gang, were presented to the media.

GMA orders 4 gov't departments to look into welfare of deportees in Malaysia

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Department of Labor and Employment, the Department of Social Welfare and Development, the Department of Health and other concerned agencies to look into the well-being and welfare of hundreds of Filipino deportees in Malaysia.

In a press briefing this afternoon at Malacañang, Governor Parouk Hussin of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) said most of these deportees come from the island-provinces of Sulu, Basilan, and Tawi-Tawi.

Hussin said the ARMM has already organized medical teams of nurses, doctors and other health personnel to proceed to an island, the Cagayan de Tawi-Tawi, or Mapon since there are about 600 or 800 deportees that are already on the island.

He also said that he already instructed personnel from the Department of Health to proceed to as far as Sandakan “to look into the situation of our brother Filipinos in the area who are subjects of this deportation.”

According to Hussin, their primary concern now is the resettlement of these deportees.

“My concern is about the resettlement of these people. They are coming in rather big numbers and some of them may have lived in Sabah for quite some time – ten years or maybe even more,” he said, adding that it’s presumed that they do not have houses in the provinces where they came from.

“This must be seriously looked into. Otherwise, it will create problem,” he said.

The ARMM governor said Zamboanga City Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat has expressed apprehension on the big number of deportees coming into Zamboanga City, “even fearing that some of the refugees might be infiltrated by criminal elements.”

Hussin noted that as head agency tasked by the President to look into the situation of the deportees, the Department of Social Welfare and Development “is doing its job remarkably well.” He also stressed that the DOH is also doing its work for the welfare of the deportees.

For his part, Assistant Secretary Antonio Rodriguez of the Department of Foreign Affairs said the issue of deportation has been going on for quite a long time now.

From 1990 to 1996, for instance, Rodriguez said, an average of 500 Filipinos were deported from Malaysia.

He said that the deportation has intensified in 1997 and particularly this year.

Rodriguez said the DFA has so far issued 16,000 travel documents starting in February this year. "Their estimate is that, for every travel document that they issue, there are at least three additional family members because they don't issue individual documents," he said.

The DFA official said more or less, some 64,000 Filipinos have already left for the Philippines and about 4,000 more Filipinos are waiting to be deported.

He brushed aside reports that it's open season for all deportable foreign nationals.

"That is not true. The Malaysians have detention centers that can accommodate only 800 persons. So, the Malaysians can only actually deport 800 persons," he said.

Rodriguez also said the Malaysian government had acceded to the representations made by the Philippine Embassy and has extended the period of deportation to August 24, 2002.

"That's why we hope to bring out all Filipinos who are deportable by the 24th of this month," he added.

He said that the government has already sent a six-man team to Sabah to reinforce the consular team in the Philippine Embassy in Kuala Lumpur.

"Today, Undersecretary for Special Concerns, Attorney Arthur Brion and our Assistant Secretary for DFA Mindanao, Ambassador Rivas, are also scheduled to go to Zamboanga," he said.

The DFA also sent a three-man team to go to Bungao to meet the deportees going there.

Rodriguez stressed that the President has also instructed them to formalize and make more permanent the presence of a team in Sabah.

"So, we're looking at assigning a permanent component with an appropriate head to man our office in Sabah. More or less, you can anticipate that henceforth, our presence in Sabah will not be on a temporary basis, but on a more permanent basis," he said.

Statement of the President on Ninoy's 19th Death Anniversary

The death of Ninoy Aquino 19 years ago was a historical event in our nationhood. It breathed life to the restoration of Philippine democracy after a dark period of dictatorship.

In life, what Ninoy gave to the people was already greater than freedom. He inspired us to fight for it. He inspired us to be tough in struggle, even in despair and isolation; to be loyal to principles, and to a high vision.

Ninoy was motivated by his profound love for the Filipino. He truly believed that the Filipino was worth dying for. It was supreme human faith that drove him.

His assassination jolted our people from lethargy and galvanized the nation to put an end to decades of tyranny and exploitation. This is what we learned from his martyrdom: We must never let terror and injustice rule our lives again. We must safeguard our democracy and never allow the ascendancy of dictatorship.

Through the supreme sacrifice, Ninoy contributed a most valuable stone in building the edifice of a strong Republic.

Let this inspire us to commit ourselves to our fight against poverty, crime, terrorism and corruption. Let us all be vigilant for the rule of law and decency.

I shall continue to lead our people under the same principles that Ninoy lived and died for. Let us all set aside our differences and gather our energies so we can forge ahead – each citizen casting his own stone, as Ninoy did, in the national edifice.

Set aside crystal ball and join gov't, people in task of nation building, Bayan Muna urged

The Presidential Liaison Office for Political Affairs urged the left-leaning Bayan Muna to set aside its crystal ball and instead join President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the Filipino people in the more important endeavor of nation building.

"We never thought that Bayan Muna's other political tool is a crystal ball predicting what will happen two years hence," said Hezel Gacutan, chief of staff of the Presidential Liaison Office for Political Affairs in reply to the pronouncement of Bayan Muna Deputy Secretary General Robert de Castro that the President would be "politically dead" by 2004.

"To begin with, the administration is more concerned with public service and addressing the problems of the country today," Gacutan said.

"Trabaho muna (Let's do our work first), and let the people decide when the time comes," he added.

Meanwhile, the Peace for Development, a non-governmental organization of academicians, students and professionals, said the Bayan Muna statement is “more akin to a work of fiction rather than real life.”

Melvin Mitra, chairman of Peace for Development, said that under the administration of what Bayan Muna referred to as a “politically dead president,” the first-ever political summit was held in the country.

“The convention was a political exercise where most of the political parties participated in the spirit of cooperation, joining together in support of good governance,” Peace for Development said.

Mitra said that aside from improving economic performance and increase in investor confidence in the country, the administration was able to achieve the following:

1. The country’s first comprehensive National Health Insurance Program directly benefiting 4 million urban poor families was instituted under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration;
2. Some 180,000 urban poor shelters have been provided;
3. Some 130,000 out-of-school youths have been employed;
4. Some 1,600 school buildings have been constructed and some 1,000 more are soon to be completed.

Peace for Development invited everyone “to look at the record of public service delivery and achievement and not at propaganda (so) we shall see who is truly a politically-dead entity.”

Palace denies reports that gov’t is short of cash

Malacañang today belied reports that the government is running out of cash and may not be able to disburse funds needed for the day-to-day activities of the different agencies.

In an interview, Secretary Emilia Boncodin of the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) said that, in fact, the DBM has already released the notice of cash allocations (NCAs) for August and September this year of all government agencies.

Boncodin said that the DBM has requested government agencies to give priority to the mandatory requirements for their operations like salaries and payment of bills for water or electricity.

“Iyon ang pinaka-importante kasi baka merong isang ahensiya na maputulan ng tubig o ilaw (This is very important because water or power might be cut off in some agencies),” Boncodin said.

Boncodin said that for other expenditures, like for the maintenance and operating expenses (MOE), the DBM would give an across-the-board allocation for all agencies.

If the DBM would decide to give only 50 percent of the MOE, then this would be the same amount released to all agencies, Boncodin said.

She also stressed that funds for veterans pension and the 13th month pay for state workers are mandatory expenditures and are included in the regular release of funds by the DBM.

Boncodin also said that although she feared ballooning of the fiscal deficit could be remedied by domestic borrowings, there is really a need to control the deficit.

She admitted that the real problem at the moment is how to increase revenue collections. “We have to be able to correct the defects of the revenue structure and the mechanism for collecting revenues,” Boncodin said.

Boncodin said that she was quite puzzled with the low revenue collections, adding that normally if the economy is growing, tax collections should grow.

The country's gross domestic product (GDP) grew by 3.8 percent for the second quarter and the inflation rate has remained low, signs that the growth of the economy was remarkable, Boncodin said.

“Kahit papaano our economy is growing, pero iyong ating collection ay hindi kasinglaki ng growth ng economy (Our economy is growing but our collections have not increased proportionate to the economy's growth),” Boncodin said.

Special employment program adopted for deportees

The government has adopted for implementation a Special Employment Program for Filipinos who have been displaced from their jobs in Sabah.

Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas today apprised President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on the moves being undertaken by the various departments of the government to assure the well-being and welfare of hundreds of Filipinos facing deportation in Malaysia.

Sto. Tomas said the Philippine government is requesting Malaysian authorities to allow the return of the Filipinos in more manageable batches and possibly an extension of time within which to repatriate them.

Sto. Tomas said Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople is now in Kuala Lumpur to take up with the Malaysian authorities the plight of the Filipino deportees.

Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, on her part, said the DSWD central office in Manila has transferred P1 million to the DSWD office in Region 9 to cover the expenses related to the deportees.

Another P1 million has been earmarked as standby fund for the same purpose, she added.

Soliman said the DSWD regional office has coordinated with the Provincial Social Welfare Officers on Tawi-Tawi and Sulu to prepare for the return of the deportees on August 23 and 24.

Sto. Tomas informed the President that two strategies have been worked out to address the problem of the displaced Filipinos:

— First, to prevent the deportation of Filipinos who are still in Sabah by arranging their regular employment in Sabah; and — Second, to provide alternative employment or livelihood to those who are already in the Philippines.

Sto. Tomas said Secretary Ople will ask the Malaysian government to allow Filipinos now in Sabah to stay longer there while jobs are being negotiated for them.

A high-level mission led by Director-General Dante Liban of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority and Administrator Rosalinda Dimapilis-Baldoz of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration is also in Malaysia to discuss with the authorities there a system to identify Malaysian employers who have need for contract workers, and to negotiate jobs for Filipinos who are already in that neighboring country.

The TESDA will provide the onsite training and certification for workers in the construction and plantation sectors while the Department of Foreign Affairs, National Statistics Office and the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) will establish a quick documentation system of these undocumented workers.

The Department of Trade and Industry and the private sector, particularly the Employers Confederation of the Philippines and the Philippine Contractors Association, will also explore opportunities for service contracts in construction with their Malaysian counterparts, particularly in the Sabah area.

For workers already in the Philippines, Sto. Tomas said the following programs will be pursued:

- The setting up of an Employment Assistance Center by DOLE in coordination with concerned local government units and national officials;
- The profiling and eventual employment assistance by DOLE to the 20,000 workers who are expected to move from Sabah to Mindanao;
- The implementation of livelihood programs such as plantation production of cassava, carrageen in, and domestic fishing by DOLE, in coordination with the Department of Environment and Natural Resources, Department of Agriculture and other government agencies to implement livelihood programs;
- The identification of pasture or similar lands for possible cultivation of cassava on a contract growing basis for local processors and manufacturers;
- Identification of high value added crops by the Department of Agriculture for possible cultivation by deportees and the extension of advisory services for agriculture and agriculture-related services.

World Bank cites faster gov't implementation of social projects

Very soon, children of poor families will peruse new textbooks as they enjoy the comfort of newly-built classrooms.

Poverty-stricken communities will also soon receive basic health services in newly-erected clinics and village health centers.

Other social services are in the offing as the government improves on the pace of carrying out World Bank-supported programs and projects.

Robert Vance Pulley, World Bank (WB) Country Director for the Philippines, noted that the government, despite a tight fiscal position, has come up with counterpart funds to assure the completion of vital anti-poverty programs and projects.

“After three consecutive years of declining performance, I am pleased to see this turnaround,” Pulley said.

From June 2001 to June 2002 alone, gross disbursements of WB-financed portfolio went up from $126 million last year to $136 million this year, or an increase of eight percent.

“This means that it will take a shorter period of time to deliver the services and infrastructure to the intended poor communities,” the WB official said.

Pulley lauded the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for its resolve “to ensure prompt implementation of projects and the higher allocation and timely release of funds.”

“But while this improvement is encouraging, the Philippines should further improve to at least a 20-percent disbursement ratio, given that most projects are planned for a five-year period,” he said.

In a report, the WB said the country showed significant improvement in its disbursement ratio, which is the percentage of available funds drawn down or spent on projects during the year.

The ratio rose from 12 percent last year to 15 percent this year. A 15-percent ratio implied that the project implementation period was reduced to only 6.7 years, compared to 8.4 years when the ratio was 12 percent.

Prior to 1999, the Philippines was disbursing as much as 24 percent, implying a four-year implementation period.

Pulley said the Department of Finance, National Economic and Development Authority and the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) have assured the WB of adequate and timely allocation of resources for the coming year.

This would allow for the faster implementation of Overseas Development Assistance projects.

The WB noted the impressive implementation of the Third Elementary Education Project (TEEP) of the Department of Education (DepEd), the Social Expenditure Management Project (SEMP) of the DBM, the DepEd and the Department of Social Welfare and Development; and the Second Subic Bay Freeport Project of the Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority.

A WB report showed that the TEEP disbursement ratio doubled from eight percent to 16 percent, shortening the implementation time from 12 to six years.

On the other hand, the Subic and SEMP project disbursement ratios rose from 10 to 34 percent and from five to 33 percent, respectively.

Besides this, the DepEd adopted procurement reforms that generated textbook savings of some $20 million.

The WB likewise commended ahead-of-schedule government disbursements on two social projects, the Agrarian Reform Communities Development Project (ARCDP) of the Department of Agrarian Reform and the Social Fund Project of the Special Zone for Peace and Development (SZOPAD) Management Office under the Office of the President.

Gov't peace panel prepares for possible talks with NDF

The government panel is ready to face the National Democratic Front (NDF), the political arm of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), in another round of peace negotiations.

Despite conflicting media statements of CPP-NDF leaders on the resumption of talks, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said the Philippine panel has continued preparations for possible talks in Oslo, Norway or the Netherlands.

"Nananatili pa rin ang policy ng pamahalaan na ipagpatuloy ang usapang pangkapayapaan (The government policy to continue the peace talks stands)," Ermita said in a radio interview this morning.

He said they might be briefing the Cabinet Oversight Committee on the status of the peace talks.

In the briefing, the panel would likewise seek for the Cabinet and President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's approval of documents, or the draft of a Final Peace Agreement, that would serve as the basis for the talks with the NDF, he added.

Ermita said CPP-NDF leaders Jose Maria Sison and Luis Jalandoni appeared vacillating, with both issuing contradicting views.

"Hihintayin pa rin natin iyong official statement sa kanila (We will still wait for their official statement on the matter of the talks)," he said.

He maintained that Jalandoni continued to be the NDF peace panel chairman and Sison was only a panel adviser.

“Hindi natin alam ang kanilang laro (We do not know their game),” he pointed out, but said the government’s door to peace remained open to the NDF panel, headed by Jalandoni.

Ermita also disclosed that back-channeling efforts are going on – with contacts from the NDF and those in the Dutch and Norwegian governments.

He said government peace panel head Silvestre Bello III and Presidential Management Staff and back-channel negotiator-designate Silvestre Afable, Jr. were actively involved in the back-channel efforts.

He noted that the people have been looking forward to a political settlement on the issues raised by the NDF, if only to stop criminal acts, violence and terrorism perpetrated by the New People’s Army in the field.

The government-NDF talks were suspended on June 2001 following the assassinations by the NPA, the armed component of the CPP, of former Tanauan, Batangas Mayor Cesar Platon, former Quezon Rep. Marcial Punzalan, former Cagayan Valley Rep. Rodolfo Aguinaldo, and former Tala-Ingod, Davao del Norte Mayor Jose Labayao.

The talks would have resumed in mid-November last year but were stalled anew when the NPA refused to release four soldiers they held hostage. The CPP-NDF asked government to declare the suspension of military offensives as a condition for the soldiers’ release.

In early March this year, President Macapagal-Arroyo ordered the temporary suspension of formal talks, as she called for back-channeling efforts to reach the CPP-NDF.

A month later, negotiators Afable and Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales met with Norwegian officials who they asked to inform the CPP-NDF to resume talks on the draft of a Final Peace Agreement.

The CPP-NDF flatly rejected the proposal, which included discussions on the demobilization of the NPA.

When the President ordered the pullout of troops in Mindanao and had them returned to their mother camps in Luzon to help neutralize the NPA’s criminal and terrorist activities, the CPP-NDF reacted and charged government of waging an all-out war resulting in military human rights violations as it would jeopardize the resumption of peace talks.

The CPP-NDF also reacted negatively to the United States’ declaration of the communist group as a foreign terrorist organization. This was followed by the freezing of CPP-NDF assets by the British and Dutch governments. They regarded this as adverse to the resumption of talks.

Through all these, the government said it would address the atrocities being committed by the NPA while keeping lines open for talks with the NDF.

GMA joins people in commemorating Plaza Miranda bombing

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today unveiled the commemorative marker of Plaza Miranda in Quiapo, Manila where, 31 years ago, nine innocent civilians were killed and scores wounded in bombings allegedly perpetrated by communist elements.

The President was assisted by Manila Mayor Lito Atienza during the unveiling rites.

The President also walked and passed through the Lacson Underpass, named after former Manila Mayor Arsenio Lacson, to view and inspect the improvements of the shopping arcade in the underpass.

The President motored to Plaza Miranda after attending a Mass to commemorate the 19th death anniversary of former Senator Benigno Aquino, Jr. at the Manila Memorial Park in Sucat, Paranaque City.

During a short program at the plaza, the President listened to a message from former Senate President Jovito Salonga, read by Judy Araneta Roxas, the wife of late Senator Gerardo Roxas and mother of Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II.

The Roxas couple — together with Salonga and the late Senator Sergio Osmeña, Jr. and other leaders of the Liberal Party (LP) who were then presenting their official candidates to the national polls — were among those wounded in the bombing.

Roxas said Salonga recalled the night after the attack. Many people saw him wounded. His doctor even thought he would not survive.

“Only God’s amazing grace, the professional skill, perseverance and devotion of my 34 doctors, who refused to bill me for their services, and the prayers and the love of my family saved me from the shadow of the valley of death,” Salonga said.

He said that when he was in the Manila Medical Center from August 21 to October, 1971, he prayed that the bloody event would not happen again.

“As I am in the habit of saying, in a democracy we can disagree without being disagreeable; we can differ without being difficult. This is the meaning and essence of civility in an open, free and just society,” he added.

He thanked the President for attending the commemoration. He also lauded Mayor Atienza for bringing life back to Plaza Miranda.

“Now it looks like a real plaza. Clean, no more hookers and peddlers. There is an obelisk with inscriptions, an achievement of Mayor Atienza,” he said.

Seven HMB suspects presented to GMA

CABIAO, Nueva Ecija – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented to the media seven suspected members of the Hukbong Mapagpalaya ng Bayan (HMB) who were arrested here early this morning.

The President arrived here at around 1 p.m. on board a helicopter shortly after attending the unveiling of a commemorative marker of the Plaza Miranda bombing in Quiapo, Manila.

In a statement read by the President at the Municipal Hall here, she said the arrest of the seven suspected communist members was another accomplishment of the government in its intensified campaign against criminality and terrorism in the country.

The suspects, who are believed to be remnants of the HMB, were arrested by the Cabiao police at around 6 a.m. in Barangay Bagong Silang, Cabiao, Nueva Ecija.

In a report to the President, Philippine National Police (PNP) Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. identified the arrested suspects as Alfredo Cruz, Val Galang, Michael Ortiz, Daniel Simbulan, Jason Ramos, Bienvenido Ramos and Jovy Soliman.

During the operation, the police were able to confiscate two M14 rifles, three M16 armalite rifles, three rifle grenades, one carbine rifle, various camouflage vests, seven backpacks and subversive documents.

In her statement, the President noted that the arrest were made possible through information given by concerned citizens who saw the armed men in their area.

“I call on our citizens to come forward and report to your police and to Patrol 117 any information you may have on any illegal activities,” she said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also took the opportunity to congratulate the team of Chief Inspector Rolando Santos, Cabaio police chief, and Nueva Ecija PNP Provincial Director Senior Supt. Raul Bacalzo for the successful drive against the HMB members.

Canlas, Ople, Alvarez to lead RP group in int'l summit in sustainable development

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople and Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Heherson Alvarez will lead the Philippine delegation to the World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD) in Johannesburg, South Africa from August 26 to September 4.

The country's delegation — composed of some 68 officials from government, business and the civil society — will join over 65,000 participants from other countries, including more than 100 presidents and prime ministers.

The world summit will celebrate the 10th year anniversary of the historic Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, as it will assess how far each country has progressed in promoting the sustainable development agenda adopted in the Global Agenda 21.

Canlas, also chairman of the Philippine Council on Sustainable Development (PCSD), will submit proposals on various key issues, including an international sustainable development governance structure, water and sanitation, and stakeholder participation.

He said the PCSD stood as among the first mechanisms in the world created to follow up national commitments to the Global Agenda 21, a report from the National Economic and Development Authority said.

Canlas said the Philippines wanted the WSSD to come up with concrete measures so that the Rio Earth Summit and the Millennium Development Goals, which a need to reduce poverty by half in 2015, could be realized.

He said the Philippine delegation will support moves:

- To put up the World Solidarity Fund to bankroll poverty alleviation programs in developing countries;
- To extend debt relief or debt cancellation that do not compromise Official Development Assistance (ODA) for developing countries;
- To clear targets and timelines for reducing poverty and the number of people without access to water and sanitation; to adopt renewable energy; and
- To ratify and implement protocols and conventions, such as the Kyoto Protocol and the Convention on Climate Change, the Basel Convention, Rotterdam Convention and Stockholm Convention on chemicals and wastes, and the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety.

Canlas said the delegation maintained that the summit should not be a venue for renegotiation of what had been previously agreed upon, but should build upon the agreement contained in the Doha Development Agenda and the Monterey Consensus.

In Doha and Monterey, a framework was reached to improve the market access of developing countries and to increase financial assistance for development.

He said all countries should work together to ensure that the benefits of growth and development are broadly shared.

“It is vital that the needs of the present generation are satisfactorily met without diminishing the capacity of future generations to meet theirs,” Canlas said.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

I understand that the discovery of the tax diversion case at the Land Bank has caused anxiety about the integrity of the tax payment system.

I would like to reassure large and small taxpayers that banks are now equipped to take your payments either on the basis of e-filing or e-payment system for large taxpayers and through the debit payment for non-large taxpayers. The e-payment system was institutionalized by the BIR as of August 1, 2002 and is further being enhanced to broaden the number of banks that can accept payment.

The debit payment system, which banks will soon be authorized to accept, will require taxpayers to fill out an agreed form of debit memos to their banks authorizing the transfer of cash from their account to the Bureau of Treasury, payable to the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

These methods of payment will reduce the risk of diverting check payments, as this method is done electronically and very secure.

I would like to thank Congressman Enrique Garcia for spearheading the work done with the banking system in developing the debit payment system. A task force is in fact being constituted to continue working on these modes of payment, which Acting BIR Commissioner Cornelio Gison will need to closely monitor for implementation.

In the meantime, let us not allow ourselves to be paralyzed by the events transpiring in the Government’s efforts to uncover the unlawful activities depriving our nation of much-needed resources. This is a time when the Government needs the help of all well-meaning citizens in doing their share of building our revenue base and guarding those revenues with much zeal and vigilance.

We are intent in cleaning up the BIR and freeing it from the clutches of corrupt individuals. But we cannot do this alone. Join me and my team in this crusade so we can continue the work toward building a strong republic.

Datumanong orders deeper probe of alleged anomalies in DPWH

A more thorough investigation of alleged illegal deals in the repair of vehicles and equipment and other anomalies in the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) is in the works.

DPWH Secretary Simeon Datumanong, on directives from President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, said the investigation would also cover reported substandard projects, procurements, and other such sources of graft and corrupt practices in the agency.

Earlier, the President ordered the filing of charges against three DPWH bureau directors and 38 employees for alleged involvement in a P139-million vehicle repair anomaly.

At the same time, Datumanong rescinded the contract of and banned Urban Consolidated Constructors Phil., Inc. (UCCPI) from joining in any bidding or entering into any contract with the DPWH. The UCCPI abandoned the construction of the Bayawan-Kalumbayan Road, Contract Package VIII in Negros Oriental.

He also ordered the termination of the contract for the construction of the Bayugan-Awa-San Francisco (Prosperidad) Road Section along the Surigao-Davao road in Mindanao, as the contractor, LS Sarmiento/Conception Basic/J&P Builders, incurred intolerable slippages in project implementation.

“I won’t hesitate to throw the books at contractors who are incurring delays in implementing government projects,” he said.

Datumanong created a committee to look into reports of anomalies.

He also called for the speedy implementation of reforms in asset management and project implementation, while strengthening DPWH procurement processes for civil works, supplies and equipment, and consultancy services.

Ongoing reforms included the use of a computerized registry of contractors in the pre-qualification process; post evaluation of contractors; posting of bid advertisements in the DPWH web site and the Department of Budget and Management’s (DBM) electronic procurement system and in newspapers.

Meanwhile, the agency is working on the substantial payment of claims from construction firms for work completed as per contract.

The DPWH said the cash requirement for August 2002 to pay due and demandable claims nationwide has reached P4.5 billion. The agency had asked the DBM for the cash release of P2 billion in accordance with the DBM ceiling. The balance would be carried over to September 2002.

This would effectively ease the cash flow of contractors and claimants, Datumanong said.

GMA focused on her main goals, Palace says

Malacañang today stressed that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo continues to focus her efforts in fighting crime, eradicating poverty, lowering the cost of power, and practicing good governance.

When asked to comment on a foreign newspaper report that Indonesian President Megawati Sukarnoputri is emerging as the better leader in the region, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that the two leaders have different styles.

“I still believe that the President has got what it takes to really lead our country,” Bunye said in his regular press briefing.

Bunye noted that the President would rather concentrate on the targets that she had enunciated in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA).

“Of course, the overall objective is the elimination of poverty within 10 years. The immediate targets would be the campaign against criminality and addressing the power rates,” Bunye said.

“We believe the President can deliver on her promises. Based on her qualification, based on her training and on what she has done so far, we believe that the President could really propel our country forward,” Bunye said.

No extension for Cimatú based on GMA’s previous statements — Bunye

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today said that there wouldn’t be any extension for Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatú, who is due to retire next month.

Bunye made this emphasis when asked if President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is inclined to extend Cimatú’s term in the light of the development in Patikul, Sulu where armed men kidnapped six individuals.

“I think the President has already made the announcement several times that while she believes in the capacity of Gen. Cimatú, there are other generals who are waiting in the wings and just as capable,” Bunye said in his regular press briefing in Malacañang.

Cimatú, who was confirmed by the Commission on Appointments Tuesday, is due to retire on September 1.

Meanwhile, Bunye said the government is not implementing a news blackout on the latest kidnapping incident in Sulu.

But he said that it is better for Malacañang not to comment on the latest kidnapping incident as there are still ongoing operations against the perpetrators.

“The President has not made any comment. I think the policy right now is not to comment on any ongoing operations and would rather let the men in the field give the details of the operations,” he said.

“But of course, the President is very concerned about the safety of the hostages,” Bunye added.

GMA okays draft memo institutionalizing Kalahi anti-poverty program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has approved a draft Memorandum Circular (MC) institutionalizing the Kapit Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (Kalahi) as the framework and program for poverty reduction.

The President approved the draft memorandum during the second National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) en banc meeting in Malacañang wherein she also inducted into office Presidential Adviser on Cooperatives Roberto Pagdanganan and the farmers, fisher folk, youth and students sectoral representatives of the NAPC.

Under the MC, all government poverty reduction programs and projects shall anchor on Kalahi. The government, through Kalahi, shall solicit the active participation of basic sector organizations, other civil society organizations, and the business sector in its poverty reduction programs or activities.

The poverty reduction program has three goals – reduced poverty, improved governance, and empowered communities.

It will be based on the five strategies: accelerated asset reform; improved access to human development services; provision of employment and livelihood opportunities; social protection and security from violence; and institutionalized and strengthened participation in governance.

To facilitate proper targeting of Kalahi sites, planning, coordination and monitoring of poverty reduction program, projects and resources, the Memorandum Circular established the following convergence groups, adhering to the principle of open and inclusive membership:

1. The National KALAHÍ Convergence Group composed of heads and or focal persons of the national government agencies such as the Department of Agrarian Reform, Department of Agriculture, Department of Labor and Employment, Department of Budget and Management, Department of Social Welfare and Development, Department of Health, Department of Education, Department of the Interior and Local Government, Department of Environment and Natural Resources, National Economic and Development Authority, People’s Credit and Finance Corporation, Presidential Commission on the Urban Poor, Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council, National Commission on Indigenous Peoples, Commission on Higher Education, Department of Justice, Department of Finance, Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Science and Technology, Department of Public Works, Technical Education and Skills Development Authority, Technology and Livelihood Resource Center, National Housing Authority, National Youth Commission, National Food Authority, Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office, Philippine Information Agency, and other national government agencies that may be identified later, national chapters of local government leagues, and the NAPC Basic Sector Representatives.

2. The Regional Kalahi Convergence Groups, composed of heads and or local persons of the regional counterparts of the National Kalahi convergence group agencies, the Presidential Assistant for Regional Development or the Regional Development Officer (RDO).

To effectively implement Kalahi in all targeted areas and communities, funding shall be sourced from allocation from program funds of the national government agencies and from funds of local government units.

The Kalahi program of the government was conceptualized from the President's inaugural address which specifically said that the fight against poverty should be won within the decade.

The President's Day: August 23, 2002

23 AUGUST 2002

- Palace set to issue an M.O. on how to dispose of public lands for the informal settlers
- Budget deficit still very manageable, says Bunye
- Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
- Military yet to ascertain abductors' link to Abu Sayyaf, says Reyes
- Gov't can implement absentee-voting bill if okayed by Congress — Palace
- Other regional currencies also slid along with the peso, says Palace
- GMA still bent on implementing capital punishment this year, says Press Secretary

Palace set to issue an M.O. on how to dispose of public lands for the informal settlers

Malacañang will soon issue a Memorandum Order (MO) that would set government policy and guidelines on the disposition of public lands for the informal settlers and providing funds for this program.

The MO will direct the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) to adopt certain guidelines on how to regularize the status of informal settlers now occupying government lands.

These guidelines were discussed during the second en banc meeting of the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) held in Malacañang yesterday and presided over by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

One of the items in the agenda of the meeting was the immediate disposition of all government lands that have not been used for the purposes for which they have been reserved during the past 10 years.

The President said she would study if there is a need for an executive order that would declare open to disposition for socialized housing purposes certain government-owned lands defined under Republic Act 7279.

The President also directed the NAPC to hold en banc meetings every month. He also directed the fast tracking of the completed staff work on memorandum orders or presidential proclamations as petitioned by actual settlers on the following:

- Authorizing the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) to dispose of certain portions of right-of-way of its abandoned aqueduct in favor of the bonafide family occupants for socialized housing;
- Lifting the directive holding in abeyance the implementation of Proclamation No. 770, s. 1966, on the TELOF Property in Pugad Baboy in Valenzuela;
- Amending MO 119, series of 1987, which provided guidelines for the implementation of Proclamation No. 187, series of 1987, on the Western Bicutan farmlands;
- Directing the Department of Justice and HUDCC to investigate the reported irregularities in the titling of lands on portions of the Lungsod Silangan Townsite Reservation located in the province of Rizal, and to explore and recommend possible tenurial arrangements for their legitimate occupants.

The President is also set to sign an MO directing NAPC and the Presidential Commission on the Urban Poor (PCUP) to act as the national and regional clearing houses for the conduct of demolition and eviction activities involving the homeless and underprivileged.

For ongoing demolitions, the President will be issuing a directive to implementing agencies to seek prior approval of NAPC and PCUP for national infrastructure projects and PCUP and the Department of Interior and Local Government for regional and local infrastructure projects.

Budget deficit still very manageable, says Bunye

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today stressed that the country's budget deficit was "still very manageable," despite having slightly gone beyond the P130-billion target for the year.

Bunye, in a radio interview, said the government has instituted a number of measures to cut down on or postpone non-urgent public expenses.

He cited training and travel expenses that could be stricken off the expense list of government agencies.

"This is one way to control the deficit," he said.

But he allayed fears of local officials on rumors that the national government would withhold the Internal Revenue Allotment (IRA) being given to the latter for their programs and projects.

Bunye said there is a provision in the Local Government Code that would allow the withholding of the IRA if there is an unmanageable budget deficit but this would not happen under the present situation.

He also said the national government would release to members of Congress their Countrywide Development Funds to make sure that vital projects are implemented.

Earlier, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin belied reports that the government was running out of cash and might be unable to disburse funds needed for the day-to-day operations of the different agencies.

Boncodin said the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) has released the notice of cash allocations for August and September of all government agencies.

She urged the agencies to prioritize their mandatory operational requirements like salaries and the payment for water and power bills.

On the other hand, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho stressed that the government would go on maintaining fiscal discipline, as it remained committed to budget deficit targets that correspond to about 3.3 percent of the gross domestic product (GDP).

The GDP is the sum total of all goods and services a local economy produces in a particular period of time.

Camacho expressed optimism that surpluses would be attained in the next few months going into the last semester.

He projected better revenue collections and substantial proceeds from the sale of big-ticket state assets to keep the budget deficit in line.

Meanwhile, former Economic Planning Secretary Cielito Habito said that there was "no real strong economic reason to fear a larger-than-target deficit at this point."

But Habito said the state budget would have to be spent well, with priorities – particularly in infrastructure development — given due social and economic relevance in so far as the country's growth potentials were concerned.

He even called for the relaxation of the budget deficit ceiling so that the country could expand the GDP to the targeted 4 percent to 4.5 percent.

Habito said performance targets like the inflation rate and the interest rate would not be adversely affected with a breach in the deficit ceiling.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

I will be issuing shortly an Executive Order promulgating the Restructuring Program of Electric Cooperatives (ECs), which among others, authorized the condonation of ECs Rural Electrification loans incurred as of 26 June 2001.

This means eighteen (18) billion pesos worth of government support directly benefiting almost six (6) million households served by 119 ECs throughout the country.

This E.O. effectively condoning the loans of all ECs, means the eventual lowering of electric rates and improved power service.

The program the E.O. outlines, setting forth its terms and conditions, demands vigorous positive response in terms of drastic reforms, mandated as well as self-imposed, both of which will exact tremendous sacrifices.

Together with me, our countrymen, particularly the rural folk, recognize, appreciate and thank the leaders of the rural electrification program for their extraordinary achievements in providing for our people better quality of life, triggering economic development in the countryside. I am happy and grateful for what you did in the Lanao del Sur, Masbate, Aklan and Basilan, thus manifesting a dramatic demonstration of massive cooperation of all ECs from Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao.

Considering, however, the utmost importance of the power sector, without which no country can really progress in many aspects of human endeavors, I must state categorically the following:

1. I will not allow any EC to hold hostage to its inefficiencies the thousands of member-consumers in its area coverage. Our people deserve the best, and I will see to it that they get it.
2. I shall expect transparency and honesty in all transactions. Any dishonest act must be considered a crime against the thousands affected by it, and this I will not tolerate.
3. I hereby direct the National Electrification Administration (NEA) to exercise forcefully, strictly and consistently its supervisory power over the ECs.
4. I want to see dramatic impact results from the performance improvement and rehabilitation and efficiency plans of ECs within the next 180 days, after which for those which fail, all other measures shall be open for consideration.

Even as I demand much now, I pledge total support for the ECs and the NEA.

Military yet to ascertain abductors' link to Abu Sayyaf, says Reyes

Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes today stressed that the military has yet to ascertain the involvement of Muin Sajiron, prime suspect in the recent abduction of six preachers of the Jehovah's Witnesses in Sulu, to the Abu Sayyaf terrorist group.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Reyes also stressed that there was no direct evidence yet to say that the Abu Sayyaf was responsible for the abductions and reported beheading of two of the hostages.

"We cannot, as of now, categorically ascertain that he (Muin Sajiron) is Abu Sayyaf. The moment that we ascertain that, then we will tell you," he said.

He said Sajiron, leader of the gang that abducted the six preachers in Patikul town, was not Abu Sayyaf but "a loose cannon" who could not be controlled even by his uncle, Abu Sayyaf leader Radulan Sajiron.

Reyes recalled that it was Muin who led the group that kidnapped broadcast journalist Maan Macapagal, who was on her way home after an interview with the Abu Sayyaf.

Muin defied Abu Sayyaf safety clearances earlier given by the terrorist group to Macapagal.

The defense chief said Muin is a drug-crazed man.

“I was informed by the Mayor (Hasir Hayudini) of Patikul and (Sulu) Governor (Yusop) Jikiri, that in all probability, this guy is heavily into drugs,” he said.

Reyes said the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) go by the Order of Battle in identifying members of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf.

“(Muin) is not in the Order of Battle. He is what we might call a loose cannon. Not even Radulan Sajiron can influence him,” he said.

Earlier, AFP spokesman retired Major General Melchor Rosales claimed that Brig. Gen. Romeo Tolentino, commander of the Sulu-based Army’s 10th Infantry Brigade, never stated that the Abu Sayyaf was behind the abduction of the six preachers.

Rosales also clarified that there were several other criminal groups operating in Sulu. These are pirates, lost commands, outlaws, breakaway groups and others.

Meanwhile, Reyes clarified that the military had not reduced forces in Sulu, but had even injected the Army’s 55th Infantry Battalion in the province three weeks ago, and the 14th Infantry Battalion two months ago.

“We have increased, as a matter of fact, our Armed Forces elements there because we knew and we know that we have to recover the remaining Indonesian hostages and we have to address the presence of personalities there,” he said.

He further refuted the reported sightings of Abu Sabaya, as claimed by witnesses from the camp of Fr. Cirilo Nacorda, the parish priest of Lamitan in Basilan who also was a victim of Abu Sayyaf atrocities.

“He says that he was told, he heard that Abu Sabaya is alive. I don’t think that he saw Abu Sabaya. If Abu Sabaya is alive and somebody had seen him, then please come forward,” he said.

Gov’t can implement absentee-voting bill if okayed by Congress — Palace

Malacañang today assured the public that the government would be able to implement the absentee-voting law in the presidential elections in 2004 if Congress would enact it on time.

“It will indeed be difficult to implement the law, but it will not be impossible,” Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said today in his press briefing in Malacañang.

Bunye said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo believes that the absentee-voting bill, now being deliberated in both houses of Congress, “is a very worthwhile legislation.”

The press secretary agreed with the observation of Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople that Philippine foreign missions, given their budgetary constraints, may not be able to fully implement the absentee-voting law in the 2004 polls.

Ople said that Philippine embassies and consulates, particularly in areas with a large concentration of Filipinos, such as the United States, Saudi Arabia, Italy, Japan and Canada, may not be able to properly handle the new voting system because of lack of adequate funding and personnel.

Bunye said the present election procedures in the country would be multiplied several times over with the additional overseas voting.

“There is also the problem of actual monitoring, counting, and safeguarding of ballots,” Bunye said.

These concerns, however, are now being addressed by the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Ople said that despite their apprehensions, he has already directed DFA Undersecretary for Special Concerns Arturo Brion to look into possible methods that could ensure the implementation of the new polling system in Philippine foreign missions in the 2004 elections.

Other regional currencies also slid along with the peso, says Palace

Malacañang today said that the fall of the Philippine peso vis a vis the US dollar is not peculiar to the Philippine currency but is also being experienced by other currencies in the region.

In his press briefing in Malacañang, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said the Thai baht and the Japanese yen have also gone down.

“So, this could be the effect of a trend and is not limited to the Philippines,” Bunye said.

Even currency traders have said that currencies in the region have started to weaken against the greenback and this could have pulled the peso down in the process.

Bunye also explained that another factor that could have affected the peso-dollar exchange rate were the heavy corporate demands for the dollar during the last two or three days.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) said that imports of goods expanded for the fourth consecutive month beginning February, peaking in April at 18.8 percent but tapering off in May at 3.9 percent.

But total imports for the first five months of this year reached $12.547 billion, 3.2 percent higher than the level a year ago, the BSP said.

“These developments reflected in part replenishment and inventory buildup as manufacturers have geared up importation following expectations of more robust domestic demands,” the BSP said.

“There is an increasing demand for US dollars because of more import activities,” Bunye said.

GMA still bent on implementing capital punishment this year, says Press Secretary

Malacañang today reiterated the position of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to implement the capital punishment within the year.

“Maybe not on the exact date as planned but definitely some executions will be carried out within the year,” Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye told reporters during a press briefing in Malacañang.

Bunye said the President received advice from various quarters, particularly on the issue on the date of the first execution under her administration. Scheduled for execution on August 30 is convicted rapist Rolando Padayawon.

Bunye said he believed there is merit in postponing the very first execution.

During the press briefing, Bunye also said the Palace will have to take into consideration the date of the execution of Padayawon, which incidentally falls on the eve of the birthday of Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin.

Padayawon is one of the 22 death convicts who are scheduled to die by lethal injection before the year ends.

“It’s quite clear at this stage that she will implement or she will carry out some of these death penalties within the year, that’s for sure,” the Press Secretary stressed.

“As to the date of the first execution, that’s still being determined,” he added.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today warned anew people who use the name of any member of her family or the Office of the President in the pursuit of illegal activities, saying that they will be prosecuted with the full force of the law.

In her regular radio address this morning, the President noted the recent arrest by the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) of a poseur who claimed that he was connected with the Office of the President.

According to the NBI, the suspect claimed that he represents First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo and that he was in charge of the supposed sale of a government property in Tokyo.

The President said she was thankful that somebody reported the incident to her and the man was immediately arrested by the NBI.

"Let this be a firm warning to anyone using the name of my family and my office to get away with wrongdoings. We will prosecute such name-droppers and influence peddlers in full measure," the President said.

On Wednesday, the NBI charged a certain Anthony Deslate, 38, with usurpation of authority for dropping the name of the First Gentleman.

Deslate reportedly tried to solicit P3 million from a Japanese trader by passing himself as a presidential adviser authorized to sell a government land in Tokyo.

In a press conference at the NBI headquarters in Manila, the First Gentleman said he would not allow anybody to use his name in any business transactions in both the private and the public sectors.

GMA cites civilians' role in foiling NPA attack in Quezon power plant

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the significant role of civilians in foiling the attack of the New People's Army (NPA), the armed component of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), at the Pagbilao Power plant in Pagbilao, Quezon last week.

Residents of Kanlurang Mabolo in Pagbilao, led by their barangay captain, has informed the military about the movements of the NPA which led to the terrorists' defeat in an encounter last Saturday.

"Salamat na lamang sa tulong ng mga mamamayan sa Pagbilao ay naagapan ito at natalo iyong mga NPA sa encounter (I thank the people of Pagbilao. With their help, the military was able to trounce the NPA in the encounter)," the President said in her regular radio address this morning.

The President noted that the government has been warned of fresh attacks by the NPA on public utilities and infrastructure, communication and power lines and transport facilities in its bid to bring down the government.

She said she proceeded to Mauban, Quezon last Monday principally to check on the security arrangements on the town's power plant.

"Tiniyak ng military at police sa akin nuong nagpunta ako sa power plant ng Mauban na pinuprotektahan nila ito. Gayundin ang mga distribution lines o linyang dinadaluyan ng kuryente (The military and the police have assured me of the security of the plant, as well as their distribution lines)," the President said.

The President said it is important for the public to feel that the government has secured these infrastructures.

"Mahalaga ito para maging palagay ang ating loob at panatag ang ating isipan. Hindi tayo kailanman dapat padala sa pananakot ng mga armadong organisasyon tulad ng NPA (It is important for us to feel secured. We must not allow armed groups like the NPA to sow fear among us)," the President said.

The failed attack on the Pagbilao power plant was just one of the many acts of terrorism perpetrated by the CPP-NPA, which was recently included in the United States' list of 34 foreign terrorist organizations.

GMA visits family of OFW acquitted of murder in Saudi Arabia

CAVITE CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today visited the family of Joselito Alejo, one of the three overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) who were acquitted in a murder case in Saudi Arabia.

The President, who arrived here at around 10 a.m., assured Mrs. Dalisay Alejo, wife of the OFW, of the government's help for the immediate return of her husband to the country.

The three OFWs were acquitted by the Saudi court last July 22 and are now awaiting clearances from the Saudi government before their repatriation to the Philippines.

During her visit, the President comforted Alejo's wife and daughter Ann Camille, 13, saying she is glad that Alejo was acquitted from the charges and will soon be reunited with his family.

"At least this is a happy occasion for us," the President told the Alejo family.

In return, Mrs. Alejo thanked the President and the other agencies of the government, particularly the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), for providing her husband with the necessary assistance.

The President likewise directed the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) to find ways on how to help Alejo find another overseas employment as soon as he comes back from Saudi Arabia.

According to Mrs. Alejo, her husband has been an OFW since 1980 and has traveled several times to Saudi Arabia.

Records showed that Alejo left the Philippines on March 10, 1997 to work as a trailer driver for Astra Farms in Tabuk, Saudi Arabia.

On August 10, 1997, Alejo and two other OFWs, namely Romeo Cordova and Ramiro Esmero, were picked up by Saudi authorities for questioning regarding the murder of Saudi policeman.

The three OFWs were detained for almost five years and had spent six months in solitary confinement inside a maximum security prison in Saudi Arabia.

Among those who accompanied the President in her visit to the Alejo family residence were Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, DFA Assistant Secretary for Personnel and Administrative Services Victoria Bataclan, Cavite Gov. Erineo Maliksi and Cavite City Mayor Bernardo Paredes.

Military now pursuing bandits involved in the abduction of six civilians in Sulu — GMA

The military, with the assistance of local officials, is now pursuing the members of a bandit group that abducted six innocent civilians in Patikul, Sulu, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today.

“Kumikilos na ang ating mga sundalo maging ang ating mga local government officials upang tugisin ang mga bandidong may kagagawan nito (Our soldiers as well as local government officials are now working to go after the bandits who are responsible for this crime),” the President said in her weekend radio address aired nationwide this morning.

At the same time, the President called on the public to help her in efforts against crime, terrorism, graft and corruption, which, she said, are holding back the attainment of peace and prosperity for the Filipino citizen.

“Tulungan ninyo akong sugpuin ang krimen, terorismo at katiwalian na maging sagabal para magkaroon ng mapayapa at magandang buhay ang bawa’t Filipino (Help me in the fight against crime, terrorism and corruption, which are a hindrance to peace and good life for every Filipino),” the President said.

The President further enjoined all Filipinos to join her in her efforts to eradicate poverty and bring about good governance.

Defense Secretary Angelo T. Reyes earlier stressed that the military has yet to ascertain the involvement of Muin Sajiron, the prime suspect in the abduction of six individuals in Sulu, to the Abu Sayyaf group.

He said Sajiron, leader of the gang that abducted the six preachers, was not Abu Sayyaf but “a loose cannon” and drug-crazed man who could not be controlled even by his uncle, Abu Sayyaf leader Radulan Sajiron.

Meanwhile, in stressing government efforts against crime and terrorism, the President cited the successful raid of the biggest factory of fake videos and compact discs undertaken by the Crime Investigation and Detection Group Chief Nestorio Gualberto and Video Regulatory Board chairman Ramon “Bong” Revilla, Jr.

“Natutuwa na rin ako na nakapuntos na naman tayo laban sa organized crime (I am happy that we scored anew against organized crime),” the President said. The illegal factory is deemed to be worth P1 billion.

The President also acknowledged the efforts of other law enforcement agencies in the fight against kidnapping, prohibited drugs and carnapping, the latest of which resulted in the capture of a policeman, PO2 Elmer Ramos, who was allegedly involved in carnapping activities in Umingan, Pangasinan.

“Patuloy nating dudurugin ang mga sindikato ng krimen at terorismo. Maliit man o malaki, hindi natin titigilan ang pagtugis sa kanila (We continue to crush these syndicates involved in crime and terrorism. Big or small, we would not stop the war against them),” the President said.

“Hindi maaaring maghari ang kaharasan at panggugulo ng iilan sa ating lipunan (We will not allow violence and crime of a few to rule our society),” she added.

GMA stresses need for efficient tax collection

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the need for an honest and efficient collection of taxes, saying the revenue supports government efforts, which include funding for infrastructure, development programs and pro-poor projects.

“Kailangan natin ang matapat at maayos na pagkolekta ng buwis (We need an honest and efficient collection of taxes),” the President said in her radio address aired nationwide this morning.

“Alam naman nating lahat na sa ibinabayad na buwis kinukuha ang perang ginagamit ng gobyerno para sa mga paaralan, kalsada, patubig, rural electrification at iba pang development projects (We all know that it is in the taxes that we pay that the government obtains funding for the construction of schools, roads, irrigation systems, rural electrification and other development projects),” the President said.

At the same time, the President expressed sadness over the resignation of Commissioner Rene Bañez from the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

“Siya ay isang malaking kawalan sa pamahalaan dahil hangad kong mapatupad niya ang mga reporma sa BIR – una na ang pagsasa-ayos ng sistema ng koleksyon ng buwis (He’s a big loss in the government because I tasked him to institute reforms in the BIR, including putting in order the system of tax collection),” she said.

The President said that like the late Ninoy Aquino, whose 19th death anniversary was commemorated last August 21 and the victims of the Plaza Miranda bombing, it is her wish to attain a truthful and honest government.

“Kasama ng aking Gabinete, nagsisikap kaming maipatupad na mabuti ang mga patakaran at program ng pamahalaan at labanan ang katiwalian na nagiging hadlang sa ating pag-unlad (I and my Cabinet are doing all we can to accomplish government programs and fight corruption, which is holding back the country’s development),” the President said.

The President said tax collection fuels pro-poor projects, a priority in her administration as she has declared war against poverty and seeks to eradicate it within the decade.

“Kaya, nais kong ipa-alaala sa inyo na gawing ugali ang pagbayad ng tamang buwis, at ginagawan natin lahat ng paraan upang ito ay magamit ng wasto (This is why I would like to remind you to pay the right taxes because we are making sure that the government would use them properly),” the President said.

The President noted the admiration expressed by World Bank country director Robert Vance Pulley on the progress of the government’s anti-poverty program despite the lack of adequate funds.

She added that the WB official also thinks highly of her Cabinet, especially her economic team.

The President said that Vance Pulley commented that the poor children would be able to read new books inside new classrooms, poor communities would be able to receive medical services inside clinics and health centers, and agencies would be able to dispense social services effectively.

She quoted the WB official as saying that because of the resolve of the administration to ensure the prompt implementation of projects, there is now a shorter period of time to deliver the services and infrastructure to the intended poor communities.

Full text of the President’s radio address (August 24, 2002)

Magandang umaga muli sa inyong lahat.

Nitong nakaraang Agosto a beinte-uno, muli nating ginunita ang anibersaryo ng pagkamatay ni dating Senador Benigno “Ninoy” Aquino. Si Ninoy ay nagsilbing liwanag ng pag-asa para sa marami nating mga kababayan noong panahon ng martial law. Natatandaan pa marahil ninyo na hinarap niya ng buong tapang ang diktadura at tiniis ang hirap nang makulong sa bilangguan alang-alang sa kaniyang pagiging makabayan at maka-Pilipino. Sa kaniyang kabayanihan, iminulat niya ang ating mga mata na kaya nating bawiin ang dignidad at kalayaan ng sambayanan sa nagkakaisang pagkilos.

Katulad ni Ninoy, hangad ng aking Administrasyon ang matapat na pamamahala sa ating bayan. Kasama ng aking Gabinete, nagsisikap kaming maipatupad na mabuti ang mga polisiya at programa ng pamahalaan at labanan ang katiwalian na nagiging hadlang sa ating pag-unlad.

Kaya't nanghihinayang ako sa pagbibitiw ni Rene Bañez bilang Commissioner ng Bureau of Internal Revenue. Siya ay isang malaking kawalan sa pamahalaan dahil hangad kong maipatupad niya ang mga reporma sa BIR, unang una ang pagsasaayos ng sistema ng koleksiyon ng buwis.

Sa panahon ngayon, kailangan natin ang matapat at maayos na pagkolekta ng buwis. Alam naman nating lahat na sa ibinabayad na buwis kinukuha ang perang ginagamit ng gobyerno para sa mga paaralan, kalsada, patubig, rural electrification, at iba pang development projects.

Ito ay mahalaga dahil ang pag-unlad ng buhay ng mahihirap nating mga kababayan ay nakasalalay sa mga proyektong tulad nito. Alam na rin ninyo marahil na ang pangunahing layunin ng aking administrasyon ay ang wakasan ang kahirapan sa loob ng dekadang kasalukuyan. Kaya, nais kong ipalala sa inyo na gawing ugali ng pagbayad ng tamang buwis.

At ginagawa natin ang lahat ng paraan upang ito ay magamit ng wasto.

Sabi nga ng World Bank Country Director sa ating bansa na si Robert Vance Pulley, hinahangaan niya ang pagsulong ng ating anti-poverty programs sa kabila ng mahigpit nating kakulangan sa pondo.

Sa lalong madaling panahon, aniya, ang mga batang galing sa mahihirap na pamilya ay makagagamit na ng mga bagong libro sa loob ng mga bagong gawang paaralan.

Ang mga mahihirap na komunidad ay makatatanggap na rin ng mga serbisyong pangkalusugan sa mga bagong tayong clinics at health centers.

Ang iba pang social services ay mas magiging mabilis habang pinagbubuti ng gobyerno ang implementasyon ng mga programa at proyektong suportado ng World Bank.

Dagdag pa ng nasabing WB official, "Because of the resolve of the administration to ensure the prompt implementation of projects, there is now a shorter period of time to deliver the services and infrastructure to the intended poor communities."

Hindi rin tayo tumitigil sa paghahanap ng paraan para lutasin ang iba pang problemang hinaharap ng ating bansa, lalung-lalo na ang krimen at terorismo. Huwag nating kalimutan na development comes hand in hand with peace and order.

Kaya, ako ay natutuwa na nakapuntos na naman tayo laban sa organized crime. Binabati ko sina CIDG Chief Nestorio Gualberto at VRB Chairman Bong Revilla sa kanilang raid sa isang warehouse sa Meycauayan, Bulacan, kung saan nakumpiska nila ang may isang bilyong pisong halaga ng video at audio compact discs at piracy equipment. Naaresto nila ang grupo ng foreign nationals na nasa likod ng naturang ilegal na gawain. Hinihingi ko ang suporta ng madla sa kampanya laban sa video piracy isang uri ng paganakaw.

Binabati ko rin ang mga nakahuli sa limang pinaghihinalaang carnapper, kasama ang isang pulis, sa bayan ng Umingan sa Pangasinan.

Tungkol naman sa pagdukot sa anim na sibilyan ng grupong Abu Sayyaf sa Patikul, Sulu, kumikilos na ang ating mga sundalo upang tugisin ang mga bandidong may kagagawan nito.

Isang impostor naman na nagpapakilalang representative ni First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, at umano ay Officer In Charge ng pamahalaan sa pagbebenta o pagpapa-upa ng lupa sa Tokyo, Japan, ang agad na ipinadarakip natin sa NBI.

Let this be a firm warning to anyone intending to use the good name of my family and office for their own interests. The government will not waste any time in prosecuting impostors and influence peddlers. We will not hesitate to employ the full force of the law in dealing with criminals who undermine our efforts in building a strong republic.

Patuloy nating dudurugin ang mga sindikato ng krimen at terorismo. Maliit man o malaki, hindi natin titigilan ang pagtugis sa kanila. Hindi maaring maghari ang karahasan at panggugulo ng iilan sa ating lipunan.

Mahal kong mga kababayan, marami pa tayong kailangang gawin upang lalong mapabilis ang ating pag-unlad. Kaya, tulungan n'yo akong sugpuin ang krimen, terorismo, at katiwalian na nagiging sagabal para magkaroon ng mapayapa at magandang buhay ang bawata't Pilipino. Samahan n'yo ako sa aking hangaring wakasan ang kahirapan at pairalin ang matapat na pamamahala sa ating bansa.

Maraming salamat at magandang araw sa inyong lahat.

GMA mulls transfer of coast guard headquarters to Sangley Point in Cavite

CAVITE CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is mulling a comprehensive plan to transfer the headquarters of the Philippine Coast Guard (PCG) to Sangley Point in order to spur economic activity in this city.

The President brought up this idea today during an informal meeting with Cavite officials led by Gov. Erineo Maliksi and Cavite City Mayor Bernardo Paredes.

She motored here this morning to visit the family of Joselito Alejo, one of the three overseas Filipino workers who were acquitted recently on a murder case in Saudi Arabia.

During their discussion, the Chief Executive said the present property being occupied by the PCG at Port Area, Manila is a prime commercial property which can be privatized to alleviate the country's budget deficit.

“Sayang naman napaka-commercial ng area. Sayang ang value, i-privatize natin, ang laking bagay for our budget deficit (It is a commercial area, we will privatize it so that the proceeds can help in solving our budget deficit),” the President said.

According to the President, the transfer of the PCG to Sangley Point could also increase the value of property in Cavite City and its neighboring towns.

At present, Sangley Point is home to the 15th Strike Wing, the elite group of the Philippine Air Force (PAF).

In order to further enhance economic activity in Cavite, the President asked Gov. Maliksi to include in their mission abroad the viability and potentials of Sangley Point as an investment site.

She said the province could also invite prospective build-operate-transfer (BOT) investors to submit their own proposal.

“It should be something they can afford and you just choose the best proposal,” the President said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo recalled that it was through the lessons of Sangley Point as to why the government has created the Bases Conversion Development Authority (BCDA).

She said the BCDA was actually meant to avoid the repetition of another Sangley Point where economic activity had stopped after the closure of the American base.

In the case of Subic, the President said there are more workers now in the freeport than during the time when the US facilities were there.

In a related development, PCG chief Vice Admiral Reuben Lista welcomed the President's proposal to transfer the PCG headquarters to Sangley Point for as long as their vital structures would be replicated in the site.

He said Sangley Point is very ideal for the purposes and operation of the PCG.

GMA okays P9.56 billion budget for CARP in FY 2003

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved the amount of P9.56 billion for the implementation of the government's Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP) for fiscal year 2003.

In the 31st meeting of the Presidential Agrarian Reform Council (PARC) held this afternoon in Malacañang, the President also endorsed the provision of additional fund for the bond servicing requirement of CARP, specifically its inclusion in the Automatic Appropriation for the Debt Service Program.

Out of the CARP outlay, a total of P6.047 billion will be used as regular allocation of the Agrarian Reform Fund (ARF) to cover the funds needed for land acquisition and distribution.

The allocation for the Program Beneficiaries Development under the Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Program (AFMP) is P3.512 billion.

The bulk of the AFMP-ARF budget, which is P3.021 billion, is for foreign assisted projects.

The budget for CARP, as recommended by the Department of Budget and Management (DBM), basically adopts the FY 2002 CARP budget level and is 71 percent lower than the initial proposal of P16.379 billion.

To be able to meet the commitment of the President in her State of the Nation Address to distribute at least 100,000 hectares of private agricultural lands annually, the priority allocation of funds for land acquisition and distribution is for landowners' compensation.

For next year, the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) is targeting a total of 110,677 hectares of lands for distribution to CARP beneficiaries. The Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR), on the other hand, is targeting 5,410 hectares for distribution next year.

Under the AFMP-ARF program, the DAR would also launch some 335 agrarian reform communities (ARCs) and build 40 communal irrigation projects as well as 100 kilometers of farm-to-market roads.

GMA disapproves 9 stock distribution option applications

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, as chairman of the Presidential Agrarian Reform Council (PARC), has disapproved nine stock distribution option (SDO) applications and ordered the immediate coverage of these landholdings under compulsory acquisition.

The President concurred with the PARC Executive Committee recommendation for the disapproval of the nine SDO applications during the 31st meeting of the PARC in Malacañang.

The nine disapproved applications and are now under compulsory acquisition are the following:

1. 271 Montinolla-Escarilla and Company, Inc. (MECO) located in Las Nieves, Agusan del Norte;
2. Kalaong Plantation, Inc. (KPI), with an area of 178 hectares and located in Maitum, South Cotabato;
3. Malibu Agro-Industrial Corporation (MAC), located in La Carlota, Negros Occidental, involving 625 hectares;
4. Ozamis Agricultural Development, Inc. Estate in Quezon, Bukidnon involving 1,603 hectares;
5. 14 Colored Corporations, a conglomeration of 14 small corporations, in Bacolod City, Negros Occidental, involving a total area of 1,147;
6. Valmayor Hermanos, Inc., in Canlaon City, Negros Oriental with 638 hectares;
7. San Jose Sugar Development Corporation in San Jose City, Negros Occidental, 744 hectares;
8. Garcona Agri-Industrial Enterprises in Medelin, Cebu involving 46 hectares; and
9. AFC Agri-Business Corporation located in Buenavista, Guimaras, involving 371 hectares.

The President, in giving her concurrence to the disapproval of the SDO applications, said that the emphasis now is acquisition and redistribution of land.

GMA lauds joint police, military team for death of escaped Pentagon KFR leader Marohombsar

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today described the killing of Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gang leader Faisal Marohombsar as another shining star in the government's all-out war against criminals and terrorists.

This was another "big blow" to the infamous Pentagon KFR group, the President said, as she hinted that operations have been ongoing against Marohombsar's partner in Mindanao, Alonto Tahir.

She reminded everyone that Tahir was not, in any way, connected with the respected Alonto clan in the Lanao provinces.

She lauded the Philippine National Police (PNP), the military, cooperative citizens and the media for helping each other make Marohombsar pay for his sordid crimes against the Filipino people, particularly the victims of his kidnapping activities.

The body of Marohombsar was presented to the President.

In a light vein, she said “mabuti hindi sea encounter ito para hindi nalunod si Faisal Marohombsar. Makikita ng buong mundo ang kanyang bangkay (it was good Faisal was not killed in a sea encounter. Now, the whole world can see his corpse).”

She referred to the sea encounter between crack Navy troops and Abu Sayyaf terrorists led by Aldam Tilao aka Abu Sabaya off the coast of Zamboanga del Norte where Abu Sabaya was killed.

The President this morning motored to Magallanes, Cavite, scene of an early morning firefight between Marohombsar and combined elements of the PNP’s Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER), National Capital Region Regional Police Office (NCRPO), Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) and the Anti-Crime Task Force of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (ACTAFP).

The joint police and military team was hunting down Marohombsar, escapees Abdul Macaumbang and Roland Patinio, and several others in connection with the abduction of four-year-old Patricia Chong and her nanny, Winena Jordan, last August 19 in Alabang, Muntinlupa City.

Kidnap victims Chong and Jordan were safely rescued at about 8 a.m. today.

The President also thanked the media for not reporting the kidnapping incident although it was being broadcast in text messages.

“Kasi kung ni-report iyon, mas manganganib yung bata (Reporting it in the media could have endangered the life of the child),” she said.

She added that the cooperation of the media enabled the police and the military to undertake the operation and uncover the truth behind the union of the Pentagon gang and the Villaver-Fajardo (KFR) gang, both in the Order of Battle of the military and the police.

The joint police-military team also arrested a policeman, Police Officer 2 Armando Ayson of the Magallanes Police Station, and Jimmy Lumabad in connection with the kidnapping case.

Marohombsar, Macaumbang and Patinio escaped from the defunct PNP National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (NAKTAF) detention center last June 19 and had thus been the subject of a manhunt.

Magallanes Mayor Filomena Maligaya said Marohombsar and his group had rented a house in Barangay Pacheco. The kidnap group was reported to have been in that safehouse for the last three weeks, Maligaya said.

The President, in her inspection of the encounter site, was told that a soldier of the ACTAFP, Technical Sergeant Willie Madayag, was wounded during the firefight.

The President, together with PNP Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. and AFP Chief of Staff Roy Cimatu, awarded financial aid to Madayag who was brought to the nearby Naic Doctor’s Hospital in Naic, Cavite.

The Chief Executive further expressed her gladness over the cooperation that civilians in the area gave to authorities, prompting the police and the military to get Marohombsar.

This, she said, was the best way to curb crime nationwide, as she again stressed the value of unity in all efforts to maintain law and order in the country and secure a better life for Filipinos.

She reiterated her appeal to all peace-loving citizens to immediately call Hotline 117, an immediate response police action system.

“Nananawagan din ako sa mga pamilyang maykaya na mag-ingat duon sa mga hina-hire nila. Puwede naming kayong tulongang makakuha ng background information sa mga ito (I urge families wanting to hire drivers to check with the National Bureau of Investigation on the background of these people),” she said.

She recalled incidents whereby drivers of rich families colluded with the kidnappers.

Golez cites gov’t wins over crime, terrorism

National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez today noted the victories made by the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in its peace and order drive and all-out war against terrorists nationwide.

Golez said the killing of Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gang leader Faisal Mahorombsar and other criminal and terrorist leaders showed that the current administration stood as having the most number of scores against organized crime and terrorist groups over the years.

He further noted the government’s triumphs against illegal drugs, with the discovery of two shabu factories in Luzon.

“This shows that the President’s personal attention to anti-crime efforts is working brilliantly,” he said.

He added the people could expect more scores in the next few weeks.

Marohombsar was killed in an encounter with joint police and military elements in Barangay Pacheco, Magallanes, Cavite.

The KFR leader, with two other suspects, escaped last June 19. He was responsible for the abductions of Italian priest Guiseppi Pierantoni and four Chinese nationals.

Bunye stresses people’s role in curbing crime

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today noted the vital role of the public in maintaining peace and order, saying, “citizens are the first line of defense in our war against crime.”

In a radio interview, Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had expressed appreciation for the concerned persons who provided the effective information that led to today’s recovery of two kidnap victims by a joint police-military team and the death of Pentagon Gang kidnap leader Faisal Marohombsar in a firefight.

With the death of Marohombsar, Bunye said the President has issued a “stern reminder against criminal elements that crime does not pay.”

“You cannot forever evade the long arm of the law...our law enforcers will get you one way or the other,” Bunye said.

Bunye further noted that the President praised the excellent teamwork and coordination of the various elements that participated in the operations.

“She also issued instructions to adequately reward the civilian enforcers who tipped off the law enforcers on the suspicious presence” of criminal and terrorist groups, Bunye said.

Gov't, U.S. NGOs to launch social, medical intervention in Sulu

The Philippine government and the various non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in the United States will jointly launch a short-term intervention and long-term development program that will provide medical and social infrastructure to help the people of Sulu.

In a briefing held this morning in Malacañang, Al Santoli, senior vice president of the American Foreign Policy Council (AFPC), informed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that the Development for Peace in Sulu (DPIS) is a partnership program aimed at helping restore peace and order in Sulu through means other than military action.

Aside from the President, those who attended the briefing were Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman and US Ambassador to the Philippines Francis Ricciardone.

The DPIS program is expected to kick off on Aug. 28, 2002 with the delivery of US$1 million worth of medicine and medical equipment per year for the next three years to Jolo hospitals.

The shipment will include antibiotics, pain relievers, cough and cold preparations, and other medicines.

AFPC officials said the specific objectives of the project are:

- the uplifting of social conditions of the people of Jolo through a medical aid component;
- to deny the terrorist and other criminal elements a breeding ground for terrorism; and,
- to showcase the medical aid program in Jolo as a pilot project which can be replicated in other conflict-stricken areas of the country.

Under its implementation concept, the DPIS' socio-economic development program shall be initiated with the following phases:

1. initiate confidence-building activities in the target community;
2. harness existing initiatives of local government units and NGOs in the area to achieve convergence; and,
3. gradually address basic needs of the community such as potable water, electricity and sanitation.

AFPC officials noted that the program will also help in building up trust among the populace, the improvement of medical facilities and infrastructure in the community and the development of a self-reliant medical service.

Founded in 1982, AFPC is a non-profit organization dedicated to bringing information to those who make or influence the foreign policy of the United States and to assist world leaders in strengthening democracies and market economies.

AFPC is widely recognized as a source of timely, insightful analysis on issues of foreign policy, and works closely with members of Congress, the Executive Branch and the policy-making community in the US.

The lead agencies for the DPIS program are the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), the Department of Health (DOH) and the provincial government of Sulu.

On the other hand, the Department of National Defense (DND) and the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) shall serve as the priming agency during the start-up of the program.

They will be assisted by the Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG), the Department of Finance (DOF) and the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE).

GMA, Ebdane confident kidnappings to be curbed in just six months

The way things are looking, kidnappings will be curbed not in one year but in just six months.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today gave this assessment to a group of Japanese executives led by Atsutoshi Nishida, president of Toshiba Digital Media Network Co., who made a courtesy call on her in Malacañang.

“I gave the PNP (Philippine National Police) chief (Director General Hermogenes) Ebdane one year to eliminate kidnapping but I talked to him yesterday and he thinks it could be just six months,” the President said.

The President noted the many arrests made by the Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER) and the Anti-Crime Task Force of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (ACTAFP) for the past several weeks.

Yesterday, Ebdane and Armed Forces chief of staff Gen. Roy Cimatu scored another major success in the war against crime with the death of Pentagon Gang leader Faisal Marohombsar during an encounter in Magallanes, Cavite. The President motored to the area and personally congratulated the joint forces of PACER and ACTAFP, which were also able to recover a four-year old kidnap and her nanny.

The President likewise told the businessmen that she would continue to be “hands-on” in connection with government efforts to curb crime.

She acknowledged the importance of maintaining peace and order in enticing businessmen to invest in the country.

Nishida called on the President to personally inform her that Toshiba has decided to locate in the Philippines the manufacturing of its laptop computers, which are due to fill up a worldwide market.

Aside from Nishida, among those present during the courtesy call were Masaaki Mukushi, president of Toshiba Information Equipment Philippines Inc.; Hidejiro Shimomitsu, vice-president of Toshiba Digital Media Network; Junichi Iwata, Chief Production Executive of Toshiba; and Kazuo Maruyama, Executive Vice President of Toshiba.

The President earlier said that the police and the military have uncovered the truth behind the union of the Pentagon Gang and the Villaver-Fajardo Gang.

The President has been micro-managing the efforts against crime, going to various places around the country to personally present suspected criminals to media.

Last week, she went to Tayug, Pangasinan to personally congratulate the PNP officers of Region 1 (Ilocos) for the arrest of five suspected carnappers who were also charged with illegal possession of firearms and prohibited drugs.

A day earlier, she presented at the PNP headquarters in Quezon City Randy Raquino, the No. 1 most-wanted person in Region 3 (Central Luzon) and Nicomedes Gerilla, a member of the notorious Villaver Gang of kidnappers.

The President has also presented to media the members of the Bucala Kidnap-for-Ransom (KFR) Gang and a former policeman who led the Durano KFR group.

Emphasizing that the government efforts against crime is not confined to Metro Manila, the President has also presented arrested members of the Sagada-Kalinga group, one of the most notorious holdup gangs involved in a series of robbery-holdups of restaurants, buses and pawnshops in the provinces of the Cordillera Autonomous Region, Benguet, Pangasinan and La Union.

Gov't has money to pay salaries, bonuses of state workers, veterans' pensions, says Palace

Despite the tight fiscal position of the national government, it will not renege in its obligation to pay state workers their salaries and annual Christmas bonus as well as the monthly pensions of Filipino veterans, Malacañang said today.

In an interview, Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin said these are mandatory expenditures and are allocated in the yearly budget.

Boncodin also said that she did not believe that there is a need to declare the public sector deficit as "unmanageable" as feared by some sectors. "I don't think I would like to recommend it," she said.

"Kailangan lang gumawa tayo ng paraan kung paano matutugunan iyong pinakaimportanteng pangangailangan (What is needed is that we should devise ways on how to meet the more important requirements)," Boncodin said.

On Thursday, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said that the fiscal deficit for the seven month period, from January to July, 2002, has already reached P133 billion, which is P3 billion more than the full-year target of P130 billion.

Boncodin said one way of controlling the further rise in the fiscal deficit is to step up revenue collections.

She said that the collection shortfall, particularly in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, was caused by two factors, the undervaluation of the value-added tax (VAT) by some big taxpayers and the diversion of tax collections to private accounts.

These are now all being investigated by the proper authorities.

Unilever top executives assure GMA: We've never gone away, we're here for good

The worldwide chairman of the consumer products conglomerate Unilever today assured President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo of continued confidence in the Philippines, saying the country offers a wide range of opportunities both as a market and source of excellent human resource for his company.

Unilever Worldwide Chairman Antony Burgmans, who paid a courtesy call on the President this morning, noted that the company is celebrating its 75th year in the Philippines this year.

"We've never gone away. We're here for the good and the bad times," Burgmans said.

He told the President that although business was hard sometimes in the past, most of the years are “happy years” and that the company has been achieving double-digit growth continuously.

Burgmans also expressed gratitude that the Filipino consumer has come to rely on Unilever products which, he said, continue to be competitive with the rest in its field.

Howard Belton, chairman and chief executive officer of Unilever Philippines who was also present during the call, noted that their plants in the country, aided by their partners here, are responsible for producing 50 million stick-on deodorants for the world’s deodorant market.

Belton noted that these products are big successes especially in Eastern Europe and Latin America.

The President said she is very grateful as she noted her administration’s continuing efforts to make the country competitive in the eyes of the foreign investor.

The President also thanked Burgmans for being a member of the International Board of Advisers, the group of business big shots who regularly give the country free advice on how to make the Philippines more competitive.

Unilever is the maker of home and personal care products.

The business has expanded more into foods, with the acquisition of Bestfoods in 2000 whose local company in the Philippines is the California Manufacturing Company.

At present, Unilever Philippines is expanding its business and aims to be a net exporter in the future.

Unilever is a multinational company that performs both in business and maintains corporate social responsibility in areas such as agriculture, fish conservation and clean water stewardship.

Unilever has been involved in the protection of fresh water resources such as the Pasig River, the La Mesa Watershed and Laguna de Bay.

During the call, Burgmans also gave the President a copy of “Laguna de Bay: The Living Lake,” a coffee table book which Unilever sponsored.

Aside from Burgmans and Belton, those present at the call were Presidential Adviser on International Competitiveness Roberto Romulo, Unilever Philippines General Manager Chito Macapagal, California Manufacturing Corp. Managing Director and CEO Marcial Aaron and Selecta Managing Director and CEO John Marie Concepcion

Perez to ask oil firms to justify price hike of LPG

The Department of Energy (DoE) will ask oil companies to explain why they have increased the price of their liquefied petroleum gas (LPG), a socially sensitive product.

In an interview, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez said that he will direct the Oil Industry Administration Bureau to ask the oil companies, particularly Shell, to justify its increase of P8.80 per 11-kilogram tank of LPG.

Perez said that during the past one and a half year, the oil companies did not raise the price of LPG despite the increase in the price of crude oil.

“Gusto kong pag-aralan, ano ba ang justification at bakit kailangan silang magtaas ng presyo ngayon (I want to make a study, what is the justification and why do they have to increase the price now),” Perez said.

According to Perez, Shell has notified the DoE about three days ago that they would increase the price of their LPG by 80 centavos per kilogram.

Shell said that they have a contract with a foreign source that had expired and that they are now buying the product at a higher price.

Perez also expressed the hope that the price of crude oil in the world market would go down and that the peso would strengthen in the next few days so that any upward movement in the price of fuel products could be averted.

GMA congratulates Intel exec for plans to expand business in Philippines, open 2nd Computer Clubhouse

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated Craig R. Barret, president and chief executive officer of Intel Corporation, for his firm's plans to expand their business in the Philippines and open the second Intel Computer Clubhouse in General Trias, Cavite.

"Congratulations and thank you. We are looking forward to your expansion of your business in the Philippines," the President said during her meeting with Barret this afternoon at Malacañang's Music Room.

The Intel head made a courtesy call on the President to personally inform her and invite her to the launching of their second Intel Computer Clubhouse located near the Governor Ferrer National High School in General Trias, Cavite.

Barret said the Computer Clubhouse is a program where youths aged 10 to 18 have access to technology equipment and mentors to develop technology and life skills that encourage self-confidence and foster creativity.

Barret also explained to President that one of the greatest benefits of an Intel Computer Clubhouse is seeing the excitement of young people using PCs (personal computers), peripherals and applications to create art, music and websites, while working together to solve problems.

"The youth in Cavite will learn to use technology by investigating it for themselves. The Computer Clubhouse also allow young people to see for themselves how exciting computing and the Internet can be and help develop the necessary technology skills for today's competitive digital economy," Barret said.

The first Intel Computer Clubhouse in the Philippines opened last May 2002 at the Mater Dolorosa Parish in Makati City and approximately 300 young Filipinos have already used the facility.

After their conversation, the President proceeded to the Ceremonial Hall to lead the distribution of presidential citations and a P200,000 cash award each to the winners of Intel International Science and Engineering Fair (ISEF) where four high school students from Manila Science High School and the Mindanao State University and a teacher from Iloilo won the major awards at Intel ISEF held in the United States last May.

Those who received presidential citation and cash awards were Richard Kristoffer Sanchez Manapat, Jeric Valles Macalintal and Allan Noriel Estrella. The three students of Manila Science High School won the first-prize award and $3,000 for their physics project.

Prem Villas Fortran Moso Rara of the Integrated Developmental School – Mindanao State University in Lanao del Norte, won the second prize and $1,500 for his microbiology project.

Dr. Josette Biyo of the Philippine Science High School in Iloilo was awarded the Intel Excellence in Teaching Award. The $20,000 teaching grant she received will enable Dr. Biyo to conduct intensive science research workshops. She also received $5,000 in cash and a high-performance computer.

Present during the courtesy call of Barret were Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II and Science and Technology Secretary Estrella F. Alabastro.

GMA's European trip part of RP's diplomatic commitment and economic diplomacy, says Palace

Malacañang today said the trip of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to Italy, Spain and Denmark next month is part of the country's diplomatic commitment and the forging of closer economic cooperation with the leading members of the European Community.

"If you're fulfilling this as a part of international commitment then it is necessary because once you are invited and you accept, then this is in line with protocol to go ahead with the trip," Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye told reporters during a press briefing in Malacañang.

Bunye said the trip, which will take the President to Italy, Spain and Denmark, is also part of the President's economic diplomacy.

The President's forthcoming trip is also an investment promotion opportunity aimed at widening the access of Philippine exports like food products, electronics, garments to the European market.

According to Bunye, the President will go to the Vatican upon the invitation of Pope John Paul II, while she will be visiting Spain on the invitation of King Juan Carlos.

While in Italy, the Chief Executive will relay the country's prayers for the good health of the Pope so he can visit Manila again in January 2003 for the World Meeting of Families.

Since the President's visit to Spain is in the nature of a state visit, it would mean less expense for the government because the host country will shoulder most of the expenses.

In Copenhagen, Denmark, the President will be joining other heads of state in the Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM), a meeting aimed at forging closer economic cooperation among Asian and European countries.

Participants to the ASEM include the heads of state and government of 10 Asian nations (Brunei Darussalam, China, Indonesia, Japan, Republic of Korea, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam) and 15 European nations (Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and the United Kingdom) as well as the President of the European Commission.

The ASEM aims to provide an opportunity for leaders to exchange views on current regional and global issues. These discussions could serve as a basis for further cooperation on specific issues of mutual interest.

In the area of economic cooperation, the summit seeks to strengthen the economic relations between the two regions by taking advantage of existing complementarities and developing synergies, which would promote greater economic growth and development.

GMA, Guingona to lead Alay Lakad 2002

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. are expected to lead this year's Alay Lakad Para sa Kabataan Day, slated on Sunday, September 1, 2002 by virtue of Presidential Proclamation No. 168.

Government officials, civic leaders and business groups are also expected to grace this annual walk for a cause which is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year.

The theme of this year's Alay Lakad is "HAKBANG MAMAMAYAN! Kinabukasan ng Kabataan," urging the people to step forward and be counted in helping the out-of-school youth have a better future, according to Alay Lakad Foundation Inc. (ALFI) president Frank Evaristo.

The nationwide Alay Lakad is the signature fund-raising event of the Alay Lakad Foundation and involves various government agencies, the education sector, business establishments, local government units and socio-civic organizations.

Participants will walk some two to 10 kilometers as a symbol of solidarity towards the promotion of its key advocacy of enabling and empowering the out-of-school youth to become responsible and productive citizens. This year's host civic organization is the Rotary International Districts 3810 and 3830, with the support of the Philippine Jaycees, the Lions Club International and the Kiwanis International.

As part of this year's fund-raising campaign, Alay Lakad will be selling commemorative cover as approved by Postmaster General Nicasio Rodriguez of the Philippine Postal Corporation. This is a special customized letter envelope depicting the design of Alay Lakad that can be used for mailing letters or plain souvenir to commemorate the 30th year anniversary of the Foundation.

Proceeds of this fund-raising campaign will benefit the country's out-of-school youth through scholarship assistance, skills training and livelihood programs.

Donations will be accepted on the Walk Day itself, Sunday, September 1, at the Quirino Grandstand, Rizal Park. For inquiries and other details, call the ALFI National Office at 523-1539 or 522-6134.

Marohombsar killed in a shootout, not rubout, Palace says

Malacañang today brushed aside reports that notorious kidnap for ransom gang leader Faisal Marohombsar was killed in a rubout and not in a firefight with elements of the police and the military in Magallanes, Cavite last Sunday.

In his regular press briefing in Malacañang, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that during the combined military and police rescue operations, one of the team members, T/Sgt. Willie Madayag, was wounded.

"You don't have a rubout where one of your men is also shot," Bunye said.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, who went to Magallanes, Cavite to personally congratulate the rescue team, even inspected the injuries suffered by Madayag in his shoulder.

In a related development, Bunye also said that the Philippine government will not insist on its request for a copy of the video footage taken by US intelligence on the killing of Abu Sayyaf spokesman Abu Sabaya.

"We understand the reluctance of the US government to release the video footage for public viewing. So, we will not insist," Bunye said.

But Bunye said that based on the video footage, which was viewed by the President and corroborated by testimonies of several witnesses, Sabaya is dead.

Earlier, US Ambassador to Manila Francis Ricciardone said that the US government would not release the video footage for security reasons.

GMA statement of postponement of Europe trip

While I firmly believe in the importance of personally carrying out the message of trade, investment and other opportunities in the Philippines to international audiences, as President, my priority is always where I am needed the most. Given the fact that some members of the Economic Team will be meeting with a number of heads of state in October at the APEC meeting in Mexico, I have decided to postpone my visit to Europe, originally planned for this coming month. I look forward to meeting our European friends at a later date.

In remaining in the Philippines, I will focus on ensuring that our economic plan that was so successful last year remains on track. There has been a number of developments, namely on the fiscal and peace and order fronts, that require my continued stewardship. The appointment of a new BIR Commissioner, continued implementation of tax collection measures and related reforms and concurrent expenditure reductions all require the public will and support of the Executive Office to push through so that results are being brought to bear as quickly as possible. The same applies to our campaign for peace and order in all parts of the country. We have the Abu Sayyaf and criminal groups on the run but we cannot rest. We need to follow through and ensure that threats such as this are completely eliminated, once and for all.

- GMA presents six rice hijackers to media
- GMA urges House, Senate to pass 2 priority economic bills
- GMA names Parayno as new B.I.R. Commissioner
- Filipino businessmen remain bullish on RP economy during fourth quarter

GMA warns swindlers posing as employees of Office of the President, DBM

The President said she would show to the people, particularly well-meaning private businessmen, that government transactions follow standard operating procedures that are transparent and are in accordance with laws.

“Extortionists and so-called facilitators do not have a place under our system. Let this be a warning to those who continue to engage in this practice. We will not rest until all of you are locked up in jail,” she said.

During the press briefing at the DBM building in Malacañang, the President presented architect Manuel Tolentino following an entrapment undertaken by the Special Project Group-Presidential Anti-Organized Crime Commission (SPG-PAOCC), Regional Intelligence Special Operation Office (RISOO), Regional Intelligence and Investigation Division (RIID), and the National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO).

The entrapment followed a complaint filed by a private contractor who said that Tolentino demanded P200,000 as facilitation expenses for the immediate release of funds from DBM.

According to the contractor, Tolentino also claimed that he could get an approval of a proposed project in Sibulan, Negros Oriental from the OP and that he can likewise facilitate the release of the needed documents because of his strong connections with the Office of the First Gentleman, Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo.

The President said the latest arrest is a manifestation that her administration is also focusing on white-collar crimes, citing the recent discovery of tax scams in the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The President noted that this is not the first time that they have apprehended swindlers who introduce themselves as DBM employees.

She said the police are on the lookout for the swindlers’ “connections” in the two government offices.

The President further noted that there are two kinds of such racket in the DBM. The first type, she said, is perpetrated by a swindler who approaches a local government official, claiming that he facilitated the approval of his Special Allotment Release Order SARO when, in fact, it has been approved without a need to lobby for it.

The President noted that these people even have authentic copies of SAROs, complete with the appropriate bar codes, bolstering the suspicion that they have connections inside the offices.

The other modus operandi, the President said, is that the swindler produces a totally fake SARO. “Because of these, there are many who are complaining,” she said.

their SAROs in exchange for a commission. That is not how we work. I personally approve SAROs especially if the amount involved is big, and I don't ask for a commission)," the President said.

"Ginagamit na naman ang pangalan ng aking asawa. Di mas lalong hinuhuli natin pag ginagamit ang pangalan ng aking asawa (They are using again the name of my husband, which is why we are more determined to push harder to catch them)," she said.

GMA presents six rice hijackers to media

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented to the media six suspected hijackers who were allegedly victimizing rice traders transporting their products along the Maharlika Highway in Gapan, Nueva Ecija.

The hijackers were arrested after the owner of a 10-wheeler truck carrying 500 sacks of rice informed the Bulacan Police Traffic Management Office of the hijacking of his vehicle and its cargo.

The suspects were apprehended yesterday at an abandoned iceplant in Barangay Bayanihan in Gapan while the truck was later found abandoned along Gapan-Olongapo Road. The arresting team was composed of members of the Regional Traffic Management Office 3 in Central Luzon and the Bulacan Traffic Management Group (TMG) led by Police Superintendent Vladimir Kahulugan and Police Inspectors Serafin Macaraig and Rhoderick Maniego.

The six suspects were identified as Diorico Pacaanas, Domingo de Roma, Delfin Gutierrez, Batoy Camacho, Angelou Camacho and Romeo Santaren.

Recovered from the suspects were 46 sacks of rice and P12,170 in cash. Appropriate charges are being prepared against the suspects.

In her brief remarks, the President said she appreciates the efforts of the TMG and the other organizations that are focusing on the anti-crime campaign she ordered Philippine National Police chief Director Gen. Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. to launch recently.

"Big crimes like kidnapping, crimes that affect ordinary people like hijacking, blue-collar crimes, white-collar crimes. I have said in my State of the Nation Address that we have to have decisive victories in all these fronts," the President said.

GMA urges House, Senate to pass 2 priority economic bills

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the leaders of Congress to enact two priority economic measures – the Transco (Transmission Corporation) franchise bill, and the complementary securitization bill and special purpose asset vehicle (SPAV) bill — before Congress takes its recess on September 7.

In the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meeting which she presided over in Malacañang this morning, the President emphasized the need for confidence-building measures in order to address the problems that the country is now facing.

"This is to counter the currency and financial pressure the Philippines faces arising from the turmoil in Brazil and Argentina and the budget deficit of the national government," the President said.

"So if the House of Representatives could pass these two bills this week, I hope that the Senate could pass it next week," the President said.

The President said that now that the ruling coalition has the majority in both houses of Congress, it would not be difficult to pass these bills.

The immediate passage of these bills will show to the world that the Philippines is still a functioning economy, the President further said.

Secretary Gabriel Claudio, Presidential Legislative Adviser and head of the Presidential Legislative Liaison Office (PLLO), also reported to the LEDAC that the deliberation of one common legislative agenda measure, the Free Patents Law, has been concluded at the level of the bicameral conference committee of Congress.

This will pave the way for the ratification of the bicameral report, Claudio said.

The President explained that the Free Patents Law is part of the De Soto reforms which will formalize informal settlers ownership of the land they occupy.

“Therefore this will allow the poor to have access to lands,” the President said, stressing that the law is a very important pro-poor measure.

The President likewise asked Congress to pass vital legislations, a number of which are already in advanced stages, and with only a concerted push, can actually be enacted even before Congress takes its first break for the second regular session on September 7.

These are the Magna Carta for Barangay Business Enterprises, the proposed Housing and Urban Reform Act, and the removal of documentary stamp tax on secondary transactions.

GMA names Parayno as new B.I.R. Commissioner

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has formally appointed former Customs Commissioner Guillermo Parayno as the next Commissioner of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).

In his press briefing this afternoon, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that the President announced Parayno’s appointment Monday night.

Bunye said that Parayno, who served as customs commissioner during the term of former President Fidel V. Ramos, is expected to institute reforms at the BIR and at the same time address the collection problems of the agency.

Parayno will be taking over the position vacated by BIR Commissioner Rene Banez.

According to Bunye, Parayno will wind up his affairs in his present post and will take his oath of office around September 15.

Parayno is at present consultant of the World Bank for its projects in several Central Asian countries.

Previous to his stint at the Bureau of Customs, Parayno was an officer of the Armed Forces of the Philippines where he rose to the rank of colonel before he retired.

He is a graduate of the Philippine Military Academy, Class 1971.

Filipino businessmen remain bullish on RP economy during fourth quarter

Majority of the respondents to the Business Expectations Survey (BES) conducted in July by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) are bullish on the performance of the economy during the fourth quarter of this year.

In a report to Malacañang, the BSP said the optimistic outlook of the BES respondents for the last quarter of the year is based on their anticipation of increases in consumer demand during the Christmas season as well as on the expected inflow of dollar remittances from overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

The respondents also said that they were optimistic that the economy will continue to grow in the third quarter, but with a slight softening in business activity due mainly to poor weather conditions usually observed during the period.

In the third quarter, the respondents expect the economy to grow as more firms projected higher volume of production and total orders. Other business-related factors support this positive trend as the indices on credit access and financial conditions showed improving values.

The BSP said that in the fourth quarter, the bullish outlook is shared by firms from all sectors of the economy, particularly services and industry.

In addition to positive seasonal factors, other signs of improving economic growth were evident, the BSP said, citing as example the employment index which “entered positive territory” for the first time in five quarters, with more firms planning to hire more workers by yearend.

At the same time, 10.7 percent of respondent firms indicated expansion plans for the quarter. As a result of improving demand and business activity, respondents anticipate higher borrowing and inflation rates during the period, the BSP said.

The respondents also expect the peso to strengthen from a rebound in foreign exchange inflows at yearend, particularly from remittances of OFWs.

The survey results showed that the confidence index for the industry sector improved to 22.0 percent from 12.0 percent in the previous quarter. On the other hand, confidence indices for trade and services declined but remained positive.

The confidence index for the construction sector remained negative at 3.3 percent, but was an improvement from the negative 4.5 percent posted in the second quarter, the BSP said.

Stiff competition and insufficient demand remained the primary factors that limit production and business activity, according to about 80 percent of the respondent firms. Other factors cited by around one-third of respondent firms are access to credit, financial problems and labor problems.

Starting with the second quarter of 2001, the BSP has conducted the BES using the harmonized set of core questions for Asian countries suggested by the Asian Development Bank (ADB).

The survey covers 12 major industry groups (grouped into 4 major economic sectors), with firms drawn from the top 3,000 corporations in Metro Manila as listed by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

The third quarter survey, which was conducted in July 2002 with 251 respondent firms, had a 41.8 percent response rate.

GMA grants reprieve to 3 death convicts

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has granted a reprieve to three death convicts and reset their execution to a later date.

All the three convicts who were granted the presidential reprieve were meted the death penalty for the crime of rape.

One of the convicts, Rolando Pagdayawon y Salabaria, was scheduled for execution on Aug. 30, 2002. He was granted a reprieve until Nov. 28, 2002.

Pagdayawon was meted the death penalty by the Regional Trial Court (RTC), Branch 33, of Davao City

Earlier, Malacañang announced that the President would stay the execution of Pagdayawon in deference to the birthday of Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin who has been urging the government to abolish the death penalty.

The second convict granted a reprieve was Eddie Sernadilla y Ventires whose execution was scheduled on Sept. 3, 2002. His execution has been reset to Dec. 2, 2002.

Sernadilla was meted the death penalty by RTC, Branch 57, of San Carlos City, Pangasinan.

The third convict whose death sentence has been temporarily suspended was Filomeno Serrano y Callado. He was scheduled to be administered the lethal injection on Sept. 20, 2002 but this was moved to Dec. 19, 2002.

Serrano was sentenced to death by RTC, Branch 265, of Pasig City.

The President said that the reprieve given to the three death convicts would give the Office of the President additional time "to conduct a thorough study in order to determine if executive clemency may be extended to the prisoners."

The power of the President to grant a reprieve or executive clemency is provided for under Section 19, Article VII of the Philippine Constitution.

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that the presidential order granting the reprieve, which was signed Tuesday, would be forwarded today to the Department of Justice.

GMA launches sustained, high-intensity war on drugs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo launched today a “sustained and high-intensity campaign” against illegal drugs in the country as part of her administration’s no-letup drive against all forms of criminality and terrorism.

The President announced the launching of another important leg of the government’s intensified war against criminality as she emerged from a meeting this morning with the top officials of the Dangerous Drugs Board (DDB) and the Philippine Drugs Enforcement Agency (PDEA) at the Music Room in Malacañang.

“I want to announce this as the launch of what’s going to be a very, very sustained and high-intensity drug campaign,” the President told reporters after the meeting.

An Order of Battle listing main target personalities and syndicates similar to the one drawn up during the launching of the anti-kidnapping campaign will be finalized soon in the city, town and barangay levels.

The President said there is now a need to put more stress on the anti-drug campaign following the series of successful campaigns against kidnapping and other criminal gangs, particularly the group of Faisal Marohombsar, in the course of rescuing their last victim, Patricia Chong.

Marohombsar was killed during a shootout with combined Philippine National Police-Armed Forces of the Philippines elements in Magallanes, Cavite last Sunday.

“Many of those rogues that you would see behind me during many of the times when I went to the police to congratulate them, many of them were on drugs when they were arrested. They were on drugs when they were doing rape. They were on drugs when they were doing their crimes,” she said.

The President noted that the drug problem is an “underpinning problem” of the whole peace and order problem in the country.

“This is a very important leg of our peace and order campaign,” the President told reporters.

At the same time, President Macapagal-Arroyo expressed optimism that the combined efforts of the revitalized DDB and the newly-created PDEA would result in an effective campaign against the drug menace.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, who also attended the DDB-PDEA meeting, said the value of the illegal drug trade in the country is estimated at P250 billion to P300 billion a year.

This coming Sunday (Sept. 1), Lina said the President will join them in the presentation and validation of existing drug syndicates in the country.

According to him, the process of presenting and validating drug syndicates will be similar to the process that the government went through with the kidnap-for-ransom syndicates.

“There’s a list already but we have to validate and we have to go to the process,” Lina said.

He explained that in every city and municipality, there will be an identification of pushers and users so that the police will know who to place under surveillance and arrest later on.

“We will do our best to come up with an order of battle per municipality and city,” Lina said, adding that drug syndicates have existing networks down to the barangay level.

While other countries have declared year 2020 as the target year when they can declare themselves as drug-free, the Philippines, according to Lina, has declared 2010 as the year where the country could be drug-free.

However, the DILG secretary said there is a growing consensus among the members of the DDB to advance the said date to 2005.

During the meeting with the President, Lina said the PDEA had already arrested 31 people, 23 of which are drugs pushers and one financier.

Lina added that PDEA operatives also confiscated more than P16 million worth of various illegal drugs and has caused the filing of 16 separate cases in court.

He said the DILG is now reorganizing and revitalizing the Anti-Drug Abuse Councils (ADACs) nationwide at the level of the province, city, municipality and barangay in response to the President's call made in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 22.

In her SONA, the President stressed that in the war against drug trade, "there will be no compromise and no quarter, not for fear or favor."

Repatriates to welcome GMA in Bongao visit

BONGAO, Tawi-Tawi – Thousands of Filipino repatriates who arrived here from Malaysia are set to see and talk with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo when she visits this town on Thursday (August 29).

This will be the President's first visit to the area since she was sworn in as the country's Chief Executive on January 21, 2001.

The repatriates, who arrived from Malaysia, would like to tell the President their problems and the hardships they went through after they left the port area of Sandakan in Sabah, a town official said.

They needed adequate food, clothing, shelter, medicine and livelihood.

"But most of all, we need the assurance that we are most welcome and most accepted in our country, our homeland," said a middle-aged woman who was among those who opted to flee Sandakan after authorities carried out the deportation of some 300,000 illegal aliens in Malaysia.

"We know the President can fill this need," she said.

The repatriates used to live in Tawi-Tawi, Sulu, Basilan, the Zamboanga peninsula and other Mindanao provinces before they sought work in Sabah.

Some of them have fled Mindanao following the outbreak of the Bangsamoro rebellion in the early '70s, and sailed to Sandakan in search for greener pastures.

However, their dreams and aspirations were cut short by their expulsion by the Malaysia government. Many children born there sailed home to the Philippines with their parent-repatriates.

"We want to start productive lives anew in our places of birth, if we could no longer be accommodated in Malaysia, where many of us have been working since the early '70s," Hamid Abdullah, 36, a repatriate from Sulu, said.

Leon Omoso, regional director of the Philippine Information Agency (PIA) in Western Mindanao, earlier reported that some 1,497 of the repatriates arrived here Monday morning aboard a navy boat.

Omoso cited Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) figures that said more repatriates were expected to arrive in batches soon.

He said this was the first time repatriates were being processed here. Earlier, the documentation of the deportees were done in Zamboanga City.

The DSWD said it had been distributing foodstuffs, clothing and medicines to repatriates who have been coming here since February.

GMA to award land titles to 103 CARP families

ZAMBOANGA CITY – On Thursday (August 29) afternoon, a total of 103 agrarian reform family-beneficiaries in Zamboanga del Sur and Zamboanga Sibugay provinces will finally own the land they have been living on and tilling all these years.

They will personally receive from President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo their land titles in a program marking the celebration of the 43rd founding anniversary of the town of Kumalarang, Zamboanga del Sur.

The President is expected to join the people of Kumalarang at the Kumalarang National High School gym, after attending another appointment with the people of Sergio Osmeña, Sr. town in Zamboanga del Norte.

A report from the Philippine Information Agency (PIA) in Western Mindanao said the awarding of the land patents and titles supported the government's Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program.

The President, in her State of the Nation Address, had vowed to eradicate poverty in the country within the decade. Part of the promise, much of which had been implemented even beyond targets, was the distribution of land to both the urban and rural poor.

The PIA, quoting the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) Zamboanga del Sur provincial office, said the land distribution fell under the DENR's "Handog Titulo" program.

The program assures small-time farmers security over the lands they cultivate. The land patents and titles they get serve as their evidence of ownership.

At the same time, beneficiaries may use the land documents as instruments of collateral for agricultural and small-scale livelihood programs from banks and other financial institutions.

GMA names ex-Congressman Jaafar as crisis manager on the Mindanao refugee problem

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the appointment of former Tawi-Tawi Congressman Nur Jaafar as the government's crisis manager on the repatriation of thousands of undocumented Filipinos from Sabah to Mindanao.

In her weekly luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President also announced that she would be flying to Bongao, Tawi-Tawi tomorrow to personally look into situation.

"That's why I am going to Bongao. I am going to preside over a meeting with officials of concerned agencies and then make an ocular inspection," the President said.

The President said that Jaafar would be coordinating with the regional directors of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) and the Department of Health (DOH) as well as with officials of the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) on how to handle the orderly repatriation of the Filipinos to their final destinations.

Majority of the repatriates are from Tawi-Tawi, Sulu, Basilan, the Zamboanga peninsula and other Mindanao provinces before they migrated to Sabah to find employment.

The President said she would also be sending Jaafar to Sandakan in Sabah so that he can look at the issue from the Malaysian side.

The President said that the government would be sending doctors on board Philippine Navy ships that would fetch the refugees to safeguard their health conditions, especially among the children.

According to the President, she has ordered that the entry point of refugees coming home through special trips conducted by the PN to be in Bongao. She said that only those repatriates who will be taking the commercial boats will land in Zamboanga City.

GMA confident RP, Malaysia can work together to make repatriation of immigrants orderly

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today that she is confident the Philippines and Malaysia can work together to make the repatriation of undocumented Filipinos to Mindanao in an orderly manner.

“If we work together, we will be able to make it much, much more orderly, as it has been orderly in the past,” the President said in her weekly luncheon meeting with the Malacañang Press Corps.

The President said that her impression, from the report of Foreign Secretary Blas Ople, is that Malaysian authorities were also unhappy over the manner that the repatriation has been conducted.

She was referring to news reports that some of the Filipino deportees have been maltreated while in detention centers in Sandakan, Sabah before their repatriation to the Philippines.

“My impression is that even the Malaysian officials were abhorred with what they saw on TV,” the President said.

The President said that Malaysian authorities have assured Secretary Ople that they would handle the situation in a humane way.

“That is why Secretary Ople has said that there is some gap between what they (Malaysian authorities) assured him and what actually happened, and he would like to call their attention to that,” the President said.

The President also confirmed that Malaysia is willing to welcome Filipino workers provided they are properly documented, adding that in peninsular Malaysia, there are many Filipino workers and they don't have problems.

GMA to interact with repatriates from Malaysia, distribute relief goods

BONGAO, Tawi-Tawi – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will personally welcome another batch of some 1,400 repatriates from Malaysia who are expected to land here tomorrow from Sabah.

The President, who is due to arrive here in the morning, will also interact with this new batch of repatriates and those who arrived earlier and find out for herself the problems they are faced with and offer solutions.

She will also distribute relief goods and medical supplies to the Filipinos expelled from Malaysia for lack of proper documentation.

According to the regional office of the Department of Labor and Employment, the President has directed DOLE and local government officials here to coordinate efforts in setting up livelihood projects that will benefit the repatriates and their families.

The Department of Foreign Affairs, in response to the President's order, also informed Malacañang that it is setting up a processing center here to facilitate the documentation of Filipino travelers and workers.

The center will assist a similar office in Zamboanga in processing documents for travelers and workers within two to four days.

Former Rep. Nur Jaafar, whom the President appointed as the crisis manager on the repatriation of the undocumented Filipinos, also said the government is preparing a plan of action for the remaining 80,000 Filipinos in Sabah.

GMA appoints Morales, Callejo to Supreme Court

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has appointed Court of Appeals Justices Conchita Morales and Romeo Callejo, Sr. to fill up two of the three vacancies in the Supreme Court.

The President said the new Supreme Court justices were the two topnotchers in the list submitted by the Judicial and Bar Council (JBC), Morales will replace Justice Jose Melo who retired last May 28, 2002 while Callejo will take the place of Justice Sabino de Leon, Jr. who retired last June 9, 2002.

In his press briefing this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said under the Constitution, any vacancy in the Supreme Court must be filled within 90 days from its occurrence from among the list of nominees of the JBC.

Bunye said that in a letter dated August 14, 2002, the JBC submitted a list of nine nominees which was received by the Office of the President on August 15.

CA Justices Morales and Callejo were tied for first place as they both received the unanimous vote of seven JBC members, Bunye said.

A graduate of the University of the Philippines (UP) College of Law, Morales has been in the judiciary for 19 years, eight years in the Court of Appeals and 11 years with the Regional Trial Court.

Prior to her appointment to the high tribunal, Morales was the chairman of the CA's seventh division.

Morales was born in Paoay, Ilocos Norte on June 19, 1941.

Callejo, Sr. has served 16 years in the judiciary, eight years in the Court of Appeals and eight years as an RTC judge. He was the chairman of the CA's 11th division.

A graduate of the San Beda College, Callejo has taught law in San Beda, Ateneo de Manila University and the Far Eastern University.

He was born in Sta. Lucia, Ilocos Sur on April 28, 1937.

GOCC, GFI execs have complied with M.O. 20, PAGC says

Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye today said a good number of officials have already complied with the President's directive through Memorandum Order No. 20, requiring all government-owned and controlled corporations (GOCCs), Government Financial Institutions (GFIs) and subsidiaries exempted from the salary standardization law (SSL) to implement pay rationalization in all senior officer positions.

The Press Secretary issued the statement in the wake of news reports that Presidential Anti-Graft Commission Chairman Dario Rama has started the investigation of some government owned and controlled corporations on their compliance with the SSL.

“We would like to point out that this is merely an inquiry into the implementation of Memorandum Order No. 20 requiring all government- owned and controlled corporations to rationalize their salary structures,” Bunye said during a press briefing this afternoon at Malacañang.

Bunye said the PAGC’s move to conduct an investigation on the matter is in line with the administration’s commitment to good governance, which is being espoused by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

“A good number of officials covered by the inquiry have already submitted their explanations, among them Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Gov. Rafael Buenaventura,” he said.

Under MO No. 20, the President said Administrative Order No. 5, which she issued shortly after assumption into office on Jan. 20, 2001, directs the adoption of fiscal discipline measures in the public sector to sustain economic recovery and address the fiscal deficit problem.

“There is a need to channel scarce resources of the government into more priority and critical concerns like poverty reduction, agriculture modernization and agrarian reform, information and communication technology, tourism, peace and order,” according to the President.

The President said the re-channeling of government resources necessitates looking at compensation packages of GOCCs and GFIs that are exempt from or do not follow the SSL.

MO No. 20 also said that a preliminary review was conducted on the pay practices of certain GOCCs, GFIs and subsidiaries in their officer positions to determine pay disparity with comparable positions in national government agencies (NGAs).

GMA welcomes Japanese invitation to take part in Expo 2002

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed the invitation of the Japanese government for the participation of the Philippines in the World Expo in 2005.

“We will be very happy to participate,” the President told Mikio Shimoji, Parliament Secretary of Japan’s Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry (METI), who called on her at the Music Room in Malacañang.

Several government agencies led by the Department of Tourism (DOT) are already in the process of coordinating with their respective counterparts in Japan for the preparation of the Philippine participation in the said event to be hosted by Japan.

According to Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II who was present in the meeting, the Philippines had earlier requested the Japanese government for an Overseas Development Assistance (ODA) in order to enable the country to have a good presentation in the upcoming international trade fair.

During their meeting, Shimoji also asked the President to look into the possibility of establishing a direct flight between Manila and Okinawa in view of the significant number of Okinawans residing in the Philippines and the sizeable influx of Japanese tourists to the country.

“That’s a good idea. If it will improve the Japanese visits to the Philippines, we can ask the Secretary of Transportation to provide more flights,” President Macapagal-Arroyo told the visiting Japanese official.

The Chief Executive pointed out that the policy of her administration is to promote tourism and it was for that purpose that the government liberalized its air policy.

For his part, Shimoji informed the President that majority of the chief executive officers of the Japanese companies here in the Philippines are very happy about the quality of Filipino workers.

He said the Japanese business executives also acknowledged the President's sincere efforts against criminality and terrorism.

The President assured the Japanese official that her administration would continue to work hard in resolving the issue of criminality and terrorism.

Shimoji likewise offered to help facilitate the issue of human resource exchange program which was discussed by the President with Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi.

The Japanese official, who arrived here last August 26, said he has learned to like the Philippines and its people and promised to visit the country more often.

Aside from Shimoji and Roxas, among those present during the meeting were Sadahiro Sugita, METI director for Asia and the Pacific; Yoshimasa Sakai, METI deputy director for Trade and Investment Facilitation Division; Trade and Industry Undersecretary Tomas Aquino and Bureau of International Trade Relations Director Ramon Cabigting.

Sergio Osmeña, Sr., Kumalarang folk share dev't goals

ZAMBOANGA CITY – The towns of Sergio Osmeña, Sr. and Kumalarang in the Zamboanga peninsula may be poles apart. But on Thursday (August 29), their residents will share a common event – a rare yet memorable visit from the country's Chief Executive.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is set to arrive in Sergio Osmeña, Sr., dubbed as a potential landlocked summer capital in Mindanao, in Zamboanga del Norte and in Kumalarang, a progressive agricultural beehive facing the coast of Dumaguiling Bay, in Zamboanga del Sur.

Fresh from a scheduled mid-morning rendezvous with Filipino repatriates from Malaysia in Bongao, Tawi-Tawi, the President will jump off for the two towns from Pagadian.

Sergio Osmeña Sr. is some six to seven hours by road up north from Pagadian City while Kumalarang may be reached in three to four hours down southeast from Pagadian City. Sergio Osmeña, Sr. is only two hours nearer to Dipolog City.

What makes the twin visit more significant is the President's desire to uplift the lives of the indigenous Filipino people, particularly the poor.

According to Leon Omoso, regional director of the Philippine Information Agency (PIA), both towns were once strongholds of the Subanen tribesmen.

In due time, many of the lumads (highlanders) of Sergio Osmeña, Sr. and Kumalarang were converted to the Christian and Islamic faiths, respectively; though a number clung to the tribe's unique customs and traditions, Omoso said.

This immersion into a different cultural and social psyche, however, did not obliterate but instead strengthened the blood of the Subanen in them, he added.

On Thursday, the Subanens will once more come to the fore – with honor and dignity – to receive from the President the realization of their dreams, that is to own the piece of land they have nurtured as their home and source of farming livelihood.

Beside this, the President is expected to award to them socio-economic programs and projects intended to increase their chances of getting a better share of the national wealth.

The President may also take up the eco-tourism potentials of Sergio Osmeña, Sr. (population: 39,437) and Kumalarang (population: 27,680).

The first boasts of its cool weather and the beauty of Mt. Malindang. The second takes pride in its Cabug Island and Sicade Falls.

These natural wonders are coupled by the edible colors almost found everywhere – gold for palay and corn, green for most fruits and vegetables among others.

Both towns contribute to the agricultural productivity in the area, thus helping boost the government's drive to attain food sufficiency.

Bunye says issue on PAGC inquiry on GOCC, GFI execs 'overblown'

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today described as "overblown" the reaction of some sectors to the inquiry conducted by the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) on the compliance with Memorandum Order No. 20.

In an interview, Bunye also appealed to the politicians not to ride on the action taken by the PAGC so as not to muddle the issue.

"Masyado lang overblown itong controversy na ito at maraming sumasakay na mga politiko at talagang parang ginatungan pa nila iyong magkabilang panig (The controversy is just overblown and a number of politicians are adding fire to both sides)," Bunye said.

Bunye reiterated that a number of the 15 GOCC and GFI executives cited by the PAGC in its charge sheet have already substantially complied with M.O. 20 and have justified their salaries, including Governor Rafael Buenaventura of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP).

"Anyway, let's be sober about this thing. There is nothing unusual about what is going on," Bunye said.

According to Bunye, the PAGC's move to conduct an investigation on the matter is in line with the administration's commitment to good governance as espoused by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

M.O. 20 requires all executives of GOCCs, GFIs, and their subsidiaries, who are exempted from the salary standardization law, to rationalize their salary structures.

The executives are also required to submit their justification if they want their present salary structures to be retained.

Economy turns in a surprise, exceeds growth projections in 2nd quarter

The economy expanded at a rate exceeding government projections during the second quarter of this year, raising hopes that the budget deficit will be contained and whole-year growth targets attained.

"The economy turned in a pleasant surprise in the second quarter by growing at a rate that exceeded even NEDA's projections," National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Director-General Dante B. Canlas said today.

"Given the growth rates of 4.5 percent and 5.2 percent in real GDP and GNP, respectively, the economy is on track to meet the government's whole year growth projections: 4 to 4.5 percent for real GDP and 5 to 5.5 percent for real GNP," said Canlas, who is also socioeconomic planning secretary.

In the first half of the year, the average growth rates are 4.1 percent for real GDP and 4.7 percent for real GNP.

The broad-based nature of the expansion is encouraging, Canlas said.

“Looking at aggregate supply, although agriculture slowed down in the second quarter, industry recovered strongly,” he said. Services, meanwhile, continued to gain strength, he added.

On the aggregate-demand side, the decline in investment slowed down in the second quarter, suggesting a bottoming out, Canlas said.

With the help of Congress, which commits to enact key economic reform bills into laws, such as the Transmission Corporation (Transco) franchise and the Special Purpose Asset Vehicle (SPAV), “investments may hit positive territory in the second half of the year,” the NEDA head said.

“Economic performance as of the second semester indicates that the economic program of the administration is working. The deficit-reduction program will thus continue,” he added.

The output-growth figures that the National Statistical Coordination Board just released raises the likelihood that the target deficit-to-GDP ratio of 3.3 percent in 2002 will be realized, Canlas said.

This fiscal stance and a monetary policy rule based on maintaining price stability, plus the commitment to long-term structural reforms, promote private sector-led growth, which is vital to the economy’s continuing expansion, Canlas said.

GMA begins two-day visit to Mindanao

ZAMBOANGA CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today braved low dark clouds and a slight drizzle as she planed in here to begin a two-day visit to different parts of Mindanao in her bid to quickly address issues affecting peace and development in the area.

The plane bearing the President landed at about 10:45 a.m. at the Edwin Andrews Air Base (EAAB).

She was given the usual planeside honors, after which she greeted her welcomers, among whom were regional and local officials, a group from the city’s cooperative federation and students of the Ateneo de Zamboanga University.

After pleasantries with welcoming officials, the President presided over a closed-door meeting with Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat and Rep. Celso Lobregat over the Sabah Filipino repatriation issue and with the military on ongoing anti-terrorist operations in Mindanao, particularly Sulu.

She took off for Bongao, Tawi-Tawi shortly before noon when the weather cleared.

The President is scheduled to meet some 1,400 Filipino repatriates aboard a Navy boat expected to arrive today at the Bongao port.

However, there were reports that the Navy boat was stranded in Mapun Island off Bongao due to harsh sea conditions and bad weather.

She will also look into the conditions of and personally lend a hand to ease the plight of some 1,500 Filipinos who were repatriated this week from Sandakan in Sabah.

While in Tawi-Tawi, she is expected to lead other officials in giving out emergency food, clothing and medicine aid to the repatriates, who included children, waiting for the processing of their papers.

From Bongao, the President will hop off to Pagadian City and proceed to Sergio Osmeña Sr. town in Zamboanga del Norte where she will attend a program.

Later, she will address the people of Kumaralang, Zamboanga del Sur, which celebrates its 43rd founding anniversary today.

The President is set to return to and spend the night in Pagadian City.

Before leaving tomorrow (August 30) for Surigao City, she will lead officials in the ground-breaking rites for the Iligan City-Aurora, Zamboanga del Sur road.

In Surigao, the President is set to attend the Mindanao Business conference and grace another program in Butuan City.

She will also find time to confer with provincial and local officials and the media to discuss concerns in both cities.

GMA visit raises hopes for faster solutions to Zamboanga City problems on repatriates

ZAMBOANGA CITY – The visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo here today, her fourth since she became the country's Chief Executive, bodes well for the city government.

This was the assessment of city officials who hoped that the President's visit would relieve the locality from burdens spawned by the sudden entry of thousands of Filipino repatriates from Sandakan, Sabah, Malaysia.

City Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat today discussed with the President and other officials possible programs that would put an end to the woes, both of the repatriates and city residents.

The local officials said having the processing of the documents of the repatriates done in Bongao, Tawi-Tawi was a good start. Earlier, the processing was made here.

Most of the repatriates hail from Sulu, Tawi-Tawi and Basilan that are parts of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao while Zamboanga City is in the Western Mindanao region.

Except for the regular help from concerned agencies, the city government has found it hard to secure enough funds to help feed, clothe and house the repatriates.

Local police records even showed that the incidence of petty crimes, many of these perpetrated by children of repatriates, rose slightly.

The Department of Social Welfare and Development regional office said it had spent some P10 million for the repatriates since 1995.

At the same time, the city government has been contending with the influx of migrants from neighboring Zamboanga del Norte province, where recent military operations against the terrorist Abu Sayyaf Group were conducted.

Another positive move to ease problems brought about by the repatriation issue was the creation of Task Force Deportees that Lobregat headed.

Lobregat hoped to align the task force's objectives with the programs of the President to address the matter.

The mayor said the President had expressed support to the task force, but the latter wanted officials to institute the more organized and orderly handling of the arrival of the repatriates.

She noted the President's "deep concern" for the city, which faced problems on what to do with some 20,000 repatriates who landed at the port of Zamboanga after fleeing from Sandakan, Sabah, since January.

Lobregat said the President would personally assess the extent of the problem.

President Macapagal-Arroyo flew from here to Bongao, Tawi-Tawi shortly before noon.

She said she wanted to look into the conditions of more than 3,000 Filipino repatriates who arrived this week from Sandakan in Navy boats.

The Malaysian government is set to banish some 300,000 illegal aliens from Sabah after giving them a four-month notice to leave or face deportation.

Statement of Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye

I would like to take exception to reports that the President ordered the investigation of any government officials for violation of Memorandum No. 20, dated June 25, 2001, which directs head of GOCCs and GFIs and their subsidiaries to implement a pay rationalization plan for all senior officer positions. The MO mandates the reduction of pay scales of senior officers and suspends the grant of salary increases and other benefits unless authorized by the President.

The President ordered no such investigation. The fact is that the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission, acting on its own behest and initiative, is conducting a formal inquiry into the compliance of GFIs and GOCCs with the Memorandum Order. This is part of the job of the PAGC, to check on the status of implementation of pertinent Presidential issuances.

There is no point in making a mountain out of this molehill. The officials concerned are complying with the President's instructions and are working closely with the PAGC to resolve the issue.

Gov't drafts comprehensive peace pact with NDF

The government has come up with the final draft of the single comprehensive peace agreement with the National Democratic Front, proving that while formal peace talks have been suspended, lines of communications remain open between parties, Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye said.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon, Bunye said the government peace panel met this morning with the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS), wherein the draft was presented.

During the meeting, Bunye said, the COCIS has given itself one week to submit comments on the draft agreement.

Bunye said the government panel has expressed optimism that despite the suspension of the formal talks, it is "still moving as expected."

"Our position on the matter remains the same that while the formal talks have been suspended, our lines of communication remain open," Bunye said.

Bunye noted that the President would like to have attained a single and comprehensive peace accord, "in effect discard(ing) the piecemeal type of agreement" and giving way for the attainment of peace finally.

Peace talks were suspended after the New People's Army, the armed wing of the communist movement, assassinated two congressmen last year.

Before they were suspended last June, the talks were focused on socio-economic reforms.

This would have been followed by discussions on political and electoral reforms and, finally, the disposition of forces.

GMA plans to send FVR to Malaysia to talk to Mahathir on Filipino repatriate issue

BONGAO, Tawi-Tawi — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today disclosed she would ask former President Fidel V. Ramos to go to Malaysia and talk with Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad on the fate of undocumented Filipinos in that neighboring state.

The President made the disclosure at the Sanga-Sanga airport where she boarded a plane that would take her to Pagadian City on the third leg of her two-day visit to Mindanao.

She had just finished conferring with local officials and some 1,500 Filipino repatriates who arrived here this morning from Sandakan, Sabah, aboard the Navy boat BRP Dagupan City.

"I plan to ask President Ramos to go to Malaysia to speak with Prime Minister Mahathir and also to the Chief Minister of Sabah about the situation so that the remaining deportations and voluntary return will be much, much smoother," she said.

This would also be "for the benefit of peace and development in Southern Philippines and in southern Asia," she added.

The President said that four more Navy vessels are scheduled to go to Sandakan between today and Saturday to fetch more repatriates.

Filipino immigration officers and doctors will accompany the repatriates on the Navy vessels so they could immediately process and attend to the health needs, respectively, of the deportees.

The Malaysian government has set August 31 as the deadline for illegal aliens in Sabah to return to their respective countries.

Malaysian government reports showed that some 300,000 illegal aliens lived and worked in Sabah through the years.

The President arrived here from Zamboanga City at about 2 p.m. and left for Pagadian City shortly before 4 p.m.

During her brief stay here, she thanked the local officials and heads of concerned agencies of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao for immediately assisting the repatriates.

"Nagpapasalamat ako sa mga mamamayan ng Tawi-Tawi, lalo na kay Governor Rashidin Halon Matba, sa buong puso nilang pagtanggap sa mga deportees (I also thank the people of Tawi-Tawi, led by Gov. Matba, for the hospitality they accorded the deportees)," she added.

On Saturday, the President said she would meet with Tawi-Tawi's leaders and heads of concerned line agencies in Malacañang on the status of the repatriates.

The meeting would follow the confirmation of former Tawi-Tawi Rep. Nur Jaafar who was named Presidential Adviser on Muslim Affairs.

Following her arrival here, the President proceeded to the Mindanao State University conference room where she presided over a closed-door meeting with military officers on the peace and order situation in Mindanao.

GMA orders coast guard to eradicate sea piracy off Zambo Del Sur

PAGADIAN CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered the Philippine Coast Guard to eradicate sea piracy off Zamboanga del Sur in a bid to boost business and make the region a prime supplier of carrageenin.

The President told an audience here led by Zamboanga del Sur Gov. Aurora Cerilles and Zamboanga del Sur Rep. Filomena San Juan and the mayors of the province that she instructed Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza to launch an intensified operation against pirates in the seas off Zamboanga del Norte.

“Let’s clean up the seas of Zamboanga del Sur. Let’s clean up the pirates there,” the President ordered Mendoza.

Mrs. Arroyo said she gave the directive to Mendoza after conferring with Rep. San Juan regarding the future of the economy of the region.

Zamboanga del Sur, according to San Juan, is fast becoming a center for seaweed production. Seaweed is converted into carrageenin, which is a basic material for natural preservatives.

The President noted that seaweeds from Zamboanga del Sur could be shipped to Cebu, where a modern carrageenin production facility is located, but seaweed producers in the province could not be so because pirates abound in the seas off the region.

Mendoza, according to Mrs. Arroyo, has identified the pirates and their supporters and would be launching soon an intensified operation against them.

In the same meeting, the President stressed that her administration would always pursue a “peace goes with development” policy in Mindanao. She also noted that while her administration is pursuing peace with Muslim separatists in Mindanao, it would always be under the principles of the Constitution.

“We will not become great as a Republic, we will not become strong as a Republic, if we do not recognize that we are a multi-ethnic society,” Mrs. Arroyo said.

She stressed that terrorism and war in Mindanao is rooted in the Muslims’ perception of economic exclusion. Thus, it is important that Filipino Muslims be fully integrated into the economy and be given a chance to achieve economic development.

“It is important that we address the roots of war and terrorism, and that is economic exclusion (of Filipino Muslims),” the President said.

GMA guest at RM Awards night tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is this year's guest of honor in the Ramon Magsaysay Awards to be held tomorrow at the Cultural Center of the Philippines.

President Macapagal-Arroyo will present the medallion and the award certificate to this year's laureates: Hilario Davide, Jr., (Philippines) for Government Service; Dr. Ruth Pfau, (Pakistan) for Public Service; Dr. Cynthia Maung (Burma) for Community Leadership; Bharat Koirala (Nepal) for Journalism, Literature and Creative Communications; Venerable Pamnyun Snim (Korea) for Peace and International Understanding; and Sandeep Pandey (India) for Emergent Leadership.

This year's presentation ceremonies, which carries the theme "Making Asia A Better Place," will also feature widely-acclaimed guest artists such as pop vocalist Anna Fegi, who is singing the Philippine National Anthem a capella; the PLM Rondalla; the Bayanihan national folk dance company which won the Magsaysay Award for Peace and International Understanding in 1965; and noted Korean flutist Hae Won Shin.

Established in 1957, the Ramon Magsaysay Award honors the memory and leadership example of the third Philippine president. The award is given yearly individuals or organizations in Asia who manifest the same sense of selfless service that ruled the life of the late president.

Since 1958, when the first awards were given, 229 individuals and organizations, regardless of race, creed, sex or nationality, have received the award.

Ramon Magsaysay Award Foundation president Carmencita Abella says "This year's six Magsaysay awardees, much like their peers before them, personify selfless leadership that is making a lasting difference towards making Asia a better place to live in."

GMA cites vital role of Butuan airport extension project in trade expansion

BUTUAN CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the importance of immediately implementing the Butuan airport extension project to spur agricultural and industrial trade between Agusan and the domestic markets.

In remarks she delivered in Cebuano before officials and Butuanons led by Mayor Leonides Therese Plaza at the Almont Inland Resort Hotel here, the President said the project should proceed "by the end of this year."

"Mahimo na extended ang airport sa Butuan. Ingon ni Mayor Plaza, ang mga produkto sa Agusan Norte ug Sur ug Butuan ang mga prutas sa Agusan adlaw-adlaw na makaadto sa laing-laing lugar sa Leyte ug mercado sa tibuok Pilipinas (The airport extension is imperative. Mayor Plaza says this will speed up trading. Agricultural products from Agusan del Norte, Agusan del Sur and Butuan City can daily and easily find their way to the domestic markets)," she said.

"Therefore, this will spur the development of industries here in Butuan and Agusan," she added.

The President said she was very happy over the partnership shown by the leaders and people of Butuan and Agusan with the administration.

She said this partnership was most expressed in many areas.

"We are partners in government, peace, development, in working on a good strong Philippine Republic and in developing Agusan into a prosperous multi-ethnic society that we want our country to be," she noted.

The President also hoped that this “unity will truly bring Butuan to the Land of Fulfillment from the Land of Promise that was Mindanao all these years.”

DOJ to assist Filipinos if complaints or claims for compensation are filed with Malaysian courts

The Department of Justice (DOJ) will assist Filipinos who have suffered maltreatment in the hands of Malaysian authorities if they would decide to file complaints or seek damages.

But in an interview, Justice Secretary Hernando Perez said the complaints should be filed in Malaysia and should be coursed through the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), more particularly with the Philippine Embassy in Kuala Lumpur.

Perez said that since a Filipino lawyer cannot practice in Malaysia, the DFA or the complainant should hire a Malaysian lawyer and the DOJ will extend all the legal assistance that would be needed in prosecuting the case.

Meanwhile, the DFA said that under traditional international law, a private person should exhaust all domestic remedies available at the host country where the injury took place before asking the Philippine government to enter the picture.

Since the injury or the maltreatment happened in Malaysia, appropriate remedies may be sought under the Malaysian justice system, the DFA said.

According to the DFA, only when all avenues have been exhausted would the Philippine government extend diplomatic assistance in pursuing any claim for compensation.

The government will not normally act without the consent of the victims, the DFA said.

But Commissioner Purificacion Quisumbing of the Commission on Human Rights said that the Philippines could present a strong case against Malaysia before the United Nations Human Rights Commission or any relevant UN body.

Quisumbing said that under the Convention on the Rights of the Child, which is the most widely ratified international human rights treaty, Malaysia can be held responsible for the deaths of several Filipino children as a result of the inhuman conditions the Filipino deportees were subjected during their detention in Sabah.

Statement of Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye

There is no question that corruption is a serious barrier to sustainable economic development in the Philippines. But there is also no question that President Macapagal-Arroyo is committed to ensuring that this challenge to win the war over poverty is attacked head-on.

The recent investigation into the tax scam, the adoption of E-Procurement and E-Payment, the reduction of red tape, are clear examples that this is a government that will not tolerate corruption at any level.

This will be a long battle but it is an important battle if we are to build a strong republic that is at the center of the President’s vision for the future of the Philippines.

GMA urges Mindanao business leaders to push regional growth, help gov’t address poverty

SURIGAO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the business community and other stakeholders here to push Mindanao’s development forward and to address poverty that is the root of the area’s security problem, as well as that of the entire country.

“I had a chance as a child to see poverty in Muslim areas, the same poverty that still pervades the Muslim provinces of the Philippines today,” the President said in a speech before the 11th Mindanao Business Conference (MBC) at the Provincial Convention Center here.

Since these Muslim provinces remained the poorest in the country, the President said it was very clear from the experience of the country and Mindanao that “poverty is the root of our national security problems, including the hostage crisis in Sulu.”

When she presided over a military command conference Thursday, the President said she was convinced the Sulu hostage crisis was only temporary.

She likewise noted Mindanao’s wealth, in terms of human and natural resources.

She said Mindanao “provides more than a third of the gross national value-added for agriculture, fishery and forestry, 43 percent of the Philippine domestic trade, 30 percent of the country’s yellow corn output, 75 percent of fresh coffee berries, 30 percent of the national cattle population, 43 percent of total commercial fish production, and 39 percent of total output.”

In her speech, the President said she was happy to announce the most recent report that the Philippines has achieved a 5.2 percent growth rate in its gross national product (GNP) for the first half of the year 2002.

“I have not seen the breakdown but if we go by past year’s records, I am quite sure that Mindanao’s growth rate is even higher than 5.2 percent,” she said.

The Chief Executive said there was merit to the economic logic for her administration to place agricultural modernization as one of the pillars of the fight against poverty and “of our building up a strong Philippine Republic.”

“There is more than logic in ensuring our vital performance for Mindanao agriculture,” she said.

On natural resources, the President felt elated that after 19 years, the government has found a solution to the anarchy that has reigned at the gold mining area in Mt. Diwalwal, Compostela Valley.

She thanked the leaders of the mining industry who attended the MBC conference for helping the government find a solution to the almost two-decade problem in Mt. Diwalwal.

GMA orders land bank to release loan facilities to Mindanao coffee, rice farmers

SURIGAO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP) president Gary Teves to release loan facilities to coffee and rice farmers in Mindanao to enable them to increase their productivity.

“I hope that with the increase credit, there will be increase in productivity,” the President said in her speech before the 11th Mindanao Business Conference (MBC) at the Provincial Capitol Convention Center here.

During her speech, the President noted that this year she launched the rice hybrid commercialization program in 44 provinces to double the yields of rice farmers.

She said the hybrid technology was developed in collaboration between the Philippine Rice Institute (PhilRice) and last year’s Ramon Magsaysay awardee, Yuan Long Pin of China.

The President noted that 60 percent of the targeted hectareage of 50,000 for this year is located in Mindanao.

As a result of the program, she said there are now a good number of small hybrid seed growers in Zamboanga Peninsula, in the Davao provinces and Lanao del Sur.

At the same time, the President tasked Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor to see to it that all the seeds of seed growers in Mindanao are accessed by farmers.

According to her, the government has made a strategic decision to remove the hybrid rice from the laboratory and commercialize it, thus inducing private firms to bring in better technologies.

“I will not be surprised if those private firms who are even improving the technologies some more will use these technologies not just to double but to triple our rice productivity in the future,” the President said.

She added that PhilRice is also tapping Taiwanese post-harvest technologies that will reduce losses in grain output.

Soon a commercial facility using the system will rise in Isabela province in Luzon, even as she expressed hope that Mindanao will also access the same technology.

With regards to the coffee, the President recalled that last April, she launched the Café Isla program to revive the coffee industry in the country.

She explained that Café Isla seeks to improve the productivity of standing trees to make them like Colombian coffee.

By increasing the application of fertilizer and promoting good agricultural practices, she said farms are expected to gain an incremental yield of at least one metric ton per hectare.

At the same time, she said the Café Isla also seeks to upgrade the quality of Philippine coffee beans by educating Filipino farmers in post-harvest handling technology.

The program, the President added, will teach the farmers when to pick the berries, how to dry and sort them out properly and where to have their dried beans milled so that their harvests approximate the internationally-acceptable quality level.

Furthermore, she said Café Isla aims to increase consumer awareness of Philippine coffee by systematically encouraging coffee shops, hotels and restaurants to label coffee blends that use Philippine beans.

Of the 22,000 hectares of Café Isla, 15,000 are to be implemented in Mindanao and 1,300 will be implemented in the CARAGA area.

GMA to push measures aimed at speeding up development of Mindanao

SURIGAO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured Mindanaoans that her administration would implement measures that are designed not only to speed up the development of Mindanao but also to make doing business in the island more competitive.

In her keynote address at the 11th Mindanao Business Conference held at the Capitol Convention Center here, the President announced three directives that would reduce the cost of transport and cargo handling in Mindanao ports.

First, the President said, she has directed the Philippine Ports Authority (PPA) to adopt a universal rate in collecting government shares from the revenues of cargo handlers.

“Starting next month, I am pegging the rate to 10 percent for the domestic ports and 20 percent for international ports. This is my initial move to mitigate the cost of cargo handling, especially in Davao and Zamboanga,” the President said.

The second move that the President announced was the freezing of the 35 percent increase in port and wharfage fees ordered implemented by the previous administration for the next five years.

She said that non-implementation of the 35 percent increase in port and wharfage fees, which are being charged by the PPA, would mean a loss of P200 million a year in government revenues.

But the President said she was making the gamble because she believes that there will be an increase in logistic efficiency and movement of goods that would be enough to offset the expected loss of P200 million.

“I am taking this gamble to set the stage for Mindanao’s growth once again,” the President said.

In this regard, the President also called on the cargo handling operators to freeze their arrastre and stevedoring fees for 24 months. She also asked them to undertake “aggressive investments” in modernizing their port handling facilities.

The President also said that she has directed the Maritime Industry Authority (Marina) to work closely with the PPA and the private sector to help unbundled all the charges related to the cargo handling component in the freight charges,

She asked the participants to the conference, composed of the country’s top businessmen, to unite behind her administration in the building of a strong Republic.

“Once again, let us work together. Transform this most successful conference into a most successful effort to make this part of the Republic not just a land of promise but a land of fulfillment,” the President said.

GMA directs Land Bank to make P1 billion available for corn industry

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today disclosed that the concession agreement the Philippine International Air Terminals Co. (PIATCO) entered into with the Estrada administration was onerous and burdensome to the government and the Filipino people.

The agreement was for the construction of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport Terminal 3, which is almost completed.

In his regular press briefing in Malacañang, Bunye said that most of the onerous provisions were incorporated in the Amended and Restated Concession Agreement signed on November 26, 1998.

He also noted that Fraport AG, the German technical partner of the Cheng Group in Piatco, had quarrelsome relations with the Cheng Group and had approached the government to consider the termination of the concession agreement.

Fraport proposed that the government operate the NAIA Terminal 3. Fraport offered to grant the government a loan enough for the latter to get back the airport at a cost of some S400 million, under favorable terms.

There was merit to the proposal that PIATCO knew of since July 2002, Bunye said.

The Press Secretary turned over the briefing to Presidential Adviser on Strategic Projects Gloria Tan-Climaco who explained the details of her recommendations to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to consider a government decision to take Fraport's offer.

Tan-Climaco said one of the agreement's onerous provisions gave PIATCO the right to require outbound international passengers to pay a $20 terminal fee, making it the highest in the region. So far, the highest rate is $11.50 in Vietnam.

She said that her office had been asking PIATCO for a breakdown of the terminal fee since January.

"We want to understand how we will be able to justify to the Filipino people what is the rate that would be charged there," she added.

Tan-Climaco said unlike most contracts that provided a cap on the project cost, the contract provided only for the minimum. "Hence, PIATCO claims it has a project cost of $657 million when the original minimum project cost was $350 million," she said.

"In the statement of (PIATCO vice president and spokesperson Moises) Tolentino, he was saying that they don't want to be audited because they are the ones who are paying for the project. If you look at the facts, the ones who are paying for the project initially is Fraport, (the German technical partner of the Cheng Group in PIATCO). But ultimately, its you and me and anyone who takes plane out of that terminal," she said.

"The way the contract is structured, you and I have no option but to use that airport for the longest period of time until they have 10 million passengers going through that airport for three consecutive years. So far, Terminals 1 and 2 have a combined 7 million-passenger population.

"It's still a long way to go so what I'm saying is that the one who's gonna pay for the airport is you and me and everyone who's going to be using that airport," she said.

Tan-Climaco also stressed that the government was not willing to acquire the operations of the NAIA Terminal 3, contrary to projections made by newspaper reports.

Maceda thanks GMA for creating RP Film Development Council

Film producer Marichu P. Maceda has thanked President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for signing into law last June 7 Republic Act 9167 creating the Film Development Council of the Philippines (FDCP).

The President signed the bill in simple rites at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang. The signing was witnessed by members of the Senate and the House of Representatives and prominent personalities in the movie industry.

In a letter, Maceda said the film and entertainment sector was "deeply grateful" for the President's approval of the law.

"Finally, after years of futile attempts, a law has been passed to benefit the Philippine movie industry. At long last, we see a flicker of light at the end of a dark tunnel," she said.

As a fitting tribute to the President, local artists have composed, recorded and produced the song, "Maraming Salamat Po (Thank You Very Much)," in compact disc.

Maceda said the song, "specially composed to commemorate the birth of RA 9176," was sang by Pops Fernandez, with lyrics written by Edith Gallardo and music by Moy Ortiz.

Under the law, the FDCP is tasked to establish and implement a Cinema Evaluation System, an incentive-reward system for movie producers.

A Cinema Evaluation Board shall evaluate and grade films submitted to the council.

The Board, in grading the films, would not, however, be authorized to delete, shorten or modify the submitted films.

The law also provides that the Movie Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB) and the Videogram Regulatory Board (VRB) will give due weight and consideration for the graded film's viewing, reproduction, exportation and other purposes.

The Board will formulate an evaluation system on the degree of excellence in film directing, screenplay, cinematography, editing, production design, music scoring, sound and acting performances.

NIA's P93-M income in 1st sem spurs financial turnaround

The National Irrigation Administration (NIA) posted a net operating income of some P93 million in the first semester, in a major turnaround that breathed life back to the agency's flailing finances in past years.

In a report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor, NIA Administrator Jesus Emmanuel Paras said total revenues hit P689.8 million from January to June, up by 33 percent from P486.8 million derived in the same period in 2001.

Irrigation fees collected reached P333.2 million, up by 56 percent from P213.7 million year-on-year, Paras said.

Management fees posted a 100-percent increase, to P169.8 million from P81.1 million while equipment rentals rose by 12 percent to P50 million from P44.6 million in the same period under review, Paras said.

He added that total agency expenses remained within the programmed amount at P597.5 million in the same period this year.

Paras noted that NIA had been incurring heavy operating losses from 1992 until 2000, except in 1997 and in 1999, averaging P62 million yearly. In 2000, the NIA registered a net operating loss of almost P122 million.

He attributed the financial turnaround to a combination of various revenue-enhancing and cost cutting efforts.

According to Paras, for the first time in many years, the insurance and health care contributions of NIA field personnel were paid without government subsidy.

For the whole year, Paras projected an aggregate revenue of P1.8 billion, 40 percent higher than last year's actual revenue.

GMA orders PDEA, law enforcers to step up elimination of drug rings in country

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) to make sure that a specific unit is assigned to neutralize each identified transnational and local illegal drug ring operating in the country.

In a short message before law enforcers who attended a two-day PDEA-sponsored intelligence workshop in Camp Crame, the President said these special units should ably pinpoint, monitor the activities of and eliminate the drug syndicates.

She cited PDEA Director General Undersecretary Anselmo Avenido's report that said 11 transnational and 215 local drug groups have been identified to be actively operating in the country.

The report noted that of the 215 local drug groups, 116 are in Luzon, 48 in the Visayas and 51 in Mindanao.

The President called on the Philippine National Police (PNP), the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) and other law enforcement agencies to help the PDEA in the fight against drug groups.

She said this support should come while the PDEA could not yet fully operate and while its personnel and resources could not yet ably carry out the provisions of the Dangerous Drugs Act.

She considered the police and other law enforcers as deputized PDEA agents.

The PDEA, she said, should be informed of operations within 24 hours from the time of actual custody of suspects or seizure of dangerous drugs, precursors and paraphernalia.

The President further directed all law enforcement agencies to work closely with other concerned public and private sectors to put up a united front against drug rings.

She stressed that illegal drug syndicates are interlinked with other criminal groups; but if the government and the people would join forces, it would be easier to cut off these links and eliminate these criminal groups.

She urged local government units to help the authorities in naming persons involved in street-level drug pushing.

She added that Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. has reorganized and revitalized the anti-drug abuse councils in all local government levels, as she ordered city and town mayors to put up multi-sectoral anti-drug monitoring teams.

The President believed that with everyone's help, the government would crush the illegal drug groups; thus, ensuring peaceful communities free from drugs and devoid of crime.

GMA lauds PACER, Cavite police for speedy rescue of kidnap victim

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to the officers and men of the Philippine National Police (PNP) Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER) unit and the Cavite Police Provincial Office who rescued last August 27 a kidnap-for-ransom victim and later arrested six suspected kidnapers belonging to the notorious Tresvalles Gang.

The President personally congratulated the policemen who saved kidnap victim Jan Arad Fernandez, 24, two days after the abduction in Bacoor, Cavite.

She said she was glad over the speed by which the police have responded to recent kidnapping incidents.

She recalled that the kidnapping of Rowena Jackie Tiu was solved in eight days; the recent Patricia Chong kidnap in six days, and the Fernandez kidnap, in just two days.

The search-and-rescue operations for Fernandez were immediately launched after the victim's father, Arthur Fernandez, alerted the police.

The police arrested six Fernandez kidnap suspects on August 29. Presented to the media today at Camp Crame were the suspects Dennis Tresvalles, the alleged gang leader; Conrado Jocson, Noel Tresvalles, Gonzago Quario, Dominador Layacan, and Allan Garcia.

They were arrested in different hideouts by the four PACER tracker teams led by Superintendent Alan Purisima and the Cavite Police led by Cavite Police Provincial Director Senior Superintendent Samuel Pagdilao.

PNP Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane said the Tresvalles Gang had been responsible for a string of robbery and holdup incidents in Cavite since last year.

Ebdane told the President the gang preyed on pawnshops, buses and jeepneys, gasoline stations and others, stretching from Cavite to Laguna provinces.

The suspects were detained at the PACER Detention Center in Camp Crame.

GMA directs Lina, LGUs to adopt accommodation policy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. to come up with a policy of accommodation on the case of Filipino repatriates from Malaysia to ease possible congestion in cities and towns in Mindanao where the repatriates disembark.

The President announced a more “pragmatic focus and effective response” to the problems of the repatriates and their host local government unit during the culmination of a two-day Intelligence Workshop sponsored by the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) at Camp Crame.

She said Secretary Lina would be responsible for the enforcement of law and order in the areas where the repatriates would be accommodated.

Adequate support should also be given to local government units that would accommodate the repatriates, who are expected to arrive in big numbers in the next few weeks from the port island of Sandakan, Sabah, Malaysia.

The President last Thursday flew to Bongao, Tawi-Tawi, to personally look into the conditions of some 3,000 Filipinos repatriated from Sandakan. They were fetched by Philippine Navy boats.

While in Bongao, the President directed state agencies to coordinate and speed up efforts to set up livelihood projects to benefit the repatriates and their families, besides providing food, health care, shelter and transport assistance.

A processing center to facilitate the documentation of repatriates had been set up in Bongao.

A similar center was also set up in Zamboanga City to process Filipino travelers and workers who arrived by commercial boats from Sandakan.

The Malaysian government has decided to send home some 300,000 illegal aliens it said had been overstaying in Sabah, after giving the latter a four-month notice to leave or face deportation.

Datumanong leads groundbreaking of 97-km Iligan-Aurora Road project

Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon Datumanong today led officials in simple groundbreaking rites for the construction of the 97.3-kilometer Iligan City-Aurora Road project linking Lanao del Norte and Zamboanga del Sur.

With Datumanong were Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) Assistant Secretary Bashir Rasuman, DPWH-Asian Development Bank (ADB)-Project Management Office Director Subair Diron, and other public works and local officials.

Datumanong said the P616 million road project was one of the projects in the second year program of the structural overlay component, sixth road project bankrolled by the government, the ADB and the Japan Bank for International Cooperation.

He said the improvement of the road pavement and the impending retrofitting of its bridges would convert the Iligan-Aurora road into a first class highway that would spur the faster inter-regional movement of goods and services in Mindanao.

Meanwhile, Assistant Secretary Rasuman, in-charge of DPWH operations in Mindanao, said the Iligan City-Aurora road’s upgrading was deemed needed after the section deteriorated due to loads from heavy volume of traffic in the area.

Rasuman said the upgrading involved the transformation of the road from asphalt to a 6.10-meter Portland cement concrete pavement two-lane roadway with shoulder improvement.

The project construction would take 900 calendar days. It is under contract with Hanjin Heavy Industries & Construction Co. Ltd.

Besides this, other civil works included a drainage system to prolong structural life and to minimize flooding, a counter-landslide structure, and safety installations of guardrails, road signs and lane marks.

The DPWH would likewise repair and retrofit all 24 bridges within the road section at P169.87 million under the bridge component of ADB 6th road project.

The bidding would be conducted on November.

Datumanong had earlier directed Project Director Diron and consultants Japan Overseas Consultants Co. Ltd., Proconsult Inc., Techniks Group Corp. and TCGI Engineers to effectively oversee project works.

He said the improvement of the Iligan City-Aurora Road would support President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's efforts to improve law and order, tourism, and economic and social development programs in Mindanao.

GMA calls for prudence, sobriety over Sabah repatriation issue

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for "prudence, sobriety and reason" among the Filipino people on the plight of thousands of Filipino repatriates from Malaysia, as she disclosed a five-point program to address the issue.

She also urged that the "Philippine claim to Sabah must be firmly delinked from the issue of the repatriates."

In a message aired nationwide, the President stressed that this is not the time for people to stir controversies out of the situation but rather, the "time for our nation to come together for a humanitarian cause."

She said she saw the sufferings of thousands of Filipinos who fled from Sandakan, Sabah, Malaysia when she visited Bongao, Tawi-Tawi Thursday.

"Many of them are sick and hungry. They need our help," she said, as she urged everyone – civic-minded groups, the media and others — to extend whatever assistance, recalling the Filipinos' innate trait to respond to the needs of their neighbors whenever tragedy strikes.

The President said the "events have brought in their wake serious controversies," which some people have tried to exploit "to serve their selfish ends, to erode our relations with Malaysia, or to pursue political or terroristic ends inimical to the common interests of both nations."

"I must ask for prudence, sobriety and reason among our people," she urged.

"The problem of deportees from Sabah must be viewed from the overall spirit of goodwill, amity and mutual respect that have characterized our relations with Malaysia," she added.

The Chief Executive said she had talked with Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad by phone Friday and "we came to an understanding on how best to ease the situation affecting our countrymen in Sabah."

She said an official Philippine mission would be going to Kuala Lumpur, capital of Malaysia, on Monday (September 2) to thresh out the details of her discussion with Mahathir.

"Malaysia is our ally in security, peace and development. Together with Indonesia, (Malaysia) is a co-signatory to our trilateral agreement on the interdiction of crime and terrorism along our common seas," she stressed.

"Malaysia has assisted us in the peace process in Mindanao," she added, referring to peace talks between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) hosted by Malaysia in Kuala Lumpur.

“We enjoy strong investment and trade ties, particularly within the context of the Brunei Darussalam-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East Asean Growth Area,” she said.

The President warned against grandstanding and diplomatic adventurism. “This is not the way to resolve bilateral problems between long-standing friends.”

She presented a five-point “pragmatic, focused, effective response” to the problem of repatriates to include:

- Ensuring the safety and welfare of the repatriates. The National Disaster Coordinating Council shall put up coordination centers as necessary to attain this objective.
- Heightened alert among the military and police forces in areas where potential problems on law and order may arise. The Secretary of the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) shall be responsible for the strategy and deployment options.
- Adoption of a policy of accommodation in local government units (LGU) to ease geographical congestion. The DILG shall draw up a plan and involved LGUs shall receive full support.
- Deployment of doctors and medical workers to care for Filipinos in detention centers. The departments of Foreign Affairs (DFA) and Health will work closely to implement this. Diplomatic initiatives will also be made to attain this end.
- Speedy documentation processes for the repatriates. The DFA and the Department of Labor and Employment must have a clear picture of who and where the undocumented Filipinos are and how they can be legitimized under a rolling comprehensive plan.

GMA, IMF officials discuss gov’t gains

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today received International Monetary Fund (IMF) resident representative Sean Nolan who ended an almost four-year assignment in the country.

Nolan, accompanied by IMF official Vikram Haksar, called on the President at the Rizal Room of Malacañang.

Nolan is due to proceed to the IMF office in Washington before taking up another mission.

Nolan will be assigned as IMF resident representative to Australia and New Zealand.

In their brief conversation, Nolan noted the strong fiscal management undertaken by the administration as well as the reforms being instituted in the bureaucracy, especially in the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).

Nolan likewise cited the President’s State of the Nation Address (SONA), where she stressed the need to build a strong republic.

The President, on the other hand, briefed Nolan and Haksar on continuing efforts of her administration to raise revenues in order to finance the wide range of social and developmental programs and projects.

Finance Undersecretary Juanita Amatong was also present during Nolan’s farewell call.

GMA issues directives to reduce cost of transport, cargo-handling in ports

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has issued a series of directives that would reduce the cost of transport and cargo handling in Mindanao ports.

The directives, issued during 11th Mindanao Business Conference held at the Capitol Convention Center in Surigao City last Friday, are designed not only to speed up the development of Mindanao but also to make doing business in the island more competitive.

First, the President said, she has directed the Philippine Ports Authority (PPA) to adopt a universal rate in collecting government shares from the revenues of cargo handlers.

“Starting next month, I am pegging the rate at 10 percent for the domestic ports and 20 percent for international ports. This is my initial move to mitigate the cost of cargo handling, especially in Davao and Zamboanga,” the President said.

The second move the President announced was the freezing of the 35-percent increase in port and wharfage fees ordered implemented by the previous administration for the next five years.

She said that non-implementation of the 35 percent increase in port and wharfage fees, which are being charged by the PPA, would mean a loss of P200 million a year in government revenues.

The President said she was making the gamble because she believes there will be an increase in logistic efficiency and movement of goods that would be enough to offset the expected loss of P200 million.

“I am taking this gamble to set the stage for Mindanao's growth once again,” the President said.

The President also asked cargo-handling operators to reciprocate the government's sacrifice and said she was happy to learn that Cebu and Cagayan de Oro cargo-handling operators voluntarily offered to freeze their arrastre and stevedoring fees for 24 months.

The cargo handling operators also committed to undertake “aggressive investments” in modernizing their port facilities, the President said.

The President at the same time directed the Maritime Industry Authority (Marina) to work closely with the PPA and the private sector to help unbundle all the charges related to the cargo-handling component in the freight charges.

The President also directed the Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza to convene the National Port Advisory Council of the PPA to review the current tariff setting system and formulate a more transparent cost-based and consumer-oriented methodology in defining the rate of cargo-handling services, especially fees charged on port terminal operations.

She asked the participants to the conference, composed of the country's top businessmen, to unite behind her administration in the building of a strong Republic.

"Once again, let us work together. Transform this most successful conference into a most successful effort to make this part of the Republic not just a land of promise but a land of fulfillment," the President said.

GDP record boosts gov't growth projections for 2002

The economy's better-than-expected performance in the second quarter this year has boosted government confidence of meeting its growth forecast of 4.0 to 4.5 percent for the gross domestic product (GDP) and 4.5 to 5.0 percent for the gross national product (GNP) for this year.

Socio-Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas said that given the growth rates of 4.5 percent in real GDP and 5.2 percent in real GNP, respectively, the economy is on track to meet whole year growth projections.

Canlas said the country's 4.5-percent GDP from April to June led the growth performance so far in the Asean region.

In Asia, the Philippines ranked third after China's 8.0 percent and South Korea's 6.3 percent.

Coming after the Philippines were Taiwan at 4.0 percent; Singapore, 3.9 percent; Malaysia, 3.8 percent; Indonesia, 3.5 percent; and Hong Kong's preliminary second quarter growth of 0.8 percent.

The GNP, on the other hand, strengthened with an increase in the country's net income factor from abroad that posted a 16-percent growth.

This was traced to the rising compensation income of overseas Filipino workers at 3.2 percent and lower interest expense on the country's foreign debt.

The GDP is the sum total of the goods and services produced in the country in a given period. The GNP is GDP plus income from abroad.

In the first half of the year, the average growth rates are 4.1 percent for real GDP and 4.7 percent for real GNP.

Canlas noted that the average per capita income of Filipinos rose at 3.0 percent in the second quarter.

He said personal consumption surged by 3.8 percent, as the downtrend in inflation and interest rates drove up demand for consumer durables and food.

The country's growth, he said, was further given a boost by healthier demand in the domestic and foreign markets.

The broad-based nature of the expansion is encouraging, Canlas said.

"Looking at aggregate supply, although agriculture slowed down in the second quarter, industry recovered strongly," he said. Services, meanwhile, continued to gain strength.

On the aggregate-demand side, the decline in investments slowed down in the second quarter, suggesting a bottoming out, he added.

The decline in investments moderated at 3.3 percent, as fixed investments finally registered a positive growth of 4.0 percent, after five consecutive quarters of decline.

The moderation arose from the growth of construction at 2.1 percent and investments in breeding stocks at 3.8 percent. However, investments in durable equipment continued dropping at -2.1 percent.

With the help of Congress, which committed to enact key economic reform bills into laws, such as the Transmission Corporation (Transco) franchise and the Special Purpose Asset Vehicle (SPAV), “investments may hit positive territory in the second half of the year,” Canlas said.

“Economic performance as of the second semester indicates that the economic program of the administration is working. The deficit-reduction program will thus continue,” he added.

The output-growth figures that the National Statistical Coordination Board just released raised the likelihood that the target deficit-to-GDP ratio of 3.3 percent in 2002 would be realized, Canlas said.

This fiscal stance and a monetary policy rule based on maintaining price stability, plus the commitment to long-term structural reforms, would promote private sector-led growth vital to the economy’s continuing expansion, he stressed.

GMA sending mission to Malaysia tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is sending a mission to Kuala Lumpur tomorrow to thresh out the details with Malaysian authorities on how best to resolve the issue of illegal Filipinos in Malaysia.

The President, who issued the announcement during the 2002 Ramon Magsaysay Award ceremonies at the Cultural Center of the Philippines last night, also called on everyone to extend whatever assistance they could give to ease the plight of repatriates in Southern Philippines.

“Now is the time for our nation to come together...I call upon each and every one to extend whatever assistance they could give,” the President said.

She noted that “Our Muslim brothers and sisters need food, medicine, clothing and shelter— our countrymen, our countrywomen who have less in life, our countrymen and countrywomen whom our beloved President Magsaysay loved so much.”

The President made special mention of Dr. Cynthia Maung of Burma, who couldn’t come to the ceremonies to receive her award. Maung was responsible for providing humane and fearless response to the urgent medical needs of thousands of refugees and displaced persons along the Thailand-Burma border.

“She’s important not only for her message she’d given us but for the unwavering compassion she has shown in ministering to the thousands of refugees,” the President said. Maung’s taped response to the award was played back during the ceremonies.

In stressing the importance of the Magsaysay Award, the President said she was able to come up with the idea of hybrid rice as a means of agricultural modernization.

Among those present during the rites were former President Corazon Aquino, Sen. Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., members of the Magsaysay family, and members of the diplomatic community and the judiciary.

The President also noted that the awards highlighted Magsaysay’s legacy and spirit.

“We mark the 95th birthday of a great Filipino and a great Asian, President Ramon Magsaysay, to celebrate the achievement of Asia’s finest citizens,” she said.

In a tribute to President Magsaysay, the President recalled that his father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, said Magsaysay was responsible for crushing the communist rebellion and arousing in the masses the ideals of a great leader.

In the awarding rites, the President presented the medallions and the award certificate to this year's laureates: Chief Justice Hilario Davide, Jr., (Philippines) for Government Service; Dr. Ruth Pfau, (Pakistan) for Public Service; Dr. Cynthia Maung (Burma) for Community Leadership; Bharat Koirala (Nepal) for Journalism, Literature and Creative Communications; Venerable Pamnyun Snim (Korea) for Peace and International Understanding; and Sandeep Pandey (India) for Emergent Leadership.

Established in 1957, the Ramon Magsaysay Award honors the memory and leadership example of the third Philippine president. The award is given yearly individuals or organizations in Asia who manifest the same sense of selfless service that ruled the life of the late president.

Since 1958, when the first awards were given, 229 individuals and organizations, regardless of race, creed, sex or nationality, have received the award.

Ramon Magsaysay Award Foundation president Carmencita Abella says "This year's six Magsaysay awardees, much like their peers before them, personify selfless leadership that is making a lasting difference towards making Asia a better place to live in."

Gov't seeks to build 56,759 homes in Mindanao

The administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is planning to put up at least 56,759 shelter security units aggregately worth P4.907 billion until 2004 as part of its blueprint for housing projects in Mindanao.

Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor said the National Housing Authority (NHA) would provide the units.

The NHA had been given a quota of 21,121 units; the National Home Mortgage Finance Corp., 14,271 units; and the Pag-IBIG Fund, 21,367 units.

In a speech at the 11th Mindanao Business Conference (Minbizcon) in Surigao City last Friday, Defensor said support for the government's housing programs has also been initiated by the Government Service Insurance System and the Social Security System.

Similar support would also come from the cooperative housing facility opened by the Land Bank of the Philippines, joint venture projects with local government units (LGU), and other private initiatives in which the government would have an equity, he said.

"When we met our 2001 SONA (State of the Nation Address) targets, our response was not to rejoice, nor retain the target, but to raise higher and higher the bar of performance," he added.

He expressed confidence that the targets could be surpassed under the watch of President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Defensor pointed out that housing was "the single most daunting challenge" to the government.

"We need to build houses not just for our people's sake, so they can realize the Filipino dream of owning a house, but for our economy's sake, because housing can pump-prime our economy and bring it out of the woods," he said.

To achieve its mission and spur housing development across the land, Defensor said the government has put in place policies and programs to distribute more shelter rights, produce more housing units, process housing permits fast, make the interest on housing loans low, and ensure that housing funds are enough.

Among the areas covered by the housing program in Mindanao are lots in Mauswagon, Kisolon, Sumilao and parts of Central Mindanao University (CMU) campus in Bukidnon; Isla Delta, parts of Camp Evangelista, Upper Mancahan in Cagayan de Oro City; and Banana Village in Lanao del Norte.

In Davao City, covered are the Department of Transportation and Communications property in Malvar, parts of the old Philippine Constabulary barracks, Quimpo-Blvd. site; the 20-hectare Daticor estate in Matiao, Mati, Davao Oriental; and a proposed LGU housing site of 10 hectares in Digos City.

In General Santos, the housing program has expanded to the 5.3- hectare portion of Camp Lira, and two sites proposed by the city government; Banisil Ranch in Tambler; and the undisputed portions of a ranch in Apopong.

Defensor said the Ozamis City government had applied for the issuance of a proclamation that would cover a 17-hectare proposed housing site in Malaubang.

He said the Balindog, Kidapawan property of the Department of Agriculture was also under process while a 27-hectare lot in Lianga is undergoing evaluation.

Ople debunks ‘Policy of Fear’

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople has stressed that the country’s foreign policy is not based on fear, as alleged in some congressional quarters, but on the calm and intelligent appreciation of the national interest and a due regard for the comity of nations as ordained by the Constitution.

The Secretary addressed fears expressed by some senators, particularly his successor as chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, Senator Manuel Villar, that Philippine foreign policy is beset by “fear of other countries.”

Senator Villar was apparently referring to the administration’s handling of the mass deportation of illegal Filipino migrants from Sabah in Malaysia.

“The President and her department of foreign affairs should be credited for decisive action, which has already brought notable improvements in the conditions of the Filipino workers in Sabah,” Ople said.

“This is after all our first and highest priority, the protection of Filipino nationals. The Malaysian government has already acceded to President Macapagal-Arroyo’s request for a moratorium on the arrest of illegal Filipino workers pending a joint review of the deportation procedures,” he said.

“The President’s direct intervention has tapped a sympathetic vein at the highest levels in Malaysia due to the friendship between the two countries who are also close partners in the Association of Southeast Asia Nations (ASEAN). The moratorium granted by Prime Minister Mohamad Mahathir is a privilege granted only to the Filipino workers in Malaysia,” he added.

“This policy is obviously bearing fruit,” Ople noted.

“We do not espouse a gung-ho foreign policy that appeases the rabble in the streets but puts at risk the safety and welfare of the entire nation,” he stressed. “Political bravado cannot substitute for an intelligent and workable foreign policy.”

Ople said the DFA has filed a diplomatic protest which is still under consideration by the Malaysian Cabinet.

He said with the concurrence of Prime Minister Mahathir, a team of doctors and health workers is being sent tomorrow to Kota Kinabalu, Sabah’s capital, to help minister to the needs of the Filipino workers in Sabah.

The Philippine government is also sending an inter-agency team led by Presidential Assistant Nur Jaafar to confer with their Malaysian counterparts on how to improve the deportation process.

Ople stressed that conditions for the returning workers in the reception centers in Bongao, Tawi-Tawi, have markedly improved with the local governments pitching in with all possible assistance. "Barangay captains even cook for the deportees. This is an inspiring sight," he said.

Referring to Villar's claim that Malacañang had cautioned him against offending Japan, in connection with his public advocacy for compensation to Filipino comfort women in World War II, Ople pointed out this happened under a previous administration.

He said the Philippine government has supported this advocacy and has campaigned for it through diplomatic channels, even after Japanese courts had ruled against the claim.

Ople pointed out that the issue of comfort women was only one aspect of the broad Philippine-Japanese bilateral relationship and it cannot outrank issues relating to investments which create jobs, official development assistance, trade and security.

The foreign affairs secretary said the Philippine-Malaysian bilateral relationship overall has been resilient and strong.

Malaysia, as a ranking member of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC), and its Committee of Eight, has been championing Philippine sovereignty and territorial integrity in Medano and has lent its good offices to forge a ceasefire agreement between the Philippine government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

This is an important contribution to peace and order in the South.

Malaysia has also repatriated the MNLF chieftain, Nur Misuari, to the Philippines to answer charges of a renewed rebellion in court.

But the foreign secretary said the government was prepared to listen to congressional criticism and would welcome constructive views on how to resolve foreign policy concerns.

"There is no antagonism between us and the leaders of Congress. Misunderstandings can occur and should be corrected," he said.

Ople said that for this purpose, the President has invited all the members of the Senate and House committees on foreign affairs to a comprehensive briefing on foreign policy issues next Thursday morning at Malacañang.

He said he and Labor Secretary Patricia Santo Tomas have been asked to conduct the briefing for the congressional leaders.

In the case of calls by some NGOs for the recall of Philippine Ambassador Jose "Chito" Brillantes to Kuala Lumpur because of alleged negligence, Ople said this was an ill-founded charge.

"I have just been to Kuala Lumpur and have seen for myself the assiduity and diligence with which Ambassador Brillantes is attending to the needs of our Filipino workers," he said.

Brillantes has been reassigned as an Undersecretary in the home office in charge of international migrant affairs.

He is engaged in making farewell calls on Malaysian high officials and will assume his new duties toward the end of September.

Ensure safe repatriation of Filipinos from Malaysia, GMA tells 9-man team

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed the nine-member mission to Malaysia to look into the ground conditions of the thousands of Filipino repatriates who are currently being held in various holding centers in Sabah.

The President called the nine-member team led by former Tawi-Tawi Rep. Nur Jaafar to meeting this morning in Malacañang shortly before she left for an inspection visit to the National Food Authority (NFA) site in Cabanatuan City.

In their meeting, the President tasked the Jaafar-led mission to submit recommendations on what further measures should be taken in order to ensure the safety and welfare of the Filipino repatriates.

Jaafar's team is slated to leave at 3:20 p.m. today on board a Malaysian Airlines flight en route to Kota Kinabalu.

Aside from Jaafar, among those who attended the meeting were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman and the members of the Malaysia-bound mission namely Labor Undersecretary Lucy Lazo, DFA Undersecretary Arturo Brion, Health Undersecretary Mila Fernandez, Undersecretary Abraham Purugganan of the Office of the Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns, Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) Director Farisya Taradji, Col. Francisco Gudane of the Department of National Defense (DND), Atty. Abdel Gani Papua of the Office of Muslim Affairs (OMA), and Rey Milan of the Office of Presidential Adviser on Regional Development.

The team was constituted upon orders of the President with specific mission to go to Kota Kinabalu, Sandakan, and, if necessary, to Tawau which is located in the southern portion of Sabah.

The President said another team from the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) has already been dispatched for the purpose of documenting the remaining Filipinos in Sabah.

In a briefing with reporters, Jaafar said the focus of the team in going to Malaysia is to find out the actual conditions of the Filipino repatriates being confined at the various holding centers in Sabah.

Jaafar said there are three holding centers in Karamunting near Kota Kinabalu, Sandakan and in Tawau.

“We will appeal to the authorities there to be lenient to allow us a breathing spell to do our diplomatic channeling to negotiate for a better procedure in transporting our Filipino citizens from that area who are due to be deported,” Jaafar said.

If necessary, Jaafar said, they will recommend the establishment of at least three strategic departure areas back to the Philippines to handle Filipino deportees.

Jaafar said his team will also ask the Malaysian authorities in Sabah to allow Filipino social workers to have access to the holding centers and if possible, to negotiate for ample time to process those who intend to work in Sabah or Malaysia.

Meanwhile, Press Secretary Igancio Bunye stressed that the deportation of Filipinos from Malaysia and the Sabah claim are two separate issues that should not be discussed together.

“If we will claim Sabah based on the deportation issue, we might be doing so for the wrong reason. We might be acting out of emotion,” Bunye said.

The press secretary said the President will meet this week with the leaders of both houses of Congress in order to get a consensus on how to resolve the problem.

GMA asks NFA to ensure availability of P16 per kilo rice in market for poor

SAN ISIDRO, Nueva Ecija—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the National Food Authority (NFA) to ensure that regular-milled rice at P16 per kilo will be readily available for the poor in the market.

In her remarks at the 106th anniversary of the “Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija,” the President said that everyday she has been nagging NFA Administrator Anthony Abad to see to it that the P16 per kilo regular-milled rice can be bought by ordinary people in the market.

She said she was glad to find out that the regular-milled rice at P16 per kilo is available in the markets of Cabanatuan City and not just at the NFA warehouse where she visited.

“Para sa mga mahihirap, dapat parating my P16 na regular-milled rice (The P16 per kilo regular-milled rice should always be available to the poor),” the President said.

“Ang bigas ng mayayaman, problema na iyon ng mayayaman. Ang bigas ng mahihirap, lahat ng problema ng mahihirap, dapat problema ng pamahalaan (Rice for the rich is a problem of the rich, but rice for the poor, and all the problems of the poor, should be a problem of the state),” the President said.

The President said that Nueva Ecija is playing a key role in rice production and in agricultural modernization in general, adding that the province has the distinction of being the country’s rice granary.

She said that there should be no reason why cheap rice should not be available in Nueva Ecija.

According to the President, the NFA warehouse in Cabanatuan City has ample stock of unmilled rice. “Kaya dapat walang dahilan na tataas ang prresyo ng bigas sa Nueva Ecija (So, there should be no reason why the price of rice in Nueva Ecija should go up),” the President said.

GMA appeals for help from public for repatriation of Filipinos from Malaysia

SAN ISIDRO, Nueva Ecija—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today appealed to the public to help the government in meeting the needs of the thousands of illegal Filipino workers and their families who were deported by Malaysia.

In her remarks at the 106th anniversary of the “Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija,” the President said that the government alone could not possibly solve of the problem of these deportees, adding that what is happening is “a great tragedy.”

“Bago ito lumala at magdulot ng malagim pang situwasyon, pagtulongan natin itong harapan at wakasan (Before the situation worsens, I ask for your support in addressing this problem),” the President said.

The President said that donations intended for the deportees could be coursed through the local chapters of the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC) or through private groups or organizations.

She said that in her visit to Bongao, Tawi-Tawi last week, she had seen for herself the anguish and the difficulties encountered by the thousands of deportees.

The President said that she was thankful that Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad had agreed to her request for a moratorium of the deportation after their telephone conversation during the weekend.

She also thanked all the private firms that have pledged to help in ensuring a safe and orderly movement of people from Sabah to Mindanao.

The President particularly cited the WGA shipping company for its willingness to send commercial vessels as well as the Cebu Pacific for its willingness to send its airplanes to help in the transport of the deportees to Mindanao.

According to the President, Mead Johnson has also agreed to donate milk for the deportees and the Metrobank was donating P2 million for the repatriation program of the government.

GMA focuses on economic build up, S.M.E. development, agricultural growth

SAN ISIDRO, Nueva Ecija — The government will continue to focus on developing small and medium enterprises (SME) and boosting agricultural growth to raise domestic demand in the wake of a weakening American export market.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo stressed this today as she noted the role of SME’s in effecting a significant rebound in neighboring Thailand’s economy.

In a speech here where she attended rites marking the “Unang Sigaw ng (First Cry of) Nueva Ecija” in commemoration of the province’s participation in the 1896 revolution against Spain, the President took pride in the country’s latest economic gains, a product of her administration’s effective social, economic and fiscal policies.

The President hinted that these gains have prodded her to give more time to maintain, if not further strengthen, the economy.

“Ako ay babalik sa ekonomiya (I will return to the economy),” she said, after lauding the glaring accomplishments of the police, military and other law enforcement agencies in the fight against crimes nationwide.

“Magbabalik tayo sa (We will return to the) road map,” she added, referring to the world economic situation that might not attain positive changes in the coming years.

She noted that the economy of the United States, the world’s top importer, has not yet reached tip-top conditions.

“Kaya hindi pa rin tayo makakaasa sa kanya (We still cannot rely on America)” in terms of exports, she stressed, in spite of recent statistics that showed that the country’s export receipts have been increasing.

“Ngayong tumataas ang export, huwag tayong maging kampante (Even if export figures are rising, let us not be complacent),” she said.

The President said that instead of dwelling too much on exports, the country would go back to the SMEs, an economic sector that could bring about domestic demand and one that could efficiently use capital.

“Iyan ang bibigyan natin ng pansin sa mga susunod na panahon. Sila ang magiging susi ng ating economic recovery (We will give the SMEs due attention. They will provide the key to our economic recovery),” she said.

The President said the government would urge banks to avoid providing credit for less-productive sectors like those on luxurious property and manufacturing firms that still maintained a huge excess capacity. Instead, banks should serve the needs of SMEs.

She further called for lower interest rates for credit given to SMEs.

She noted that this was the very strategy that Thailand Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra hoped to implement to revive his country’s waning economy. Thaksin today presented this strategy to the Thai parliament.

Among Thaksin’s economic plans were grants to villages, a deferral of farm debt repayments and the creation of a national asset management agency to take over bad bank debts.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said Thaksin’s economic formula could also work well in the Philippines.

She said the country’s economic managers have been working on and implementing long-term structural financial and economic policies along these lines, while promoting private sector-led growth.

The same strategy is being done worldwide as a safety net against the serious downtrend of modern living in the US, she added.

“Ang domestic demand sa Asya ay buwang-bibig ngayon sa lahat. Ang mga Asian ay tumatayo ngayon sa sariling sikap at iyon ay kailangan nating gawin (Domestic demand in Asia is being talked about. Asians are standing up to the worldwide economic challenges on their own. We have to also do things ourselves),” she stressed.

The President said the government and the people have shown what could be done to keep the economy on its feet and have made it stronger in the past.

Gov’t raising budget for housing to P27.5 B

To address the housing problem in the country, the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is planning to raise public shelter budget from P20 billion this year to P27.5 billion next year.

This was revealed last week by Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Secretary Michael Defensor in a speech at the 11th Mindanao Business Conference in Surigao City.

Defensor said the government will accelerate the provision of security of tenure for the informal sector by granting to them the lands they are occupying through the issuance of Presidential Proclamations.

According to the HUDCC secretary, the government has already opened a new lending window for end-user financing to cater to the non-formal sector that includes the P500-million lending facility that Land Bank of the Philippines has opened for cooperatives.

“We have made housing loans available and affordable to low-salaried employees by lowering interest rate, providing developmental financing to developers, and by pursuing institutional housing projects for soldiers, overseas Filipino workers, teachers and the like,” he said.

Defensor pointed out that the Pag-IBIG Fund is studying ways on how to make loans as cheap as those prevailing in the market, adding that Pag-IBIG had initially brought down to 12 percent the interest on loans below P500,000 and to 14 percent for loans above that amount.

He added that the Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) no longer limit borrowers to set home models and has opened its housing loan windows for any kind of housing.

At the same time, Defensor said both the GSIS and the Social Security System (SSS) shall work with local government units interested in housing ventures.

Last Friday, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary and National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Director-General Dante B. Canlas said the administration has proposed to Congress an indexation of excise taxes on cigarettes and liquor to raise revenues that will support the housing program of the government.

He said the proposed plan to raise additional budgetary resources would help subsidize down payments by low-income households and expansion of rent-to-own schemes under socialized housing.

Meanwhile, reforms are under way to address the issue on providing homes to poor Filipinos who according to the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC), are now estimated at 3.3 million in urban areas.

These are: the land-titling process which aims to eliminate the proliferation of fake land titles; and coordination with the local government units (LGUs) to reduce the number of signatures required by LGUs for housing and urban development projects.

Moreover, on housing finance, the government is working jointly to strengthen the housing mortgage market via the Securitization Bill which was discussed recently at the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meeting.

He likewise said the establishment of the proposed Department of Housing is a step to sustain programs of the government.

“The success of the housing program depends on the government, both at the national and local levels, forging new and strong partnerships with business and communities,” Canlas reiterated.

However, Canlas expressed the hope that the policies laid down by the government to provide homes for the poor would elicit the right kind of response from the private sector, such as the banks, property developer, and real estate dealers, to supply the needed housing units of varying hierarchy.

Merit, not politics, will be GMA’s yardstick in choosing new AFP Chief, says Palace

Malacañang today assured the public that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would choose the next Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) based on merit and not for “political reasons”.

“The President will make known her choice on September 4 and all she said is that she will choose the AFP Chief of Staff based on merit and this has nothing to do whatsoever with any alleged relationship with any politician,” Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said in his regular press briefing this afternoon.

Bunye was reacting to reports that the President is inclined to appoint Lt. Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Philippine Air Force chief, as AFP chief, vice Gen. Roy Cimatu, whose retirement has been extended to September 10.

Bunye stressed that President Macapagal-Arroyo will just follow her own criteria in choosing the next AFP Chief of Staff.

When asked if the President will give much weight on the seniority aspect for choosing new AFP top leader, Bunye advised the media to just wait for the President's announcement on the matter and stop making speculations on the issue.

"We don't want to preempt the President. Anyway, it's a few days from now. Let's just wait for the President to make her announcement on September 4," Bunye added.

GMA calls for purge of cops, military men in drug rings

SAN ISIDRO, Nueva Ecija — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today underscored the need to weed out active and retired members of the military and police found involved in illegal drug trafficking.

In a speech during the 106th anniversary of the "Unang Sigaw ng Nueva Ecija" (First Cry of Nueva Ecija) at the JF Sports Complex here, the Chief Executive called on Nueva Ecija Governor Tomas Joson to help track down drug syndicates.

"Iyong mga sindikato ng droga, sila rin halos ang sindikato ng ibang mga karumal-dumal na krimen. (These drug syndicates are the same syndicates that commit various heinous crimes), the President said.

She also lauded Joson for the improved peace and order condition in Nueva Ecija. Joson also serves as chairman of the Regional Peace and Order Council (RPOC) in Central Luzon.

She hoped that the RPOC in Central Luzon (Region III), through the stewardship of Joson would help in the government's drive to eliminate drug syndicates and other criminal rings.

In her recent meeting with top officials of the Dangerous Drugs Board (DDB) and the Philippine Drugs Enforcement Agency (PDEA) at Malacanang, the President launched a "sustained and high-intensity campaign" against illegal drugs in the country as part of her administration's no-letup drive against all forms of criminality and terrorism.

The President said the anti-drug campaign should be given stress following the series of successful hits against kidnap and other criminal gangs.

In a message Saturday (Aug. 31) before law enforcers who attended the two-day PDEA sponsored intelligence workshop in Camp Crame, the President ordered the agency to make sure that a specific unit is assigned to neutralize each identified transnational and local illegal drug ring operating in the country.

The President said these special units should ably pinpoint, monitor the activities of and eliminate the drug syndicates.

She cited PDEA Director General Undersecretary Anselmo Avenido's report that said 11 transnational and 215 local drug groups have been identified to be actively operating in the country.

The report noted that of the 215 local drug groups, 116 are in Luzon, 48 in the Visayas and 15 in Mindanao.

Calls for Camacho's ouster unwarranted – Palace

Malacañang today said that calls for the resignation of Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho are "unwarranted" since the secretary has been doing his job in addressing the country's economic problems.

"From our point of view, Secretary Camacho has done a good job," Press Secretary and Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye "Toting" said in his regular press briefing this afternoon.

Bunye said that if the reason for the call of Camacho's ouster is his alleged failure to control the fiscal deficit, this was not actually a problem.

He said the problem only arises when one considers the budget deficit in absolute amount, adding that it is true that the budget deficit has breached the P130-billion ceiling for the year.

But when you talk about the percentage of the deficit to the gross domestic product (GDP), then the government is still on target, Bunye said.

Earlier, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas said that the target deficit-to-GDP ratio of 3.3 percent will be realized for this year.

"Economic performance as of the second semester indicates that the economic program of the administration is working. The deficit reduction program will thus continue," Canlas said.

Canlas reported an average growth rate of 4.1 percent for the real GDP and 4.7 percent for the real gross national product (GNP) for the first half of the year.

GDP refers to the value of goods and services produced for a given period while the GNP refers to the GDP plus the country's earnings from abroad.

GMA lauds police for arrest of 3 kidnap suspects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Philippine National Police for the arrest of three suspected kidnapers who earlier engaged the policemen in a shootout in Intramuros, Manila.

The President motored to the Western Police District (WPD) headquarters on United Nations Avenue immediately upon arrival from a visit in Cabanatuan City for the presentation of the suspects to media.

The arrested suspects were identified as Michael Bautista, Ramil Safra and Boyet Ramos.

A fourth suspect was wounded but in stable condition at the Ospital ng Maynila while a fifth died during the actual gun battle with Manila policemen.

In a brief statement, the President said the arrest of the suspects proves that the police are indeed committed to curbing criminality in the country.

WPD reports showed that a mobile patrol car spotted the suspects' van and tailed it up to Anda Circle in Intramuros.

Sensing that they were being followed, the suspects, with kidnap victim Richard de la Cruz, opened fire at the lawmen.

The victim, a bank employee, was rescued unharmed after the firefight.

De la Cruz said the suspects, who posed as policemen, accosted him in front of the Pasay City Post Office at noon and divested him of cash and valuables.

During the President's visit at the WPD, Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. also presented to the President Victor Mabaldo, 27, a suspect in the fatal ambush of former Manila Third District Councilor Chika Go.

The former Manila city councilor was killed in Binondo three weeks ago.

According to the police report, Mabaldo is a hired killer from Maasin City, Southern Leyte.

The police confiscated from the suspect two firearms with silencers when the latter was arrested Sunday night in Sta. Cruz, Manila.

Aside from Ebdane, those who joined the President at the WPD headquarters were Manila Mayor Joselito Atienza, PNP-National Capital Region Command chief Director Reynaldo Velasco and WPD chief Senior Supt. Pedro Bulaong.

GMA calls on businessmen to help gov't perk up economy, build strong republic

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed that one of the country's major challenges this year "is to continue to build up the economic momentum we achieved in 2001."

In the President's taped statement before the 2002 Mid-Year Economic Briefing at the Dusit Hotel, she invited businessmen "to work with me and my team" to build a strong Republic.

She said the global challenge "remains daunting but in the Philippines we have the environment, the capacity and the political will to perform."

"The transformation of our economy will continue and we will remain focused on the implementation of the Philippine Economic Plan. We are succeeding in pushing reform and we will continue to take steps that provide macro economic growth and stability," she said.

She said the country's bright economic prospects were brought about by "the effective implementation of the Philippine Economic Plan."

"Our program has significantly improved our macro economic environment in the last 20 months. Macro economic stability is indispensable to a strong Republic," she noted.

She took pride in the country's comfortable pace of economic growth accompanied by a generally stable business environment that saw inflation and interest rates at historic lows and relative stability in foreign exchange.

The President said her administration remained committed to fiscal discipline.

"We are embarking on revenue enhancing measures both in the short and long term for the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureau of Customs," she said.

She disclosed the implementation of changes through specific institutional reforms and the prosecution of erring individuals, while enforcing prudent expenditure management "as we work towards our committed deficit ceiling of 3.3 percent" of the gross domestic product (GDP) for 2002.

The President reiterated her administration's economic policies and strategies for the second half of this year.

These included:

- An economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century hinged on macro-economic stability and structural reforms;
- Modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity.
- A social bias towards the disadvantaged to ensure that economic growth would bring prosperity to the greatest number; and

- An unwavering commitment to raise the moral standards of government and society that would combine reform initiatives in peace and order and good governance.

The government is likewise focused on addressing investment and productivity concerns such as transparency, peace and order and power costs to create and improve job opportunities, the President noted.

Congress, she said, has been working on passing critical legislation to speed up the pace of much needed reform.

“These are expected to have a direct and positive impact on the level of new foreign direct investment and the jobs that this investment creates,” she said.

She also stressed the government’s aggressive thrust on the issue of peace and order. “

“We have been successful in targeting the kidnap-for-ransom syndicates, the drug lords and smugglers and now we are working on the remaining Abu Sayyaf terrorists,” she said.

The government has been on track in lowering the cost of doing business in the country. She cited cuts in the price of electricity. “And we will continue to do so,” she added.

The Chief Executive also disclosed a price incentive scheme for large industrial users.

“We will continue to carry out macro economic reforms to deal with the long term horizon,” including the passage of the Special Purpose Asset Vehicle Act and the Securitization Act that would facilitate the private sector asset management initiative and enhance the effectiveness of the banking system to further contribute to economic growth, she pointed out.

GMA confers gold medallion on 12 top teachers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has conferred gold medallions of excellence on the 12 winners of this year's Metrobank Foundation Search for Outstanding Teachers.

The Chief Executive, assisted by Metrobank Foundation chairman George Ty, Metrobank Foundation president Placido Mapa, Jr. and Commission on Higher Education Chairperson Ester Garcia, presented the awards to the 12 teachers in ceremonies held last night at Malacañang's Heroes Hall.

The 12 awardees, who were chosen from a field of 222 teachers nominated by public and private schools all over the country, were the following:

- Elementary level: Gloria G. Tutica of the President Manuel A. Roxas Memorial School in Roxas City; Norma B. Ubaldo of the Batangas City East Elementary School in Batangas City; Agapita A. Nery of the Tanauan South Central School in Tanauan City; Ruth A. Larracas of the Isabelo de los Reyes Elementary School in Manila; Victoria M. Francisco of the Zamboanga East Central School in Zamboanga City.
- High School level: Rosanni L. Palma of the Sorsogon National High School in Sorsogon City; Luzminda B. Chan of the Aloran Trade School in Aloran, Misamis Occidental; Maria Jesusa C. Despojo of the Dumaguete City High School in Dumaguete City; and Erlinda D.G. Antaran of the Makati Science High School in Makati City.
- College level: Dr. Leoncio P. Deriada of the University of the Philippines in the Visayas in Miagao, Iloilo; Dr. T. Valentino S. Sitoy, Jr. of the Central Visayas Polytechnic College in Dumaguete City; and Dr. Lita M. Colting of the Benguet State University in La Trinidad, Benguet.

Metrobank Foundation said the winners were chosen for their outstanding contributions to the teaching profession through personal integrity and character, instructional competence, and professional and community involvement.

It further said that the formal awarding ceremonies for the 12 Outstanding Teachers will be held on September 6, 2002 at the Metrobank Plaza, which serve as the highlight of Metrobank's 40th anniversary celebration.

During the formal awarding rites, the outstanding teachers will each receive a trophy and a cash prize of P150,000. Of the total cash prize, P125,000 will go to the awardee while the P25,000 will go to the awardee's school for its faculty development program.

GMA outlines mid-term strategic directions of administration to create impact on economy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed anew the need for the government to identify and focus on key milestone accomplishments that would create an impact on the economy in the next one and a half years.

“With peace and order moving, it is now time to create economic impact,” the President pointed out during this morning’s Cabinet Meeting in Malacañang where she outlined the mid-term strategic directions of her administration.

The President said that the roadmap that her administration will follow is patterned after that of Thai Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra’s “managed asset reflation” that is based on domestic consumption.

The “managed asset reflation,” the President said, should be accompanied by prudent monetary policy, a ban on short-term foreign currency loans, which were the source of trouble during the Asian financial crash, a gradual reduction in public sector debt, and a balanced budget in three to four years.

The President said that under the new economic focus, the banking system will also be encouraged to avoid extending credit to unproductive asset sectors, such as luxury properties and industries that are already saddled with excess capacity.

Daniel Lian, a Singaporean-based economist with Morgan Stanley, has defined “managed asset reflation” as a controlled rise in domestic asset prices to encourage the shift from export dependence to new sources of domestic demand, notably capital-efficient small and medium-sized enterprises.

This is different from the “unproductive asset bubble” driven by excessive money, which characterized the economic overheating and subsequent crash in 1997 and 1998, the President said.

According to the President, Thaksin’s economic model, which is focused on domestic consumption and is veered away from multinational exporters, has helped increase Thailand’s growth from 1.8 percent to 3.9 percent this year.

Skeptics have said that the Thai model would not work, but Thaksin showed that it is possible to make an economic difference in just one year, the President said.

“The domestic demand story in Asia is now everybody’s business. It is now a key response, if not the key response to the calamitous collapse of the US economic model,” the President said.

In her speech in San Isidro, Nueva Ecija Monday, the President said that domestic demand in Asia is now being talked about. “Asians are standing up to the worldwide economic challenges on their own. We also have to do things on our own,” she said.

GMA creates ‘pool of senior operatives’ to track progress in key economic goals

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today created a “pool of senior operatives” who will be directly responsible to her and whose function is to track progress of the implementation of key economic goals that she has set for the next 18 months.

During this morning’s Cabinet Meeting in Malacañang, the President stressed that given the limited time left, Palace operatives must be deployed to “crack the whip” to compensate for bureaucratic red tape and fill in the shortfalls in the State of the Nation Address (SONA) targets.

In the same Cabinet Meeting, the President announced that for the next one and half years, the government would focus in accomplishing key economic milestones that would have an impact on the nation and the people.

These economic goals, the President said, would be accomplished using a road map based on the Thai model that focused more on domestic demand rather on export dependence.

The President has asked Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo and Avelino Cruz, chief presidential legal counsel, to delegate their day-to-day tasks to their senior deputies so that they can concentrate on coordinating the work of the “pool of senior operatives.”

Aside from Romulo and Cruz, the other Palace operatives designated by the President are Angelito Sarmiento, Luis “Chito” Lorenzo, Gabriel Claudio, Tomas Alcantara, Eduardo Ermita, Rene Diaz, and Paul Dominguez.

The President said that the Palace operatives should track the progress on the government’s action on the following areas:

- Power cost.
- Labor sector constraints.
- Land transfer constraints related to the comprehensive agrarian reform program (CARP).
- Anti-Money Laundering Law.
- Housing pump priming through the private sector involvement.

Roxas to lead ‘equity road show’ in money centers in Hong Kong and Singapore

Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II today said that he will lead an “equity road show” to generate interest among foreign investors in publicly-listed firms in the local stock exchange.

In a briefing in Malacañang after today’s Cabinet Meeting, Roxas said that the “equity road show” would be conducted in financial centers in Hong Kong and Singapore.

“During the road show, we will inform the investing community that the firms listed in the stock exchange are healthy, what their operations are and why they should be purchased as part of a bigger portfolio,” Roxas said.

According to Roxas, the image of the country’s capital markets suffered because of the Best World Resources scandal during the previous administration and the stigma of the so-called “old boys club.”

But steps and reforms have since been undertaken by the Securities and Exchange Commission under its present chairman, Lilia Bautista, and these will be part of the presentation during the road show, Roxas said.

Aside from Roxas, the equity road show delegation would be composed of Bautista, Philippine Stock Exchange officials Ernest Leung and Vivian Yuchengco and top executives of such big firms as San Miguel Corporation, Meralco, Jollibee, the SM Group, the Ayala Group that includes the Bank of the Philippine Islands, Ayala Land, Ayala Corporation and Globe Communications.

Roxas said that the executives of top Philippine corporations will present the prospects and challenges that their companies are offering to foreign investors.

“It is very important because the mood and attitudes of much of the business community is set by the daily trading and daily experience of the stock exchange. So, the vibrant and buoyant stock market will help invigorate the economy,” Roxas said.

Gov’t looking into allegations of sexual abuse of Filipino women in deportation camps

Malacañang today assured that the government is seriously but quietly looking into allegations of sexual abuse among the detained women in the deportation camps by some police operatives assigned at the Tauao Police Station in Sabah.

“The government, through the Department of Social Welfare and Development, is seriously but quietly looking into reports of sexual abuse in the deportation camps in Sabah,” Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said during an ambush interview at Malacanang this afternoon.

Bunye said the Palace has not yet received any official report on this matter from the official mission headed by former Congressman Nur Jaafar. He nevertheless asked the media to be more prudent on handling the issue in order to protect the integrity and reputation of the women in the camps.

Jaafar has been designated by the President as the government’s crisis manager on the Sabah situation.

Bunye assured the media that once Malacanang receives the official report from the group of Jaafar which is now in Sabah, the President will immediately call for a press briefing.

“We don’t have any official report yet but the President will have a press briefing on Friday once she receives the mission report from Secretary Jaafar,” Bunye said.

The nine-member Philippine team headed by Jaafar is expected to be back in Manila on Friday. The group left the country yesterday afternoon to go to Kota Kinabalu via Malaysian Airlines to visit the detention camps of Filipinos scheduled for expulsion and to recommend a better procedure for their repatriation.

Bunye also said the President personally thanked individuals and private companies who have contributed to ease the plight of the Filipino deportees from Malaysia by donating food, transportation and medical assistance.

He said the President reiterated her call for everyone to donate in cash and in kind to help the deportees. Any donations can be coursed through the National Disaster and Coordinating Council (NDCC) or DSWD.

Days of tax payment diversion over, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that the days of syndicates diverting huge amounts of tax and duty payments would finally be over.

The Chief Executive made the announcement this afternoon following the report made by Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho on “Measures to Prevent Tax/Money Diversion” in today’s Cabinet Meeting in Malacañang.

The President said the recent discoveries of tax scams involving the Land Bank and the United Coconut Planters Bank (UCPB) have strengthened the national government’s resolve “to further its efforts to improve the system of revenue collection,” particularly at the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and the Bureau of Customs (BOC).

She said that the modifications in the present collection are being implemented after an exhaustive review and successful evaluation by the task force composed of members from the Department of Finance (DOF), the Bureau of Treasury (BTr), and the BOC – in close consultation with the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), Clearing Officers Club, Inc. (COCI), Philippine Clearing House Corp. (PCHC), and Banker’s Association of the Philippines (BAP).

The President also cited Congressman Enrique Garcia of Bataan and BSP Governor Rafael Buenaventura who, she said, were also active advisers to the task force.

“The modifications which largely include the proposed changes by Congressman Garcia will be implemented by the BTr, BIR, BOC and BSP upon the approval of the Monetary Board,” the President said.

The President said she expects that these changes in the tax and duty collection procedure will “completely put to stop the payment diversions of the syndicates and their cohorts.”

The President pointed that the Bureau of Treasury, upon Congressman Garcia's recommendations, will open deposit accounts with AABs ( Authorized Agent Banks) for all BIR and BOC collections.

She also stressed that the BIR accounts in all the AABs will have the following deposit account number 888-888-888, while the BOC accounts will have 999-999-999.

"The use of the uniform account numbers will allow payors to easily verify if their deposit/payment to BIR/BOC is being credited to the correct account," the President.

The President added that check deposits to the Bureau of Treasury's accounts will be encoded, using a PCHC-prescribed transaction code which will provide the trail for proper monitoring and reconciliation between BTr, BIR/BOC, AABs and the PCHC.

She likewise said that her administration has requested the participation of the PCHC and the drawee banks to provide additional safeguards.

On the other hand, the President said the debit memo as an alternative mode of payment by the BAP shall be allowed to reduce the risk of check diversion.

"Furthermore, over-the-counter cash payments are to be limited to P10,000," she said.

The President said the government is continuing to evaluate all other modes of payment to strike a balance between the taxpayers' convenience and the national government's efficiency in revenue collection.

Specifically, she said that the administration is looking at the possibility of accepting tax and duty payments via ATMs with the BAP.

She said the Monetary Board's approval for the BTr to open deposit accounts with the AABs is expected to be provided in the next two days adding that the BIR and the BOC will be issuing the new guidelines for tax and duty payments immediately thereafter.

NDCC to help ensure orderly repatriation of Filipinos from Malaysia, Cabinet told

The National Disaster and Coordinating Council (NDCC) today told the Cabinet and President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that it would help in ensuring an orderly repatriation of Filipinos from Sabah,

In today's Cabinet Meeting in Malacanang, Defense Secretary and NDCC Chairman Angelo Reyes said that the NDCC would also facilitate the return of the repatriates to their places of origin or resettlement and provide them with temporary shelters.

Specifically, Reyes said the NDCC, which is composed of several line agencies of the national government, will assist former Tawi-Tawi Congressman and now Crisis Manager Nur Jaafar in the following two objectives:

- to process, document and provide medical services in Kota Kinabalu and Sandakan to Filipinos for repatriation in coordination with the Malaysian government; and
- to facilitate the safe transport of repatriates from Sandakan to Bongao, Tawi-Tawi and other points of disembarkation, and subsequently to their places of origin or resettlement.

Reyes reported that a total of 2,971 deportees arrived on August 26 and August 29, 2002 in Tawi-Tawi. To date, a total of 84 deportees are left in the Kasulatan Holding Center, waiting for vessels to carry them to their places of origin.

A total of 1,887 were able to return home using kumpits provided by the provincial government of Tawi-Tawi, Reyes said.

Because of a large number of undocumented Filipinos still in Malaysia and scheduled for repatriation, the operations of the NDCC may continue in the coming months.

Records of the Department of Foreign Affairs showed that there were 167,936 undocumented Filipinos in Sabah as of September 2001.

The Malaysian amnesty program was announced in March 2002 and had been extended in the 2nd quarter of this year to allow foreign nationals to voluntarily return to their countries of origin.

The amnesty program was terminated when the Malaysian Immigration Act of 2002 was enacted into law.

According to DFA, the deportation of Filipinos has been suspended by the Malaysian government following the call of the President to Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad.

In response to concerns raised on maltreatment, abuse and inhuman conditions of deportees in Sabah detention centers, the President sent a nine-man mission to Malaysia headed by Jaafar to look into these concerns and propose a more systematic and humane deportation process.

Peso slide not a sign of weakened economy, says Camacho

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho today said that the slight decline in the value of the peso vis-a-vis the US dollar is not indicative of a weakening economy but was caused by a number of reasons.

In a press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang after today's Cabinet Meeting, Camacho said one of the reasons for the slide in value of the peso is what he termed as "seasonality" since there is a bigger demand for US dollars during the months of July, August and September.

"This is usually the season for importation and preparation for the Christmas buying season," Camacho said.

These are also the months when remittances from overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) are low, Camacho said, adding that normally remittances from OFWs go up before enrolment in May or June, and again before the Christmas season.

Camacho said that the Philippine peso has also been affected by the weakening of the other regional currencies, like the Thai baht and the Japanese yen.

But Camacho said he is confident that the peso would strengthen in the next few days. "If you look at the forecast or projections of many financial institutions, especially the foreign banks, most of them are forecasting an appreciation of the peso," Camacho said.

On the new round of oil price increase, Camacho said that this would bring us back to the oil price levels in November last year.

Camacho expressed the hope that the new increase in the price of oil products would not necessarily lead to increases in other services, especially transportation fares.

He said that Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza has actually started discussions with the leaders of the transport industry to forestall any increase in transportation fares.

Economy nowhere near recession, says Camacho

The Philippines is nowhere near recession and the economy is growing faster compared to this time last year when things were already looking good for the country.

This was the assessment given by Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho during a briefing for Malacañang reporters yesterday afternoon after a Cabinet meeting presided over by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Citing the growth rates of 4.5 percent in real gross domestic product and 5.2 percent in real gross national product from April to June this year, Camacho said “this is the fastest growth for a quarter that we had since year 2000.”

Camacho also said concern over the budget deficit seems to have been blown out of proportion, adding that the government is committed to fiscal discipline and is sticking to a target that is keeping everybody on their toes.

He also said the Cabinet also made a policy decision to denominate deficit targeting as a percentage of GDP, which is practiced by many countries.

For this year for example, he said, the target is 3.3 percent deficit-to-GDP ratio.

“It is a policy objective that will allow us to achieve both economic growth and fiscal discipline at the same time, without one necessarily being sacrificed for the other,” Camacho said.

The finance secretary also said the cost of borrowings as reflected in domestic interest rates remains at historical lows.

“It is quite surprising that as we saw interest rates drop from about 15 percent maybe 15 months ago or so, when we saw it break 10 we were very happy. When we saw it break 8, we were even happier. When we saw it break 6, we were quite ecstatic. And when we saw it break 5, it was likely we were in dreamland,” Camacho said.

“And yet when the rate went up yesterday from about 4.9 percent, almost 5 percent to 5.2 percent, all of a sudden everybody is feeling a little panic about it,” he added. “It just goes to show we are not putting things into context.”

TESDA team assists Filipinos in Sabah

The Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) has sent a team to Sabah to assist Filipinos, mainly Muslim migrants who have entered Malaysia through the so-called "southern backdoor" in Mindanao.

Labor Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas earlier pushed for the training or retraining of disadvantaged people returning from Malaysia through the TESDA office in the Zamboanga Peninsula.

TESDA Director General Dante V. Liban said the TESDA team would be on-site to assist migrants avail themselves of its assessment and certification processes needed to work legally abroad.

TESDA is the main agency of the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) with the mandate and authority to train, assess and certify workers.

Liban was with the recent mission of Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople to Kuala Lumpur, which successfully met with Malaysian counterparts to thresh out issues affecting Filipinos in Malaysia.

"I'm confident we were able to craft an agreement that would be most acceptable and would bolster the friendly cooperation between the two countries," Liban said.

Earlier, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo sent a nine-man mission to Sabah headed by Presidential Adviser on Muslim Community Nur Jaafar to work for the orderly repatriation of undocumented Filipinos in Malaysia.

According to Liban, Ople's mission stimulated a positive atmosphere between the two countries amid the Malaysian government's earlier order requiring all illegal migrants to leave the country.

The Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA), meanwhile, said that Malaysia is one of the Asian countries that hosts skilled and documented overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

POEA Administrator Rosalinda D. Baldoz said that Malaysia has absorbed 3,414 documented OFWs from January to June this year.

Last year, employers in Malaysia hired or re-hired 6,228 Filipino workers, or an increase of 14.3 percent compared to the 5,450 OFWs legally deployed to that country in 2000, according to Baldoz.

GMA names Defensor as new AFP Chief

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today named Philippine Air Force chief Lt. Gen. Benjamin Defensor as the new Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

The appointment of Defensor came six days before the retirement of Gen. Roy Cimatu, whose term as AFP chief of staff has been extended by the President until September 10.

In a press briefing, Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio "Toting" Bunye said that the President announced her choice of the next AFP chief during a meeting this morning with the Bicol governors in Malacañang.

Defensor is set to retire on September 12 but Bunye explained that his term has been automatically extended by two months and four days.

Bunye added that President based her choice of Defensor on seniority after she found out that all the six-star generals, who are contenders for the top AFP post, are highly qualified.

"All of them have the same qualifications and the President went for seniority. And the most senior is Lt. Gen. Defensor," Bunye said.

Bunye also clarified that the decision of the President to appoint Defensor as the new AFP Chief of Staff has nothing to do with his relationship to former Senator Miriam Defensor-Santiago, the general's sister.

Defensor, an alumnus of the Philippine Military Academy, Class 1969, has been a consistent scholar and topnotcher in all his academic activities.

After earning his wings from the Philippine Air Force Flying School in 1971, Defensor rose to prominence by seeing action with the 205th Helicopter Wing as combat pilot during the government's counterinsurgency and anti-secessionist campaign.

In 1974, Defensor made history by earning two Gold Cross Medals (highest PAF combat award at that time) within 24 hours of continuous operations in Jolo, Sulu. To date, Defensor has 40 awards and decorations, including three Distinguished Service Stars and three Gold Crosses.

Defensor completed his general staff course at the Air Command and Staff College, Air University in Alabama, U.S.A., and had flying training courses in the United States and Europe.

He has a Master's Degree in Mass Communications from the University of the Philippines, a Master in Public and Business Management from the De la Salle University, and Air Transport Course from the Asian Institute of Management. He is at present working for his Doctorate in Management from the University of London.

Defensor is married to Margaret Soliman Defensor of Tarlac, the first woman president of the Philippine Aviation Corporation. The couple has three children, all professionals.

All Bicol governors pledge support to GMA

All six governors in the Bicol region today pledged their support to the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and vowed to stand beside her in pursuit of their aspirations for the Filipino people and the country.

"Since the air in the Philippines is full of recriminations, rancor and bickering, we in the Bicol region would like to start something that will ease the tension," Camarines Sur Gov. Luis Villafuerte, speaking for all the governors, told reporters after their meeting with the President in Malacañang.

During their meeting, the political leaders of Bicol presented to the President a Pledge of Support, urging her to continue to exercise firmness in her dealings with the affairs of the state, and to maintain her adherence to the principle of leadership by example.

The one-page statement was read by Villafuerte and was signed in front of the President by the governors — Albay Gov. Al Francis Bichara, Masbate Gov. Antonio Kho, Sorsogon Gov. Raul Lee, Camarines Norte Gov. Jesus Typoco, Jr., Catanduanes Gov. Leandro Verceles, Jr. and Villafuerte.

“We do solemnly pledge support to the Arroyo administration that exercises good governance and subscribe to the vision of a Filipino people who are God-fearing, self-reliant and free,” they said.

The governors assured the President that they will even encourage the governors in other regions of the country, through the League of Governors, to join them in order that they will have a common agenda and collectively fight poverty, criminality and oppression.

The Bicol officials also said they recognize that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration has exercised its moral ascendancy in protecting the welfare of the Filipino people, her directly addressing the fight against poverty, criminality and injustice.

Villafuerte noted that the President has been calling for the easing up of all the recriminations in the country’s political environment and they have come to realize that the country cannot move forward unless they all agree to support her.

“And so we in the Bicol region, all of us governors, after consultations with our own leaders at the grassroots, have decided to come together and see the President and give our support,” Villafuerte said.

Villafuerte cited in particular the efforts of the President to have a political summit and an economic summit aimed at arriving at an agreement on the mutually agreeable programs.

During the regional Cabinet meeting in Bicol recently, Villafuerte said, the President found out for herself that in terms of poverty, Bicol is the second poorest region in the country.

“We are only a little ahead of the ARMM (Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao). Underemployment is also very high in the region,” he said, adding that Bicol has been left behind among all the regions in Luzon.

“We are confident that the President can do something about it,” the Camarines Sur governor said.

While they did not discuss with the President the issue involving former Education Secretary Raul Roco who incidentally hails from the Bicol region, Villafuerte said: “I know him very well. I don’t think he can be an effective executive. He may have been a good legislator but that is beside the point with respect to our pledge to the President.”

Villafuerte assured that all the governors in their region will support her “without exception.”

Villafuerte explained that the Bicol governors have varying political affiliations, three of them belonging to Lakas-NUCD, two from Laban ng Demokratikong Pilipino (LDP) and one from Reporma.

“But irrespective of our political parties, we have been discussing among ourselves what we believe is best for the Bicol region,” the governor said.

In their Pledge of Support to the President, the Bicol provincial and local officials said “we support the Arroyo administration, in upholding equal playing field, in managing the country’s economy.”

“We pledge our commitment and support as the President puts herself above her personal self, attending to the duties and responsibilities of the highest office of the land,” they said.

Camacho welcomes Moody's reaffirmation of Philippines' stable rating

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho today said that he welcomed the reaffirmation of Moody's Investors Service of the country's stable rating and its continued confidence that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration can solve its financial problems.

"We appreciate Moody's recognition of our current macroeconomic environment being supportive of our fiscal program. I am pleased that they have affirmed the government's position that indeed the deficit issue has been blown out of proportion in recent weeks," Camacho said in a statement.

Camacho said that the government is committed to pursuing reforms at the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) to improve revenue collections.

"We would like to reassure them (Moody's) that this year's trend at the BIR merely reflects a lag in realizing the benefits of our administrative reforms and not a reversal of our direction. We will forge ahead and our confidence is bolstered by the entry of Commissioner Guillermo Parayno," Camacho said.

According to Camacho, the mandate of the new BIR Commissioner is to ensure the effective implementation and further enhancement of these measures "with the least amount of resistance from the bureaucracy."

The BIR is currently implementing reform measures such as the VAT Relief System, VAT and Internal Audit System, and the E-Filing and Payment System, which have already resulted in exposing many anomalies.

In its review of the Philippine fiscal situation, Moody's noted that it is not focused on this year's headline deficit number, but rather on the implications of a relapse on the BIR's performance on fiscal consolidation and sustainability over the medium term.

Moody's also reaffirmed its stable rating for the Philippines, and confirmed that there is no immediate threat to this rating.

Moody's sovereign analyst for the Philippines, Tom Byrne said: "We discussed rating issues concerning the Philippines today. We concluded that we don't see any immediate threat to the ratings. We will wait and see how the administration's economic program evolves."

In its comments, Moody's mentioned that there are several reassuring factors in the economy such as the historically low levels of interest rates, pre-funding of much of the 2002 deficit, the average maturity structure of domestic debt is a fairly comfortable five years, and the healthy external payments position.

With these, Moody's noted that despite the slippage this year, the deficit of GDP ratio may only be 0.5-1.0 percentage points higher than programmed, placing the 2002 deficit broadly in line with the 2001 deficit, that is somewhere around 4 percent of GDP.

Moody's Investors Service, a leading global credit rating, employs more than 800 analysts and has more than 1,700 associates located around the world. It has offices in 17 countries.

The firm provides ratings and information on governmental and commercial entities in 100 countries.

GMA to open GenSan fiberglass fishing boat plant

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — President Gloria-Macapagal Arroyo is set to inaugurate the P300-million fiberglass long line fishing boat manufacturing project in Sitio Talisay, Barangay Tambler here on Thursday (September 5).

The President, together with other members of the Cabinet, will also be given a plant tour and briefing by officials of project proponents StoneWorks Specialist International Corp. (SSIC) and the GenSan Aquatraders.

The project calls for SSIC to build 100 long line fiberglass fishing boats that would transform 100 marginal fisherfolk into entrepreneurs, generating 2,000 jobs.

The fishermen will amortize the payment for the boats out of the proceeds of their catch. With this approach, they are developed into being entrepreneurs and owners of business they know very well.

Long line fishing has been one of the major sectors of Mindanao's fishing industry, producing chilled tuna and tuna fillet for exports. This has given direct jobs to some 15,000 fisherfolk hired as crew of long line fishing vessels.

Lately, the survival of the industry has been threatened by the shortage of wood used in making pumpboats. The high costs of wood and the difficulty of sourcing it prompted pumpboat owners and operators to look into alternative materials and fiberglass.

Fiberglass usage, however, has increased over time due to its light weight and durability. Though it cost about 30 percent higher than wooden boats, the advantages has offset the high production cost.

Fiberglass has been considered as more seaworthy and longer lasting than the wooden boats. The use of fiberglass on fishing vessels has also reduced pressures on the country's dwindling forest resources.

This is the President's fourth visit to this city as Chief Executive. She will also keynote the 4th National Tuna Congress at the Family Country Hotel and convention Center.

She will also join the locals in commemorating the city's 34th inaugural anniversary highlighted by the week-long Tuna Festival that showcased the city's rich tuna and marine resources. The city received its charter, as provided under Republic Act 5412, on July 8, 1968.

Tuna stakeholders expect GMA to bring up tariff issue

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — Tuna industry stakeholders expect President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to expound on the government's stand on moves of the United States granting preferential tariffs on Andean pouched tuna to the detriment of canned tuna exports from the Philippines.

The President is set to visit, the fourth in her term, this city tomorrow (September 5). She will grace and keynote the 4th National Tuna Congress at the Family Country Hotel and Convention Center.

She will also join the locals in commemorating the city's 34th inaugural anniversary highlighted by the week-long Tuna Festival that showcased the city's rich tuna and marine resources. The city received its charter, as provided under Republic Act 5412, on July 8, 1968.

The local tuna industry practically transformed the city into one of the country's fastest growing economy and one of the world's sources of high quality tuna products. Seven of the country's nine tuna canning factories are sited here.

Some 200,000 people are involved in the local tuna industry. Mindanao's major employer is the canned tuna industry.

The President is expected to arrive here from Zamboanga del Sur shortly before noon.

She will deliver her keynote speech before some 300 domestic and foreign delegates to the tuna congress.

Marfin Tan, one of the bigger fishing operators in this city, said they would ask President Macapagal-Arroyo to intervene on the matter.

The President earlier raised the issue of Philippine tuna exports to the US with US Secretary of State Colin Powell, saying she hoped that moves in the US favoring “pouched tuna” would not affect the preferential treatment for canned tuna from the Philippines.

Recently, the US Congress passed a law allowing the duty-free entry of tuna from the countries that constitute the Andes mountain ranges in Latin America.

The President said her administration has been waging a campaign to protect the country’s tuna industry and keep its preferential treatment in the US market.

The President noted it was important for her administration to keep the preferential treatment of the tuna exports to the US since the industry is the lifeblood of Muslims, Christian and Lumads in Mindanao.

She said thousands of workers in the tuna industry in Mindanao have been battling for the access of Philippine canned tuna in the US market.

It could also be recalled that in late May, the President expressed her appreciation to American Senators Ted Stevens and Daniel Inouye for protecting the Philippine share of the canned tuna market in the US.

The Andean trade preference expansion, the two senators noted, would put the canneries in Mindanao out of business.

“If the major employer in the area is not able to maintain economic stability which has tenuously existed for several years and declares bankruptcy, most experts predict that the chaos in Mindanao will become monumental,” Senators Stevens and Inouye said.

Palace clarifies where $100 M in proposed deal with Fraport would go

Malacañang today clarified that the $100 million that some administration detractors have described as “kickback” on the proposed government takeover of the NAIA Terminal 3 is actually reserved to pay for obligations to other project shareholders and creditors.

Presidential Adviser for Strategic Projects Gloria Tan-Climaco said that Fraport AG of Germany has confirmed that it had agreed to raise $400 million that the government would use to pay all of the NAIA Terminal 3 contractors, creditors and shareholders, including Fraport and the Philippine International Air Terminals Co. (PIATCO).

Tan-Climaco said that of the amount, $300 million will go to Fraport. Of the remaining $100 million, $53 million will go to Takenaka, the contractor that continued with the project although it had not been paid, as well as to some other creditors and PIATCO shareholders, including the Cheng Group, Nissho Iwai and SB Airports.

In a letter to Tan-Climaco last Tuesday, Peter Henkel, Fraport's nominee director in PIATCO, confirmed the amount of $400 million and its willingness to raise the money for the government.

“Fraport's exposure to the project as of several months ago was $375 million. Nevertheless, after many months of negotiations, Fraport is willing to accept only $300 million, should the proposed amicable settlement be approved by the relevant parties,” Henkel said.

Henkel said that aside from the $300 million, additional funds are required to satisfy the other shareholders and creditors, in particular the EPC contractors.

“It was therefore discussed to reserve another $100 million for this purpose, therefore, bringing the total amount to be financed to $400 million,” Henkel said.

Henkel said his company is willing to take the loss of $75 million since its investment in the project has already reached $375 million.

He also said that Fraport understands that the proposal should be subject to the consent of PIATCO and all relevant Philippine government authorities, as well as the audit requirements of the Commission on Audit.

Earlier, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo created a Cabinet committee headed by Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to review the PIATCO contract. Members of the committee are Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Director General Dante Canlas of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), and Tan-Climaco.

Tan-Climaco said that Fraport would likely be the only shareholder that would lose in the plan to terminate the PIATCO contract in favor of the government.

She said that the $400 million that it agreed to raise for the government would be payable over 15 years and would carry interest rates that are much lower than what the government gets for its foreign borrowings.

“Under the proposal, the government will not pay a single centavo in the first five years,” Tan-Climaco said.

But even before the five years is completed, the government would have bid out the airport terminal to new owners to raise the money to pay off the $400 million loan from Fraport, Tan-Climaco said.

“Fraport is offering us a deal that would protect the government and the public,” Tan-Climaco said.

According to Tan-Climaco, the government would benefit from the Fraport offer since it would be getting back the project not at $657 million that PIATCO has reportedly spent for it but at price closer to the original project cost of $350 million.

“This would also allow the government to bring down the terminal fee to P600 from the $20 or P1,000 which PIATCO wants to charge,” Tan-Climaco said.

Tan-Climaco said that if the deal is approved, the onerous contract with PIATCO would no longer be in effect.

Gov’t wants trade barriers to tuna removed, says Montemayor

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — The government has exerted aggressive efforts in its campaign against artificial trade barriers and unfair trade practices imposed by some wealthy countries.

Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor today said the country had been asking the World Trade Organization (WTO) to do something about the unfair treatment the Philippines has been getting from big nations in relation to tuna exports.

“The European Union (EU) has granted preferential zero tariff or duty-free status on tuna coming from former EU colonies in Africa, the Caribbean, and the Pacific at the expense of Thai and Philippine tuna,” Montemayor said in a speech before the 4th National Tuna Congress here.

He said Philippine and Thai tuna have been slapped with a 24-percent tariff.

“Because certain European countries have their own tuna industries to protect, they justify their discrimination against Philippine tuna by pointing out that the United State, not Spain, was actually the last colonizer of the Philippines,” he added.

The Philippines and Thailand have urged the WTO to act with expediency on this issue that had become detrimental to both countries’ tuna industries.

“After three bilateral talks, all failing to give ASEAN tuna producers the same zero tariff privilege enjoyed by the former EU colonies, we have elevated the case to the WTO for mediation,” he said.

On the other hand, the US Congress passed the Andean Trade Preferential Expansion Act last May, allowing duty-free entry of Andean countries’ tuna exports to wean the economies of these South American countries from the illicit drug trade.

Montemayor projects better times for RP tuna industry

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — The country's tuna industry is in for better times.

Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor today made this fearless forecast in light of positive local and international developments that "have reinforced our confidence in the sector's ability to overcome barriers and restrictions to expansion and development."

In a speech before some 300 local and foreign delegates to the 4th National Tuna Congress at the Family Country Hotel and Convention Center here, Montemayor attributed his projections to three reasons.

He said the industry has drawn inspiration from the significant increases in tuna production, which averaged 3.2 percent in the last two years and by 5.4 percent from January to June, 2002 alone.

He added that the tuna world prices have risen, easing the effects of export volume reduction due to uneven tariff regimes imposed by Philippine traditional markets in the United States and European Union.

Further, the government had gained headway in expanding fishing areas.

Montemayor said the Philippines and Indonesia signed early this year a bilateral agreement granting fishing access to Philippine tuna fishing operators in designated areas of the Indonesian Exclusive Economic Zones of the Sulawesi Sea.

The pact allowed 75 catcher vessels and 450 support vessels from the Philippines to operate in Indonesia. The same privilege would be accorded to 10 single seines and 20 fishing vessels using long line fishing methods for tuna.

The agreement could create 20,000 new jobs for Filipinos, 15,000 in fishing and 5,000 in the processing and allied industries. Indonesian officials have started evaluating applications for fishing licenses, he said.

He said the expansion of fishing grounds for Filipinos continued to be one of the eight major policies of the Department of Agriculture concerning the tuna industry.

The other seven approaches included further growth in tuna production, the rationalization of licensing and other regulatory requirements, the modernization of the country's fishing fleet, the implementation of the full duty drawback privilege, building more and better fish ports and cold storage facilities, the re-establishment of an old arrangement with suppliers on purchasing tuna purse seines and other needed fishing vessels, and the fight against artificial trade barriers and unfair trade practices imposed by some wealthy countries.

Montemayor, in his speech, also commended the Soccsargen (South Cotabato-Sultan Kudarat-Sarangani-General Santos) Federation of Fishing and Allied Industries and the National Confederation of the Philippine Tuna Industry.

He said the organization had worked for the meaningful resolution of various issues that affected the survival and sustainability of the tuna business.

Gov't taking steps to curb activities of big-time smuggling syndicates

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration has lined up several measures to zero in on the country's big-time smuggling syndicates and tax evaders whose activities have deprived the government of much-needed resources.

In a report on the status of smuggling and tax evasion cases to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and members of the Cabinet during its meeting last Tuesday in Malacañang, Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo said that specific steps are now being taken to streamline coordination between the Bureau of Customs (BOC) and the Department of Justice (DOJ) in prosecuting cases against violators of Customs laws.

Saludo said that the government has already deputized officials of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) to assist the BOC in enforcing tariff and Customs laws especially against rice and sugar smugglers.

“These enforcement agencies are authorized to effect searches, seizures and arrests within the BOC jurisdiction,” Saludo said.

Saludo also said a bill on anti-smuggling is being drafted to provide clearer basis for prosecution and imposition of heavier penalties on smugglers. The bill would be an administration measure and will be certified as urgent by the President.

According to Saludo, the BOC-Technical Working Group met last August 28 to discuss the legal aspects of the proposed legislation.

To help ensure the President’s pledge in her Second State of the Nation Address (SONA) to track down criminals and smugglers in the country, Saludo said the administration has been holding continuous meetings with intelligence units of various agencies to compile, validate and analyze intelligence information on persons suspected to be involved in smuggling preparatory to drawing up specific plans against each of them.

Other activities undertaken by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration to track down and eliminate smugglers in the country were the following:

- Met with the Philippine Coast Guard last August 28, 2002 to discuss the inventory of ports/wharves nationwide especially those unmanned by government authorities;
- Confiscated another 7,000 bags of Vietnamese rice with an estimated value of P3.5 million at the Port of Zamboanga on August 23, 2002, bringing the total of confiscated bags of rice to 36,005 bags since June 13, 2002;
- Gathered evidence against persons suspected of involvement in smuggling not only for violations of Customs laws but for violations of other laws such as tax evasion and money laundering, among others, to support cases to be filed against them; and
- Reviewed pending cases against violators of Customs laws, in coordination with the DOJ, to expedite resolution of said cases.

Saludo stressed that a total of eight criminal cases were filed before the DOJ for violations of Customs and tariff laws.

He also said that the administration has been consistent in the implementation of the VAT Reconciliation Listings for Enforcement (RELIEF) System wherein 592 firms were found to have underdeclared their sales, 11 of which have been referred to the Office of the Government Corporate Counsel (OGCC) for prosecution.

The Cabinet Secretary also informed the Cabinet about the number of big-time smugglers who have been charged with economic sabotage by the DOJ as follows: 34 smuggling cases received from law enforcement agencies acted upon by the DOJ from December 2001 to August 30, 2002; 10 cases filed in court; three cases submitted for resolution; 19 cases under preliminary investigation; one case dismissed; and one case remanded to BOC for further investigation.

GMA lauds Zamboanga Del Sur officials for uniting various tribes in province

LAKWOOD, Zamboanga del Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the provincial officials of Zamboanga del Sur for their efforts in uniting the different tribes in the province.

In her remarks at the Megayon (Unity) Festival held at the Baganian Cultural and Trade Center, the President said in fluent Cebuano that she was aware that 70 percent of the people in the province are Subanons.

But the President said that whether you belong to the indigenous tribe like the Subanons, you are still a Filipino.

“Ang akong prinsipyo alang sa Mindanao mao nga kinahanglan nga maila sa tanan nga ang Pilipinas usa ka nasod, usa ka society nga adunay lainlaing kultura (One of my principles in Mindanao is that everybody should understand that the Philippines is a nation or society composed of different cultures),” the President said.

The President said that whether you are a Cebuano or Tagalog, or a lumad, Muslim or Christian, or Chinese mestizo, you are still Filipino and you should be proud of the diversity of our culture.

The President arrived here early this morning on the first leg of her whirlwind one-day swing that also brought her to Mount Diwalwal in Monkayo, Compostela Valley, and General Santos City.

She was welcomed here by local officials led by Zamboanga del Sur Governor Aurora Cerilles, Vice Governor Roseller Ariosa, First District Representative Isidoro Real, Second District Representative Filomena San Juan, and Lakewood Mayor Domingo Mirrar.

The President also called on the farmers of the province to shift to hybrid rice so that they can double their income.

She said that the national government would support the projects of the local government, especially in promoting the province as a tourist destination.

According to the President it would not be difficult to promote the province as a tourist spot because it is known for its exotic fruits like durian and lanzones.

During her visit, a Subanon welcome dance was performed for the presidential party.

GMA releases P10 million for agri modernization program in Zamboanga Del Sur

LAKWOOD, Zamboanga del Sur — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today released the initial amount of P10 million for the agricultural modernization program in the province, particularly for the construction of farm-to-market roads.

In her remarks at the Megayon (Unity) Festival held at the Baganian Cultural and Trade Center, the President said in fluent Cebuano that eventually, each of the towns of Zamboanga del Sur would get P1 million for their farm-to-market roads.

The President recalled that last year, she released P1 million for the road-to-market road in this town.

She said that if the initial P10 million would be depleted, she asked Provincial Director Alex Fernandez of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) to remind her so that she can release another P10 million until all the towns will have P1 million each.

The President arrived here this morning on the first leg of her whirlwind one-day swing that also brought her to Mount Diwalwal in Compostela Valley, and General Santos City.

In her speech, the President also called on each of the towns in the province to specialize in one product. “Unta matag lungsod, adunay usa ka produkto (I hope one town would have one product),” she said.

These products, the President said, can be propagated in each town with the help and financial support of the Department of Agriculture.

According to the President, Lakewood is a beautiful town and should be developed as an eco-tourism destination, adding that it has an added advantage because of the abundance in exotic fruits in the area.

“Ang kauswagan sa bukid nga lugar sa Lakewood kauswagan usab sa tibuok probinsiya sa Zamboanga del Sur (The development of the hinterlands of Lakewood would also contribute to the overall development of the province of Zamboanga del Sur),” the President said.

Gov’t to earn P18.7M with signing of 17 service contracts with Diwalwal miners

MONKAYO, Davao del Norte — The government is slated to earn a total of P18.72 million beginning September 16, 2002 up to March 16, 2003, following the signing of 17 service contracts between the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) and the small-scale miners here at Mt. Diwalwal.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the income that would be generated in this new scheme will be able to help the government with its current deficit problem

The President arrived here this afternoon for an inspection visit and attended a briefing conducted by Bureau of Mines Director Horacio Ramos regarding problems at Mt. Diwalwal.

During the briefing, the President directed the DENR to study whether past schemes could be applicable to other mining areas in the country.

After the briefing, the President went to the municipal covered court here to interact with the residents who are composed mostly of miners and their families.

In her speech, the President said it’s about time that the local folk of Mt. Diwalwal helped the government in solving the issues affecting their community, particularly in protecting the environment.

Also, the President donated P1 million to the municipality of Monkayo for the development of a jewelry-making project in their place.

She also announced that on October 11, she will declare a portion of Mt. Diwalwal as a National Mining and Mineral Preservation.

Among those who joined the President in her visit here were US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone, PNP Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, former DOTC Secretary and Region 11 CORD Pantaleon Alvarez, Presidential Adviser on 1 Million Job Luis Lorenzo, Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, Compostela Valley Gov. Jose Caballero, USAID Director Michael Yates and Congressman Manuel Zamora.

GMA inaugurates fiberglass fishing boat plant

GENERAL SANTOS CITY — President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo poured champagne on a fiberglass long-line fishing boat as she launched yesterday the P300-million fiberglass fishing boat making plant in Sitio Talisay, Barangay Tumbler in this city.

The President noted a partnership of the government and private sector in modernizing water vessels for use in business, tourism, transport and public service endeavors.

During the inauguration, the President was accompanied by Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor, Stoneworks Specialist International Corp. (SSIC) president and chief operating officer Marilyn Ong and other officials.

In a briefing and tour of the project, the President took cognizance of the vital role SSIC, its partner GenSan Aquatraders and the people here would play in giving the tuna industry and other marine-based businesses in Mindanao a big boost.

SSIC officials said the newly-opened facility would build 100 long line fiberglass fishing boats that would transform 100 marginal fisherfolk into entrepreneurs, generating 2,000 jobs with 10,000 dependents.

The fishermen would amortize the payment for the boats out of the proceeds of their catch. With this approach, they would be developed into being entrepreneurs and owners of business they know of very well.

Long line fishing has been one of the major sectors of Mindanao's fishing industry, producing chilled tuna and tuna fillet for exports. This has given direct jobs to some 15,000 fisherfolk hired as crew of long line fishing vessels.

The survival of the industry has been threatened by the shortage of wood used in making pumpboats.

The high cost of wood and the difficulty of sourcing it prompted pumpboat owners and operators to look into alternative materials and fiberglass.

Fiberglass usage, however, has increased over time due to its light weight and durability. Though it cost about 30 percent higher than wooden boats, the advantages has offset the high production cost.

Fiberglass has been considered as more seaworthy and longer lasting than the wooden boats. The use of fiberglass on fishing vessels has also reduced pressures on the country's dwindling forest resources, Stoneworks officials said.

The Makati city-based Stoneworks was incorporated in April 1977 and is the flagship company of the Eastern Group of Companies.

With boat fabrication facilities in Santa Rosa, Laguna and Roxas City in Panay, Stoneworks has become the fastest-growing builders of fiberglass-hulled boats in the country, using Filipino composite engineers, naval architects and in-house trained skilled labor.

It has built over 110 watercraft of various types since 2000. Most of the boats are for the use of the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources.

Stoneworks are undertaking talks with the Armed Forces of the Philippines, resort operators and coastal transport operators for the building of speedboats, pleasure boats and ferry boats.

GMA signs exec order reconstituting bipartisan LEDAC on Sabah issue

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today signed an Executive Order reconstituting the Bipartisan Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) on the Sabah issue.

The Chief Executive signed the order during a briefing for the members of the Senate and House of Representatives on the Sabah deportees and the Philippine Policy on RP Claim held this morning at Malacanang's Heroes Hall.

Also present were former President Fidel V. Ramos and some members of the Cabinet, including Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman, Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, National Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable, Jr., Governor Parouk Hussin of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao, Presidential Adviser for Muslim Communities Nur Jaafar, and Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye.

The President announced that under the EO, the LEDAC on the Sabah issue will be composed of five Cabinet members to be headed by Ople, five senators including one from the minority, and five congressmen including one minority member to be nominated by the Senate and the House respectively, and three private sector members.

Press Secretary Bunye said the President saw it to be more prudent to reconstitute the LEDAC for Sabah in order to unify the country's position on the issue and have representatives from both houses of Congress and from the private sector.

President Macapagal-Arroyo thanked the legislators from both chambers who attended the briefing and expressed the hope that "we can continue to work on both the short-term, medium-term, and long-term issues regarding Sabah and look at it in a micro framework, a macro-framework."

"I'd like to thank all of you because of what I consider very, very sober suggestions and recommendations. We are affirmed that we can indeed come up with a national unified position on the Sabah issue at this time," she said.

For his part, Ople said that after the legislators were briefed on the Philippine Policy on RP Claim to Sabah and its options, the President is beginning a series of consultations with leaders of Congress, particularly with members of the foreign relation committees of the Senate and the House, "so that we may correct gaps in our understanding of common problems."

"Perhaps, if lucky, form a certain concessions on issues that help us unite instead of divide in a period of crisis characterized by many problems involving the dignity of our people and of our countrymen," he added.

Other legislators who attended the briefing were House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Senator Manuel Villar, Jr, who is the chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, Senators Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., Ralph Recto, Rodolfo Biazon, and Aquilino Pimentel, Jr., and Representatives Apolinario Lozada, Jr., Roseller Barinaga, Etta Rosales, Abdullah Dimaporo, Joel Mayo Almario, and Imee Marcos.

Malaysian gov't to probe reports of abuses, including alleged rape of 13-year-old Filipina

The Malaysian government has agreed to start an immediate investigation on reports of maltreatment and other abuses perpetrated against Filipino deportees by Malaysian authorities, including the reported rape of a 13-year-old Filipina.

A joint statement signed by Sabah Chief Minister Yab Datuk Chong Kah Kiat and Secretary Nur Jaafar, Presidential Adviser for Muslim Communities, released to the media today, said that the Sabah chief minister immediately ordered the investigation after being apprised of the reports by the Philippine delegation led by Jaafar.

Jaafar led the nine-man Philippine mission sent by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to Sabah to look into the conditions of the thousands of illegal Filipino migrants who have been ordered to leave the country and to reports of abuses and inhuman treatment that they received while in detention.

The delegation visited various detention centers in Sabah during their four-day visit from September 2-5, 2002.

The Philippine delegation thanked the Sabah chief minister for his personal commitment "to impose appropriate penalties to erring Malaysian officials or employees should penalties be called for."

The investigation ordered conducted by Malaysian authorities would include the alleged rape of a 13-year-old Filipina during her detention in Kota Kinabalu, in Sabah.

In Kuala Lumpur, Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad also pledged swift action on the reported rape of the young Filipina deportee.

"I would like to assure the government and the people of the Philippines that appropriate action will be taken against those responsible in accordance with Malaysian laws," Mahathir said.

Mahathir made his pledge in response to a strongly-worded letter from President Macapagal-Arroyo that expressed her "personal outrage and that of the Filipino people" over the alleged rape.

The joint statement said that after visits to the various detention centers and after conducting its own investigation, the Philippine delegation "on the whole" finds that the Malaysian government, particularly Sabah state officials, have exerted "all efforts to ease the hardships of the Filipino detainees/deportees."

"The Philippine delegation is satisfied that these efforts meet Philippine expectations," the joint statement said.

The statement said that the Malaysian and Philippine authorities would continue "to respond to each other's concerns in the mature and responsible manner and in the spirit of amity and cooperation that have always characterized their relationship."

The concerns raised by the Philippine delegation during their four-day mission are the following:

- Permission for the visit by Filipino social workers and medical personnel of the detention centers for purposes of counseling, profiling, first-aid medical services and monitoring to ensure that the welfare and the well-being of Filipino detainees are better addressed;
- Special attention and priority, facilities and services for women (especially pregnant women), children and elderly detainees/deportees;
- Permission for the Philippine Embassy at Kuala Lumpur to conduct an information campaign within the Filipino communities in Malaysia for their cooperation in complying with Malaysian immigration laws;

- Additional embarkation points in order to ease congestion at the holding centers, to lessen holding time and travel time, and generally, to ease Malaysian administrative burdens in holding and transporting the returnees/deportees; and
- Enhanced coordination at consular levels in the communication of arrests of Filipinos under Malaysian immigration laws and in speeding up the process of investigation and documentation for the purpose of deportation.

For its part, the Malaysian government also called for the following:

- Setting up of multiple processing centers in the Philippines for the returning Filipinos;
- Establishment of more passport offices in southern Philippines;
- Enhanced presence of Philippine Embassy officials in Sabah to expedite the processing of documentation of illegally staying Filipinos; and
- Information dissemination to returning Filipinos on the Philippine reintegration program.

The statement said that the two parties recognized that actions on the above concerned would have to be confirmed at the highest levels of both governments.

RP hopeful K.L. will allow setting up of more documentation centers in Sabah

The Philippine government is trying to persuade Malaysian authorities to allow the setting up of documentation centers in Sabah that will speed up the processing of illegal Filipino workers so that they can return to their country as soon as possible.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople said there is a good window of opportunity during the period of moratorium earlier issued by Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad regarding the deportation of thousands of illegal Filipino workers.

“The moratorium on the arrest and possible deportation will hold until the two sides have worked out the improved procedures for carrying out a smoother and a risk-free deportation,” Ople said.

Ople added that the moratorium would also make it possible for those who want to go back to Malaysia to do so with proper documentation so that they will no longer be considered as illegal workers subject to penal sanctions imposed by the Malaysian government such as fines, six months’ detention and caning.

Following the briefing with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in Malacanang, Ople stressed that all the agencies of government dealing with the deportation problem have agreed to speed up the entire process on both sides so that there will be greater safety and comfort and peace of mind for the Filipino deportees, especially those who are arriving in Bongao and in Zamboanga City.

Aside from Ople, among those who attended the meeting with the President where top Senate and congressional officials led by Sen. Manuel Villar, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations; House Speaker Jose De Venecia, Jr., Rep. Apolinario Lozada, chairman of the House committee on Foreign Relations; Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas; Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman; Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes; Presidential Adviser on Muslim Communities Nur Jaafar; Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo; National Security Adviser Roilo Golez; and former President Fidel V. Ramos.

In his press briefing, Ople also noted the report submitted by Jaafar to the President, saying that there are “improved conditions” that are visible especially in the detention centers in Sabah where illegal Filipino workers are currently being held.

“In general, there is an improvement in conditions that is to say reckoning from the time that a moratorium was ordered by Mahathir, and that these improvements were visible for example in detention center in Kota Kinabalu. They saw 14 buildings in one compound and noted the cleanliness of the surroundings,” Ople said.

He said the policy of friendship being pursued by President Macapagal-Arroyo has changed the behaviour of the Malaysian government and society overnight with regards to the treatment of Filipinos currently detained in Sabah.

Ople said that the Jaafar report takes note of certain abuses that the mission has checked, adding that there is still room for improvement.

“The facilities that they saw tended to be looking clean, looking fit for human habitation and it is not true that the mission reported everything was excellent. No, they checked some abuses and found them corroborated by some of the detainees,” Ople noted.

With regards to the reported rape of a 13-year-old Filipina detainee, Ople said the government’s immediate concern is to fully utilize the bilateral channels for the correction of mistakes and of abuses.

The Department of Justice (DOJ), he said, is now putting into an acceptable legal package all the testimonies that are necessary to back the allegations with evidence with the collaborative effort of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

The DOJ, he said, is now processing all the testimonies and affidavits from deportees and other witnesses and will turn them over to the DFA “so that we can transmit them to the Malaysian government, especially to Mahathir, for their information.”

The foreign affairs secretary said there will also be major efforts to improve the conditions in the receiving centers in Bongao, Taiw-Tawi.

Ople said he just received pledges from both the United States and Canadian ambassadors to help the Philippine government regarding the deficiencies in terms of water, food and medicines and any other forms of relief for the returning Filipino deportees.

British group to invest $150 million, move regional hub to Philippines

Top executives of the British group, P&O Ports and Asian Terminals Inc., port operators of South Harbor, today informed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that they are transferring their regional operating headquarters to Manila from Sydney, Australia.

In a courtesy call in Malacañang P&O Chief Operating Officer Alistair Baillie said that over the medium term, another $150 million worth of investments in Philippine port business will be coming into the Philippines.

“That’s very good,” the President said, stressing that the additional investments will generate a lot of economic activity in the country.

Richard Barclay, who is the chairman of the Asian Terminals Inc., congratulated the President for her efforts in improving the peace and order situation in the Philippines.

The President said that the port investors’ increased investment and their decision to transfer their headquarters to Manila is an affirmation of the investors continued confidence in the Philippines.

The President, who is an economist, said her spending a lot of time with the law enforcement agencies like the Philippine National Police has paid off. She said that PNP Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. just informed him that a long-wanted murderer has been captured by the police.

The British companies, which have been investing in the Philippines for quite sometime, will be supervising their operations of ports in countries in the Pacific coast, including Russia, from their proposed regional hub in Philippines.

During the call, Baillie handed the President a check worth P1 million which she said she will use for the people of BASECO, a depressed community in the Port Area.

Sabah claim was never relinquished or dropped — Ople

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople today stressed that the Philippine claim on Sabah was never relinquished or dropped.

During a press briefing in Malacañang, Ople said: “When you speak of reviving a Sabah claim, this is actually superfluous language because there is nothing to revive.”

He said the government is not renouncing its claim over Sabah, saying the issue is merely kept within the strong and responsible framework of an advisory council of the President of the Philippines

During the briefing, Ople said the President had just signed an executive order reconstituting the Legislative and Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) on the Sabah claim in order to form a united front to face the said issue.

The LEDAC on Sabah issue will be composed of five Cabinet members to be headed by Ople, five senators including one from the minority, and five congressmen including one minority member to be nominated by the Senate and the House respectively, and three from the private sector.

The DFA secretary said the advisory council was created during the time of former President Fidel Ramos.

With the reconstitution of the council, Ople said “I expect a quiet, intensive, and sustained study on the Sabah claim by the responsible leaders of this country so that the President can be advised on how to go about this matter of national policy.”

Ople also explained that the framework of the Association of Southeast Asian Nation (Asean) is strong enough to withstand operational distresses between two very close partners like the Philippines and Malaysia.

“There will be no permanent harm done to Asean solidarity,” Ople said.

With regards to the claims of the heirs of the Sultan of Sulu, Ople pointed out that the Malaysian government is open to discussion on the private claims.

“They have always said so on the political claim. They said there is no claim, that they are not even willing to discuss it. But on the matter of the private claims they have always been open,” the foreign affairs secretary said.

For his part, Rep. Apolinario Lozada, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Relations, said reviving the Sabah claim at this time following the same approach that was done during the time of former President Ramos will be to the advantage of the Philippines.

Lozada narrated that during the Ramos administration, the government had long-range negotiations with the Malaysians on the proprietary rights or the rights of the heir of the Sultan of Sulu as well as on the sovereignty right that the Philippines claims over Sabah.

He said they have worked with the nine heirs of the Sultan of Sulu wherein they agreed to form a corporation with seed capital coming from the Malaysian and Philippine government under a 70-30 arrangement.

Lozada explained that 70 percent of the corporation's seed capital would be provided by the Malaysian government in terms of financial capital while 30 percent will be provided by the Philippine government in terms of facilities and all the other necessities for putting up the corporation.

Furthermore, he said the corporation will have its own board of directors where the nine heirs will be sitting as members of the board.

Lozada added that one board seat will be given to those whose claim to being part of the family is not yet verified and another board seat will be occupied by the Philippine government.

Lozada said that what the heirs agreed to during the Ramos administration was for the Philippine government to pursue the claim and for the heirs to just claim financial or monetary benefits from the time that Malaysia annexed Sabah in 1962 to the present.

"After which, they (heirs) are willing to make the corporation work under the auspices of both governments and see to it that they are financially and economically given what is due them," Lozada said.

Malaysian employers to rehire Filipino workers if they are documented — Ople

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople today said the Malaysian employers and manufacturers, as well as the plantation owners in Sabah, are very keen to rehire their Filipino workers as soon as they are fully documented by the Philippine government.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Ople said the Philippine government is coordinating with the Malaysian government to set up documentation centers in Sabah in order to hasten the documentation of the illegal Filipino workers.

"All these measures should be accelerated including the need to speed up the documentation of the Filipino deportees who want to go back to Malaysia so that they can re-enter this time as legal workers," Ople said.

Ople explained that the Philippine government is trying to persuade the Malaysians to allow on-site documentation so that Filipinos do not have to be expelled from Malaysia in order to be passported and documented.

The process, according to Ople, will also mean a lot of savings in time, energy and financial cost for both sides.

Ople said they got an assurance from the authorities in Sabah that they are willing to implement such policy if there is a signal from their government in Kuala Lumpur.

The DFA secretary said the process will be a significant measure since there are still about 120,000 illegal Filipinos who are hiding in Sabah.

In view of this, Ople said the government is considering to conduct a widespread information campaign in Sabah to make the rest of illegal Filipino workers in Malaysia to come out and be properly documented.

He said the proposal of the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) is for the government to conduct an information campaign in the different "kampong" or barangays in Sabah to make the Filipinos come out during the moratorium period issued by Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad.

The campaign is aimed to convince the illegal Filipino workers that they will not be arrested as soon as they present themselves to authorities.

GMA outlines 8-point strategy to address problem of Filipino returnees from Sabah

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today outlined an eight-point strategy to address the problem of thousands of Filipino returnees from Sabah even as she continued to appeal for donations from the public to help various government agencies in attending to the needs of these returning Filipinos.

In her weekly radio program aired nationwide, the President said that the comprehensive strategy to protect the returnees and reintegrate them into the mainstream of Philippine society was adopted in a meeting held in Malacañang last Friday.

The meeting was attended by Cabinet officials and leaders of the two houses of Congress.

The President said that the strong Republic that we are striving to build must create more jobs for the jobless, especially for the thousands of people from Mindanao who have lost their livelihood.

“We need to find jobs for them. We need to comfort them in their despair. And we need to help provide them with food, medicine and temporary shelter,” the President said.

The President said that donations for the returnees, either in cash or in kind, could be sent to the local chapters of the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC) and the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

First in the eight-point strategy for the Filipino returnees calls for the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) to continue in lodging complaints with Malaysian authorities about alleged abuses perpetrated against Filipinos who are being deported from Sabah.

Second, the government would continue to work for the speedy processing of documents for the remaining Filipinos in Sabah before they will be deported.

Third, the Philippine embassy in Kuala Lumpur should conduct an information drive to convince Filipinos to return to the country through the ships of the Philippine Navy and the Philippine Coast Guard.

Fourth, the DFA and the Department of Labor and Employment (DoLE) to coordinate in working out labor agreements with Malaysia that would be beneficial to Filipino workers in Sabah. The DFA would continue to extend assistance to Filipinos for the required documents that they would need in order to get work permits that would allow them to return to Sabah and work there legally.

Fifth, the Philippine embassy in Kuala Lumpur should exert more efforts in giving assistance to Filipinos in Malaysia, and this would include providing legal assistance and visitation.

Sixth, the Philippine embassy should ask permission from the Malaysian authorities so that our Consular teams can visit the various detention centers to provide legal assistance to the returnees.

Seventh, the DFA should see to it that conditions in the various detention centers in Sabah be improved, especially in neatness and the provision of adequate food.

Eighth, that all concerned government agencies should cooperate in speeding up the reintegration of the returnees into the Philippine society.

The President said that the government would ensure that the remaining Filipino returnees in Sabah would be protected, and this would include the seeking of justice for abuses and inhuman treatment that they have suffered while in detention.

She recalled that two weeks ago, she went to Bongao, Tawi-Tawi to personally look into the condition of the Filipino returnees.

“Doon nakita ko ang paghihirap ng libu-libo nating mga kababayang pinabalik mula sa Sabah (There I saw the misery suffered by thousands of our countrymen who were deported from Sabah),” the President said.

The President said that after her visit to Bongao, she immediately called up Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad to complain and the latter agreed to a moratorium on the deportation.

When she was informed about the alleged sexual molestation of a 13-year-old Filipina in the hands of Malaysian authorities, the President said she also immediately wrote a strongly worded letter to Mahathir.

“I express my personal outrage and that of the Filipino people and which I am sure you will also condemn in the strongest terms,” the President said in her letter to Mahathir.

In his response to the President’s letter, Mahathir pledged to conduct an immediate investigation and promised swift action against those responsible in accordance with Malaysian laws.

Domestic demand, not export market, should stimulate economic growth, GMA says

In the bid to power up the economy, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the nation to take an active part in stimulating the domestic demand, rather than relying solely on the export market.

The President noted in her regular radio address that this was the same formula adopted by Thailand in reinvigorating its economy.

“Sa halip na umasa tayo sa export market, pasisiglahin natin ang domestic demand o lokal na merkado (Instead of relying on the export market, we will enliven the domestic market),” the President said.

The President said that to stir up domestic consumption more capital should be poured into small and medium enterprises (SMEs).

She said she would convince banks to lend money to small and medium scale industries, which are very effective in using credit, instead of lending money to luxury properties and industries, which have excess capacities.

“Loans should not go to luxury and unproductive sectors. Loans should go to SMEs which are the best users of capital,” the President said.

The President said that in her meeting with the Cabinet last Tuesday, she has laid out the government program that would offer more loans to SMEs.

During the Cabinet meeting, the President said she also stressed the government's stepped-up efforts to increase revenues from taxes, create more jobs and further invigorate the economy.

The President earlier said that with peace and order moving, it is now timely to create economic impact in the next one and a half years.

She said that the new economic strategy should be accompanied by prudent monetary policy, a ban on short-term foreign currency loans, which were the source of trouble during the 1997 Asian financial crunch, a gradual reduction in public sector debt, and a balanced budget in three to four years.

"The domestic demand story in Asia is now everybody's business. It is now a key response, if not the key response to the calamitous collapse of the US economic model," the president said.

LGUs okay cash flow management scheme related to 2002 I.R.A.

The Union of Local Authorities of the Philippines (ULAP), the body which represents the member leagues of local government units nationwide, today manifested its intention to help President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo implement fiscal discipline by taking part in a cash-flow management scheme with concerned government agencies.

The ULAP's support for the President's policy of fiscal discipline is contained in a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) signed by the ULAP, Department of Finance, Department of Budget and Management, Department of Interior and Local Government at the Heroes Hall in Malacanang this afternoon.

In the MOA, the ULAP has agreed that from September to December this year, the DBM would release to LGUs only 80 percent of its monthly Internal Revenue Allotment (IRA) release.

The DBM would defer the remaining 20 percent of the LGUs' development fund and would be released beginning January to June next year on top of the regular P141 billion due to LGUs for next year.

According to the MOA, this would effect a temporary reduction of about 6.7 percent of the P134.4 billion IRA level for 2002 vis à vis the 25 percent withheld by DBM from the budget of the national government agencies this year.

Meanwhile, the DOF and the DBM would open a credit line facility or window for LGUs to loan the equivalent amount of their deferred IRA from Development Bank of the Philippines and the Land Bank of the Philippines within this year.

This is to coincide with the scheduled monthly release of the IRA to LGUs while the national government assumes the full payment to include the interest and all other related expenses.

With this, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina said in effect, the LGUs would still get their 100 percent share for 2002.

The DBM and the DOF would also include in the credit facility the P3 billion unreleased portion of the 2001 Local Government Service Equalization Fund (LGSEF) due all provinces, cities, municipalities and barangays.

According to the MOA, the DBM must consider and find ways of exempting the fourth and sixth class municipalities from this scheme.

The signatories to the MOU were Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina and ULAP president Gov. Rodolfo Del Rosario.

The total IRA of LGUs for 2002 is P134.4 billion, representing 40 percent of the National Internal Revenues collected in 1999, of which P89.628 billion, or 66.67 percent, has already been released every 5th day of the month by DBM to cover the period from January to August 2002.

According to the MOA, the credit facility given will not affect the debt cap of such LGUs.

All cost related to the facility shall be shouldered by the national government and not by the LGUs.

GMA orders all-out war not only against lawlessness but also against poverty

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered all concerned government agencies, including the military and the police, to wage a “total war” not only against terrorism and lawlessness but also against poverty.

“Ours is a total effort, meaning it is not only an all-out war against the enemies of the state but also an all-out war against poverty. So that’s why I want to call it a total effort,” the President said in her remarks at the Joint AFP-PNP Command Conference held today in Malacanang.

The President also thanked the local government units (LGUs), the military, the police and “everybody involved” for their contribution to this “total effort.”

She also witnessed the signing of the implementing guidelines to the General Order No. 2 and Memorandum Order No. 61 related to the realignment of elements of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) in maintaining peace and order in Mindanao and in securing the citizens from terrorist attacks.

Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and Secretary Jose Lina of the Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG) signed the implementing guidelines for their respective departments.

In a briefing, Brig. Gen. Samuel Bagasin, AFP deputy chief of staff for operations, said that the implementing guidelines call for the DND and the DILG to formulate policies and necessary actions to ensure coordination and integration of government efforts in their campaign against terrorism and lawless violence.

Under the guidelines, Bagasin said, an informer reward system will also be created to facilitate apprehension of those responsible for bombings and other acts of terrorism.

Bagasin said that the signing of the joint implementing guidelines “is a bold step taken by the DND and the DILG to stir up the AFP and the PNP in decisively addressing the lawless violence and terrorism in Mindanao.”

“The said guidelines would give direction to the operative forces to attain the very elusive peace in Mindanao,” Bagasin said.

M.O. 61 was signed by the President in mid-May to quell acts of violence and terrorism in some parts of Mindanao and to speed up the rehabilitation of conflict-affected areas.

In signing M.O. 61, the President said the rash of bombings and lawless violence in Mindanao, particularly in General Santos City and Cotabato City, necessitated an immediate, effective and adequate government response to avert further loss of innocent lives and destruction of property.

Under MO 61, the DND and the DILG were directed to organize all their personnel in Mindanao into Joint Task Forces (JTFs).

The DND secretary, according to the MO, shall have direct supervision and authority over the JTF in Western Mindanao, to include the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), Region 9 or the Zamboanga Peninsula and Region 12 or the SOCCSKSARGEN Area, composed of South Cotabato, Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat, Sarangani and General Santos City.

The DILG secretary will exercise authority and responsibility over the JTF in Eastern Mindanao, to include Region 10 or Northern Mindanao, Region 11 or the Davao provinces, and Region 13 or the Caraga Region.

The MO also called on both the DND and DILG secretaries “to ensure that there is close coordination, mutual support and cooperation at all times among the officers and men of the AFP and the PNP.”

The Philippine National Police (PNP) is a component branch of the DILG.

The PNP and the Intelligence Service of the AFP were also directed to jointly step up and focus their intelligence operations against individuals or groups responsible for committing and conspiring in the commission of acts of terrorism and lawless violence.

Under the MO, the DILG, along with the PNP, shall immediately establish an “informer rewards program” to help in the apprehension of those responsible for acts of terrorism and lawless violence.

“The PNP, when warranted, shall arrest all persons responsible for committing or conspiring in the commission of acts of terrorism and lawless violence, with due regard to their constitutional rights,” the MO said.

Other salient provisions of the MO:

- The Department of Justice to closely coordinate with the PNP in the immediate prosecution of all individuals or groups responsible for committing or conspiring in the commission of acts of terrorism and lawless violence;
- The DILG and the DND to enhance coordination with local authorities and intensify community and barangay defense and anti-terrorist action plans, including the imposition of necessary security measures in Mindanao;
- The Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) to extend emergency relief assistance to the victims of bombings in General Santos City and Cotabato City and other acts of terrorism and lawless violence; and
- The Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process and the Presidential Adviser for Special Concerns to strengthen existing back channeling efforts by enlisting the full support of all stakeholders to prevent and suppress acts of terrorism and lawless violence in Mindanao.

The MO also directed the Presidential Human Rights Committee to continuously assess and monitor the human rights situation in Mindanao to ensure that the constitutional and statutory rights of every individual are respected.

KALAHI concept now institutionalized in all gov’t agencies

The government continues to strengthen the Kabit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) program, institutionalizing it in all government agencies to further improve the anti-poverty efforts of the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Under the convergence policy, all government agencies are enjoined to observe and institutionalize KALAHI in their respective systems and processes and participate actively in the implementation of KALAHI in the national and sub-national levels.

National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) lead Convenor Teresita Quintos Deles today briefed the President and members of the Union of Local Authorities of the Philippines (ULAP) at the Heroes Hall in Malacañang on the gains of KALAHÍ in the poor communities around the nation.

KALAHÍ is the President's arm for a focused, accelerated convergent and expanded strategy to reduce poverty. Under the law, NAPC serves as the coordinating and oversight body in making KALAHÍ work.

ULAP, on the other hand, is the body that represents the member leagues of local government units nationwide.

Deles reported on the status of nationwide KALAHÍ projects such as irrigation systems, footbridges, farm-to-market roads, day-care centers, electrification projects, breakwater construction, flood control and several livelihood projects.

"We are ensuring that the poorest of the poor get special assistance," Deles said.

The President, meanwhile, stressed the importance of having concerted government effort against poverty. "Ours is a total effort – meaning it is an all out war not only against the enemies of the state but also against poverty," the President said.

Ongoing KALAHÍ projects are being undertaken in Abra, Benguet, Ifugao, Kalinga, Mt. Province, Albay, Camarines Sur, Aklan, Negros Occidental, Bohol, Southern Leyte, Western Samar, Zamboanga del Norte, Lanao del Norte, Davao del Sur, Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat, Agusan del Norte, Agusan del Sur, Surigao del Norte, Maguindanao and Sulu.

Stay cool, relatives of OFWs in Mideast told: Gov't monitoring Iraq situation; contingency plans in place

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople urged the nation to "stay cool and collected," assuring that the government is closely monitoring the situation in Iraq and has in place contingency plans of evacuating Filipinos in the Middle East if the situation there worsens.

"The families of the country's overseas workers in the region should not panic. On a signal from the Department of Foreign Affairs, all the Philippine embassies and consular posts will activate the contingency plans for the safety and protection of all Filipino nationals in the Middle East," Ople said in a statement posted at the DFA website.

Ople said what is in place right now are contingency plans for the Middle East that are being reviewed almost everyday.

The DFA secretary made this statement amid news reports that coalition aircrafts from the United States and Great Britain have attacked targets on an Iraqi airbase located southwest of Baghdad last Thursday.

These contingency plans, he said, have been updated by an inter-agency committee in Manila and in the individual diplomatic posts throughout the Middle East.

Ople said the government is in firm control and will not be caught flat-footed for new emergencies in the Middle East.

Last Friday, Ople told Malacañang reporters that the government is already aware of the number of Filipinos in each of the country that may be affected by a possible attack in Iraq, saying that the plan also includes the designation of holding areas for any evacuees.

"We know where to put them in terms of holding area, if there is a sudden eruption of war there in the Middle East," Ople said.

He said those in Israel and Lebanon, for example, will be transported immediately and quickly to Cyprus while those in Iraq and Kuwait will be moved to Amman, Jordan.

Ople added that the Philippine ambassador to Saudi Arabia had told him that it will not be necessary to relocate the Filipinos there to another country but instead to another area of the Saudi kingdom which is beyond the range of the Scud missiles that may come from Iraq.

He explained that the Scud missiles were unable to travel farther than Riyadh in 1991 but Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has been improving his Iraq's arsenals and has reportedly acquired long-range missiles from North Korea which has a range of 3,000 kilometers.

Should war break out in the Middle East, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez assured that the Philippines has a 63-day buffer supply of oil.

3 KFR gangs down: PNP bolsters anti-kidnap efforts

Three down, 18 more to go.

The government's bid to wipe out 21 kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gangs in a year's time has gained headway with the neutralization of at least three big notorious KFR groups operating in Mindanao and Luzon.

In a month after the Philippine National Police (PNP) created its Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER) on July 15 this year, the police had killed Mindanao-based Pentagon KFR leader Muhamad Faisal Marohombsar and arrested key heads of the Fajardo and Bucala KFR gangs operating in Central Luzon.

A report on achievements of targets set by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) dated September 3 noted that the successes were brought about by the cooperation given by civilian informants who told on the KFR groups.

The President, in several instances, cited the speed by which the PNP had been solving recent KFR cases. She also noted that all of the victims were safely recovered.

She likewise gave credit to several civilians who helped police track down and get kidnap groups.

The SONA report said the government has moved to give rewards to informants to bolster its information gathering thrusts on suspected KFR groups. This has resulted in an updated KFR database.

But even with the reward system, the government continued to receive the unconditional cooperation of peace-loving citizens who believed in getting rid of crimes as a means to gain peace and development.

The PNP has also conducted various training programs to discourage or respond to kidnapping incidents.

Last July 16 to 20, at least 27 policemen finished a workshop-seminar on hostage negotiation. Later, PACER tracker teams completed a training program on case operations management.

Side by side, the PNP conducted seminars on community awareness and security against abductions.

Military involvement in gov't anti-drug efforts fruitful

The government has thrown in the full weight of its military's resources to augment police efforts to keep illegal drugs away from Filipino hands.

A report citing the achievements against targets set in the second State of the Nation Address of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo showed that the Armed Forces of the Philippines Anti-Crime Task Force (AFP-ACTAF) has proven itself very potent in anti-drug operations.

Since its formation in March this year, the AFP-ACTAF has actively involved itself in numerous raids of illegal drug laboratories and arrests of suspected members of drug rings.

Philippine Air Force (PAF) operatives and elements of the National Bureau of Investigation in General Santos City have recently swooped down on a marijuana plantation and uprooted the plants along the boundaries of Kiblawan, Davao del Sur and Malungon, Sarangani.

During this operation, codenamed "Oplan Caterpillar," the joint team uprooted some 20,000 marijuana plants valued at about P60 million.

President Macapagal-Arroyo, in one of her most recent trips to General Santos City, even led in the burning of the marijuana plants.

In the remote villages of Bayabas and Dalipay sited in the tri-boundary of Ilocos Sur, Benguet and La Union, PAF operatives also raided a marijuana plantation.

Elsewhere, the AFP had been joining the police recover and seize shabu and marijuana in Davao del Sur, Maguindanao, Ilocos Sur, Zambales and Camarines Sur.

With all these operations, some 520,000 full-grown marijuana plants worth P180 million had been destroyed. At the same time, about 1,117.5 grams of shabu worth P2.4 million were also confiscated.

The involvement of the military in the country's anti-drug campaign followed the creation of the Dangerous Drugs Board (DDB) and the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA).

The President named Miguel Coronel as the DDB executive director and Anselmo Avenido as PDEA director-general, both last July 29.

The Board is formulating the implementing rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of Republic Act 6425.

On the other hand, the staff of the former National Drug Enforcement Coordinating Committee had been providing technical support to the PDEA.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Philippine National Police (PNP), the Philippine Air Force (PAF) and the Bureau of Immigration (BI) for the arrest of two Jordanians and their Filipino cohort for hacking into telecommunications systems and members of the Veloso Gang, one of the most notorious kidnap-for-ransom and robbery/holdup groups in the country.

The Chief Executive personally congratulated PNP Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane and Immigration Commissioner Andrea Domingo after presenting to the media three alleged computer hackers this morning at Camp Crame in Quezon City and their paraphernalia and equipment used in the commission of their crime.

The President said the arrest of the computer hackers — identified as Mahmoud Nuseir, alias Yusef Shaban and Ivan Mahmoud, his brother Mohamad Nuseir both Jordanians, and their Filipino accomplice Marlon Laquindanum, alias Blue Magic — was the “first” big strike against violators of the E-Commerce Act.

“Itong sindikatong ito, ang namumuno niyan ay isang dayuhan. Kaya nakapasok ang Immigration dito. Ito ay nahuli dahil sa request ni BI Commissioner Domingo at ito ay violation of E-Commerce Law. (This syndicate is led by a foreigner. That’s why the Bureau of Immigration came into the picture. The computer syndicate was arrested due to the request of Commissioner Domingo for violation of E-Commerce Law),” the President said.

Domingo informed the President that almost P100 million was stolen by the group from hacking since last year and the first six months.

The arrest of the three computer hackers involved in hi-tech “call selling” costing telecommunications companies millions of pesos in losses, was the result of joint operations by elements of the National Capital Regional Police Office (NCRPO), Eastern Police District, Muntinlupa Police Office, Makati Police Office, the Philippine Air Force 300th Air Intelligence Security Group and the Bureau of Immigration.

The operations of the three computer hackers were uncovered by government operatives in a series of raids in the cities of Muntinlupa and Makati.

Ebdane said the cooperation between the private business group and the PNP resulted in the arrest of “high-tech computer crimes.”

“These arrests are the result of the partnerships we are building between people or business and the police to stop such crimes from doing any further damage to the companies and to their customers,” Ebdane said.

The President also presented to the media the Veloso Gang, one of the most notorious kidnapping-for-ransom and robbery/holdup groups.

Ebdane briefed the President on the operations of the Veloso Gang based on the report submitted by PNP Intelligence Group Director, Chief Superintendent Robert Delfin.

The report said that during the September 4 operations, the apprehending elements of the PNP were only aware of the suspects' carnapping activities, and not of the group's involvement in kidnapping and robbery.

In last Wednesday's encounter between the elements of police and the Veloso Group, the report said, five group members were killed and one was wounded.

Eugenio Abana alias Roger Avalle sustained gunshot wounds while those killed were identified as follows: Rosendo Veloso alias Viloy, dismissed member of the Philippine Army, alleged leader of the group; Aurelio Pacitas, Jr. a dismissed member of the Philippine Army; Pablito Salubod alias Big Boy; a certain Pabling; and a certain Sgt. Junio Doctor.

The Veloso group has been the subject of manhunt operations by the police for involvement in at least two kidnapping incidents in 2001, three bank robberies from 1998-2002, three robbery/holdups in Metro Manila, Batangas and Laguna, and various carnapping incidents. The group's area of operations covers the NCR, Regions 3 and 4.

Recovered from the suspects were one white Toyota Corolla with plate number XCM-425; three cal. 45 pistols with serial numbers 764189, 764180 and 112449; two cal. 38 revolvers (paltik) with serial numbers 38661 and 04937; one flashlight; two improvised licensed plates; one pair of handcuff; and one fan knife.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said she had instructed Ebdane to hunt down "rascals in uniform" whether they still in the service, out of the service or AWOL (absent without official leave).s

GMA leads celebration of Anniversary of Canonical Coronation of Marian Image

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night led the celebration of the anniversary of the canonical crowning of the Nuestra Senora del Buen Suceso (Our Lady of Good Events) during the Feast of the Nativity of Mary.

The President, who arrived at the St. Andrew Parish Church in Paranaque City at around 6:00 p.m., also read the prayers for the Act of Consecration in honor of the second anniversary of the canonical coronation of the centuries-old image of the Nuestra Senora del Buen Suceso.

Among those who welcomed the President were Paranaque City Mayor Joey Marquez, Rep. Ed Zialcita, St. Andrew parish priest Msgr. Bayani Valenzuela and Bishop Jesse Mercado of the Archdiocese of Pasay, Paranaque, Las Pinas and Muntinlupa.

The St. Andrew Parish Church was packed with devotees of the blessed image coming from the 20 barangays in Paranaque.

In her prayers to the Nuestra Senora del Buen Suceso, the President sought the help of the Virgin Mary to "inspire us to proclaim the love of God, His truth and justice by living a life of faith, perseverance, respect and concern for others."

In her prayers for the Philippines and world, the President said: "I consecrate to you myself, my brothers and sisters, my country – the Philippines and the world. Reign over us and teach us how to make the heart of Jesus reign and triumph in us and around us as it has reigned and triumphed in you."

The story of Nuestra Senora del Buen Suceso came from the accounts written by Fr. Nicolas de San Pedro, parish priest of Paranaque from 1699-1704.

The Image was brought by the Augustinian missionaries from Spain and found its first home in the church of St. Andrew in 1580, the year when the parish was established.

Nuestra Senora del Buen Suceso is one of the few remaining images that remained intact to this date.

It was then Vice-President Arroyo who crowned the Nuestra Senora del Buen Suceso on September 8, 2000, about five months before she became President of the Republic.

Bunye: Gov't seeks better tax take, not create text tax

The government seeks to efficiently collect taxes, not to create taxes.

This Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today stressed as he denied reports that the government planned to levy taxes on cellular phone texting.

In a radio interview, Bunye said the Cabinet, during its past meetings, had never even discussed the matter.

“Walang ganyang official move. Kung merong ganito, this is a major policy proposal. Dini-discuss sa Cabinet ‘yan (There is no official move on taxing text messages. If there was such, it is a major policy proposal and should be discussed in the Cabinet level),” he said.

He recalled that a proposal to tax text messages was raised during the 11th Congress “pero hindi naman ito nakalusot (but this did not prosper).”

“Alam naman natin na ito ay magbibigay ng dagdag na pasanin sa ating mga mamamayan (We know only too well that this will create another unnecessary burden on our people),” he added.

The emphasis of government “is more efficient collection of taxes, not new taxes,” Bunye said.

Meanwhile, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin averred today that the government has some P300 billion in receivables.

In a separate radio interview, Boncodin said this was reflected in the books of the Commission on Audit.

But she clarified that public receivables were very different from receivables applied by private companies.

Private firms usually term as receivables the payment for goods or services sold or rendered, respectively, due for collection, she said.

On the other hand, the governments term as receivables e.g. the payment for services rendered by one agency to another. But this is not collectible as applied in private firms, she added.

Boncodin said she would look into the government receivables to have these properly explained to the public.

No truth to Enrile's allegations against first gentleman, says Palace

Malacañang today flatly denied the allegations of former Senator Juan Ponce Enrile that First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo was involved in the illegal activities of a supposed public relations consultant of the Philippine International Air Terminals Co (PIATCO).

In his regular press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said there is no truth to the allegations made by Enrile, adding that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will never allow any member of her family to get involved in any government activity.

“We would like to deny the allegation of Senator Enrile. The President herself has announced that if any person would use the name of the First Gentleman or any member of her family this should be reported and that person would be arrested immediately,” Bunye said.

Bunye said that only last month, a certain Manuel Tolentino, an architect, who claimed that he was connected with the Office of the President and the Department of Budget and Management (DBM), was arrested by the police.

Tolentino was later presented to the media by the President in Malacañang.

Earlier, a certain Anthony Deslate, who also used the name of the First Gentleman in trying to gyp a Japanese trader of P3 million, was arrested by the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI).

Bunye said that PIATCO president Cheng Yong himself, in his testimony at the Senate hearing, said Alfonso Liongson, the firm’s public relations consultant, never claimed that he has influence over the First Gentleman or any other member of the President’s family.

As he challenged Enrile to support his allegations with proofs, Bunye said that the fact that the President has ordered a review of the PIATCO contract belies any possible involvement of the First Gentleman in the transaction.

“Dahil bakit ipinare-review ng ating Pangulo ang kontrata kung na-involve si First Gentleman? (Because why would the President order a review of the contract if the First Gentleman was involved?),” Bunye said.

GMA lauds Nestle’s P2 B investment expansion

CABUYAO, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the management of Nestle Philippines Inc. for their additional P2 billion investment to further expand and upgrade their facilities in the country and their commitment to provide jobs to the Filipinos.

“Congratulations and thank you,” President said in her brief remarks during her visit to the Nestle ASEAN Supply Center here this morning.

The President made a plant tour and inspected the state-of-the art facilities for milk powder production during her 40-minute visit to the Nestle export facilities. She was also given a briefing by Juan B. Santos, chairman and chief executive officer of Nestle Philippines Inc., regarding the company’s expansion efforts in the Philippines.

“Our investments, exports, and expansion concretely demonstrate our continued confidence in doing business in the Philippines. Nestle is here to stay and we are here to continue to invest and to produce,” Santos told the President.

The President also led the ceremonial switch-on of Nestle’s P2 billion investment expansion program.

According to Santos, the bulk of the new investment will go to the continuing expansion and upgrading of Nestle’s Cabuyao facilities to increase production.

The new P2 billion investment program is in addition to the P3 billion investments Nestle put up last year to cater to the growing export market for the infant nutrition products.

The Nestle Cabuyao factory is the Nestle Group’s ASEAN Supply Center for infant nutrition products, exporting infant formula to Nestle companies in Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia, Vietnam, Cambodia and Thailand.

Santos explained that the company expects to complete the export of about 20,000 metric tons of infant milk powder valued at $50 million to ASEAN by the end of the year.

He further said that the company's expansion efforts in Cabuyao have also fueled the local economy, providing jobs to thousands more in downstream industries that supply the factory with raw materials and services.

Santos also informed the President that the Nestle Cabuyao factory is among the top taxpayer-companies in Laguna province. Santos said Nestle paid P37.6 million in taxes to the province of Laguna and a total of P5.2 billion to the national government in 2001.

"We are happy that in our own way, we help support the growth of our economy and uplift the lives of people in the communities where we operate," Santos told the President.

Nestle has been operating in the country for over a hundred years now. It produces and market products under some of the country's well-known brands.

Boncodin asks agency heads to shun unneeded expense

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin today urged officials of state agencies to rightfully declare their available funds so that the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) could also make correct assessments in its ongoing budget performance review that started last month.

In a radio interview, Boncodin noted that in the fourth quarter, some agencies have made it a habit to report that they no longer had money and that they had no savings.

"Pagdating ng November at December, biglang naglalabasan ang savings na ginagamit sa bonus, nagse-seminar, nagta-travel at kung anu-ano (Then when November and December come, savings appear and these are used for bonuses, seminars, travels and others)," she said.

"Mukhang hindi yata tama 'yan (This does not seem right)," she said.

Boncodin denied the government had cut the allocations for agencies by 25 percent.

She clarified that the DBM had released 75 percent of the budgets of agencies in February as soon as the whole national budget was approved. The other 25 percent would be given as soon as the DBM has completed its budget performance review.

She denied that the government was broke or had no money. "Hindi totoo 'yan (It is untrue)," she stressed.

But she explained that measures were being done to correct the situation.

A case in point, she said, was the discovery of and the punitive action taken against private firms that underdeclared their value-added tax payments and robbed the state of millions of pesos.

Another move was to undertake effective systems that would efficiently facilitate tax collection.

Boncodin further tagged as a lie a report that the government would withhold the internal revenue allotments (IRA) of local government units.

She said that last Saturday, officials of the leagues of governors, city and municipal mayors, councilors, board members and vice governors reiterated their support to the government and cooperation to push the programs and projects of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

The local officials agreed to an arrangement with the national government whereby 80 percent of their IRA would not be touched and that the IRA would be provided first by the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) and the Land Bank of the Philippines (Landbank), she added.

“Utang ng local government ‘yun sa Landbank at DBP, pero kami ang magbabayad sa susunod na taon (The LGUs owe the Landbank and DBP, but we will pay it next year), she said, adding that the government did not want LGUs to be burdened.

Boncodin noted the LGUs’ ability to shy away from loans, although highly-urbanized areas could open a big credit line.

The national government has called on LGUs not to fear anything as long as their performance was satisfactory, she said. She also asked LGUs not to be too dependent on their IRAs and that they should look for ways on how to raise money for their local fund.

No plans to shut down 3 gov’t hospitals, says Malacanang

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has no plans to close down or privatize the three government hospitals in Manila that are primarily serving the poor, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye today said.

In his regular press briefing, Bunye denied reports quoting Sen. Luisa Estrada that the government is planning to sell, “due to lack of funds,” the Philippine General Hospital, Jose Reyes Memorial Hospital and San Lazaro Hospital, three of the biggest public hospitals serving the poor.

“These three hospitals are serving the poorest of the poor and President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo does not intend to let down the poor,” Bunye said.

Bunye wondered where the deposed President’s wife got such information.

“We don’t really know where she got this information. As far as I know, and we checked with the Department of Health, there is no plan to close any of the three major hospitals,” he said.

At the same time, DOH Head Executive Assistant Consorcia Lim-Quizon said there are no plans to privatize the government hospitals although “corporatization” is being considered by some hospitals for better financial management.

Quizon said, however, that corporatization of hospitals requires an act of Congress.

So far, she noted, only the Ilocos Training and Regional medical Center and Quirino Memorial Medical Center are up for such consideration.

She added that the Department of Budget and Management has approved about P10.8 billion for 2002, which is more or less the same budget the department had in 2002, when all DOH-retained hospitals were able to deliver services year-around.

GMA cites AMKOR Philipines’ contribution to economy

STA. ROSA, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the management of Amkor Technology Philipines at the Laguna Technopark here for its significant contribution to the Philippine economy.

In his welcome speech, Mike Petrucci, president of Amkor, informed the President that his firm is determined to continue with its partnership with the Philippine government and their Filipino employees.

“We believe that by working together, we can achieve a win-win objective: meeting the financial goals of the company, improving the socio-economic status of our employees and their families, and contributing to the overall economic growth and strength of the Philippine economy,” Petrucci told the President.

The President toured the facilities of the company. Earlier, the President also toured the facilities of Nestle Philippines in Cabuyao and the Ford Motor Philippines in Sta. Rosa, Laguna. At Nestle, the President led in the ceremonial switch-on of the firm’s new P2-billion facility for the production of powdered milk.

Petrucci explained that the reason why he invited the President to visit Amkor’s facilities was to present the level of accomplishments of their company, and of its Filipino employees.

“We wanted to show to you the results of our close working relationship among the company, the Philippine government, and the people of the Philippines, which together, form the backbone of Amkor’s operations here,” Petrucci said.

In her brief tour of the plant, the President received a warm welcome from key officials and employees of the company.

In her tour of the facilities, the President observed first hand the skills demonstrated by the Filipino workers in assembling and testing delicate microchips and other computer products.

Hundred of employees, who gathered at the canteen, greeted the President and waved placards reading “Gloria Mahal ka ng Amkor Employees or GMA.”

The President then shook hands with the employees and thanked them for their support.

Amkor, as one of the largest employers in the country, is presently employing some 10,000 Filipinos in its four plants in Metro Manila.

Amkor is the world’s largest provider of contract micro-electronic assembly and test solutions. For more than 30 years, Amkor has been a strategic manufacturing partner of the world’s leading semi-conductor companies.

The company started its operations in the Philippines in 1989. Aside from the Philippines, Amkor has also assembly and test manufacturing sites in Korea, Taiwan, China and Japan.

In addition to its two plants at the Laguna Technopark, Amkor has two more similar state-of-the-art factories in Muntinlupa City.

GMA urges export sector help in strengthening SMEs

STA. ROSA, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited Ford Motor Company Philippines and other big export groups for placing the Philippines back in the international business road map, as she asked them to help empower small and medium enterprises (SME).

The President said focus should go to expanding the domestic market under what economists called as the domestic consumption-based managed-asset replacement strategy, whereby domestic consumption “complements multinational exports as a source of growth.”

In a speech during the launching of this year’s Ford’s export program at Ford’s plant here, the Chief Executive said the focus shift has become more imperative with the “continuing uncertainties in the United States’ economy, which is the Philippines’ business market.”

“We want to ensure that Ford and other manufacturers have a good domestic market to sell their products to,” she said.

To bring this about, she sought to strengthen SMEs, as she hoped that “Ford will continue to be our largest buyer of local auto parts and components.”

She said that part of the strategy is the implementation of a one town-one product program whereby municipal and city governments are given P1 million each for loans to small entrepreneurs.

Last Thursday, she gave to Mayor Pedro Acharon, Jr. a check for P1 million to jumpstart the one town-one product program during the Fourth National Tuna Congress in General Santos City.

In her Ford speech, the President ordered the Department of Trade and Industry regional head to “look for a deserving (autoparts) supplier who should be able to expand his business and we will give a loan of P1 million to that chosen supplier.”

She also announced that the Board of Investments “is working with the Department of Finance to have tailor-made incentives for the automobile industry.”

“Our government policies are geared towards supporting the manufacturing sector,” she said, noting that the country’s source of growth has recently “switched back to export and to manufacturing.”

She lauded Ford “for boosting the country’s image in the automotive export industry” and “for its support to our economy, particularly its contribution to foreign exchange earnings for this year.”

The President also recalled that Ford had been in the country a long time ago. But it left for a while during the dark days of martial law and resumed operations in the Philippines in 1997.

She added that Ford’s expansion in the country could be traced to a memorandum of agreement the President signed with Ford executives during her trip to the US last year.

She said her trip today to Laguna — where she also visited the Nestle Philippines plant in Cabuyao and the Amkor Technology Philippines line assembly at the Laguna Technopark in Santa Rosa, was a call for celebration in honor of an expanding manufacturing sector.

“Let the whole world know that the Philippines is a good place to manufacture products in. Thank you for making the Philippines a good place for investment,” she said.

No mandatory 25 percent cut on gov't agencies' budget for 2002, says Palace

Malacañang today belied reports that the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) has imposed a mandatory 25 percent cut of the budget of all national agencies for the current fiscal year as a result of the tight financial condition of the government.

In an interview, Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin said that it is not true that the DBM is withholding the remaining 25 percent of the budget of state offices.

She said that at the start of the current fiscal year, it was already agreed that only 75 percent of the budget for all agencies would be released and the remaining 25 percent, which is for the fourth quarter of this year, would be given after the completion of a budget performance review of the agency concerned.

Boncodin also explained that the 25 percent is not mandated as reserve since it will be released to an agency after a performance review, thus the agency would eventually get its full budget for the year.

She said that the agency performance review started on August 16, adding that the release of the remaining 25 percent may be deferred if the agency's budget performance is below par.

Boncodin said that in the past, when the DBM releases the whole amount to an agency, some agencies would say that they have already spent all their money but when November or December comes, they would declare a saving and then spend it for other purposes, like increasing the allowances or yearend bonuses of their employees.

"So as early as February, we have already notified all departments and agencies that we will only release 75 percent of their budget and the remainder of 25 percent would be released after they have passed the performance review," Boncodin said.

The budget chief also belied reports that the budget of some departments for fiscal year 2003, particularly that of the Department of Health (DOH), have been slashed, thus endangering basic services, especially for the poor.

Boncodin said that the DBM has not reduced the budget for government hospitals or the DOH. "Hindi po totoo iyon at hindi namin gagawin iyon (That is not true, and we will never do that)," she said.

According to Boncodin the DOH has two foreign-assisted projects (FAP) that would end soon. It was the government counterpart fund for these FAP that was taken out from the DOH 2003 budget, thus making the DOH budget appear as smaller than the preceding year.

"There is no reason for our people to be alarmed by this cut in the DOH budget because it will not entail a reduction of the appropriations for state-owned hospitals," Boncodin said.

Boncodin said that another reason for the apparent decrease in the budget of some agencies as shown in the proposed P804 billion budget for 2003 is the creation of a separate lump sum item, known as the Pension and Retirement Gratuity Fund, amounting to P28 billion.

She said that the amount intended for pension and retirement benefits of individual agencies have been removed from their budgets and included in the separate item in the 2003 General Appropriations Act, which is the P28 billion fund.

PNP, AFP on high alert since September 11 last year to secure installations, embassies in country — Golez

National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez said today the Philippine National Police, assisted by the Armed Forces of the Philippines, has maintained a high level of alert since September 11 last year in compliance with the directive of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to secure all vital installations and establishments in the country.

Golez said the security measures cover foreign embassies in the country, particularly the embassies of the United States, Israel and the United Kingdom which requested them.

“Said embassies have been provided formidable perimeter and internal security,” Golez said, referring to the US, Israeli and British missions.

The National Security Adviser said the supposed Al-Qaeda plot to bomb the US and Israeli embassies, which was reported by the Cable News Network (CNN), is “an old unverified story that came out early this year.”

“So far, in spite of relentless domestic intelligence effort and coordination with counterpart intelligence organizations abroad, there has been no confirmation or more solid evidence that there is really such bomb plot,” Golez said.

“Nonetheless, the security group does not take anything for granted,” Golez said.

Golez said the CNN report is a feature story, not news, on international terrorism.

“I note that the CNN has been running a series on Al-Qaeda, Jemaah Islamiya, and other international terrorist organizations operating in the Asian region,” he said.

Golez said this has been inputted months ago in the current security program.

GMA directs new AFP chief to modernize country’s military doctrine

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the new Armed Forces of Philippines (AFP) Chief of Staff, Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Jr., to modernize the country’s military doctrine, saying the Philippines has enough great battles to inspire and serve as models and lessons for the Filipino soldiers.

The President gave this directive at the turnover ceremonies of the 30th AFP Chief of Staff in Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City at 10 a.m. today.

Defensor, former chief of the Philippine Air Force (PAF), succeeded Gen. Roy Cimatu, who retires after 36 years in the military service.

The Commander-in-Chief said her guidance to modernize the doctrine was also given to Defensor’s predecessors, now Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Gen. Diomedio Villanueva, and Gen. Cimatu.

All of these AFP chiefs observed the continuity of following the guidance of the Commander-in-Chief with internalized convictions belied the critics' charge that short terms in the Office of the Chief of Staff are anathema to stability in the leadership of the armed forces, the President said.

The President pointed out that groups who criticize the AFP chief's short tenure are wrong because they do not appreciate the principle of professional continuity in the military command, the command as an institution and not the command as persons.

"These critics are wrong because they presume that leadership in the armed forces is politicized," the President said.

"Leadership in the armed forces is not politicized, it is a professional," the President stressed, saying that the critics were wrong because they underestimate the loyalty and professionalism of the men in uniform.

The President pointed out that it is of no great consequence how long a Chief of Staff serves his tenure. "What is important and indispensable is the permanence of values, standards and norms in the armed forces," she said.

While guidance of modernizing the military doctrine has been internalized by the leadership of the armed forces through three commanders, the President expressed the belief that now is the time to institutionalize the doctrine throughout the organization.

She said the modernization of the military doctrine should take into account what is called "the post-military affairs revolution thinking" regarding the changing military mission brought about by the growth in the power of the criminal terrorists and other armed non-state organizations that now challenge traditional nation states in many parts of the globe.

She said the 20th century US model of civil military relations and task allocation in which the military looks outward and law enforcement agencies do the domestic chores is breaking down everywhere.

The last revolution in military affairs occurred in the 1980's consisting of high-tech warfare as in Desert Storm, but this revolution, started 20 years ago and more, is over now and a new paradigm is prevailing, the President said.

The President said the country is being confronted today by creatively organized enemies, employing behaviors and technologies ranging from the Stone Age to those at the Imagination's Age.

"This model, as I said, is breaking down everywhere, criminal terrorists and other armed non-state organizations have grown too powerful and adept in extreme cases, we have seen the emergence of enterprise armies. And we have seen that in the Philippines," the President said.

The President said that the modernization of the country's armed forces will allow us to possess the material tools for the job in fighting the emerging wars against criminal ghost states, para-states and criminal enterprise armies.

"But even if we modernize the material tools of our armed forces, we would still lack innovative methodologies and adequately contemporary laws unless we modernize doctrine," she said.

To address the broad range of emerging threats, the President admitted the military needs new weapons. "But we also need new rules of engagements," she said.

The President expressed elation that the military has begun to do the new doctrines. "Now we must manualize them," she said.

GMA pays tribute to Defensor, Cimat

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed the belief that the new Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) Chief of Staff, Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Jr., will uphold the Constitutional mandate and sustain the unity of purpose and singularity of direction that now drive the country's armed forces.

Speaking at the Change of Command ceremony when Gen. Defensor, Jr., former chief of the Philippine Air Force (PAF), took over from outgoing Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu, the President said that Defensor has consistently been known for his "innovative spirit and strategic finesse."

The President said Defensor's First Force strategy for the Philippine Air Force which was developed in response to her call for a definition of AFP doctrines, is among the solid testaments of the general's high quality of leadership and talent.

The President described Defensor, the First Ilonggo to become Chief of Staff, as an "innovator, a pioneer and a trailblazer."

Defensor is only the second PAF chief in AFP's history to make it to the top post. General Arnulfo Acedera made it in 1995 during the time of President Fidel Ramos. Lt. Gen. Pelagio Cruz, the other AFP chief widely regarded to have come from the Air Force, actually rose from the Philippine Constabulary.

The President also congratulated General Cimatu for a mission "magnificently accomplished."

Among Cimatu's biggest accomplishments were the capture of most of the 46 camps of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) during the Central Mindanao War in the summer of the 2000, and the crippling 1,200-man Abu Sayyaf terrorists, reducing the extremists group to about 200.

As commander of the Southern Command, the President said Cimatu continued to impress both Philippine foot soldiers and American top brass with his excellent and aggressive campaign plans against the Abu Sayyaf.

"I remember the Commander-in-Chief of the (US) Pacific (Forces) telling me that in my Southern Commander, Roy Cimatu, I had one of the best generals in the whole world," the President said.

GMA launches 'K4' national prayer movement

GUIGUINTO, Bulacan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the launching of the Kilusang Kwatro (K4), the national prayer movement focused on institutionalizing prayer in daily Filipino life.

The launching, held at Café Valenzuela in Barangay Tabang, was set up by the leadership of the Philippine Ministerial Fellowship Network, one of the members of the organizing committee in the last National Day of Prayer called by the President herself.

K4 seeks to make every Filipino pray for government leaders for four times a day, the first is after one wakes up in the morning and the rest is the saying of grace before the three meals.

The movement is specifically focused on the strategic executives of land – the President, the Governors, the Mayors and barangay captains.

In her brief remarks, the President lauded the efforts of the Philippine Ministerial Fellowship Network for making prayer a daily part of the Filipino lives.

She recalled that she asked the group during a meeting with them at Malacañang to pray against the evil spirits hounding the Filipinos now – skepticism and hopelessness.

The President said the efforts to institutionalize prayer in our daily lives are very laudable.

She said she has always believed that the most powerful arsenal in any war is prayer.

“Sa mga panahong ito, hindi sapat ang modernong sandata. Kailangan din natin ng modernong pag-iisip at mga istrategiya. At sa ating paglalaban, ang sandata na hindi naman bagay na materyal, lalo na sa giyera sa pamamagitan ng katiwalian, ang pinakaimportateng sandata ay yung sandata ng panalangin (In these times, it is not enough to have modern weapons. We also need modern thinking and strategy. And in our fight against corruption, the most effective warfare is prayer),” the President said.

K4 also stands for Kalusugan, Kaligtasan, Karunungan, Katuwiran, four qualities that are being prayed for.

The President said that she hopes to be like David in the Bible, whose prayers were granted by God.

She added that she prays to have King Solomon’s wisdom.

Accompanying the President to the event were Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Presidential Assistant for Cooperatives Roberto Pagdanganan and Presidential Assistant for Religious and Ecclesiastical Affairs Conrado Limcaoco, Jr.

Welcoming the President at the venue were Bulacan Gov. Josefina de la Cruz, Representatives Wilfredo Villarama and Joel Villanueva, Guiguinto Mayor Ambrosio Cruz, Jr., Bishops Eddie Villanueva, Efren Tindero, Romero Corpuz, Reverend Jonel Milan and Benjie Gatchalian, PNP Regional Director Oscar Calderon and North Luzon Command chief Maj. Gen. Rodolfo Garcia.

During the ceremonies, the audience prayed over the safety and success of the President and the rest of the executive family.

GMA releases P10 M to Bulacan provincial gov’t for use as loan for town SMEs

GUIGUINTO, Bulacan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today released the amount of P10 million to the provincial government of Bulacan.

The amount, according to the President, would be given as loan by the Land Bank of the Philippines to the first ten towns of Bulacan that would be able to come up with project proposals on how to develop a certain product.

The President, who made the announcement in her speech before Bulacan barangay officials at the Bulwagang Bayan Covered Court here, said the P10 million is the first of many loans that the government would be granting to small towns in the bid to further develop the domestic market.

“This is what we call One Town, One Product, One Million Peso enterprise,” the President said.

The President noted her earlier call on the Filipino people to concentrate efforts in the development the domestic market through small and medium enterprises.

She noted that the Filipino people must rely more on the domestic demand to prop up the economy, rather than depend on the export market.

Aside from this, the President called on the new Bulacan barangay officials to practice “new politics” by being true to their responsibilities.

She noted that barangay officials are the “frontliners” in the administration’s bid to build a strong republic.

Earlier, the President officiated the oathtaking of barangay officials to the Lakas party.

She was also presented a copy of the signed Memorandum of Agreement entered into by the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System, San Jose del Monte City Water District (SJDMCWD), Bulacan provincial government and Local Water Utilities Authority for the supply of raw water by MWSS to the SJDMCWD.

The President also distributed 340 peacekeeping kits, consisting of gadgets such as whistles, flashlights and night sticks to 245 barangay officials.

The President was accompanied to the event by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Presidential Assistant for Northern Luzon Renato Diaz, Representatives Wilfredo Villarama, Wilhelmino Sy-Alvarado, Lorna Silverio and Reylina Nicolas, Gov. Josefina de la Cruz, Vice Gov. aurelio Plamenco and Guiguinto Mayor Ambrosio Cruz, Jr.

Malacañang Museum asks for citizens help in accumulating Presidential mementos

The Presidential Museum in Malacañang is asking generous citizens to lend or donate their memorabilia items about former Presidents for display at the museum.

Presidential Museum Director Missy Reyes said the museum is looking for mementos and souvenir items of the former occupants of the historic palace to be featured in the exhibit honoring all the Presidents.

“No other place could be more appropriate to hold the treasures and memories of the Philippines’ seat of power,” Reyes said.

The museum will also showcase the antiques and artworks collected in the Palace over the years, making all the Palace treasures accessible for viewing by the Filipino public.

There will also be a Presidential Library, which will hold all the book collections — both antique and new — which have belonged to the former residents of the Palace.

The museum will also exhibit memorabilia of former First Ladies.

Last May 2002, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered that the historic building adjacent to Malacañang Palace be transformed into the Presidential Museum and Library.

Named Kalayaan Hall during the administration of President Corazon Aquino, this beautiful building with neo-classical architecture was once the Maharlika Hall during the Marcos era.

Previously, it was the Executive Building where the American Governor-Generals held office in the 1920s.

For more information, please contact Director Missy Reyes or Evelyn Franco of the Presidential Museum Office at telephone Nos. 736-8639 or 736-8617.

GMA praises kidnap victim for courage, determination in pursuing case

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today praised kidnap victim Agnes Guirindola for her courage and determination in pursuing the case against two men who abducted her in 1994 and were sentenced to death by lethal injection.

The President personally relayed her message to Guirindola during her visit to the kidnap victim's house in Marikina City this morning.

During their conversation, Guirindola presented to the President a letter requesting her not to grant a parole to her convicted kidnapers, Venancio Roxas and Roberto Gungon.

President Macapagal-Arroyo arrived at the Guirindola residence at around 10:30 a.m. together with Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. and Marikina City Mayor Marides Fernando.

She was welcomed by the victim's parents, Francisco and Elvira Guirindola.

Guirindola was kidnapped, shot in the face and left for dead in a grassy lot in Batangas in January 1994.

While in the custody of her abductors, Guirindola told the President that she was unable to identify a third suspect who was then in the company of Roxas and Gungon.

Last week, Quezon City Regional Trial Court Judge Demetrio Macapagal, Sr. sentenced Roxas to death for kidnapping and serious illegal detention with frustrated murder.

Roxas was also ordered to pay Guirindola the amount of P1.5 million in moral and exemplary damages and more than P300,000 in actual damages.

Gungon was meted the death penalty by Quezon City Regional Trial Court Judge Luca Bersamin in February 1995. Both are now detained at the National Bilibid Prison in Muntinlupa City.

Records showed that Guirindola, then a 20-year-old student taking up engineering at De La Salle University, was abducted by Roxas and Gungon while she was driving along Panay Avenue in Quezon City at about 3:30 p.m. on January 12, 1994.

The two men brought her to Batangas where she was forced to drink laced soda which caused her to feel dizzy and lapse into a coma.

When Guirindola woke up at about 10 p.m., the men had already taken the money from her wallet as well as the jewelry she was wearing.

Guirindola then said she needed to answer a call of nature, and Gungon led her to a grassy area. She had just finished relieving herself when she saw "white sparks," fell down and lost consciousness.

The victim did not realize she had been shot until after she regained consciousness and found blood oozing from her face and neck.

She narrated to the President that she even walked for about a kilometer and followed a light that led her to a small house where she sought help.

DOJ files cases against errant judges, prosecutor

Government efforts to send hoodlums in robes to jail are paying off, with the Department of Justice (DOJ) filing administrative and criminal cases against errant judges and court personnel.

A report, reflecting achievements against targets set in the State of the Nation Address (SONA) of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, said the DOJ had recently filed graft cases against two judges and a prosecutor.

Charged were judges Pedro Gutierrez and Rodrigo Lorenzo and First Assistant Chief Prosecutor Oscar Corpus.

The report said Gutierrez was charged administratively before the Office of the Court Administrator, Supreme Court for giving, on March 1 this year, the accused unwarranted benefit, advantage or preference with the discharge of judicial function through manifest partiality or gross inexcusable negligence.

He was also charged criminally before the Office of the Ombudsman for violation of Republic Act 3019 or the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act.

Despite strong evidence of prosecution, he was alleged to have granted the accused's demurrer to evidence involving 986.5 grams of shabu in an order dated August 29, 2002.

On the other hand, Lorenzo was charged administratively before the Office of the Court Administrator, Supreme Court for grave misconduct.

The report noted that Lorenzo rendered an unjust judgment — while committing gross ignorance of the law of procedure and bias and partiality — for ordering on August 15, 2002 the release on bail of five Chinese nationals before all prosecution witnesses could be presented.

The Chinese were arrested while mixing 13,978.5 grams of shabu components and while possessing another 4,606.1 grams of the illegal drug. They were later released on bail at P500,000 each.

He was also criminally charged with violation of RA 3019 before the Office of the Ombudsman.

Meanwhile, Corpus was charged with gross neglect of duty and inefficiency and incompetence in the performance of official duties.

The initial hearing of Corpus's case was conducted on August 22.

Gov't pursues criminal raps against big-time smugglers

Criminals involved in big-time smuggling will soon find themselves behind bars.

The Department of Justice (DOJ) has filed at least 10 smuggling cases in court, from the 34 cases it received from law enforcement agencies from December 2001 to August 30, 2002.

An update of SONA accomplishments prepared by the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) said that three of the 34 cases were already submitted for resolution, 19 under preliminary investigation, one remanded to the Bureau of Customs for further investigation and one dismissed.

It said the customs bureau has filed eight criminal cases before the DOJ for violations of customs and tariff laws.

The PMS update showed the attainments against targets set in the July State of the Nation Address (SONA) of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

The PMS report also noted that government had seized some 36,005 bags of smuggled rice since June 2002.

The most recent confiscation involved about 7,000 bags of Vietnam rice worth some P3.5 million at the Zamboanga Port last August 23.

This has prompted Philippine Coast Guard and other officials to meet on August 28 and make an inventory of ports and wharves nationwide unmanned by state authorities.

Meanwhile, officials have implemented measures to carry out the order of President Macapagal-Arroyo to seize smuggled goods, crush smuggling syndicates and get big-time smugglers.

Among the measures made were the:

- Streamlining of coordination between the DOJ and the customs bureau in prosecuting cases against violators of customs laws;
- Drafting of an anti-smuggling bill to provide clearer basis for prosecuting and imposing heavier penalties on smugglers, for certification of the President as urgent;
- Deputation of the military and the police to help the customs bureau in enforcing tariff and customs laws, particularly against rice and sugar smuggling;

Strengthening of the intelligence network to compile, validate and analyze information on persons suspected to be involved in smuggling.

GMA names Cimatu to head Middle East crisis committee

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today designated former Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) Chief of Staff Gen. Roy Cimatu to head a crisis committee that would oversee the evacuation of Filipinos in Iraq.

In her regular luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said the committee would also assess when and how Filipinos in the Middle East would be bailed out, in case the United States made good its threat to attack Iraq.

The US had threatened to use military force against Iraq if the latter continued to refuse international inspectors access to sites suspected of being used for building nuclear and biological weapons.

The President said the committee, whose members would be composed of officials from the Departments of Foreign Affairs and Labor and Employment, would further study the consequences on Filipinos resulting from a US attack on Iraq.

“One of them, for instance, is the supply of oil,” she said.

The President called Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople in New York to inform him of the creation of the Middle East crisis committee.

“It’s a splendid idea,” she quoted Ople as saying.

The President, who would still have to inform the recently retired AFP Chief of Staff of his new designation, noted Cimatu’s superb operational record, having “captured 46 (Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebel) camps.”

She believed that Cimatu could handle the job.

“I’d like to have strong people,” the President said of Cimatu, who retired after 36 years in the military service.

Cimatu was also credited for crippling the 1,200-man Abu Sayyaf terrorists and reducing the notorious kidnap-for-ransom group to less than 200.

GMA names Santillan as new PAF Chief

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the appointment of Major General Nestor Santillan as Commanding General of the Philippine Air Force (PAF).

Santillan replaced former PAF chief, Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Jr., who was appointed by the President as the new Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

The Chief Executive made the announcement during her regular luncheon meeting this afternoon with members of the Malacañang Press Corps.

Prior to his appointment, Santillan, 54, was vice commander of the PAF, a position he held since Nov. 9, 2001.

A native of Manila, Santillan is a graduate of the Philippine Military Academy, class 1970.

Santillan served as commander of Tactical Operations Command of the Mactan-Benito Air Base; Wing Commander of the PAF's 220th Air Wing and the 410th Maintenance Wing, at the Mactan-Benito Air Base and at Clark Air Base.

He also served as Battalion Commander of the First Security Battalion of the Presidential Security Group from Feb. 1, 1985 to March 20, 1986.

Santillan received numerous awards and decorations, among them the PAF Aeronautical Badge (Basic Plot Training), PAF Aeronautical Badge (Senior Pilot Training), Commanding General Award, Military Merit Medal, Golden Aviator Award for Command and Leadership for Performance as Commander of the Tactical Operations Command, Golden Aviator Award for Research and Development, and the Anti-Dissidence Campaign Medal.

He is married to Enya Santillan with four children, two boys and two daughters.

GMA to ask Taipans to go into housing

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she would ask the country's top Chinese businessmen, or taipans, to help the government in its mass housing program.

In her luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President recalled that during the term of former President Fidel Ramos, he also asked the taipans to help the government put up a world-class international airport.

"This time I will not ask them to put up an airport. I'll ask them to go into housing," the President said, adding that he would ask Chairman Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) to organize a meeting with the taipans.

According to the President, the taipans do not even have to form a corporation, or participate in a public bidding that would be challenged by other groups. "It would be a private sector initiative," the President said.

The President said she had directed Defensor and other concerned officials to remove the bottlenecks that have caused the delay in the implementation of the government's housing program.

She said that the Pag-IBIG Fund as an institution does not seem to be able to absorb the 100,000 housing units that she had ordered built for one year.

The President said that the government policy on housing, including that of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), should be geared toward removing these bottlenecks,

GMA commends NBI, PSG operatives for apprehension of smuggled rice shipment

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated agents of the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) and members her own Presidential Security Guard (PSG) who were directed to secure a private warehouse in Antipolo City where smuggled rice worth P1.8 billion was reported to be stashed.

The President said she went to the site of the warehouse “to let them know that we appreciate their work.”

The President said that a warrant of seizure and detention was expected to be obtained from the court anytime today.

The President said that since she was already in the neighborhood, she decided to personally extend her congratulations to the NBI agents and her PSG’s special reaction unit, or “her men in black,” to commend them for doing a good job.

Later in his press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said the warehouse has been effectively cordoned off for about a week and there is no way that the smuggled rice would be spirited out.

The President said that the law enforcers, whose main job should be “sleuthing,” have been forced to stay within the vicinity of the warehouse because the warrant has not been seized up yet.

The premium smuggled rice reportedly arrived at the Port of Manila in May and June from Vietnam and were shipped through several container vans.

According to the Intelligence and Enforcement Group of the Bureau of Customs, the rice shipment did not have the proper importation permit from the National Food Authority (NFA).

The 23,460 cavans of rice were reportedly declared as raw materials for the making of “sotanghon” by the manufacturer for re-exportation.

GMA ensures SME participation in economic growth

Small and medium enterprises (SME) nationwide are looking forward to getting a P1-million loan with easy payback terms and to reaping gains from the government’s one-town, one-product program.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today identified areas where the one-town, one-product strategy, an effective global economic formula that aimed to raise domestic supply and consumption, would be carried out.

She said she would look into the loaning portfolio for SMEs and where the loans are being made to “make sure that every town has at least P1 million of SME loans.”

In her regular luncheon with the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said she launched the strategy, hoping to develop SMEs, early this month in a visit to Lakewood, Zamboanga del Sur.

Lakewood would get the P1 million loan with a four-year payback term for fruit production. She said nine other Zamboanga del Sur towns would get the loan for the production of hybrid rice seeds.

“The PSF (Presidential Social Fund) has money in the Landbank for lending out,” she added.

In Laguna, the President picked on Cabuyao town to receive the P1 million loan for a SME involved in the recycling of soft packs of Nestle Philippines into construction materials.

She said the money would come from the Small Business Guarantee Fund with counterparts from Nestle and Rep. Joaquin Chipeco, Jr.

Still in Laguna, she ordered regional officials of the Department of Trade and Industry to identify SMEs involved in autoparts supply in Sta. Rosa, where multinational car-making plants are located, to get the loan.

She also hinted at the grant of a similar loan to an electronics SME in Sta. Rosa, Laguna to help raise the local value added of Amkor Technology Philippines, a semi-conductor producer, "which suffered last year because of the decline in the market for computers and chips."

The President had given P1 million each to the town of Monkayo in Compostela Valley for a SME into gold jewelry production and to Mayor Pedro Acharon, Jr. of General Santos City for a SME into tuna production.

In Davao del Norte, she was informed by Governor Rodolfo del Rosario that many SMEs in various towns of the province produced picnic bags and other products from cogon grass.

"They have the market and they have the technology," she said, while nodding to extending the towns the loan.

Davao Oriental Governor Ma. Elena Palma Gil also told the President that SMEs in the coastal towns of the province produced agar-agar marketed to the FMC in Cebu.

The President also noted that the Technology and Livelihood Resource Center would pick up some proposals from SMEs in Bulacan and Quezon.

GMA orders evacuation of Filipinos from Iraq to Jordan

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the immediate evacuation of 118 Filipino workers, including non-essential embassy personnel and their dependents from Baghdad in Iraq to Amman, Jordan.

The Chief Executive made the announcement during a luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corp at Malacañang Palace.

In his press briefing later, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said the President ordered the immediate evacuation of Filipino workers in Baghdad after conferring with Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople, who is now in New York City.

Bunye also said that before her conversation with Ople, the President received a recommendation from Philippine Ambassador to the United States Albert del Rosario for the Philippines to evacuate its citizens from Baghdad. Del Rosario, Bunye said, earlier met with United States Assistant Secretary of State for Asia and the Pacific James Kelly.

"The US representative noted that any evacuation at this point would be a very sound judgment," Bunye quoted Kelly as saying.

In a memorandum for the President, Ople said that while the Philippine government has no final information that a US attack on Iraq is imminent, "our judgment is well-based and reasonable and we would err on the side of prudence."

The DFA has also ordered non-essential embassy personnel and their dependents to join the Filipino workers in moving out of Iraq.

He stressed that the order applies only to Filipinos there, adding that the Filipinos in other Middle East countries are not immediately affected.

"We have not yet reached a critical mass of information with respect to other Middle East posts," Ople said.

Ople also said that the contingency plans for other Middle East posts will be activated only when necessary. “Each of these posts has been authorized additional spending money — aside from their existing embassy funds — which may be used for emergency evacuation,” he added.

He noted that the evacuation of the Filipino workers in Iraq is just a first step, saying that “this is not yet the major movement that we have planned for.”

Based on the DFA report, there are only 118 Filipinos in Iraq, which include some 10 overseas workers and 30 Filipino technicians that form part of the United Nations peacekeeping force in Northern Iraq.

GMA to open new food plant in Batangas Thursday

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will likely stress the importance of fresh capital pumped into the economy that would create hundreds of new jobs, when she leads officials in opening Thursday the RFM President Enterprises Corp. (RPEC), a P500-million state-of-the-art food manufacturing plant at the Philtown Industrial Estate in Tanauan City, Batangas.

The President earlier announced that the Philippines remained an attractive investment destination.

“The strategic synergy of the strengths of RFM Corporation of the Philippines and the Uni-President Group of Taiwan highlights the attractiveness of business partnerships between local and foreign firms that continue to draw investors to our shores,” she said.

The President is expected to unveil the plant marker and later tour the RPEC plant while inspecting its modern facilities and interacting with Filipino employees of the firm.

She will also receive a briefing from RFM president and chief executive officer Jose A. Concepcion III and Uni-President Enterprises Corp. business unit group president Alex Lo.

The President will be joined by other national and local officials.

Uni-President is Taiwan’s largest food and beverage company while RFM Corporation is one of the country’s top producers of food and beverage. RPEC is the two firms’ joint venture signed last March 1.

The President witnessed the signing ceremonies in Malacañang.

Concepcion III said “the new food plant represents the realization of our joint venture’s commitment to produce superior and value-for-money noodles and noodle products for the Filipino.”

He said Thursday’s event would see the unveiling of noodle products under the “Saucy Mi” and the “Nooda Crunch” brands.

Uni-President group president Jason Lin said “Uni-President has long desired to be a part of the Philippines business community because it believed in the country’s future and in its people.

“Our exposure to your culture and to some of your business organizations has further confirmed our corporation’s vision of establishing a strong presence in this market,” Lin said.

Gov't looks into Payatas land expropriation disposition

The Chief Presidential Legal Counsel is reviewing a proposed executive order that will direct the expropriation and disposition of the Payatas estate to qualified informal settlers and its actual occupants.

A Presidential Management staff (PMS) update on achievements against targets set in the State of the Nation Address of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo showed the continuing identification of properties in the estate.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) said it sought to identify which parts of the estate had valid titles, spurious titles or were untitled at all.

The DENR said Payatas land with valid titles would be expropriated by the government and would be disposed through direct sale or the Insular Government Property Sales Application to beneficiaries.

Later, the government would issue the corresponding certificates of actual occupancy, orders of awards and deeds of sale.

Areas with fake titles would be cancelled and the land reverted to government. A presidential proclamation would then be issued for land disposition.

Untitled lands would be disposed, following the issuance of a proclamation, through a miscellaneous sales application.

The President had been visiting Payatas to see how it could be transformed into a model community and how the lives of the area's people could be made better.

Payatas used to be the dumping site of Metro Manila's tons and tons of garbage. The people there used to get income by digging into mountains of garbage dumped in the area.

GMA cites investors for helping RP sustain economic growth

TANAUAN CITY, Batangas — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited domestic and foreign investors for showing confidence in the country's healthy business atmosphere and for pumping the economy with fresh capital that result in the creation of more jobs.

The President noted the growing partnership between the government and business enterprises, as she led officials in inaugurating the P500 million state-of-the-art food plant of RFM President Enterprises Corporation (RPEC) at the Philtown Industrial Estate here.

“Congratulations and thank you for showing your confidence in investing in the Philippines,” the President told Jose Concepcion III, chief executive officer of RFM Corp., and Alex Lo, chief executive officer of Uni-President Enterprises.

Uni-President is Taiwan’s largest food and beverage company while RFM Corporation is one of the country’s top producers of food and beverage.

RPEC is a joint venture of the two firms. The President witnessed the signing of the joint venture in Malacañang last March 1.

The President earlier announced that the Philippines remained an attractive investment destination.

“The strategic synergy of the strengths of RFM Corporation of the Philippines and the Uni-President Group of Taiwan highlights the attractiveness of business partnerships between local and foreign firms that continue to draw investors to our shores,” she said.

In a program, the President unveiled the marker of the newly-built RPEC plant, after which she was given a tour of the facility and inspected the automated instant noodle-making machine and viewed the processing of noodles, RPEC’s main product line.

She also received a briefing from Concepcion and Lo on plant operations and the history of each other’s companies.

The two businessmen told the President that the formidable union of RFM and Uni-President was a perfect match, since both firms started as flour mills and later evolved as among the largest branded food and beverage companies in the Philippines and Taiwan.

The President joined RPEC officials and officials in tasting “Saucy Mi” instant noodles inside the plant.

They said RPEC hoped to revolutionize the country’s food industry and market.

They expressed optimism that Filipinos would welcome their new, exciting and innovative products.

Following her visit to RPEC, the President made a surprise inspection of a rice store at the Tanauan public market to see for herself the constant P16 price per kilo of National Food Authority rice being sold to the public.

Golez says GMA order to evacuate Filipinos in Iraq a precautionary step

The order of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for the immediate evacuation of Filipino overseas workers in Iraq was only a precautionary measure, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez today said.

“Iyan po ay isang pag-iingat lamang (That was only a precautionary measure),” Golez said in a radio interview this morning.

Golez stressed that there were still no clear indications of hostilities erupting in Iraq, although the Philippine government continued to monitor the developments in the Middle East region.

“Wala pa talagang implikasyon na maaring magsimula ang kaguluhan sa Iraq, bagamat mino-monitor natin ng husto iyan (There are no indications yet that hostilities might erupt in Iraq although we continue to monitor the development),” he said.

Golez noted that the President’s evacuation order was based on the recommendation of Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople.

Golez added that the Philippines, like other nations around the world, looked forward to the address of United States President George W. Bush before the United Nations General Assembly on Friday (September 13).

There are only 118 Filipinos in Iraq, to include some 10 overseas workers and 30 Filipino technicians who form part of the United Nations peacekeeping force in Northern Iraq.

Aside from OFWs, the order to evacuate also includes non-essential embassy personnel and their dependents from Baghdad in Iraq to Amman, Jordan.

In his memorandum for the President, Ople (in New York) said that while the Philippine government had no final information that a US attack on Iraq was imminent, "our judgment is well-based and reasonable and we would err on the side of prudence."

Filipino-Chinese Federation responds to GMA appeal for help for returning Filipinos

In response to the appeal of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for the public to help the thousands of returning Filipinos from Malaysia and Sabah, the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Inc. (FFCCCII) has launched a campaign to mobilize resources to address the pressing needs of the returnees.

Dubbed as "Paglingap 2002," FFCCCII Secretary General Joaquin Sy said the federation has mobilized its nationwide network and facilities to generate more support for the Filipinos expelled by Malaysia.

In a letter sent to Malacañang, Sy informed the President that on the first day of their solicitation campaign alone, the federation gathered nearly P1 million worth of cash and goods from Filipino-Chinese businessmen and individuals based in Binondo, Manila.

Only recently, the FFCCCII was cited by the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) as one of the first private sector organizations to help the Filipino returnees.

As soon as the first batch of returnees landed in the Southern Philippines, the FFCCCII, through its Welfare Committee, mobilized its local chambers in Zamboanga and Tawi-Tawi to provide noodles, canned goods, drinking water and other necessities.

"Our local chambers continue to work closely with local chief executives and local social welfare officers for the proper distribution of donations," Sy assured the President in a letter.

In a radio address last Sept. 8, President Macapagal-Arroyo appealed for donations from the public to help the returning Filipinos.

"We need to find jobs for them. We need to comfort them in their despair. And we need to help provide them with food, medicine and temporary shelter," the President said.

The President said that donations for the returnees, either in cash or in kind, could be sent to the local chapters of the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC) and the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

GMA lauds Sykes Asia for making RP hub of call center operations in Asia-Pacific Rim

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded officials of Sykes Asia for their decision to make its call center facility in Makati City as the hub for its operations not only in the Asia Pacific Rim but elsewhere in the world.

During her visit to the facility this morning, the President also personally thanked Michael John Henderson, Sykes' managing director for Asia and Pacific Rim, for its P200 million new investment in the facility.

The P200 million investments represent a continued expansion of Syke's already well-established operations in the Philippines and reinforced its position as the leading outsource call center provider in the country.

The President said that Sykes' newly-opened call center is a testimony to the competitive advantage of the Philippines in the information and communications technology (ICT). "It is the wave of the 21st century," she said.

Henderson pointed out that the "pro-active" involvement of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration in the development of the ICT industry was a significant factor in their decision to expand their investment in the Philippines.

"The Board of Investments (BOI) has provided an open forum for discussion," Henderson said, stressing the essentially of operating in an economic and political environment that supports their business doctrine and corresponding methodology that is based on continuous performance improvement.

Housed on the six floors of the Robinson's Summit Center at the Ayala Avenue in Makati City, the new Sykes Asia facility provides 1,132 fully-fitted call center seats and complements the existing 674 seats in its facility in the Ortigas business district.

The company currently employs around 1,500 people, with this figure expected to reach 2,000 by the end of the year.

"This is a best-in-class facility," Henderson informed the President, saying that the Sykes facility in Makati City is the primary hub for its unique Asynchronous Transfer Model (ATM) global communications network.

"This allows for unrivaled quality, flexibility and availability when handling customer calls from throughout the world," Henderson said.

Henderson said that its Philippine operation is not so much an offshore location, but rather a critical hub for their integrated global services.

As the regional headquarters for Sykes Asia and Pacific Rim operations, the new facility in Makati City supports three other centers in the region.

Sykes Asia provides customer support for 21 clients, handling calls in different languages from throughout Asia and the United States.

Clients include Microsoft, Kodak, Emerson Electric, Macromedia, American Express, Apple and Adobe Systems.

Earlier, the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) said that the country's growing call center industry is expected to generate some 24,000 jobs for skilled workers in the next two years.

In its Labor Market Intelligence Report (LMIR), TESDA said the availability of highly-skilled Filipino workers fluent in English had continued to boost the country's bid to become the global "call center capital" and a major international e-services hub.

On several occasions, the President had stressed the country's vital role as a center of quality, world-class ICT services.

The President pointed to ICT as the "strategic tool that would propel the Philippines to its proper niche in the global village in the 21st century."

The Department of Labor and Employment has described the call center business as the country's "latest sunshine industry."

It noted the "vast growth potential and bright job prospects" in the field, as the Philippines has so far filled up only 10,000 "seats."

The round-the-clock call center operations are handled by "seats" composed of two or three personnel – or customer service representatives – who manage telephone lines in work shifts.

"Customer services" handle client queries and complaints and provide solutions through telemarketing, computer product help desks, financial services, and assistance in transport and freight, insurance, hotels, and information technology.

Government experts have predicted that the country, with its English-speaking workforce and capacity to provide premium, multilingual, and multimedia services in wide-ranging ICT applications, could clinch the "call center capital of the world" status in this decade.

Citing Department of Trade and Industry projections, TESDA also expected local call center revenues to increase from US$173 million to US$864 million in 2004, following the industry's growth by more than 200 percent from 2000 to 2001.

There are 16 industry players comprising the Call Center Association of the Philippines.

The giant Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company has also announced a $5.5-million investment in a 500-seat venture with Parlance Systems, Inc. and in other industry agreements.

The Reese Brothers in the US also bared plans to invest in a call center project at the Subic Bay Freeport Zone, which would open an additional 2,000 jobs.

RP has ample supply of crude, oil sharing arrangement with Asean if Iraq war erupts

Malacañang today assured that the Philippines has an ample supply of petroleum on top of an existing oil-sharing agreement with its neighbor countries in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) in the event of a war in Iraq.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye stressed that based on the previous statements provided by the Department of Energy (DOE), the Philippines has a petroleum supply which could last for 69 to 70 days.

"The fact is no actual hostilities have started which could actually constrict our oil supply," Bunye said.

The Philippine, he said, may rely on the petroleum security arrangement with its fellow members in the Asean in circumstances of both shortage and oversupply of petroleum.

The said agreement was signed by the foreign ministers of Asean member-countries during a meeting held in Manila on June 24, 1986.

Under a shortage situation, the agreement provides that the oil-exporting members of Asean commit to supply crude oil and petroleum products provided these would be for domestic consumption in the distressed Asean member-countries.

The term “shortage” refers to an emergency situation in which at least one Asean member-country suffers extreme petroleum shortage, due to unexpected natural calamity such as earthquake or other calamity such as an explosion of production facilities or an abrupt stoppage of import due to war or other similar crisis.

In the event of a shortage or oversupply, the member-country in distress shall give notice to the Asean Economic Ministers on Energy Cooperation, which, in turn, would decide within three weeks to put the emergency petroleum-sharing scheme into operation.

The agreement was signed in consideration of the establishment of a petroleum security arrangement among Asean member-countries towards the strengthening of the economic resilience of the individual member-country as well as to the economic resilience and solidarity of Asean.

No links whatsoever between First Gentleman and PIATCO, Palace stresses

Malacañang today reiterated that the First Gentleman, Jose Miguel Arroyo, has no involvement whatsoever in the flawed contract with the Philippine International Air Terminals Co. (PIATCO) for the construction of Terminal 3 of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA).

“There is absolutely no link between the First Gentleman and PIATCO,” Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said this afternoon in his daily press briefing in Malacañang.

Bunye said that the review of the contract with PIATCO was ordered by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo herself and such action would be contradictory to a situation where the First Gentleman is linked to PIATCO or any of its officers.

Earlier, the President charged former Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile with spreading “unverified and malicious” statement about the First Gentleman.

The press secretary also brushed aside suggestions that the First Gentleman should appear at the Senate inquiry about the PIATCO contract.

“That is very speculative at this time because we see no basis as of now for the Senate to invite the First Gentleman,” Bunye said.

Senate President Franklin Drilon has already said that the First Gentleman has nothing to do with the activities of PIATCO public relations consultant Alfonso Liongson.

GMA leads law enforcers in smuggled rice seizure

ANTIPOLO CITY — To prove that authorities were out to seize suspected smuggled rice in a warehouse here, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today returned to this city, leading officials and law enforcers confiscate the illegal goods in favor of government.

“I was not kuryente yesterday,” the President said, referring to media reports that she was a victim of a bum steer.

In an interview with reporters in front of stacks of sacks of rice in Sitio Pagumbong, Barangay Mayamot, Lower Antipolo City, the President clarified that she never intended to enter the warehouse when she made a surprise visit to the area yesterday.

“I came here knowing that Tony’s (BOC Commissioner Antonio Bernardo) warrant is still to come but I was not intending to enter,” she said.

She noted that if the warehouse operators had nothing to hide, they should have allowed her, being the President of the Republic, to enter the warehouse premises.

She pointed out that she was there because she wanted to praise the NBI agents who were keeping watch over the warehouse.

Today, a combined team from the Philippine National Police (PNP), the Bureau of Customs (BOC), the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) and the Presidential Security Group (PSG) seized some P1.8 billion worth of smuggled rice in a raid before the President's appearance.

The President personally saw the contents of more than 80 container vans in the warehouse. The rice was said to have been shipped from Thailand and Vietnam in May and June of this year.

The imported rice shipment was reportedly consigned to Dynamic Logistics and Trucking Services.

The President, together with Bernardo and other government operatives, also visited another bonded warehouse in Marikina City where tons of high-grade imported rice were also stocked.

Bernardo said the P23-million worth of rice were imported by Export Supply, Inc.

He said the rice shipments were deemed illegal due to lack of necessary import permits and would be seized in favor of the government.

The President said the rice would be given to the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

GMA leads observance of 102nd anniversary of 'Battle of Pulang Lupa' in Marinduque

TORRIJOS, Marinduque — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the commemoration of the 102nd anniversary of the Battle of Pulang Lupa in Barangay Bolo here, a mountainous part of the province overlooking Tayabas Bay, Mongpong Pass and Tablas Strait.

The President was accorded foyer honors immediately after she arrived here by a helicopter, including a 21-gun salute. Afterwards, she led the flag-raising ceremony.

Shortly after, the President led in the lowering of the flag to half-mast to honor those who lost their lives in the battle.

According to history, there are only five battles that the Filipinos won in the Filipino-American war, one of which was the Battle of Pulang Lupa.

The leader of the Filipino guerilla group was Colonel Maximo Abad. In her brief remarks, the President noted the heroism shown by the native Marinduquenos in the battle against the American soldiers.

The President said that Filipinos were able to overpower the many American soldiers, including Capt. Devereau Shields of the then 29th Infantry of the United States Army.

She noted that the Americans were our enemies then but now, they are our allies. "Sa kasalukuyan, kaibigan natin sila (Now, they are our friends)," the President said.

In entreating the Marinduquenos to continue remembering the heroism shown by their forefathers, the President called on the people to support her efforts to build a strong Republic.

The President said the war this time is not against foreign enemies but against poverty.

She urged the local folk to resist the communist rebels who come to their areas but rally behind the government.

During the commemoration, the President was accorded a "puton," a traditional welcome ritual, steeped in color and mirth, done through song and dance. It is indigenous only to the province.

The President was turned into a queen (if only for a while) by placing her on a throne, crowning her and showering her with flowers and butterflies so that her wishes, as they say, would come true.

In her brief remarks, the President cited this rich tradition, saying that Marinduquenos are noted for their hospitality to visitors.

She also announced that she will be giving out P6 million to the province to be distributed to the six towns under her “One-Product, One-Town, One Million Peso Enterprise” program.

The President suggested that the province should continue to develop its butterfly culture while considering the ban of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) on endangered species.

SPEED program to give discounts to 756 big power users

At least 219 big power users stand to benefit, starting this month, from the Special Package to Enhance Electricity Demand (SPEED), a program that gives discounts to large end-users for energy consumed above the customer’s baseline load.

The SPEED program will be expanded to cover another 437 customers in October, said a report from the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) outlining achievements made against targets set in the State of the Nation Address (SONA) of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

The report said beneficiaries could avail themselves of a fixed discount of P0.92 per kilowatthour from the Manila Electric Co. (Meralco) and P0.80 per kilowatthour from the National Power Corp. (Napocor) for their respective customers from one month up to 24 months.

The SPEED’s program implementors are the Departments of Energy (DOE) and of Trade and Industry (DTI).

The adoption of SPEED is in response to the President’s directive in her Second SONA “to work together to give price incentives to large users so that excess power can be utilized, economic activity can be encouraged, and jobs can be created.”

Large power users, usually manufacturing firms, would be able to reduce their electricity costs. Generated savings could be channeled to more benefits for their workers.

Meanwhile, the DOE and the Departments of Finance (DOF) and of Justice (DOJ) and the National Economic Development Authority (NEDA) are working on concrete courses of action stemming from results of recent reviews of state contracts with Independent Power Producers (IPP).

The four agencies hoped to complete their tasks in three months.

On one hand, the DOJ and the Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Management (PSALM) would be formulating an action plan on five IPP contracts with legal and financial issues.

Both agencies would also prepare and file actions against contracting parties and officials responsible for terms unfavorable to government.

On the other hand, the DOE and PSALM would take steps to arrive at an acceptable solution on 22 IPP contracts requiring further study and clarification of financial terms.

Further, the NEDA and the DOJ would enhance terms on two IPP contracts with remedial policy issues and would undertake administrative measures, as necessary.

The PMS report further noted government gains in strengthening of the operations of electric cooperatives (EC) nationwide.

It said the National Electrification Administration (NEA) had met with EC officials last July 25 and August 6.

In the meetings, it was agreed that a “people’s criteria,” or the parameters by which ECs would be judged by customers, would be set up. The parameters included efficiency and reliable delivery of power, prompt services, affordability and reasonableness of power rates.

It was also agreed that ECs belonging to categories A+, A and B would submit their performance improvement plans (PIP) while those in categories C, D and E would submit their rehabilitation plans (RP).

Recent reports showed that of the 119 ECs, 30 have submitted their PIPs while 22 gave their RPs.

Besides this, the ECs have continued to carry out Task Force Kapatid whereby they voluntarily assist each other in energizing critical areas.

To enhance the operations of ECs, Executive Order 119 was issued on August 28 to restructure electric cooperatives.

GMA orders probe, suspension of Lung Center Executive Director

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the preventive suspension of Lung Center of the Philippines (LCP) Executive Director Dr. Fernando A. Melendres over allegations of corruption and abuse of authority.

Through Administrative Order No. 39, Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, by authority of the President, directed the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) to conduct a formal investigation on Melendres, ordering his preventive suspension for 90 days pending the formal investigation and authorizing the Secretary of Health to appoint an interim officer-in-charge of the LCP.

Melendres, according to A.O. No. 39, is the subject of a complaint filed by the members and non-members of the medical staff of the LCP for procurement of presentation banner without public bidding.

The group also charged Melendres with falsification of public documents in the hiring of an architectural consultant, violation of auditing rules on the drawing of petty cash advances to circumvent the law on public bidding of infrastructure projects, and unauthorized implementation of the reorganization plan unapproved by the Board of Trustees of the LCP.

The fact-finding committee created by the LCP Board of Trustees submitted a report finding a prima facie case against Melendres and recommending the filing of formal charges against him.

As a result, the Board of Trustees transmitted the report and the records of the case to the Office of the President and further recommended the preventive suspension against Melendres during the pendency of the investigation against him.

The President also instructed Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, in his capacity as ex-officio Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the LCP, to appoint an officer-in-charge of the LCP, to ensure continuity of its operations.

The LCP officer-in-charge shall perform all the functions and discharge the responsibilities of an Executive Director throughout the effectivity of the period of preventive suspension of Melendres.

Gov’t unveils sustainable logistics development plan

The government unveiled today a plan to reduce the cost of moving cargoes from Mindanao to Manila and thus bring down the cost of basic goods.

Following the presentation of the three-stage “Sustainable Logistics Development Program” (SLDP) by Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) Chairman Vitaliano Nañagas in Malacañang, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo lauded the DBP for its commitment to support the administration’s regional development program.

Nañagas said the SLDP, the first working draft of a comprehensive regional development plan, is expected to drastically reduce the price of basic commodities in line with the government’s poverty alleviation program and the attainment of food sufficiency at the local, regional and national levels.

The DBP chairman informed the President that the state-owned bank will help catalyze private sector participation in the SLDP, which is a basic infrastructure for the efficient movement of basic commodities through the introduction of modern storage handling and transport system under proper quality control management.

The SLDP has three components: the establishment of a grains highway, a road-ro-ro (roll-on, roll-off) ferry network, and a cold chain.

Nañagas pointed out that what the DBP will try to do is to work with the private sector and with the rest of the government in order to have investments in areas of the logistics plan that will connect the Philippines in terms of the three components.

The grains highway will provide better transporting of grains from where it is produced to where it is consumed.

Nañagas said the road-ro-ro network will take care of the cargo requirements of the entire country, moving it from producer to end-user in a more efficient way.

The cold chain will provide the transport of goods that includes fruits, vegetables, fish, chicken and other perishable items.

Nañagas explained that based on a study undertaken by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), waste and spoilage in transporting fruits and vegetables from farmlands to end-users is about 40 percent valued at roughly P30 billion annually.

“That 40 percent is a little bit too much and so we want to put a transport system that will reduce that number to a more manageable 20 percent,” Nañagas told reporters in a press briefing in Malacañang.

In the case of transporting corn, spillage loss is about 20 percent of national production, amounting to P4.5 billion annually.

The program, the President said, is work in progress, as it covers a lot of areas and more studies and coordination with agencies concerned.

“We would finance for example private sector investors who would want to buy or operate ro-ro,” Nañagas said.

According to Nañagas, the DBP has had experience in doing such project since they have identified specific areas in the country where improvements can be made.

He emphasized the need for the strong collaboration between the government and the private sector since the SLDP is a vital program for addressing critical and priority development concerns of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration, including the efforts towards global competitiveness.

GMA to Cimatu: ensure safety of Filipinos in Iraq

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed newly appointed special envoy to Iraq and former Armed Forces Chief of Staff retired General Roy Cimatu to ensure the protection of all Filipinos in Iraq once the United States launches an attack in that country

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the President and Cimatu met this afternoon to discuss the matter at Malacañang.

During his regular press briefing, Bunye said the President and Cimatu agreed on the evacuation of Filipinos in Iraq, particularly the overseas Filipino workers.

“The instruction given to the special envoy, of course, is to ensure the safety and the protection of our countrymen,” he said.

He added that the President asked Cimatu to submit, on a regular basis, an assessment of the situation in Iraq. This would be the basis for any further action by the Philippine government.

Bunye said he did not know when Cimatu would leave for Iraq and other neighboring Middle East countries where Filipinos stayed.

“I am sure he will be going to more than one country because our countrymen or the Filipinos are located in several places. The smallest concentration of Filipinos actually is in Baghdad, but there are many more in surrounding countries,” he said.

The Press Secretary also reiterated the government’s position of not joining the conflict between the United States and Iraq. Instead, the government would seek peaceful and diplomatic means to end the rift, he said.

Joint statement of Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and Malaysian Defense Minister Najib Bin Abdul Razak

1. Both the government of Malaysia and the Philippines wish to reaffirm their close and warm relationships as portrayed by the excellent rapport between Prime Minister Dr. Mahathir and President Arroyo. Their close ties is very much valued by both countries and would be continued and further strengthened.
2. In response to the concern raised by the Philippines vis-à-vis the deportation of Filipinos, Prime Minister Dr. Mahathir had acted expeditiously by directing the full investigation on the matter. Malaysia will take the necessary actions against those who are found to have breached the law based on the investigation currently being conducted. Meanwhile, both Malaysia and the Philippines would like to see that this issue should not be sensationalized to the extent that it would jeopardize the existing good relationship between both countries.
3. Both countries wish to also express resolute commitment to pursue the fight against terrorism not only in their own individual countries but also in the region. Malaysia and the Philippines are committed to operationalize the trilateral agreement signed together with Indonesia in the war against terrorism. Towards this end, the Malaysian and the Philippine Armed Forces will continue to build the existing close cooperation, particularly in the border areas in order to eliminate all forms of terrorism.
4. The Philippines appreciates the continuing cooperation and initiative being extended by Malaysia in pursuing the peace in Muslim Mindanao. The Philippines particularly values the concurrence of Malaysia to stop any attempt at promoting violence and separatism among various Muslim communities in Southern Philippines.
5. Consistent with the common concept of security and development in the region being pursued by both countries, Malaysia and the Philippines are committed to assist each other in the attainment of peace, security and development in Southern Philippines and the border areas.

RP views with concern issues raised by Bush — Ople

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople said today the Philippines views with concern the issues raised by the U.S. President George W. Bush before the United Nations General Assembly yesterday, and expressed the hope that a peaceful solution could be found to forestall the conflict.

“I do not want to speculate on what is going to happen but I hope the UN can find a solution that would be mutually acceptable to the US, Iraq and the larger community of nations,” he said.

“The US demands are serious and should be immediately discussed by the UN Security Council with the end in view of preventing war and seeing to it that the most urgent concerns mentioned by President Bush are addressed,” he said.

Ople reiterated that all diplomatic initiatives, especially within the framework of the UN Security Council, should be exhausted before any attack is staged on Iraq.

He added that the most important concern of the Philippines was to get its nationals out of harm’s way and ensuring the stability of the domestic oil supply.

“We are focusing on these two items and corresponding contingency measures have been set up,” he said.

“There are also collateral economic and security problems such as the effect on the exchange rate and a possible upsurge in terrorist activities which require our constant vigilance and preparedness,” he said.

On efforts to protect Filipinos in the Middle East, Secretary Ople met in New York with Kenzo Oshima, United Nations Undersecretary for Humanitarian Affairs and Emergency Relief Coordinator; Robert Palve, New York Chief of Mission, International organization for Migration; and, Eric Morris, Director, UN High Commissioner for Refugees, to discuss the issue of Filipino deportees in Sabah and Filipinos in the Middle East.

Secretary Ople was able to obtain the commitment of these agencies to include Filipinos in their contingency should the US attack Iraq.

Secretary Ople is also scheduled to meet separately with Foreign Ministers of several Middle East states to discuss the safety and welfare of Filipino workers.

On the diplomatic front, while in New York for the UN General Assembly, Secretary Ople will be meeting separately with Iraqi Foreign Minister Naji Sabri and US Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs, Mark Grossman to discuss, among other matters, the desire of the Philippines to find a peaceful solution to the current situation.

Some 700,000 Filipino workers deployed overseas from January to September, 2002, DOLE reports

A total of 638,875 overseas Filipino workers (OFWs), or an average of 2,618 daily, were deployed abroad from Jan. 1 to Sept. 1, 2002, indicating that many Filipinos continue to choose to work overseas.

In a report to Malacañang, Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas of the Department of Labor and Employment (DoLE) said that the deployment of documented Filipino workers abroad could reach one million this year due to global demand and preference for their services and skills.

Sto. Tomas stressed that the continued absorption of OFWs by foreign-based employers mirrored the global competitiveness of Filipino workers and the country's human resource edge.

Aside from their highly rated skills, reliability, and productivity, Filipinos are culturally adaptable and can clearly and fluently communicate in English, the accepted international language, Sto. Tomas said.

The Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) said of the 638,875 OFWs deployed overseas for the eight-month period 497,577 are land-based workers and 141,298 are seafarers.

The POEA said 309,538 of the 497,577 land-based workers were rehires, while the remainder, or 188,039, were newly hired OFWs.

Meanwhile, data from the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) showed that OFW remittances from the Americas have increased even after the September 11 tragedy.

OFW remittances from the Americas rose by 54.0 percent in the first four months of 2002 alone, reaching US$1.580 billion as against US$1.026 billion for the same period last year.

POEA Administrator Rosalinda D. Baldoz said OFW deployment to the European continent posted a 17 percent increase to 27,816 from January to June 2002 compared to 23,768 for the same period in 2001.

The deployment of OFWs in the Americas also grew by 22.3 percent to 6,618 from 5,410; in the Middle East by 3.9 percent to 171,260 from 164,838; and in Asia by 0.5 percent to 158,538 from 157,769, Baldoz said.

Datumanong wants foreign-assisted projects in Mindanao completed on time

Finish all ongoing foreign-assisted road construction and rehabilitation projects in Mindanao within their loan periods.

This Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon A. Datumanong stressed, as he ordered regional and district engineers to see to it that delays in project implementation are discouraged and avoided.

Datumanong noted that some contractors have been slipping on their contracted construction time.

He said delays in project completion would negatively affect the process of social and economic growth in the project area.

He added that the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) should help push a bustling economy in Mindanao, even as the agency should provide infrastructure support to programs on improving law and order, tourism, the delivery of basic services to the people, and others.

He had earlier ordered the termination of the contract to build the Bayugan-Awa-San Francisco (Prosperidad) Road Section. Its contractor, L.S. Sarmiento/Conception Basic/J&P Builders, incurred slippages.

In a recent inspection of the ongoing rehabilitation of the Tabon-tabon-Sibagat-Bayugan section of the Surigao-Agusan-Davao Road, Datumanong directed Danilo Trajano, project director of the DPWH-Philippine Japan Highway Loan-Project Management Office, to ensure the on-time completion of the priority project.

He also instructed Trajano to guarantee the smooth implementation of the 23rd Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC) loan-funded Mindanao Section Rehabilitation Projects, Phase II.

The package included the construction of the 22.9 kilometer Alegria-Santiago section, 69.7-kilometer San Francisco-Langkilaan section, and 63 kilometer Monkayo-Tagum section, all from Surigao del Norte to Davao del Norte.

Civil works by contractor China State Construction Engineering Corp. for the P477.041 million Alegria-Santiago section is due to start in November. The two other projects, worth P2.434 billion, are under the pre-construction stage and are scheduled for bidding in October.

Datumanong said projects being implemented in Western Mindanao included the Zamboanga City-Pagadian City road, Basilan circumferential road, Aurora-Monte Alegre-Molave road, Tukuran-Dobliston road, Liloy-Siocon-Zamboanga or Zamboanga West road and the Iligan-Aurora road.

Projects in Northern Mindanao included the Tagoloan Parallel bridge along the Iligan City-Cagayan de Oro City-Butuan road and the Cagayan De Oro third bridge in Cagayan De Oro City; Camiguin circumferential road; Iligan-Bukidnon road; Gingoog Claveria-Villanueva road in Misamis Oriental; and the Lumbia-Talakag road linking Misamis Oriental and Bukidnon.

To be started in the same region is the construction of the Kapatagan-Dobliston road, Alabang-Sultan Gumander-Dobliston-Tukuran road, Tubod-Ganassi road and the Sta. Filomena-Ticalaan section of the Mindanao East-West lateral road.

In Southern Mindanao, DPWH pipeline projects are the roads connecting Davao to Agusan, Bukidnon, and Surigao; Davao coastal road, Peninsula coastal road, and the Davao City diversion road.

For Central Mindanao, DPWH will pursue the Awang-Upi-Lebak-Kalamansig-Palimbang to South Cotabato road and Midsayap-Dulawan-Marbel road in Maguindanao and Sultan Kudarat; Libungan-Alamada-Guiling-Banisilan road, Dualing-New Panay-Midsayap road, Kabacan-Maramag road, Matalam-Lampayan-New Alimodian-Antipas road, and Paco-Kidapawan-President Roxas-Arakan Valley roads in North Cotabato.

Also up for implementation are the Dualing-Baliki-Silik road, Kidapawan-Magpet road, Kidapawan-Ilomavis road, and Kidapawan-Calunasan-M'lang road.

Road projects in the Caraga region include the Surigao-Davao coastal road, Agusan-Davao road, Bislig bridge, 2nd Magsaysay bridge and Butuan bypass road, and the flood control component of the Lower Agusan Development Project.

In the Autonomous Region for Muslim Mindanao, the DPWH will complete the on-going Midsayap-Tacurong-Koronadal road in Maguindanao; start the construction of the Malabang-Sultan Gumander road in Lanao del Sur and the Awang-Upi-Palimbang road in Maguindanao and Sultan Kudarat.

Also to be carried out are the Cotabato City by-pass road, Lanao del Sur section of the Cotabato-Pagadian-Zamboanga road, Lake Lanao circumferential road in Lanao del Sur, Sulu-Tran central road and other bridge program for Tawi-Tawi.

Datumanong had sought the help of Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin for an additional P1 billion for roads to modernize agriculture and industry in Mindanao and to raise to P8.154 billion the Mindanao allocation for 2003 or the equivalent percentage allocation of 30 percent of the total DPWH infrastructure program.

The DPWH would be able to use the P60 million Saudi Development Fund for Mindanao roads projects next year.

Shahani to attend culture meet in Turkey

Presidential Adviser on Culture Leticia Ramos Shahani is slated to attend the 3rd Round Table of Ministers of Culture on "Intangible Heritage: A Mirror of Cultural Diversity" in Istanbul, Turkey from September 16 to 17.

Shahani had been invited by the Paris-based Unesco and the government of Turkey.

She said that she would work for the preservation and protection of the country's intangible heritage during the meeting.

"This would give us a clearer sense of national identity which in turn can give us greater confidence to face the challenges of globalization," she said.

She clarified that intangible heritage referred to the language, music, dance, literature, games, mythology, customs, handicrafts, architecture and other arts of a cultural community. These are found in all countries, particularly in the developing world.

The Philippines, with more than 80 ethno-linguistic groups, is rich in its intangible heritage.

The country's "Hudhud" was selected as one of 19 masterpieces selected during last year's Unesco's first proclamation of masterpieces of the oral and intangible heritage of humanity.

The "Hudhud" is an epic consisting of 200 chants and 40 episodes clearly linked with the agricultural life in the Ifugao rice terraces.

Going with Shahani to the cultural meet are MacArthur Corsino, minister and consul general of the Philippine embassy in Ankara, and Adil Guray, Philippine honorary consul in Istanbul.

Gov't doing all it can to safeguard lives and interests of OFWs in Middle East — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the nation that the government is doing all it can in order to safeguard the lives and interests of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the Middle East.

In her weekly radio program aired nationwide, the President said she has designated former AFP Chief of Staff Roy Cimatu as her special envoy to Iraq and other Middle Eastern countries.

“Ito ay para tiyakin na ang inihanda nating contingency measures ay sapat upang matugunan ang pangangailangan ng mga Pilipino sakaling matuloy ang kaguluhan doon (This is to ensure that we have enough contingency measures to attend to the needs of Filipinos in case there will be trouble in the area),” the President said.

These contingency measures, the President said, include the evacuation of Filipinos if this is necessary.

The President also allayed fears that there will be fuel shortage if the United States pushes through its attack on Iraq.

She said that the country has enough supply of oil for three months. “But even then, in order to ensure that we will have a steady supply of oil, I have also asked Gen. Cimatu to work on this as part of his mandate,” the President added.

GMA renews call for public support in confronting country’s problems

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today renewed her call for support and cooperation from the Filipino people in order to confront the many problems that the country is facing.

In her weekly radio program aired nationwide, the President particularly asked for the people’s support in the fund campaign for the benefit of the thousands of Filipino returnees from Sabah.

The President said that the problems that “we are facing right now are diverse and seemingly difficult to understand.”

“Pero ang mahalaga ay nagkakaisa tayo sa paghanap ng solusyon para sa lahat ng ito (But what is important is that we are united in seeking solutions to these problems),” the President said.

She said that it is important for the people to get united and should cooperate with each other for the sake of our country and our countrymen “dahil walang magmalasakit sa atin kundi tayo-tayo rin (because no one would be more concerned for our welfare than ourselves).”

The President also announced that today, all the television networks in Metro Manila would conduct a telethon, entitled “Pagbabalik Tulong,” the proceeds of which would go to the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC) to fund the various activities for the Filipino returnees from Sabah.

“Nakikiusap ako sa inyo na sana ay tumugon po kayo sa panawagang ito (I appeal to you to support this fund-raising program),” the President said.

GMA urges expanded, stronger SME role in RP economy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed on the expansion and the strengthening of the domestic market to spur further economic growth.

In her message aired this morning over radio nationwide, the President said the goal could be attained through the development and empowerment of small and medium enterprises (SME).

“This domestic market is what we must try to expand and strengthen at ito ay sa pamamagitan ng ating mga (and this would be done through) SMEs,” she said.

She said the government would convince banks to open more credit windows for SMEs “kaysa ipautang ito sa (instead of loaning out money to) less productive sectors tulad ng (like) luxury properties at mga pabrikang may (and factories with) excess capacity.”

She noted the SME’s capability to effectively circulate capital and increase domestic consumption, but stressed that the SMEs needed plenty of capital.

The President also disclosed that the government has begun implementing its “One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos for SME Loan” program.

She said local government units are being identified to avail themselves of the program, which proved to be an effective global economic formula, particularly in developing nations.

Earlier, the President disclosed that she would look into the loaning portfolio for SMEs and where the loans are being made to “make sure that every town has at least P1 million of SME loans.”

In her regular luncheon with the Malacañang Press Corps last Wednesday, she said she launched the strategy early this month in a visit to Lakewood, Zamboanga del Sur.

Lakewood would get the P1-million loan with a four-year payback term for fruit production. She said nine other Zamboanga del Sur towns would get the loan for the production of hybrid rice seeds.

“The PSF (Presidential Social Fund) has money in the Landbank for lending out,” she added.

In Laguna, the President picked Cabuyao to receive the P1 million loan for a SME involved in the recycling of soft packs of Nestle Philippines into construction materials.

She said the money would come from the Small Business Guarantee Fund with counterparts from Nestle and Laguna Rep. Joaquin Chipeco, Jr.

Still in Laguna, she ordered regional officials of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) to identify SMEs involved in autoparts supply in Sta. Rosa, where multinational car-making plants are located, to get the loan.

She also hinted at the grant of a similar loan to an electronics SME in Sta. Rosa, Laguna to help raise the local value added of Amkor Technology Philippines, a semi-conductor producer, “which suffered last year because of the decline in the market for computers and chips.”

The President had given P1 million each to the town of Monkayo in Compostela Valley for a SME into gold jewelry production and to Mayor Pedro Acharon, Jr. of General Santos City for a SME into tuna production.

In Davao del Norte, she was informed by Governor Rodolfo del Rosario that many SMEs in various towns of the province produced picnic bags and other products from cogon grass.

“They have the market and they have the technology,” she said.

Davao Oriental Governor Ma. Elena Palma Gil also told the President that SMEs in the coastal towns of the province produced agar-agar marketed in Cebu.

The President also noted that the Technology and Livelihood Resource Center would pick up some proposals from SMEs in Bulacan and Quezon.

GMA urges private sector to join in gov't housing program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the government would “encourage the private sector to jumpstart the housing sector” as it would urge “banks to fund developers on their own.”

The President stressed on her administration’s focus on housing during a radio message aired nationwide this morning.

She said housing had been listed as one of the priority programs of the government in the next six months.

“Ang housing industry ay isa sa pinakamalakas na magbigay ng trabaho sa ating mga kababayan at nagpapasigla ng ekonomiya (The housing industry is one of the strongest sectors that can create more jobs and perk up the economy),” she added.

She noted the private sector’s small role in the housing industry. “Kaya’t ito ay ating palalakin (We shall strengthen it),” she said.

The President also took note of the various transport infrastructure the government has been putting up to decongest pedestrian and vehicle traffic in Metro Manila.

This should convince developers to put up housing projects outside of Metro Manila, particularly in transport links leading to Clark in the North and Batangas in the South.

Earlier, the President said she would ask the country’s top Chinese businessmen, or taipans, to help the government in its mass housing program.

In her luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps Wednesday, the President recalled that during the term of former President Fidel Ramos, he also asked the taipans to help the government put up a world-class international airport.

GMA witnesses signing of AFP-PNP SOP on reporting ‘rascals in uniform’

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today witnessed the formal signing of the joint standing operating procedures (SOP) in reporting police and military personnel with derogatory information.

The signing of the SOP was in fulfillment of the President’s commitment, as expounded in her July 22 State of the Nation Address (SONA), to curb criminality and to build a strong republic.

The SOP was signed in Malacañang by Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) Chief of Staff Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Jr. and Philippine National Police (PNP) Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr.

The SOP is aimed to institutionalize a system in formulating and submitting a watch list or counter-intelligence order of battle between and among members of the PNP and AFP intelligence communities.

It also hoped to ensure the accurate reporting of policemen and militarymen with derogatory information imputed against them, through careful processing and proper validation.

It would also establish a system of adjudicating cases after a thorough investigation has been made.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, who was also present in the signing ceremony said the SOP was an output of a joint counter-intelligence workshop-conference conducted in response to the President's desire for a more aggressive stance against "rascals in uniform."

In her SONA, the President instructed the AFP to field military personnel and resources in support of civilian law enforcement, particularly in eliminating criminals and other enemies of the state.

"The President ordered the workshop so that the fight against criminality can further be boosted and improved because if some of the law enforcers are law breakers, then that aggravates the problem with regards to peace and order," Lina said.

"So the President would like to see to it that the AFP and PNP ranks are cleansed of rascals in uniforms," he added.

Lina said positive results have been achieved. Several policemen and militarymen were dismissed and some charged administratively and criminally.

Police Chief Superintendent Jaime Lasar, PNP Deputy Director for Intelligence, said 326 policemen have validated derogatory reports.

The AFP listed 799 personnel actively being validated for involvement in illegal drugs, illegal gambling, carjacking and extortion.

GMA urges youth to help in gov't anti-crime drive

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the Filipino youth to help government in its anti-crime drive, as she launched the 117 Youth Patrol at the Camp Crame parade grounds.

In a short message before boy and girl scouts participating in a 117 emergency response drill, the President said the youth could contribute much in efforts of the law enforcers maintain peace and order in the country.

The President arrived in Camp Crame fresh from Malacañang where she witnessed the signing of an Armed Forces of the Philippines-Philippine National Police (PNP) joint standing operating procedure on disclosing reports on rascals in uniform.

The signing strengthened the President's resolve to fight criminality, enhance the image of the military and the police and build a strong republic, as expounded in her July 22 State of the Nation Address.

She said Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina invited her to see for herself quick responses from youthful volunteers against crime.

She said the youth should call 117 if they witnessed a crime happening, or if they heard something and had good reasons to believe a crime is being committed or about to be committed.

She pointed out that since the telephone hotline 177 had been established, many criminal cases have been solved "very quickly."

It enabled law enforcement agencies and public assistance groups to respond to emergency calls from any part of the country.

Hotline 117 is a centrally managed and secured telephone central monitoring station provided by the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company (PLDT) and operated by qualified well-trained personnel from the PNP, Bureau of Fire Protection, Bureau of Jail Management and Penology and private telecommunications firm PLDT.

Telephones used by the emergency hotline 117 are equipped with the caller ID system to prevent prank calls and ensure quick confirmation and response to emergency calls.

The President, during the launching, witnessed the staging of an emergency drill at the parade ground of Camp Crame, showing how quickly the youth patrol could address an emergency situation.

GMA seeks stronger BIR-LGU role in tax collection

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) to tap and help mobilize local government units (LGU) nationwide to enhance the government's tax collection.

The President made this call during the first revenue performance command conference at the Premier Guest House in Malacañang.

During the briefing, the President directed officials of the BIR and other concerned agencies to find out if they could further simplify the process of tax payments and the registration of business permits with the LGUs.

BIR Commissioner Guillermo Parayno said the government intended to dispense with other requirements in applying for business permits in various localities.

Parayno said those in the underground economy continued to fear coming out into the open economy.

He said they do not want to go through the tedious process of getting a business permit, a form of taxation, and they wonder why they have to brandish a Social Security System and/or a Technical Education and Skills Development Authority card to get the license.

"It really intimidates people," he told reporters after the conference.

He added that the coordination with the LGUs was not something new since there existed agreements between the Department of Finance, the LGUs and the Executive Department on working together to push better tax collections.

But he stressed that the agreements needed to be implemented soonest.

Parayno said the BIR had been sending letters to some 600 companies found to have under-declared their tax payments.

The letter, he said, would send the message that the BIR had the system and method to determine the correct payment of taxes.

On the other hand, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho suggested that the LGUs should also supply the BIR with a list of taxpayers in their respective areas to help the bureau collect proper taxes.

During the conference, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin told the President and other officials that the LGUs have expressed willingness to cooperate in easing the process of business registration and tax payments.

Besides Parayno, Camacho and Boncodin, among those who attended the meeting were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Finance Secretary Isidro Camacho, Bureau of Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo, Socio Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, and Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Governor Rafael Buenaventura.

GMA convenes revenue performance confab

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today convened the first revenue performance command conference in an effort to achieve the government's revised targets on tax collections.

In a meeting at the Premier Guest House in Malacañang, the President would call regular command conferences on revenue collection to assess the work of various tax collecting agencies, particularly the Bureau of Customs (BOC) and the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).

She said the command conference would establish a base line against which the future performance of the agencies concerned would be measured.

“We should be very strict about evaluating performance,” she said.

Among those who attended the command conference were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, Socio Economic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, BOC Commissioner Antonio Bernardo, BIR Commissioner Guillermo Parayno, and the district collectors and revenue collectors in various regions of the country.

Bernardo said it was appropriate that the President had found time to talk to those in the field directly involved in revenue collections.

He said the command conference on revenue performance supported the BOC's effort to focus on their target collection.

“That's what we're doing now. We are really micro-managing the revenue collections because we believe that this is a very important mandate of the bureau,” Bernardo told reporters after the conference.

In his report, Bernardo noted that in the first eight months of this year, the BOC was still P11.9 billion below its target revenue collection.

However, he noted that for the first three months of the year, the average monthly collection of the BOC was P6.9 billion but increased to P8.7 billion in the succeeding three months.

The total year-end outlook for the BOC, he said, is P99.8 billion against its original target of P115 billion.

Bernardo cited several factors for the shortfall, to include foreign exchange, and deferred payments of importation from various government agencies such as the National Food Authority (NFA), the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC).

“We feel that about P100 billion is a more realistic emerging scenario for the end of the year rather than P115 billion,” he said.

For his part, Parayno said the BIR has been implementing the Reconciliation of Listing for Enforcement (RELIEF) program aimed to correct discrepancies in the Value-Added Tax (VAT) declaration of taxpaying companies.

By next week, Parayno said the BIR would send some 600 letters to various companies to demand immediate payment of taxes associated with under-declared sales for the year 2001.

These measures, he said, would cover the year 2000 as well as for the first and second quarters of year 2002.

The President's Day: September 15, 2002

15 SEPTEMBER 2002

- Speed program to give discounts to 756 big power users
- Sustainable logistics development program to bring down cost of cargo transport, prices

Speed program to give discounts to 756 big power users

At least 219 big power users stand to benefit, starting this month, from the Special Package to Enhance Electricity Demand (SPEED), a program that gives discounts to large end-users for energy consumed above the customer's baseline load.

The SPEED program will be expanded to cover another 437 customers in October, said a report from the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) outlining achievements made against targets set in the State of the Nation Address (SONA) of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

The report said beneficiaries could avail themselves of a fixed discount of P0.92 per kilowatt-hour from the Manila Electric Co. (Meralco) and P0.80 per kilowatt-hour from the National Power Corp. (Napocor) for their respective customers from one month up to 24 months.

The SPEED's program implementors are the Departments of Energy (DOE) and of Trade and Industry (DTI).

The adoption of SPEED is in response to the President's directive in her Second SONA "to work together to give price incentives to large users so that excess power can be utilized, economic activity can be encouraged, and jobs can be created."

Large power users, usually manufacturing firms, would be able to reduce their electricity costs. Generated savings could be channeled to more benefits for their workers.

Meanwhile, the DOE and the Departments of Finance (DOF) and of Justice (DOJ) and the National Economic Development Authority (NEDA) are working on concrete courses of action stemming from results of recent reviews of state contracts with Independent Power Producers (IPP).

The four agencies hoped to complete their tasks in three months.

On one hand, the DOJ and the Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Management (PSALM) would be formulating an action plan on five IPP contracts with legal and financial issues.

Both agencies would also prepare and file actions against contracting parties and officials responsible for terms unfavorable to government.

On the other hand, the DOE and PSALM would take steps to arrive at an acceptable solution on 22 IPP contracts requiring further study and clarification of financial terms.

Further, the NEDA and the DOJ would enhance terms on two IPP contracts with remedial policy issues and would undertake administrative measures, as necessary.

The PMS report further noted government gains in strengthening of the operations of electric cooperatives (EC) nationwide.

It said the National Electrification Administration (NEA) had met with EC officials last July 25 and August 6.

In the meetings, it was agreed that a “people’s criteria,” or the parameters by which ECs would be judged by customers, would be set up. The parameters included efficiency and reliable delivery of power, prompt services, affordability and reasonableness of power rates.

It was also agreed that ECs belonging to categories A+, A and B would submit their performance improvement plans (PIP) while those in categories C, D and E would submit their rehabilitation plans (RP).

Recent reports showed that of the 119 ECs, 30 have submitted their PIPs while 22 gave their RPs.

Besides this, the ECs have continued to carry out Task Force Kapatid whereby they voluntarily assist each other in energizing critical areas.

To enhance the operations of ECs, Executive Order 119 was issued on August 28 to restructure electric cooperatives.

Sustainable logistics development program to bring down cost of cargo transport, prices

The government has unveiled a plan to reduce the cost of moving cargoes from Mindanao to Manila and thus bring down the cost of basic goods.

Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) Chairman Vitaliano Nañagas presented last Friday a three-stage “Sustainable Logistics Development Program” (SLDP). President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo lauded the DBP for its commitment to support the administration’s regional development program.

Nañagas said the SLDP, the first working draft of a comprehensive regional development plan, is expected to drastically reduce the price of basic commodities in line with the government’s poverty alleviation program and the attainment of food sufficiency at the local, regional and national levels.

The DBP chairman informed the President that the state-owned bank will help catalyze private sector participation in the SLDP, which is a basic infrastructure for the efficient movement of basic commodities through the introduction of modern storage handling and transport system under proper quality control management.

The SLDP has three components: the establishment of a grains highway, a road-roto (roll-on, roll-off) ferry network, and a cold chain.

Nañagas pointed out that what the DBP will try to do is to work with the private sector and with the rest of the government in order to have investments in areas of the logistics plan that will connect the Philippines in terms of the three components.

The grains highway will provide better transporting of grains from where it is produced to where it is consumed.

Nanagas said the road-roto network will take care of the cargo requirements of the entire country, moving it from producer to end-user in a more efficient way.

The cold chain will provide the transport of goods that includes fruits, vegetables, fish, chicken and other perishable items.

Nañagas explained that based on a study undertaken by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), waste and spoilage in transporting fruits and vegetables from farmlands to end-users is about 40 percent valued at roughly P30 billion annually.

“That 40 percent is a little bit too much and so we want to put a transport system that will reduce that number to a more manageable 20 percent,” Nañagas told reporters in a press briefing in Malacanang.

In the case of transporting corn, spillage loss is about 20 percent of national production, amounting to P4.5 billion annually.

The program, the President said, is work in progress, as it covers a lot of areas and more studies and coordination with agencies concerned.

“We would finance for example private sector investors who would want to buy or operate ro-ro,” Nañagas said.

According to Nañagas, the DBP has had experience in doing such project since they have identified specific areas in the country where improvements can be made.

He emphasized the need for the strong collaboration between the government and the private sector since the SLDP is a vital program for addressing critical and priority development concerns of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration, including the efforts towards global competitiveness.

GMA orders all gov't agencies to extend help to teen girl in Sabah rape case

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered all concerned Cabinet officials to extend all possible assistance to "Angelica," the 13-year-old Filipino girl allegedly raped by Malaysian authorities while in detention in Sabah.

The President also directed the said officials to accomplish all the work here in Manila and do what only are necessary in Malaysia.

The President issued the orders during a conference in Malacañang with Gerald John (L. Pereira & Associates) and Francis Ng Aik Guan (Ng Aik Guan & Co.), the two Malaysian lawyers representing the interests of Angelica in Malaysia.

The President, along with other Philippine government officials, was briefed on the Malaysian law and procedure during the conference. For instance, the two counsels informed the Philippine side that statutory rape in Malaysia extends up to 16 years old, in contrast to the 12-year-old cap in Philippine laws.

Likewise, various options and plans of actions were studied during the conference.

Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, who was present during the conference, emphasized that the two lawyers are working on a pro bono basis.

"Pinagbilin ng ating Pangulo na gawin lahat ng magagawa upang matulungan si Angelica. At yung maaring gawin dito sa Pilipinas, dito na sa Pilipinas gawin at yung kailangang-kailangan lamang na maganap sa Malaysia ang gaganapin sa Malaysia (The President ordered everyone to help Angelica in all possible ways. She also directed us to do all the work here and do what is only necessary in Malaysia)" Perez said in a briefing.

The two counsels, who arrived in Manila last Friday, have met with representatives from various departments.

Accompanied by officers of the Public Attorney's Office and the Department of Foreign Affairs, the two counsels visited Angelica and another potential witness in the presence of Department of Social Welfare and Development personnel.

Based on the interviews, Perez said the relevant action would be imparted to the Malaysian authorities for their follow-up action.

Perez said the government is giving the necessary clearance for Malaysian police investigators to visit Manila and conduct interviews with Angelica, which may include recording of statement and possible formality of lodging a police report.

Perez said the government would also allow the duly-designated member of the Malaysian police force to conduct an investigation and inquiry in the Philippines of any claims of rape, maltreatment, violations of human rights and infringement of any laws in Malaysia.

Perez also said that it is up to Malaysia if, based on the relevant information the two counsels gathered here in Manila, they are going to send the Malaysian police to the Philippines.

We also requested the Malaysian government to send, if they wish, a Malaysian doctor to examine Angelica.

Bunye denies blaming PNP for kidnapping incidents

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today clarified that he did not blame the Philippine National Police (PNP) for some kidnapping incidents in the country even as he renewed his appeal for the media to momentarily cease from reporting about the kidnapping of the children of Congressman Jules Ledesma.

“Walang katotohanan yan (There is no truth to that),” Bunye said in a radio interview when asked if he indeed blamed the PNP for the latest kidnapping incident in Metro Manila involving the Ledesma children.

According to Bunye, what he said was that there is a need for everybody—the citizens and the law-enforcement agencies—to double their efforts so that the criminals would not have the chance to strike.

“That’s why we will just have to double our vigilance. Alam natin na ang PNP ay talagang doing its best. Kaya lang merong pagkakataong talagang nakakalusot ang mga criminal elements (We know that the PNP is doing its best. But there are times when criminal elements could get the chance to strike),” Bunye said.

Bunye said that the citizenry is always the first line of defense in the fight against all forms of criminality.

“Kailangan talaga ang pagtulongan nga mga mamamayan at mga awtoridad (What we need really is the cooperation between the citizenry and the authorities),” Bunye said.

In the kidnapping case of the Ledesma children, Bunye asked the media to respect the wish of the congressman from Negros that the media should suspend reporting about the incident in the meantime.

“Tayo ay magdasal na lamang na ma-rescue yong mga hostages (We will just pray that the hostages could be rescued safely),” Bunye said.

RP gets nod from Malaysia for doctors, social workers to examine returnees – Soliman

Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman today said doctors and social workers are now allowed to go to the detention centers housing Filipinos in Malaysia to determine if they are fit to travel back to the Philippines.

Soliman said the new arrangement was the result of the recent private phone conversation between the President and Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir.

“Because of the arrangements borne out of the conversation of the President and Prime Minister Mahathir and the party of Nur Jaafar, the first level of work that will be done by the team of doctors and social workers is to go to the detention centers to see if Filipinos are fit to travel and if they are fit to travel, then they board the boats,” Soliman said in a briefing at Malacañang.

Soliman noted that the arrangement would require that their parents or guardians accompany minors.

Soliman was among the Cabinet officials present during the President’s conference with the two Malaysian lawyers representing the interests of a 13-year-old Filipina rape victim in Malaysia.

Soliman announced that there are two groups of Filipino deportees numbering at most 536, who’ll be arriving this week on board the BRP San Juan and BRP Bacolod.

Soliman said aside from detained Filipinos, the Philippine vessels will be taking in voluntary deportees. “These are Filipinos who do not wish to be detained if and when the moratorium is lifted,” she said.

Soliman said the 536 Filipinos are expected to be the last batch of Filipinos since there is a halt in the deportation.

She noted that the Department of Foreign Affairs is continuously working out several options so that the government will be able to have a rational, systematic, humane repatriation and or legalization of documents.

Palace allays fears of mass layoff in gov’t agencies whose functions are now being reviewed

Malacañang today allayed fears of a mass layoff of employees in the 14 state agencies whose functions are now being reviewed by the Presidential Commission on Effective Governance (PCEG).

In an interview, Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin said that while some 7,000 employees correspond to the total number of workers in the 14 agencies now being reviewed by the PCEG, this does not mean that they will all be laid off.

Boncodin said that some of the agencies, especially those with overlapping functions, could be merged and the affected employees could be absorbed.

“Palagay ko yong nagsasabing ile-layoff yong 7,000 ay hindi tumutulong sa bansa, kung hindi naninira (I think those who are saying that the 7,000 will be laid off are not helping the government but are trying to destroy it),” Boncodin said.

Boncodin appealed to all sectors, including the media, to just wait for the result of the ongoing review being undertaken by the PCEG, which is chaired by the Department of Budget and Management (DBM).

In the case of the National Printing Office (NPO), which is under the Office of the Press Secretary, Boncodin said its operations are also being studied.

Boncodin confirmed that she has indeed discussed with Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye on how to make the operations of the NPO more efficient.

She said that the NPO has a budget deficit since its income from printing jobs is not sufficient to cover for its operations.

“Iyan ay hanggang ngayon ay tinitingnan ko ang pinakamabuti at iyan ay gagawin in consultation with them (Up to now we are still looking on how we can work out something good for NPO in consultation with them),” Boncodin said, referring to the employees of NPO who have appealed to the leadership not to abolish their office.

GMA receives P3 M donation for returnees from Malaysia

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today received from Manila Bulletin Chairman Emilio Yap the amount of P3 million drawn from the contributions of concerned donors for the reintegration of Filipino returnees from Malaysia.

In a ceremony at the Study Room in Malacañang, the President personally thanked Yap for the contribution and immediately turned over the check to Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman for proper disposition.

Yap said the Manila Bulletin fund drive was in response to the President's appeal for support from the private sector.

The donation will be deposited in the account of the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC), which is in charge of holding the common fund for the different line agencies of the government.

Yap expressed gratitude to the concerned donors for their continued generosity and kindness in support of the thousands of Filipino returnees from Malaysia.

Last September 4, Yap also turned over to the President the amount of P2 million representing his personal contribution to the Manila Bulletin fund drive to help the returning Filipinos from Malaysia.

Soliman said the President turned over Yap's initial donation to Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) Chairman Parouk Hussin for the needs of the returnees in his area of jurisdiction.

Aside from Yap's donation, the social welfare secretary said the P7.1 million raised during last Saturday's live telethon fund-raising campaign will also be deposited under the NDCC.

She said there is now a total of more than P10 million in contributions from the private sector, ordinary citizens and corporations.

Aside from Soliman and Yap, also present during the turn-over ceremony were ARMM Chairman Hussin and Dr. Andrew Gonzales, president of the Manila Bulletin.

Palace brushes off criticisms of GMA's cover photo in lifestyle magazine

"We should not make a mountain out of a mole hill."

This was Malacanang's reaction regarding the criticisms about President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and some of her Cabinet members appearing in a "Men in Black" in the anniversary cover of Philippine Tatler, a lifestyle and entertainment magazine.

In today's press briefing in Malacañang, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye pointed out that the photograph of the President, together with some of her Cabinet members, should not be taken out of context, saying, "it is not inappropriate in a magazine like this to show the President letting her hair down."

"Tatler is a lifestyle magazine. It's not in the same category as the newsmagazine like Time and Newsweek. The President, on occasion, can show her lighter side," Bunye said.

In the said cover photo, the President, together with Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II and Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, were shown wearing black suits and dark glasses similar to those worn by the characters in the famous American action-comedy movie series, "Men in Black."

Bunye stressed that the photograph of the President and some of her Cabinet secretaries should not be taken out of context

The Press Secretary noted that in the movie “Men in Black” that starred Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones, the lead actors were portrayed as the “good guys and saviors of the Earth.”

“So this magazine is trying to portray the good guys, the President and her Cabinet as the good guys in a fun sort of ways. We don’t see anything wrong with that,” Bunye said.

Bunye advised the President’s detractors to lighten up instead of criticizing her.

“I don’t think that the photograph has detracted from the President’s ability to government,” he said.

Moreover, Bunye said, the objective of the magazine cover photograph could be justified and is not inappropriate given the circumstances.

GMA presents 8 suspected carnappers to media appeals to victims to come out, identify them

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo presented to the media today eight suspected members of the Bonnet Gang — including three alleged “rascals in uniform” and two women — who are believed to be involved in robbery-holdup and carnapping cases in Metro Manila.

In presenting the suspects to reporters just hours after their arrest this morning in Quezon City by the Philippine National Police-Traffic Management Group (PNP-TMG), the President appealed to possible victims of the gang to go to the police and identify the suspects.

“The Bonnet Gang is notorious for its criminal activities,” the President said in Filipino during the presentation of the suspects at the PNP headquarters in Camp Crame. “I hope those who have been victimized by this group would come out and go to the police to identify them,” she added.

The President also assured the media and the public that the police are relentlessly pursuing the fight against criminality, particularly the campaign against rascals in uniform.

Among the suspects are two soldiers on absence without official leave (AWOL) – Roberto Bacus and Raul Ravina of the 10th Infantry Battalion of the First Infantry Division of the Philippine Army – and Senior Fire Officer 1 Dionisio Pabanto of the Bureau of Fire Protection assigned in Ozamis City. Bacus has been AWOL since 1993 and Ravina, since 1992. Both have been dropped from the rolls of the military.

The two women in the group were identified as Grace Hamili and Sheryl Sta. Rita. The other members of the gang were identified as Neil Santos, Silvino Oca and Jade Abalon.

The eight were on board a stolen green Isuzu Crosswind AUV (Asian Utility Vehicle) when arrested at the corner of Aurora Blvd. and Gilmore Avenue in Quezon City by members of the TMG.

The President personally congratulated TMG chief Senior Supt. Danilo P. Mangila and his men for the arrest of the Bonnet Gang members and their successful operations against carnapping syndicates operating in Metro Manila.

“Congratulations, Colonel Mangila. It is Colonel Mangila and his men who did this. And Colonel Mangila, tell it to your troops, ‘Congratulations,’ and ask them to continue their good work,” President said.

The President said the TMG operatives were also behind the neutralization of six members of the Parungao gang of car thieves who were killed in a shootout with the police last Saturday.

In her speech, the President said that because of the quick action of the TMG operatives, the eight members of the Bonnet Gang were caught unharmed.

Recovered from the suspects who did not resist arrest were four shotguns, one .38 caliber revolver, 109 rounds of shotgun ammunition, two hammers, several license plates and five black bonnets.

Please refrain from reporting ongoing operations against kidnapers, GMA appeals anew to media

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today appealed anew to the media to cooperate with law enforcement agencies in solving cases of kidnapping by refraining from airing live reports or writing about these cases while operations are ongoing.

In her remarks at the presentation to media at Camp Crame of eight members of the so-called “Bonnet Gang” earlier arrested by operatives of the Philippine National Police (PNP), the President asked the media to consider the safety of the hostages by not reporting about the ongoing rescue operations.

“So, sana tumulong kayo. Muli akong nananawagan na yung mga live cases ay i-postpone muna natin ang pagre-report (So, I hope you will cooperate. Again, I would like to appeal to you not to report live the ongoing operations),” the President said, particularly referring to the broadcast media.

She said that this was also the appeal of non-government organizations (NGOs) involved in anti-crime activities.

The President was referring to the ongoing operations by the PNP against the kidnapers of the two children of Negros Congressman Julio Ledesma who were abducted last Friday.

According to the President, the media would be properly briefed as soon as there is a breakthrough in the solution of the cases now being investigated by police authorities.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye also called on the media to respect the wish of Congressman Ledesma that the media should refrain from writing about the kidnapping of his children at the moment.

Bunye said that what we should all do at this time is to pray for the safe return of the children to their father.

The press secretary also clarified that he did not blame the PNP for the kidnapping incidents in the country. “Walang katotohanan yan (There is no truth to that),” Bunye said, adding that he was misquoted by the paper.

According to Bunye, what he said was that there is a need for everybody — the citizens and the law-enforcement agencies — to double their efforts so that the criminals would not have the chance to strike.

“That’s why we will just have to double our vigilance. Alam natin na ang PNP ay talagang doing its best. Kaya lang merong pagkakataong talagang nakakalusot ang mga criminal elements (We know that the PNP is doing its best. But there are times when criminal elements could get the chance to strike),” Bunye said.

Bunye said that the citizenry is always the first line of defense in the fight against all forms of criminality.

“Kailangan talaga ang pagtulongan nga mga mamamayan at mga awtoridad (What we need really is the cooperation between the citizenry and the authorities),” Bunye said.

Bunye said that if the citizenry can work together with the law enforcement authorities, “then we could solve kidnapping cases faster.”

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on the proposed visit of the Japanese Prime Minister to DPRK on 17 September 2002

The Philippines wholeheartedly welcomes and fully supports the proposed visit of Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi of Japan to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on 17 September 2002.

A meeting between PM Koizumi and General Secretary Kim Jong-Il would be a fitting follow-up to the June 2000 summit meeting between the leaders of the two Koreas.

This unprecedented visit signals the normalization of relations between Japan and the DPRK, and should hasten the resolution of certain outstanding issues between the northeast Asian neighbors.

It is also a critical step towards the further engagement of the DPRK in the effort to promote peace, security and stability in the Korean peninsula, in the region and, ultimately, the world.

We are hopeful of positive results from this visit.

GMA receives with gladness news of release of Ledesma children

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo received with gladness the news of the release of the children of Negros Occidental Rep. Julio "Jules" Ledesma, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today said.

In a radio interview, Bunye said the President is very thankful to the Lord that no harm was done on Christina Julieta Victoria, 10, and Julio Carlos V, 5.

Bunye said the President is likewise appreciative of the media's cooperation in the tried and tested formula of not reporting on live or ongoing kidnapping cases.

"Ang ating Pangulo ay nagpapasalamat, unang-una sa ating Panginoon na ang panalangin ng marami na mailigtas yung anak ni Rep. Jules Ledesma ay nangyari ngayong umaga (Our President is grateful to God for heeding the prayers that the children be spared)," Bunye said.

Nagpapasalamat din ang ating Pangulo sa mga members ng media na nakinig sa kanyang pakiusap na pansamantala ay magkaroon muna ng maayos na pagre-report, i-tone down iyong pagre-report dito sa kidnapping incidents (The President is also thankful to the media for cooperating with the government in toning down their reports on kidnapping cases that are in progress)," Bunye said.

Bunye, however, stressed that the President is continuously working on strengthening government efforts against kidnapping and other forms of crime.

He said the kidnappings only strengthened the President's resolve to fight criminality in all its forms.

He said the President is also enjoining the people to be actively involved in the administration's fight against criminality.

"Nakikita natin iyong talagang kailangang-kailangan ang lubos na pagtutulungan ng ating mamamayan at ng ating awtoridad at para lalong mapalakas natin iyong ating kampanya laban sa mga ganitong uri ng aktibidad (There is no doubt that we need cooperation between the people and the authorities in order to strengthen the campaign against this kind of activities)," Bunye said.

According to the police, the two children were released unharmed at the Makati Medical Center at around 4:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Congressman Ledesma, in several interviews, thanked the President, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, the Philippine National Police and the Armed Forces of the Philippines for the safe release of his children.

"I stumbled into something and I just came to realize that there is a system, what President Macapagal-Arroyo is saying is a tried-and-tested formula. They were all quiet all the while, but she's actually doing something," he said.

Presidential statement on the Iraqi situation

The Philippines reaffirms its commitment to the global war against terrorism. We believe the world will never be secure unless terrorist lairs are exposed and destroyed, and terrorist supporters are brought to justice.

The Philippines has full confidence in the UN Security Council process. We believe the Council will act in accord with the imperatives of world peace and security and find the most expeditious way, the most effective way to serve these imperatives. We support the UN Security Council Resolutions on states aiding terrorism and the dismantling of weapons of mass destruction that are an overriding threat to humanity.

We join the United Nations in the most fervent wish for dialogue and peace, but we must say more in defense of our unique national interest.

We are victims of homegrown and regionally-based terrorism. The victims of terrorism cry out for justice. We have vowed to fight against terrorism at home and with our international allies until it is defeated.

The Philippines supports the case brought by the United States against Iraq before the UN Security Council. The UN Security Council should give these charges most urgent and serious consideration.

Consistent with our national interest and in accordance with our Constitution, the Philippines is prepared to extend political, security and humanitarian assistance to the United States in the pursuit of its most vital interests, which coincide with our own vital interests, to defeat terrorism.

These policies have been conveyed officially by Secretary Blas Ople to US Secretary of State Colin Powell, and shall be the basis of our position which Secretary Ople will state before the United National General Assembly.

GMA orders suspension of evacuation of Filipinos from Iraq

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered a suspension of the evacuation of Filipinos in Iraq as a result of new developments, adding that the situation in the Middle East would be evaluated by the Cabinet committee on internal security.

In an impromptu press conference in Malacañang this afternoon following a Cabinet meeting, the President said the government is “interrupting” the evacuation as it takes a fresh look at international developments.

“So, while we are holding off the evacuation for one or two days, in two days we can have a definitive next course of action regarding the matter,” the President said.

Last week, the President ordered the evacuation of some 118 Filipinos, including non-essential embassy personnel, from Iraq as “a precautionary measure.”

The President said that former AFP chief, Gen. Roy Cimatu, is still the crisis manager on the Iraqi situation.

She also said that the Cabinet committee on internal security would be meeting this afternoon “and certainly the matter of Iraq is going to be the main subject.”

Before the unscheduled press briefing, the President also read a prepared policy statement where she said that the Philippines “reaffirms its commitment to the global war against terrorism.”

In the statement, the President said the Philippines has full confidence in the UN Security Council process.

“We believe the Council will act in accord with the imperatives of world peace and security and find the most expeditious way, the most effective way to serve these imperatives,” the President said.

The President also said that the Philippines supports the case brought by the United States against Iraq before the Council. “The UN Security Council should give these charges most urgent and serious consideration,” the President said.

The President’s policy statement was issued after Iraq, in a letter to UN Secretary General Kofi Annan, expressed its willingness to allow the return of UN weapons inspectors to Iraq without preconditions.

The Iraqi decision came days after US President George W. Bush addressed the UN General Assembly and warned that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein must comply with UN resolutions or face a military strike.

D.O.L.E. to strengthen OFW reintegration program

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) has started laying down the framework for an effective and sustained reintegration program for overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

Lucita S. Lazo, DOLE undersecretary for the reintegration of returning migrant workers, said the program is aimed at helping returning OFWs bolster social stability for the national good.

“We hope to have about 50,000 OFW parents, sons, daughters and kin band together into OFW family or community clubs by December this year,” Lazo said.

She said that nationwide, DOLE regional offices have begun the groundwork to organize at least 30 OFW family clubs in each region, prioritizing the areas considered as the largest sources of OFWs.

Lazo stressed that the effort requires interaction and cooperation by various sectors considering that there are some 7.41 million Filipinos who are either working or have settled overseas.”

“We hope to engage or involve local governments in this undertaking,” she said, adding that the DOLE has already linked up with some local government units (LGUs) whose constituents include OFW families, and would also work with non-government organizations (NGOs) helping OFWs.

Lazo indicated that the program would pursue a balanced approach, giving regard both to the many “circulatory” OFWs in the global labor market who only temporarily come home, and the retirees and permanent returnees who want to engage in small businesses, invest their earnings, upgrade their skills, or get employed locally.

The program would help reinforce the protection, morale, and welfare of OFW families all over the country, Lazo said.

Director Alex E. Maraan of the DOLE’s National Capital Region (NCR) office indicated that advocacy work has already started in the country’s premier region to meet the initial target of 30 OFW family circles this year.

Maraan said a DOLE-NCR team has initiated linkages with different barangays in cooperation with LGUs.

The DOLE’s Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) and Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) are expected to provide assistance and opportunities needed by OFWs and their families.

POEA statistics show that 60 percent of the Filipinos working abroad come from the NCR, Region 3 (Central Luzon), and Region 4 (Southern Tagalog).”

The OFW family circles would also be formed in the cities of Davao, Cebu, Zamboanga and in other regions where there are significant concentrations of Filipino migrant workers' families.

GMA okays draft of M.O. to regulate rice importation for 2003

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the Cabinet today approved the draft basic principles to be contained in a Memorandum Order (MO) that will allow other sectors to participate in the 2003 rice importation.

According to Presidential Assistant on Agriculture Modernization Angelito Sarmiento, under the MO, the National Food Authority (NFA) will prioritize domestic palay procurement in beefing up its buffer stock. "So as much as possible, the buffer stock should be purchased from the Philippines," Sarmiento said.

Sarmiento said the NFA will also continue to make available the P16 per kilogram regular-milled rice in the market, especially for the poor. "On well-milled rice, we would let the market decide as instructed by the President," Sarmiento said.

He said that the government will still continue the present system of rice importation under the "Quantitative Restriction" regime as a protection for palay farmers.

The government will allow other sectors to participate in the importation of rice, but there will be no issuance of import permits, Sarmiento said.

"So the principle of first-come, first-served will be followed," he said.

Sarmiento said the government will impose a cap of 10,000 metric tons (MT) per importer to allow a greater number of participants and encourage competition.

In the implementation, Sarmiento suggested that there will be a single opening of letter of credit (LC) source, which is the Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP).

For the first quarter tranche volume, LCs will be opened with LBP on January 2-31, 2003. Farmers will be initially allowed the privilege of opening LCs for January 2-15, 2003. The unavailed balance shall be made available to other importers starting January 16 up to January 31, 2003. Arrival of importation is not later than March 31, 2003.

For the second quarter tranche volume, LCs shall be opened with LBP on April 1-30, 2003.

Farmers will be initially allowed the privilege of opening LCs for April 1-15, 2003.

The unavailed balance shall be made available to other importers starting April 16 up to April 30, 2003. The second quarter tranche will arrive not later than June 30, 2003.

According to Sarmiento, any rice importation that arrives after the said dates per tranche will be turned away and may be considered as an unauthorized importation and may be subjected to forfeiture under the Tariff and Customs Code.

GMA okays DTI plan to ban import of used vehicles

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved in principle the recommendation of the Department of Trade and Industry to prohibit the importation of used vehicles.

The President expressed approval during the presentation of Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel "Mar" Roxas II during the regular Cabinet meeting at Malacanang.

Roxas' recommendation is to ban all types of used motor vehicles with the exceptions of special purpose vehicles like fire trucks and ambulances and vehicles of Filipino balikbayans.

Roxas said the DTI would draft the Memorandum Order that would simplify and clarify the rules and regulations for approval by the President.

According to Roxas, there were only 76,670 units of vehicles sold in the domestic vehicle industry in 2001 while 178, 285 units were registered at the Land Transportation Office that year.

Roxas said there are at least 52, 615 used vehicles unaccounted for.

Roxas noted that for the first four months of 2002, the number of vehicles that entered Subic Freeport was estimated at 15, 000 units.

Roxas noted that in ASEAN countries like Malaysia, Thailand and Indonesia, used vehicles are generally not allowed to be imported.

He said the only exceptions are vehicles that are not locally produced, used reconditioned luxury vehicles or personal vehicles for returning citizens.

Meanwhile, the President also approved the proposal of Roxas to restructure the MFN Tariff Rates, the rationalization of excise taxes on vehicles.

Average registration period of transactions at D.O.H. reduced — PMS

In line with the efforts of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration to reduce red tape in government transactions, the Department of Health (DOH) has drastically reduced the average registration period for local and imported drugs from 180 days to five days.

The new DOH program has also cut down the number of signatories for the certification of product registration under the Bureau of Food and Drugs Administration (BFAD) from five to four days, according to an update prepared by the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) on the targets set by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July.

The latest comparative data released by the DOH covers the period of June-Sept. 2001 to June-Sept. 2002.

The PMS report showed that the DOH has filed charges against six of its personnel for offenses ranging from attendance to ghost seminars, extortion, vaccine pilferage, procurement anomaly and overpricing since July 2002.

On the accreditation and certification of medical equipment and devices, the DOH has also reduced the average accreditation period by 50 percent, from 10 days to five days.

The number of signatories for the said process has also been trimmed down to two.

In her SONA, the President has vowed to reduce red tape by cutting in half the number of signatories needed for transactions in various government agencies.

Since then, frontline agencies of the different departments have instituted red-tape reduction measures, to reduce opportunities for graft, which are being monitored by concerned civil society groups and client groups.

In a related development, DOH Secretary Manuel Dayrit has tasked newly-appointed BFAD Director Dr. Leticia-Barbara Bañez-Gutierrez to continue the reforms instituted by her predecessor in the agency.

Dayrit commended erstwhile Food and Drug chief Dr. William Torres for the major improvements in BFAD.

He was referring to the streamlining of operations in the BFAD, the improvement in the registration process of drugs, the quality assurance of drugs under the parallel importation program, and the fight against fake drugs.

GMA lauds police, media for successful operation vs. kidnap gang, rescue of trader, recovery of ransom

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the Philippine National Police (PNP) for another major accomplishment against big-time kidnapping syndicates and thanked the media for cooperating with the authorities for the success of the operations against a kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gang in Cavite.

The President went to General Trias, Cavite, this morning to personally congratulate PNP Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, PNP Region 4 (southern Tagalog) Director Chief Superintendent Enrique Galang and Cavite Provincial Police Director Senior Superintendent Samuel Pagdilao for neutralizing the Radam-Mostrales KFR gang which was believed responsible for a series of kidnappings in Metro Manila.

“Congratulations and keep up the good work,” President said to Ebdane, Galang and Pagdilao.

Addressing the reporters, the President said: “I’d like to thank the media in Cavite because they did not report the kidnapping. Because of their full cooperation, the solution time just took two days and the police also recovered the ransom money.”

Three members of the kidnap gang — Rodolfo “Bullet” Patinio, Diosdado Santos and Eugene Radam, former members of the Philippine Marines — were killed in a gun battle with members of the Police Anti-Crime and Emergency Response (PACER) and the Cavite provincial police at dawn today.

The police also rescued the gang’s captive, businessman Jose Piñano, and recovered the ransom money picked up earlier by the gang.

The three slain kidnap suspects were linked to slain Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom gang leader Faisal Marohombsar who was also killed by PACER members and members of the military during a shootout in Magallanes town, also in Cavite.

Pagdilao informed the President that the encounter came a day after the gang members released Peñano last Tuesday at a McDonald’s outlet in Tagaytay City after the victim reportedly paid P2 million in ransom. The businessman was abducted last September 16 near the boundary of Carmona and Silang, Cavite.

He further informed the President that he ordered a raid on the gang’s hideout in Barangay Manggahan in General Trias only after assuring that the victim was free and safe.

Recovered at the scene of the shootout were one traveling bag containing the P2 million ransom; one black leather bag; two cellular activated bombs; one Pietro Berreta 9mm gun with serial number MOD-9205; one 9mm DP51 Daewoo gun with serial number BA-003945; one 9mm Rugger P85 gun with serial number 300-45431; three cellular phones, one M16 A1 Armalite rifle with serial number 180300; three magazines of 9mm; two black inside holster; two fragmentation grenades; two leather wallets containing a list of suspected target victims; one camera; and other personal belongings of the suspects.

Pagdilao also said the Mostrales group was also responsible for the kidnapping of Grace Ong on October 2, 2001 in Ayala, Alabang; Jason Lim on October 15, 2001 in Sta. Cruz, Manila; and Angela Vina Pineda on November 12, 2001 in Mandaluyong City.

Santos was one of the prime suspects in the killing of Baron Cervantes, former Young Officer Union (YOU) spokesman, last December 31, 2001 in Las Piñas City.

Patinio escaped from the defunct National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (NAKTAF) detention cell last June 19, 2002 together with Pentagon gang leader Marohombsar, who was killed in an encounter last month in Magallanes, Cavite.

The two was also involved for the kidnapping of Patricia Cheung and Winena Jordan on August 19, 2002.

Employment grows, more people finding full-time jobs, D.O.L.E. informs Malacañang

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) reported to Malacañang today that employment grew in July this year and the quality of employment improved as more people found full-time jobs.

In her report, Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas said the 2.8 percent expansion in employment in July compared to the same period last year represents an increase of 823,000, bringing the total employed persons to 30.104 million.

Sto. Tomas said the gain in employment was recorded strongest in the service sector with 4.9 percent, with the agricultural, fishery and forestry sector posting a modest increase of 1.5 percent.

She noted, however, that the growth in industry employment was essentially flat with -0.1 percent.

Sto. Tomas also said more people found full-time employment during the period.

“Of the total employed persons, 60 percent or 18.343 million were engaged in full-time employment,” she said, adding that wage and salary employment also grew by 3.6 percent.

Sto. Tomas also said underemployment, the incidence of employed persons who expressed desire for additional hours/additional jobs, posted a slight decline.

The gain in employment, however, was matched by an even larger growth in the labor force (4.1 percent or 1.351 million) as more people entered the labor market, she added.

Sto. Tomas also reported that the rise in labor supply pushed the July unemployment rate to 11.2 percent from 10.1 percent in the same month last year. “This figure is, however, lower by 2.7 percentage points than the April unemployment rate of 13.9 percent,” she said.

According to the labor secretary, if the number of Filipinos who are employed abroad (which as of September 12 has reached 665,741) are included, the employment figures will further improve by at least 2 percent more.

It can be recalled that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration is targeting a deployment of one million Filipino workers for the year.

Sto. Tomas vowed to continue to strengthen the implementation of DOLE’s four employment strategies, namely, employment generation, employment preservation, employment enhancement, and employment facilitation.

“More specifically, DOLE is committed to intensify the training and upgrading of skills of workers, and to strengthen employment facilitation mechanism (PESOs and Manpower Registry of Skills) to place more workers in local and overseas jobs,” Sto. Tomas said.

GMA meets with heirs of Sulu Sultanate

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today formally welcomed the heirs of the Sultanate of Sulu and informed them that their interest and welfare are foremost in her mind.

In a press briefing in Malacañang after the President’s luncheon meeting with representatives of the nine families acknowledged as heirs of the Sultanate of Sulu, Presidential Assistant on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales said that the President told the heirs of her reestablishing the Legislative-Executive Committee on the Sabah claim to review the initiatives undertaken by past administrations vis à vis the issue.

The move of the President, Gonzales said, was in response to the request of the heirs to resolve the issue of sovereignty and proprietary rights of the Sultanate of Sulu on Sabah.

Gonzales said that Sultan Jamalul Kiram III, the recognized head of the heirs of the Sultanate of Sulu, said that he will pursue simultaneously both the proprietary and sovereignty rights. Aside from Sultan Jamalul Kiram, Sultan Bantilan Esmail Kiram also attended the meeting.

Gonzales pointed out that the sovereignty question has been given back to the heirs of the Sultanate of Sulu, but they have asked the President for assistance with respect to both their sovereignty and proprietary rights.

“There will be discussions on whether the heirs of the Sultanate will probably give back to the Philippine government the power of attorney for the sovereignty rights,” Gonzales said.

But the President, according to Gonzales, has cautioned the heirs that the sovereignty issue would take a long time to settle.

“In the case of the proprietary rights, the President was very precise in her statement that what she really wants was for the heirs to be protected in terms of their future,” Gonzales added.

The representatives of the nine families recognized as heirs of the Sultanate of Sulu who attended the luncheon meeting with the President in Malacañang included the heirs of Dayang Dayang Mariam Kiram, Sultan Punjungan Kiram, Dayang Dayang Jahara Kiram, Dayang Dayang Sitti Rada Kiram, Mora Nafsa, Sultan Esmail Kiram I, Princess Tarhata Kiram, Dayang Dayang Hjiipiandao Kiram and Princess Sakinur-in Kiram.

The nine families are the ones recognized in court ruling that defines the authentic and legitimate heirs of Sulu.

“One of the things that we cleared during the luncheon meeting in Malacañang is that Malaysia, Britain and the Philippines have a common basis for the legitimate claimants to the Sulu Sultanate and this is the Makaski Judgment which recognizes the nine families,” Gonzales said.

World Bank okays $100-million loan for KALAHI-CIDSS project in RP

The Washington-based World Bank has approved a US$100 million loan for the Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) program, an anti-poverty initiative of the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In a press statement, the WB said that the loan from the International Bank for Rehabilitation and Development (IBRD) was approved Wednesday by the WB’s board of executive directors.

The loan, the WB statement said, would be used for the KALAHI program and for the Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services (CIDSS) project of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

The WB said that the project will assist the government in strengthening the capability of local government units (LGUs) to design, implement, and manage development activities.

Such activities may include basic infrastructure like new or rehabilitated roads and bridges, barangay schools and clinics, and water supply and sanitation facilities.

Communities will prioritize their development needs, design activities, seek technical expertise and make informed choices on how resources are used for sustainable poverty reduction, the WB statement said.

More than 5,300 poor barangays in 193 municipalities in 40 of the poorest provinces in the Philippines are expected to benefit from this project. These will be mostly in rural areas, where most poor Filipinos live.

“The KALAH-CIDSS project will promote good governance, transparency, participation with local level decision-making, and increased accountability, as villagers gain hands-on experience in managing projects,” said Cyprian Fisiy, World Bank task team leader for the KALAH-CIDSS project.

Robert Vance Pulley, WB country director for the Philippines, said that promoting growth and enabling people, especially the poor, to participate fully in development are the twin pillars of the World Bank’s strategy for the Philippines.

“This project will support the second pillar by giving influence over decisions and resources to local communities. Poverty reduction efforts are more likely to be effective and sustained when communities are responsible for activities that affect them,” Pulley said.

The WB identified the core project principles as follows:

- Localized decision-making. Decisions on community sub-projects will be made by barangay residents and their representatives.
- Transparency. Every aspect of project decision-making will be known to local communities and each peso spent will be accounted for on public information boards and independently monitored by non-government organizations (NGOs) and media groups.
- Social inclusiveness. The entire community, not just a few families, will have the opportunity to be involved in planning and decision-making processes.
- Competition. Participating barangays will submit project proposals to an inter-barangay forum for selection based on criteria like number of poor beneficiaries and technical soundness of the proposal.
- Demand-driven poverty reduction. Options for community-driven projects are based on an open menu, but projects with negative environmental or social impacts will not be funded.

The DSWD will be the implementing agency for the project.

Overall RP-US ties in excellent condition — DFA

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) today said the country’s overall bilateral relations with the United States have been in “excellent condition” starting in 2001 shortly after the September 11 terrorist attack in New York and Washington, DC, when President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo declared the Philippines’ support for the US-led war on terrorism.

The DFA spokesman, Assistant Secretary Victoriano Lecaros, made this statement in the wake of the reports that the Philippines and other Southeast Asian nations were even behind Africa in the hierarchy of interests of the US.

Lecaros said the excellent relations between the Philippines and the United States have been manifested in the large number of visits to the Philippines by high-level US officials.

Among the US officials who visited the Philippines under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration include US Secretary of State Colin Powell; Federal Bureau of Investigation Director Robert Mueller III; US Senators Daniel Inouye and Ted Stevens; US Veterans Affairs Secretary Anthony J. Pincipi; US Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Richard Myers; Admiral Thomas Fargo, Commander in Chief of the US forces in the Pacific; US Congressional delegate Robert A. Underwood; US Rep. Dana Rohrabacher; and Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul D. Wolfowitz.

Lecaros also said the Balikatan 02-1 exercises, the first of its kind between the Philippines and the US, went very well.

“The Bush administration requested the US Congress to grant $25 million in Foreign Military Financing (FMF) for the Philippines,” he said, adding that this amount is significant compared to the low FMF levels provided to the Philippines in recent years.

Moreover, Lecaros said the $25 million FMF intended by the Bush administration for the Philippines was doubled by the US Senate to over $50 million.

He noted that the Philippines is the “only country in the supplemental to be given an earmark, that is, a specified amount designated for a named country.”

GMA orders GFIs to give more loans to SMEs to reinvigorate domestic market

In stressing the need to reinvigorate the domestic market, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered officials of government financial institutions (GFIs) to step up efforts in providing loanable funds to small and medium enterprises (SMEs).

The President, who made the emphasis during her meeting with GFI officials at the State Dining Room in Malacañang, also ordered the GFIs to focus on special niches in the credit market.

"It is important that we manage our financial resources or loanable funds of government corporations like a tight ship," the President said.

The President noted that in the past, the GFIs have always followed market forces. But this time, she said, there is a need for directed credit.

The President further noted that the best and the most reliable source to boost the domestic market are the SMEs.

Among the GFIs represented in the meeting were the Philippine Postal Savings Bank, Land Bank of the Philippines, Development Bank of the Philippines, United Coconut Planters Bank, Small Business Guarantee and Finance Corporation, Quedan and Rural Credit Guarantee Corporation (Quedancor), Livelihood Corporation, Technology and Livelihood Resource Center, PhilExim (formerly Trade and Investment Development Corporation of the Philippines), and Overseas Workers Welfare Administration.

According to the agencies, the total loan portfolio for the SMEs of the leading 11 GFIs reached P91.2 billion as of December 2001.

From January to June 2002, the total loans and guarantee extended by the GFIs to SMEs amounted to P5.9 billion. The total beneficiaries for the same period were 69,000 SME borrowers.

In 2001, the biggest lender among the agencies were the LBP and DBP (with P22 billion) while the largest guarantor was Quedancor (P20.3 billion).

The National Capital Region and Regions 3 and 4 received the highest share of SME loans from both GFIs and private banks.

The GFIs also received 14 percent of the loan applications of SMEs while private banks covered the rest.

During the meeting, the President also discussed ways on how to improve SMEs' access to credit and how it can likewise increase capacity to absorb credit.

The President noted her “One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos for SME Loan,” where the government lends out P1 million to a town (to be paid out to LBP) for the development of a single indigenous product.

The President has said the government would convince banks to open more credit windows for SMEs instead of loaning out money to less productive sectors like luxury properties and factories with excess capacity.

She noted the SME’s capability to effectively circulate capital and increase domestic consumption, but stressed that the SMEs needed plenty of capital.

Among those who attended the meeting were Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho and Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II.

GMA joins state workers in mass to celebrate 102nd RP civil service anniversary

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today joined the nation’s public servants in a eucharistic celebration at the Heroes Hall at Malacañang to commemorate the 102nd anniversary of Philippine civil service.

With the President were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Presidential Assistant for Ecumenical and Media Affairs Conrado Limcaoco, Presidential Assistant for Agricultural Modernization Angelito Sarmiento and Presidential Assistant for Education Mona Valisno, among others.

Monsignor Augusto Laban, chaplain of the Office of the President, officiated the Mass, offered the mass to bring to mind the efforts and sacrifices of the country’s civil workers in assuring faster and quality services in an effective and efficient bureaucracy.

President Macapagal-Arroyo, in her two State of the Nation Address (SONA) had stressed on good governance and ridding the government of people involved in graft and corrupt practices to pave the way in building a strong Republic.

The Civil Service Commission (CSC) celebrates this month the anniversary of the Philippine civil service with the theme “Lakas ng Serbisyo Sibil, Lakas ng Bayan (Strength of Civil Service, Strength of the Nation).”

CSC Chairperson Karina Constantino-David said the anniversary celebration would be highlighted with the conferment of the 2002 Outstanding Public Officials and Employees Awards by the President.

The awards to be conferred are the Presidential Lingkod Bayan Award for outstanding individual work performance and the Dangal ng Bayan Award for exemplary ethical behavior or public service act.

These are considered as the highest awards in the civil service.

David said a concert-tribute for state workers, dubbed “Parangal ... Pasasalamat 2002” would also be staged. During the activity, the CSC will confer the Pagasa Award for outstanding individual or group work performance, and the Katangi-tanging Bihasang Manggagawa Award for exemplary blue-collared workers in government.

David called on all government agencies nationwide to actively participate in the activities set for the anniversary and to help ensure the success of the occasion.

An activity is the “A Day with a Barangay” where government agencies involved in health, environment and sanitation are encouraged to group together and to go to specific barangays to offer their respective services.

“A Day with a Barangay” aims to bring government services to the people’s doorsteps. Local government units are urged to be active partners in the endeavor as they will help identify the beneficiary barangays. CSC regional offices will take the lead in the activity.

Agencies are also urged to undertake fund-raising activities and donate the proceeds to institutions such as the Philippine National Red Cross or the social welfare department.

Other activities that agencies can conduct include open house, bloodletting, media forum, and recognition day. Agencies, however, are not precluded from carrying out other activities in celebrating the occasion.

GMA calls on banks to extend more loans to SMEs, housing sector

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has called on the banking community to provide more loans to the housing sector and to small and medium enterprises (SMEs) in a bid to reinvigorate the domestic market.

In a press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said that the President met Wednesday night with officials of the Bankers Association of the Philippines (BAP) where she asked them to further expand their lending program for the SMEs.

This morning the President also met with officials of government financial institutions (GFIs) where she also asked them to step up their lending program for SMEs, stressing that this is one way of expanding the domestic market.

Camacho said that what the government is trying to do is to focus its efforts “so that the different sectors of our economy, including the banking sector, can be in sync with what the national government is doing.”

He said that because of the potential weakness in the global economy, the administration is focusing on the SMEs and the housing sector.

“Activities in these two sectors could help promote domestic economy, create domestic demand but this will require domestic financing,” Camacho said.

Camacho said that during the Wednesday meeting in Malacañang, the bankers expressed their willingness to increase their loan portfolio for the SMEs but they could not identify who the qualified SME businessmen and borrowers are.

So this is where the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) would come in, and since they have regional and provincial networks, they will be the ones to introduce the SMEs to the bankers and the GFIs, Camacho said.

Camacho said that there is a need for government agencies to be proactive to be able to help the SMEs in seeking loans from the GFIs and the private banks.

He even suggested the holding of “loan fairs” and the operation of a website where prospective borrowers can surf for GFIs and private banks willing to lend money to them for their operations.

“So, what we are really trying to do is identify measures or activities that would allow us to be proactive in the provision of credit to SMEs, such as technical assistance and empowering them,” Camacho said.

GMA reassures U.S. of continued support in fight vs. global terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reassured the United States of the Philippines’ continued support in its fight against global terrorism as well as in its efforts to go after illegally acquired funds by terror groups.

The President's assurance was given to John Taylor, US Treasury Undersecretary for International Affairs, who called on her in Malacañang this morning. During their meeting, the President and Taylor discussed topics of mutual concern for the two countries.

Taylor, who is in the country for a two-day visit, was accompanied to Malacañang by Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho.

In a media briefing later, Camacho said the President, in a candid conversation with Taylor, "emphasized our support for the US in the fight against global terrorism."

Camacho said the President also told Taylor about the efforts undertaken by the government to strengthen its anti-money laundering law and keep this "within international standards."

The President told Taylor that administration officials are now working with leaders of Congress on amendments to the anti-money laundering law.

Another topic discussed by the President and Taylor was the US announcement of a Millennium Challenge account for qualified developing nations.

The account was first brought out during the recent visit of US Secretary of State Colin Powell, who also called on the President in Malacañang.

The account is a "$5-billion fund the US government would like to provide in the next four or five years to countries they believe could meet the criteria," Camacho explained.

The fund would be used for government programs and projects "in the area of poverty alleviation, specifically in health education and in the fight against the dreaded AIDS (Acquired Immuno-Deficiency Syndrome) in regions like Africa," Camacho said.

Camacho also disclosed that he and Taylor would sign an agreement that would formalize the Philippines' eligibility to avail itself of the tropical forest program of the US.

"This will allow us to take advantage of funds being made available by the US government to help us in our environmental conservation projects, particularly in reforestation," he added.

The bilateral agreement will be implemented by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR).

U.S. to provide funds for RP's forest conservation program

The governments of the Philippines and the United States today formally signed an agreement on the Tropical Forest Conservation Fund (TFCF) that would provide financial assistance to help the country's campaign in the environmental concerns, especially in reforestation projects.

The agreement was signed by Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho and John B. Taylor, US Treasury Undersecretary for International Affairs, during a simple ceremony held at the Department of Finance this afternoon.

In his press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang, Camacho said that Taylor briefed the President about the TFCF agreement during his courtesy call in Malacañang this morning.

"Under the program, the Philippines would take advantage of funds being made available by the US government to help us in our environmental conservation projects, particularly in reforestation," Camacho said.

Camacho said that the agreement is the first concrete step and fruit of the President's working visit to the United States in November last year and also part of the existing bilateral relations between the two countries.

The US would provide an initial fund of $8.2 million for the program that will be implemented by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR).

Under the TFCF, the government will establish, in consultation with non-government organizations (NGOs) involved in forest conservation, a Tropical Forest Conservation Board to administer the fund.

The Board shall consist of nine members, two each from the government and the US, and five from NGOs. Representatives of the NGOs should constitute a majority of the board.

Activities eligible for financing under the fund are:

1. Establishment, restoration, protection of parks, protected areas, and reserves;
2. Development and implementation of scientifically sound systems of natural resource management, including land and ecosystem management practices;
3. Training programs to increase scientific, technical and managerial capacities of individuals and organizations involved in forest conservation efforts;
4. Restoration, protection, or sustainable use of diverse animal and plant species;
5. Research and identification of medicinal uses of tropical forest plant life to treat human diseases, illnesses and health-related concerns; and
6. Development and support of the livelihood projects for individuals living in or near a tropical forest in a manner consistent with protecting such tropical forest.

Entities eligible to receive grants from the fund are:

1. Non-governmental environmental, forestry, conservation, and indigenous people organizations of, or active in the Philippines, including those involved in development, education, science research, or forest management;
2. Other appropriate local or regional entities of, or active in, the Philippines; and
3. In exceptional circumstances, the government of the Philippines.

GMA thanks junior golf champion for bringing honor to her country

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed her gratitude to international junior golf champion Javie Marie Agoho, for bringing honors to the country by winning in two prestigious golf tournaments in the United States.

"We're proud of you. Thank you for bringing honor to your country," the President told Agoho during the latter's courtesy call in Malacañang.

Among those who accompanied the young Agoho during the call on the President were Philippine Sports Commission (PSC) Chairman Eric Buhain, her parents, Jun and Vicky Agoho, and her personal trainer Romulo Negrado.

The 16-year old golfer has won the girls division (13-15 years old) of the International Junior Golf Championship held last July 10-13 in Temecula, California, and the Optimist International Junior Golf Competition (14-15 years old) in July 19-21, also in California.

The three-day Optimist International Junior Golf Championship (OIJGC) is one of the largest and most prestigious events for junior golfers, with ages 10 to 18.

Each year over 5,000 young people from the United States and Canada compete in qualifying tournaments. There are over 650 players from 15 countries, 45 states, and 6 Canadian provinces who participate in the championship event. Players compete in the 10-11, 12-13, 14-15, 16-18 age divisions.

During their conversation, the President said she is looking forward to playing a round of golf with Agoho at the Villamor Air Base golf course where the latter does her regular practice every Sunday.

Agoho is currently studying at the O.B. Montessori in Greenhills, San Juan.

GMA presents cash awards to best films for July and August, and to 10 best scripts for MMFFP '02

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo presented cash awards and plaques of recognition to the best Filipino movies for the month of July and August and to 10 winning scripts for the Metro Manila Film Festival Philippines 2002 (MMFFP '02).

In ceremonies held at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang attended by leaders of the country's movie industry, the President also called on the movie producers to make films that would not only entertain but also portray the best in Philippine culture.

Earlier, the President announced a P50 million subsidy for the movie industry so that it could produce quality films.

The President handed out P500,000 and a plaque each to the movie "Pakisabi Mo Na Lang na Mahal ko Siya" and "Jologs" which were adjudged winners of the Pilipino Great Movie Arts Awards for the month of July and August respectively.

The President also awarded P100,000 and plaque of recognition each for the scriptwriters of ten winning scripts submitted by the movie companies as entries to the MMFFP '02.

Leaders of the movie industry, headed by lawyer Esperidion Laxa, executive chairman of the MMFFP '02, thanked the President for giving incentives to locally-produced films.

In an interview later, Fernando Poe, Jr., who was among those present in the ceremony, also said that the President's subsidy is a great help to the movie industry.

"I would like to thank the President for helping the movie industry," Poe said.

The script of "Alamat ng Agimat," a film produced and directed by Poe was among the 10 winning scripts submitted to MMFFP '02. Poe will also star in the said movie.

The 10 scripts that won P100,000 each and a plaque of recognition were:

1. Home Along the Riber, written by Ben Felo and produced by RVQ Films of Rodolfo Quizon;
2. Spirit Warrior II, written by Roy Iglesias and produced by the MAQ Productions headed by Sherida Monteverde;
3. Mano Po, written by Roy Iglesias and being filmed by Lily Monteverde of Regal Entertainment;
4. Dekada, written by Lualhati Bautista and produced by Malou Santos of Star Cinema;
5. Lapu-Lapu, scripted by Jerry Tirazona and produced by Florante Castillo of Calinauan Cine Works;
6. Agimat 2, written by Peque Gallaga and produced by Marlon Bautista of Imus Films;
7. Alamat ng Lawin, written by Manuel Buising and produced by Ronald Allan Poe of FPJ Films;
8. Hula Mo, Huli Ko, written by Senen Dimaguila and Humilde Roxas and filmed by Rudy Fernandez of Reflection Films;
9. Lastikman, written by Antonio Reyes and produced by Octoarts Films headed by Orlando Ilacad; and
10. Kulimlim, written by Roy Iglesias and produced by Teresita Cruz of Neo Films.

According to Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) Chairman Bayani Fernando, who is the over-all chairman of the MMFFP 2002, the cash awards given to the 10 best scripts and for the best quality films for the months of July and August came from the P50 million presidential subsidy.

During the program, the President, the awardees and the officials of the MMFFP '02 viewed a one-minute promo material on Filipino Great Movie Arts Award and on the government's anti-film piracy campaign.

- Bush thanks GMA for support on U.S. petition before U.N.
- GMA gets vote of confidence from Taipans
- GMA appoints Ibay as acting ERC chairperson

NEDA Board approves projects worth P33.7B

The National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Board has approved 12 projects worth P33.7 billion to boost agricultural productivity; support health, education and social services; and improve infrastructure in Metro Manila and the countryside.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is the chairman of the NEDA Board.

The President had stressed the importance of speeding up the delivery of social services and fast-tracking the implementation of critical infrastructure projects to build a strong Republic in her State of the Nation Address last July.

The P10.8-billion Agno River Integrated Irrigation Project led the list of approved projects.

The project is expected to provide year-round water supply to irrigate some 70,800 hectares and raise the output of paddy rice and diversified crops in Pangasinan and Tarlac.

This would make farming highly competitive and profitable and would increase per capita income, upgrade the living standards of the people and create jobs in Central Luzon.

The Agno irrigation project covered the repair of the San Roque diversion weir and intake; the construction of the re-regulating pond with a capacity of 4.6 million cubic meters; construction of a canal at the right bank of the Agno River to supply existing service areas of the Agno River Irrigation System (ARIS); and the construction of siphon across Agno River that will link the main canal of lower ARIS.

The NEDA Board also approved the P4.52-billion Pasig-Marikina Channel Improvement Project Phase I, which aims to alleviate the living and sanitary conditions in Metro Manila due to massive flooding caused by the overflowing of the Pasig-Marikina River.

Experience showed that flooding had resulted in severe damage to lives, properties and infrastructure.

The project would lessen the overflowing of Pasig River at times of heavy discharge by increasing the river's conveyance capacity.

The riverbank would be elevated with the erection of some 18.2 kilometers of parapet wall and 17.6 kilometers of revetment walls, and the dredging and excavation of about 7,000 cubic meters of riverbed deposits from the Del Pan Bridge to the Napindin Channel.

The project would further include the repair of about ten kilometers of damaged stretches of existing river walls to prevent erosion and the collapse of riverbanks.

Also in the pipeline is the implementation of the P3.4-billion Agrarian Reform Community Development Project-Phase II, which aims to significantly raise household incomes and the quality of life of target agrarian reform beneficiaries (ARBs).

The NEDA Board said the project would improve productive assets, rural infrastructure and access to key support services.

The project has three components: community development and capability building; rural infrastructure; and agriculture and enterprise development and rural credit financing.

Lately, President Macapagal-Arroyo called on banks and government financial institutions to help fund projects of small and medium enterprises, particularly those under the government's "One Town-One Project" program.

Another project, the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) Social Fund for Peace Development worth P2.53 billion, aimed to reduce poverty and help build sustainable peace in the ARMM.

The project involved interventions for socio-economic development of target communities, the implementation of infrastructure of regional strategic significance, and peace and advocacy at various levels.

It would cover 2,800 barangays in 94 towns in the ARMM's five provinces — Sulu, Basilan, Tawi-Tawi, Maguindanao and Lanao del Sur, including Marawi City.

Other projects approved were the General Santos Fishing Port Complex Expansion/Improvement Project worth P1.52 billion; Bago River Irrigation System Rehabilitation and Improvement Project, P1.52 billion; 26th Tranche Increased Food Production Program, P610 million; Upgrading the Inter-Urban Highway System, P3.4 billion;

Valenzuela-Obando-Meycauayan Area Drainage System Improvement and Related Works, P3.23 billion; Educational Facilities Improvement Program, Phase VI, P900 million; Philippine Follow-Up Measles Elimination Campaign, P450 million; and Upgrading of Essential Medical Equipment for Strategic Government Referral Hospitals in the Southern Mindanao, P825 million.

GMA lauds Malampaya for winning U.N. award for sustainable development

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Malampaya Deep Water Gas to Power Project, a joint venture of multinational conglomerates and government corporations, for capturing a major United Nations award for sustainable development during the World Summit on the Environment held recently in Johannesburg, South Africa.

The President, who met with officials of the joint venture partners and project associates during a courtesy call in Malacañang, said that the recognition is a great honor for the Philippines.

"We're very honored with this award," the President said.

The President noted that the Malampaya Gas to Power project shows that the government can undertake a joint venture with the private sector that would have a great economic impact, as well as positive effect on the environment.

Members of the joint venture undertook a reenactment of the awarding ceremonies at the Music Room of the Palace.

Jeremy Cliff, managing director of Shell Philippines Exploration B.V., operator of the joint venture, presented the award to the President. "It looks really humble but it's very meaningful for us all," Cliff said.

Cliff said the award recognizes the Malampaya project's program for natural gas development using a sustainable management framework that ensures the economic, environmental and social acceptability of a large-scale industrial venture in the Philippines.

This is being achieved through a partnership among the government, local communities, and local and international non-governmental organizations.

The project is a joint venture of Shell, Chevron-Exaco, and Philippine National Oil Company-Exploration Corporation (PNOC-EC).

Those who attended the meeting were Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Heherson Alvarez, Shell Philippines country chairman Eliseo Santiago, Shell Philippines Exploration B.V. business development manager Mike Wooton, Exaco Philippines President and Chief Finance Officer Therry Brebion, PNOC-EC president Rufino Barasang, Karl Cotbell of Exaco; Federico Lopez of First Gas, Batangas Gov. Hermilando Mandanas and British Ambassador Paul Diamond.

The award was given by the International Chamber of Commerce/United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP).

ICC, a business organization, is the largest private sector association in the world. UNEP is the environment agency of the United Nations. This is the second year they have joined forces to recognize the sustainable development achievements of companies around the world.

The Malampaya project was among the 10 that were selected as winners from more than 120 entries from 37 countries.

This year's winning entrants covered the range of industrial activity – from farming of organic cotton to sustainable forestry practices, natural gas extraction and recycling programs.

The winners came from four continents and included companies in Finland, Spain, South Africa and the Philippines.

GMA wishes Philippine team to Asian good luck

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today wished the 218-member Team Philippines good luck and cheered them on to do battle in the 14th Asian Games in Busan, South Korea and bring home as many gold, silver and bronze medals as they can.

During a sendoff ceremony held at the Heroes Hall of Malacañang, the President expressed hope that the Philippine delegation would surpass the number of medals they won in the 1998 Asiad.

Thomas Carrasco, chef d' mission to the Busan Asian Games, presented the Philippine Flag to the President during the ceremony and introduced the members of the Philippine contingent by batches.

The President also received the official jacket of the Philippine delegation from Eric Buhain, chairman of the Philippine Sports Commission (PSC).

The athletes will compete in various events during the quadrennial event, including archery, aquatic games, badminton, baseball, basketball, billiards, rowing, sailing, fencing, sepak takraw, soft tennis, table tennis, wrestling, wushu, and aikido.

The Philippine athletes will be leaving the country by batches in the next few days to participate in the 14th Asian Games scheduled to run from September 29 to October 14 in Busan, South Korea.

The Palace sendoff comes less than a week after the President agreed to augment the PSC coffers with P50 million from the President's Social Fund. The augmentation fund will be directed to the Asian Games campaign as well as for the PSC's other commitments.

The Malacañang affair also comes two days after Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin gave his best wishes and blessings to the sports delegation.

Aside from Buhain and Carrasco, among those present during the Palace sendoff were Cynthia Carreon and Mike Barredo of the PSC board of commissioners; Philippine Olympic Committee (POC) president Celso Dayrit; and Frank Elizalde, Philippine representative to the International Olympics Committee (IOC).

Taipans assure GMA of joining gov't socialized housing program

The country's top Filipino-Chinese businessmen, known as taipans for being the captains of Philippine business, have agreed to participate in the government's socialized housing program.

In her luncheon meeting with John Gokongwei, Henry Sy, Andrew Gotianum, and representatives of George Ty and Alfonso Yuchengco in Malacañang, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo encouraged them to help develop idle and supposed to be privatized government properties for housing for government employees, specially for teachers, soldiers and policemen.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, who was present in the meeting, said that the luncheon did not discuss generalities or motherhood statements.

"We talked about specific ideas and specific projects and we were very happy with the response that the government is getting from the taipans," Camacho said.

According to Camacho, the President urged the taipans, in particular, to invest in the development of the Philippine government villages where idle government lands or those that are supposed to be privatized could be developed as real estate properties.

"Through this mechanism, we hope we would be able to deliver housing units at affordable prices through the combination of different inputs from different parties from government and the private sector," Camacho said.

Camacho stressed that the multiplier effect of housing to the total economy is about 11 percent, adding that with related industries, like labor, gravel and metal and other construction materials, the multiplier effect would total about 14 to 21 percent.

The government will also minimize bureaucratic red tape to encourage the Filipino-Chinese businessmen to go into the government's socialized housing program, Camacho said.

"We are also looking at the possibility of using government to be able to bring down the cost of construction materials" Camacho pointed out.

From the private sector, the contribution to the program would be their financial resources, their capitals, and their management skills, and their access to technology on housing.

Saying that she was just following the example of former President Fidel Ramos when he asked the taipans to develop a world-class airport, the President this time asked them to help the government in its housing program, Camacho said.

Also in the luncheon meeting were Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor, Interior and Local Government Undersecretary Alipio Fernandez, Aniceto Sobrepeña representing George Ty of Metro Bank and Helen Dee, representing Alfonso Yuchengco, and Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Deputy Governor Amado Tetangco.

Bush thanks GMA for support on U.S. petition before U.N.

United States President George W. Bush today thanked President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo “for her government’s strong support for the US approach on Iraq,” a White House statement said.

President Bush called up President Macapagal-Arroyo and the two leaders discussed “counterterrorism efforts around the world, including in Southeast Asia,” said White House spokesman Ari Fleischer.

In an official statement released Tuesday, President Macapagal-Arroyo said the “Philippines supports the case brought by the US against Iraq before the United Nations Security Council,” adding that the council should give the charges most urgent and serious consideration.

She said the Philippines has full confidence in the council, which “will act in accord with the imperatives of world peace and security and find the most expeditious way, the most effective way to serve these imperatives.”

She also said her administration “reaffirms its commitment to the global war against terrorism,” believing that “the world will never be secure unless terrorist lairs are exposed and destroyed.”

President Macapagal-Arroyo added that the Philippines “is prepared to extend political, security and humanitarian assistance to the US in the pursuit of its most vital interests, which coincide with our own vital interests, to defeat terrorism.”

GMA gets vote of confidence from Taipans

A group of Filipino-Chinese businessmen belonging to the so-called “cream of the crop” of the business community today expressed their confidence that the government under the leadership of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would be able to get rid of the crime syndicates, particularly the kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) gangs operating in the country.

“I always have confidence in the President,” said business and industry tycoon John Gokongwei during a press briefing in Malacañang.

The President met this afternoon with Gokongwei, Shoe Mart owner Henry Sy, Fil-Estate chief executive officer Andrew Gotianum and representatives of George Ty and Alfonso Yuchengco in Malacañang where they discussed the proposed construction of government villages, a socialized housing project for government employees.

Also present in the meeting were Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor and Ambassador Tomas Alcantara.

Gotianum, for his part, said that while everybody is concerned about the recent incidents of kidnappings, “at least the government is taking steps.”

“They have eliminated seven of the (KFR) gangs. If they continue, we should be able to get rid of them in the next six months,” Gotianum said.

On the other hand, Sy said that the business community is looking at the kidnapping incidents as “temporary.”

“We look at this crisis as temporary and the country has a lot of potentials. The crisis could be addressed sooner or later,” he stressed.

During the briefing with the media, Gokongwei also lauded the President for initiating the government-private sector partnership to provide housing for civil servants using government lands, including idle properties within military camps throughout the country.

“The plan to encourage building and development of army lands is very good,” Gokongwei said.

GMA appoints Ibay as acting ERC chairperson

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today appointed Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) Commissioner Leticia V. Ibay as acting chairperson of the ERC vice Fe Barin, who is resigning to pave the way for her appointment to the Monetary Board.

Barin has been appointed by the President as one of the private sector representatives of the Monetary Board.

Barin will replace Teodoro Montecillo, Monetary Board member representing the private sector. Montecillo served the Monetary Board for a term of six years from August 6, 1996 to August 5, 2002.

Ibay’s involvement in the public sector spans 33 years of government service, majority of which were spent with the Board of Investments. She represented the Philippines in various international fora, including the World Trade Organization, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) as well as the Association of Southeast Nations, among others.

She finished her Bachelor of Laws degree at the Manuel L. Quezon University and graduated cum laude from the Philippine College of Commerce, where she was a dean’s lister.

Ibay is married to Judge Francisco B. Ibay of the Regional Trial Court 135 in Makati with whom she has three children.

Barin obtained her Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of the Philippines in 1956.

Before she became ERC chairperson, Barin held various positions, among them as Secretary to the Monetary Board and Special Assistant to the Governor of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas and Assistant Legal Counsel of the Philippine Deposit and Insurance Corporation (PDIC).

The powers and functions of Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas are exercised by its Monetary Board, which has seven members appointed by the President of the Republic of the Philippines.

Among the major functions of the Monetary Board include the power to issue rules and regulations it considers necessary for the effective discharge of the responsibilities and exercise of the powers vested in it; direct the management, operations, and administration of Bangko Sentral, organize its personnel and issue such rules and regulations as it may deem necessary or desirable for this purpose.

Gov't identifies public lands for expanded housing program

The government has proclaimed several of its real estate properties in Metro Manila as sites for housing projects, according to Michael Defensor, Chairman of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC).

This is in line with the goals on housing for the urban poor communities expounded by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered in July this year.

Defensor, in a briefing in Malacañang, said several public lands have been identified for expanded housing projects following commitments from taipans and other groups to help build a strong Republic by providing better homes for needy Filipinos.

The President, Defensor said, had also called on government financial institutions (GFIs) and private banks to support the shelter program.

"The President is taking a lead role on this not only through the maximization of government efforts but also in enhancing the environment in the private sector to set up not only socialized housing, but even low-cost and economic housing projects," Defensor stressed.

Defensor said the lands included those in Guadalupe, Makati City; the Taguig area; the area of the National Development Corp. in Sucat, Parañaque City; and some areas in Quezon City.

He added that there have also been some negotiations with the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) for the use of some its lands for housing purposes.

Complementing these are the housing projects being discussed and detailed with the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR), Defensor said.

Defensor said a project that would erect 50,000 housing units for agrarian reform beneficiaries could commence immediately, following agreements with DAR Secretary Hernani Braganza.

"We hope to expand our programs and projects," he said.

"The multiplier effect of housing to the total economy is about 11 percent. And with related industries, such as labor and construction materials, the multiplier effect would total to about 14 to 21 percent," Defensor said.

GMA commends PNP for recent successes in fight against kidnap-for-ransom gangs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today commended the Philippine National Police (PNP) under the leadership of Director General Hermogenes Ebdane for its recent successes in the fight against kidnap-for-ransom gangs and other criminal elements in the country.

In her weekly radio program aired nationwide, the President said that the PNP has already neutralized five of the identified 21 kidnap-for-ransom groups operating mostly in Metro Manila.

The President cited the recent successful operation by the PNP in Cavite that resulted in the death of some members of the Radam and Patino gang and the recovery of ransom money.

“Ito rin ay nagsisilbing babala sa mga natitira pang grupo ng mga kidnaper—bilang na ang inyong araw (This will also serve as a reminder to the remaining groups of kidnappers—your days are numbered),” the President said.

The President said her administration is determined to wipe out all forms of criminality as she has pledged in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered in July this year.

“Makakaasa kayo sa patuloy na determinasyon ng inyong pamahalaan na linisin ang ating lipunan laban sa lahat ng uri ng krimen (Rest assured that this government is determined to cleanse our society of all forms of criminality),” the President said.

In her SONA, the President vowed to win “decisive victories” in the war against terrorists, kidnappers and drug lords.

The government, the President said, will also continue to go after public officials who have committed crimes or graft and corruption, including those in the military and the police, who she described as “rascals in uniforms.”

According to the President, the administration has already filed several cases against government officials involved in tax frauds and money laundering.

The President said that peace and order and an honest bureaucracy are needed to speed up the country’s economic growth.

“Ang paglutas ng ating peace and order problems at sa problema ng katiwalian ay kasing-halaga ng pagbuti ng ating ekonomiya (Solving our peace and order problems as well as our problems in graft and corruption is as important as improving the economy),” the President said.

“Peace and development and the rule of law always come together,” the President stressed.

RP would support any U.N. action to solve the problem of Iraq — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the Philippines will support any action to be taken by the United Nations in order to resolve the situation in Iraq.

In her weekly radio program aired nationwide, the President also stressed that the Philippines is determined to honor its earlier commitment to support the campaign against global terrorism.

“At kaisa tayo ng United Nations para sa paglutas ng problema ng Iraq (And we are one with the United Nations in its search for solution to the problem of Iraq),” the President said.

The President recalled that some two weeks ago, she ordered the evacuation of all Filipinos in Iraq because of the threat of war in the area.

But since the threat of war has diminished because of the decision of Iraq to allow the reentry of UN arms inspectors to the country, she has suspended the evacuation at the moment, the President said.

Despite this new development, however, the President said she had instructed former AFP Chief of Staff, Gen. Roy Cimatu, her special envoy to the Middle East, to proceed to Iraq and find out the situation of the Filipino workers there and in the neighboring countries.

“Nais nating makatiyak na mabuti ang kalagayan ng ating mga kababayan doon (We just want to be sure that our countrymen there are safe),” the President said.

GMA stresses commitment to good governance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed her commitment to good governance, saying that without good governance, the war against poverty cannot be won within the decade.

In her weekly radio program aired nationwide, the President also said that good governance is a prerequisite for the building of a strong Republic that she had espoused during her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered in July this year.

The President said this is the reason why she has ordered the arrest of influence peddlers who have been using their alleged connections to the First Family in their illegal activities.

She also said that she has ordered the Public Estates Authority (PEA) and the Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) to look into the charges that there was an overpricing in the construction of the Diosdado Macapagal Avenue at the Manila Bay reclamation area.

“Inatasan ko ang PEA at ang GSIS na magpaliwanag hinggil dito (I have ordered the PEA and the GSIS to explain their side on this),” the President said.

Earlier, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye bewailed the penchant of some groups to immediately link First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo to the alleged overpricing in the road-building project.

“Some people made it a habit to implicate the First Gentleman in every anomaly (in order) to have an impact on the President,” Bunye said.

But Bunye said the President’s detractors are not succeeding because “they cannot present even an ounce of evidence to their allegations.”

GMA makes a strong pitch for 2003 ‘Visit the Philippines Year’ among PATA officials

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo made a strong pitch Friday night before the delegates of the Pacific Asia Travel Association (PATA) for the country’s celebration of “Visit the Philippines Year” in 2003.

“The Filipino people are the best reason for visiting the Philippines,” the President said in her speech during the dinner reception in honor of the PATA delegates at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang.

The President informed the delegates that the celebration, which will run for the whole year, will feature colorful events such as cultural fairs, food festivals, and exhibits of locally-made handicrafts and other products.

“You can always tell your clients that there are at least 7,000 reasons for them to visit the Philippines,” the President told the more than 100 PATA delegates who are currently on a three-day meet in Manila.

Founded in Hawaii in 1951, PATA is the leader of and an authority on travel and tourism in Asia and the Pacific. It combines a traditional role of product development and marketing support for destinations, with strategic initiatives for the long-term vitality of the industry.

PATA's mission is to enhance the growth, value and quality of Pacific Asia travel and tourism for the benefit of its members.

President Macapagal-Arroyo pointed out that in visiting the Philippines, there will always be something that the country can offer even to the most discriminating visitor.

Most importantly, she said, the Philippines is "home to the world's most hospitable, cheerful and charming English-speaking people."

Also in her speech, the President explained that the country's tourism vision by year 2010 is more than the usual sun and beaches, nature, fun, service, and tourist mindset.

She said the government would like international arrivals to grow from two million in the year 2000 to five million in the year 2010.

In terms of jobs being generated from that sector, the President added that she would like jobs to grow from three million in the year 2000 to double in the year 2010.

"We would like the contribution of tourism to grow from US$7 billion in the year 2000 to US$17 billion in the year 2010," she said.

On domestic tourism, the President said she would like it to grow from US$800 million in the year 2000 to US$2.5 billion in 2010.

The Chief Executive said it is for this reason that she has appointed Richard Gordon as secretary of tourism and converted the department into a "super Cabinet" with policy ascendancy over other departments.

"Because we need these other departments to serve our national strategy for tourism," she said.

Under the tourism strategy, the President said the government has identified specific tourist segment priorities that include beach tourism, domestic tourism, short-course sightseeing, and shopping tourism.

The approach to these segments, she added, is to promote the relevant destinations through multi-channel marketing, spending 50 to 70 percent of the department's promotion budget.

The President said this budget will be geared specifically for the Japanese, Korean and Chinese market.

Next to the three-segment priorities are recreation tourism, eco-tourism, "Balikbayan" tourism, or the visits from overseas Filipinos, and the so-called back-packers.

These, she said, are niche segments which call for a tailored marketing approach. The government, she said, will be spending 20-30 percent of the DOT's promotion budget on "drive for shots" promotions tailored to specific groups, such as Japanese golfers.

According to the President, Japan has been traditionally the country's largest market for tourism and yet it is still highly under-penetrated.

She said Korea is a rapidly growing market while China's proximity to the Philippines provides an opportunity for the country to be a frontrunner in a "strategic emerging market" with a huge potential.

Aside from Gordon, among those who were present in the dinner with the President were PATA Chairman Bo Long, PATA President Peter De Jong, Japan Travel Bureau President Takashi Kitamura, former Tourism Secretaries Mina Gabor and Narzalina Lim, Olongapo City Mayor Katherine Gordon and Ilocos Norte Rep. Roquito Ablan, who is a PATA lifetime member.

GMA exhorts Region 8 officials to step up efforts in bringing development to region

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on provincial officials of Region 8 to step up their efforts in bringing more development to the region.

In a working luncheon with Region 8 officials, the President also discussed ways and means on how to further improve trade within the region.

Noting that the region has outranked Bicol as the largest producer of abaca, the President told the officials to seek new approaches that would further strengthen the region's stronghold in the abaca market.

The President also inquired on the various ongoing infrastructure projects in the region such as farm-to-market roads, schools, seaports, airports and hospitals.

She also discussed with the officials ways on how to improve the region's tourism prospects.

The President noted that Region 8 has many scenic spots that could be developed as tourism destinations. The President said one of her most favorite scenic spots in the area is Maqueda Bay.

"I stopped and look at the bay whenever I passed by the area," the President said.

The President instructed Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales, who was also present in the meeting, to follow up on her guidance.

Region 8 officials who called on the President included Eastern Samar Governor Clotilde Salazar, Northern Samar Governor Raul Daza, Southern Leyte Governor Rosette Lerias, Samar Governor Milagros Tan, Leyte Governor Remedios Petilla, Biliran Governor Rogelio Espina and Tacloban City Mayor Alfredo Romualdez.

'We must not let terrorism defeat tourism' — GMA

We must not let terrorism defeat tourism.

This was the clear message imparted by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to the delegates of the Pacific Asia Travel Association (PATA) during a dinner Friday night at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang.

In her remarks, the President said her administration is determined to make the Philippines a pleasant and safe destination for tourists, adding that efforts are now underway to soon put an end the local terrorism, particularly the Abu Sayyaf bandits.

"Even as we speak, the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) are relentlessly pursuing the Abu Sayyaf who are now gathered in their main lair in one island, for their last but hopeless stand," the President said.

As for foreign terrorists who will attempt to venture into the country, the President assured the PATA delegates that the government is keeping a close watch on the country's key entry points.

“They won’t get far because with our trilateral agreement with Indonesia and Malaysia, soon to be quadrilateral with Thailand, we can check terrorist incursions in our common seas and common borders,” the President said.

According to the President, terrorism should not be allowed to defeat tourism, which is a proven growth engine even in countries that have security problems.

She cited the two separate incidents in Egypt in the year 1996 and 1997 where gunmen opened fire and killed scores of tourists.

Despite the said incidents, Egypt posted four million tourist arrivals in each of those two years.

In Spain, where the ETA or Euskadi ta Askatasuna (Basque Fatherland and Liberty), a leftist group and one of Europe’s feared separatist groups, is sowing terror, the year 2000 still saw 15 million tourist arrivals in that country.

On the other hand, five million tourists still visited Indonesia at the height of the civil unrest and anti-Chinese riots in that country in 1998.

The President stressed that tourism is a powerful growth engine in any country and deserves to be a top national priority in the Philippines.

Citing figures, the President said tourism is a giant global industry wherein 700 million international tourists spent US$475 billion in 2000.

To include domestic tourism, she said, the total expenditure worldwide will amount to US$3.3 trillion.

“It has huge additional potential for growth. Only 3.5 percent of the world population has traveled international,” the President said.

Moreover, the President noted that in Asia Pacific, which is the area of operation of PATA, the tourism market is projected to grow from 16 percent to 25 percent by the year 2020.

In the Philippines, she said the average international tourist spends over a thousand dollars per visit to the Philippines.

“It can have a rapid impact. Thailand, which is number one in tourism in Asia, increased their arrival by 25 percent in the first year of Visit Thailand in 1987,” the President noted.

The President said that over and above economic reasons, tourism deserves to be a national priority because of its impact on social development.

Being a labor-intensive sector, the President said one international arrival creates one job.

“It promotes job security because it is personal service related. We cannot automate and replace the people who serve the tourists,” she said.

On top of job generation, Mrs. Arroyo said tourism also provides excellent training for skills and good personnel development opportunities.

The President also sought the opportunity to call on the officers and members of the PATA to help promote the Philippines as one of the major tourist destinations in the region.

“You can always tell your clients that there are at least 7,000 reasons for them to visit the Philippines,” she said.

22 SEPTEMBER 2002

- GMA joins celebration of National Laity Week
- GMA orders review of tariff program
- OFW remittances reach $4.143B, boost B.O.P
- Zambo folk to benefit from gov't-funded Norwegian sea cage

GMA joins celebration of National Laity Week

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today joined the nation in celebration of National Laity Week as the Archdiocese of Manila announced the holding of the Fourth World Meeting of the Families in Manila on January 22-26, 2003.

The President, together with daughter Evangelina "Luli" Arroyo, arrived at the Manila Cathedral at exactly 10:00 this morning and received a warm welcome from church and laity officials before the Eucharistic celebration officiated by Bishop Teodoro Bacani.

During the Mass, Bishop Bacani and Dr. Ricardo Ledesma, president of the Council of the Laity of Manila (CLM), led a pray-over offering for the President, asking the Almighty God to guide her and give her courage and strength in leading the people towards a more fruitful, peaceful and progressive future.

The Mass signalled the start of National Laity Week from September 22-28.

The CLM, the premier Church lay organization in Manila, spearheaded an archdiocesan-wide program centered on the family.

This year's celebration of Laity Week also focuses on two very important objectives. First is to promote devotion to the first Filipino patron saint of the laity, San Lorenzo Ruiz, and Blessed Pedro Calungsod. The second is the preparation for the forthcoming World Meeting of the Families to be held in Manila on January 2003.

GMA orders review of tariff program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday ordered a review of the government's unilateral tariff reduction program implemented in the mid-1990s following the request of several industries that this has severely affected production.

The President, who issued the order during a meeting with members of the Fair Trade Alliance (FTA) in Malacañang Saturday afternoon, also directed the holding of another meeting to discuss the smuggling problem that is also becoming detrimental to the local industries.

Among the industries represented at the forum were textile and garments, steel, pulp and paper, footwear, and rice.

The President said she called for the meeting with the local industries precisely to reinvigorate the domestic market.

She also said she is particularly interested in the issues raised by small and medium enterprises as this sector would be responsible for stimulating the domestic demand.

The President listened intently to the issues discussed during the forum, specifically on points raised against the government's unilateral tariff program implemented in the mid-1990s.

FTA Lead Convenor Wigberto Tañada, who was present at the meeting, noted that the government has been reducing tariffs towards the ASEAN Free Trade Area – Common Effective Preferential Tariff (AFTA-CEPT) rates down to a band of 0 percent to 5 percent.

He said this scheme coupled with the government's unilateral tariff reduction program is to the detriment of the local industries and agriculture.

Aside from local industry leaders, the meeting was attended by members of the automotive industry workers who complained of illegal importation of second-hand vehicles, which they considered a form of smuggling.

A position paper submitted by the Automotive Industry Workers Alliance (AIWA) said that from 1997 to 1999, there were at least 6,914 retrenched employees because of low production in the assembly plants of Mitsubishi Motor, Toyota Motor, Nissan Motor, Isuzu Philippines, Honda and auto parts manufacturers.

Meanwhile, the ceramic tile industry is complaining of the increasing volume of cheap, substandard imported tiles which do not comply with Philippine standards for durability.

The footwear industry called on the government to impose strict quality control standards to ensure that only high quality shoes enter the country.

It also called on the authorities to strictly implement the Consumer Act of the Philippines where appropriate product labeling specific to footwear is mandated.

In its position paper, the footwear industry noted that footwear products from China are sold at almost one-third the cost of locally-produced goods.

It said more than 50 percent of the industry (mostly from Marikina, Laguna, Nueva Ecija and Cebu) is now considered beleaguered.

OFW remittances reach $4.143B, boost B.O.P

Dollar remittances from overseas Filipino workers (OFW) continued to be a significant source of exchange earnings, expanding by 43.2 percent to $4.143 billion in the first semester compared to the year-ago level.

A Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) report reaching Malacañang said this strong showing from the OFW sector boosted the balance of payments that yielded a $1.729-billion surplus from January to June, reversing a $606-million deficit in the same period in 2001.

It also pushed the country's income account that increased by more than twofold to reach $2.750 billion, the BSP report said.

The report noted that the rise in the number of deployed newly hired and rehired OFWs contributed to the dollar remittance uptrend.

Deployment rose by 4.1 percent during the review period and the growth in OFW deployment was seen in Europe, Africa and the Americas.

Most deployed OFWs landed in transport equipment operation, professional, technical and other related jobs abroad.

The BSP report said the government continued to step up marketing missions to promote Filipino skills.

Prospects, it said, were bright, with the expanded hiring of the United Kingdom of OFWs in the medical field, which is expected to offset the impact of the trend towards “localization” and the economic slowdown experienced in some of the countries where Filipino workers are deployed.

Localization means the preferential hiring by a country of its own residents.

A recent report from the Department of Labor and Employment showed that as of September 1, a total of 638,875 OFWs, or an average of 2,618 daily, were deployed abroad.

Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas said the deployment of documented Filipino workers abroad could reach one million this year due to global demand and preference for their services and skills.

Sto. Tomas stressed that the continued absorption of OFWs by foreign-based employers mirrored the global competitiveness of Filipino workers and the country’s human resource edge.

Aside from their highly rated skills, reliability, and productivity, Filipinos are culturally adaptable and can clearly and fluently communicate in English, the accepted international language, she said.

The Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) said of the 638,875 OFWs deployed overseas for the eight-month period, 497,577 are land-based workers and 141,298 are seafarers.

The POEA said 309,538 of the 497,577 land-based workers were rehires, while the remainder, or 188,039, were newly hired OFWs.

Zambo folk to benefit from gov’t-funded Norwegian sea cage

The government, through the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources (BFAR), has put up a Norwegian sea cage worth some P907,000 in Payao, Zamboanga Sibugay to enhance milkfish and other finfish production in the area.

A report reaching Malacañang from the Philippine Information Agency (PIA) in Western Mindanao said the construction of the circular marine sea cage was started in July and completed in August.

The report cited efforts of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to bring social services, particularly in the area of food production and stability, where they were most needed, in the poor rural areas. The President had stressed this in her State of the Nation Address.

The President had visited the Zamboanga peninsula and inspected government projects in the area in recent weeks.

According to the PIA report, BFAR Region 9 information officer Trusiya Maldan said the Payao local government helped stock the fish cage with milkfish and other finfish.

The project beneficiaries have helped stock the fish cage with fingerlings, Maldan said.

Under the project, a 60-40 management and income-sharing ratio had been adopted in favor of the beneficiaries.

Revenues generated from the project would either go to the maintenance of the fish cage or the construction of another unit for other groups of beneficiaries.

Meanwhile, the PIA also reported that in Barangay Binuangan, Sindangan, Zamboanga del Norte, at least 32 cooperative members have benefited from the BFAR’s P1.3-million Lambaklad fish corral project.

Lambaklad is the Philippine version of the Otoshi-Ami fishing method of Japan. Commercial in nature but put up in municipal waters, it is operated like a deep-sea fish corral and harvests are done daily.

The report said the cooperative had saved enough money to put up another Lambaklad unit.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited Intel Corporation for its significant contribution to the economy by investing another $300 million to put up a wafer facility in the country.

The President, together with Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Science and Technology Secretary Estrella Alabastro and Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA) Chairman Lilia de Lima toured Intel Corporation's state-of-the-art assembly and test facility at the Gateway Business Park in General Trias, Cavite.

"Thank you for the $300 million that you invested under my administration. Onward, the wafer facility in the Philippines," the President wrote in the Intel's souvenir signboard that she signed during the tour of the facilities.

The Chief Executive specifically visited Intel's production line, including the latest Pentium 4 microprocessor manufactured on the newest 0.13-micron and 300 mm. wafer fab technologies.

Intel uses wafers of pure silicon cut from a silicon ingot to make microprocessors. Silicon, the primary ingredient of beach sand, is a semiconductor of electricity. Semiconductors are materials that can be altered to be either a conductor or an insulator.

The President also took a first-hand look at the latest Mobile IT (Information Technology) Classroom of the Department of Science and Technology (DOST), an air-conditioned bus equipped with 17 Pentium 4 microprocessors based notebooks, PC peripherals and audio-visual equipment.

The mobile classroom will provide students and teachers in Region IV (Southern Tagalog) with access and exposure to the latest technologies.

During the tour of the facilities, Intel General Manager Robin Martin assured the President of his company's support for the government's continuing efforts to boost the country's competitiveness by improving infrastructure such as roads and telecommunications facilities, traffic conditions, investment incentives and science and technology education.

According to Martin, Intel is also committed to technology partnership with education, industry and government, to contribute significantly to the development of the Philippines' information and communications technology sector.

Intel's strategy in the Philippines is to work closely with the academe, industry and government to help the nation realize the growth potential of its computer industry and develop the local computing infrastructure.

Among those who welcomed the President on her arrival at the Intel facility were Cavite Gov. Erineo Maliksi, 2nd District Rep. Gilbert Remulla, Gen. Trias Mayor Dencito Campana and Southern Luzon Command (SOLCOM) chief Maj. Gen. Roy Kyamko.
